Editor’s notes. — The short title for this chapter (the “Georgia Civil Practice Act”) is provided for in § 9-11-85 rather than in the first section of this chapter, where the short title for a chapter of the Code is normally provided for. This results from the fact that the renumbering of sections of this chapter follows the numbering scheme of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure rather than the usual scheme observed elsewhere in the Code.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

ANALYSIS

GENERAL CONSIDERATION

USE OF CASE LAW CONSTRUING FORMER LAW AND FEDERAL RULES

RETROACTIVE APPLICATION OF CHAPTER

APPEALS

General Consideration

Construction of Civil Practice Act.

— Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) should be liberally construed and applied. Ambler v. Archer, 230 Ga. 281, 196 S.E.2d 858 (1973).

Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) is in derogation of the common law and must be strictly construed and followed. Tahoe Carpet Indus., Inc. v. Aetna Bus. Credit, Inc., 153 Ga. App. 317, 265 S.E.2d 116 (1980).

Purpose. — Civil Practice Act (see now

O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) is intended to be a revolutionary and sweeping revision of Georgia's legal procedure. Old Hickory Prods. Co. v. Hickory Specialties, Inc., 366 F. Supp. 913 (N.D. Ga. 1973).

Purpose and scope of the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) was to comprehensively and exhaustively revise, supersede, and modernize pretrial, trial, and certain post-trial procedures in civil cases. Bradberry v. Bradberry, 232 Ga. 651, 208 S.E.2d 469 (1974).

Paramount purpose of the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) is to simplify procedure in civil cases. Morgan v. Reeves, 226 Ga. 697, 177 S.E.2d 68 (1970).

Promotion of justice intended. — Rules set forth in the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) are intended to promote and not to obstruct the administration of justice and thus enable the court to do substantial justice rather than to decide cases upon technicalities with no relationship to the rights of the parties to litigation. Mundt v. Olson, 155 Ga. App. 145, 270 S.E.2d 344 (1980).

Decisions on the merits promoted. — Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) is designed to simplify civil procedure by deemphasizing form and technicality in order that substantive rights of litigants may be asserted and tried on the merits. Ambler v. Archer, 230 Ga. 281, 196 S.E.2d 858 (1973).

Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) should serve to reduce number of decisions resolved on grounds with no relation to merits of litigation. Ambler v. Archer, 230 Ga. 281, 196 S.E.2d 858 (1973).

Technicalities minimized. — One of the purposes of the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) was to minimize situations in which actions abated on account of niceties of technical rules of practice and procedure. Tyree v. Jackson, 226 Ga. 690, 177 S.E.2d 160 (1970).

People's right to litigate with governmental bodies should not be decided on technicalities any more than one citizen's right to litigate with another citizen. City of Atlanta v. International Soc'y for Krishna Consciousness of Atlanta, Inc., 240 Ga. 96, 239 S.E.2d 515 (1977).

Notice pleading substituted for issue pleading. — Basic premise of the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) is that it does away with "issue pleading" and substitutes "notice pleading." Byrd v. Ford Motor Co., 118 Ga. App. 333, 163 S.E.2d 327 (1968); General Tel. Co. v. Pritchett, 119 Ga. App. 53, 165 S.E.2d 918 (1969).

New rules under the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) restrict pleadings to task of general notice-giving, and invest the depositions and discovery process with a vital role in preparation for trial. Byrd v. Ford Motor Co., 118 Ga. App. 333, 163 S.E.2d 327 (1968).

Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) abolished "issue pleading," substituted in lieu thereof "notice pleading," and directs that all pleadings shall be construed as to do substantial justice. Sheppard v. Yara Eng'g Corp., 248 Ga. 147, 281 S.E.2d 586 (1981).

Under the spirit and intent of the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9), "notice pleading" has been substituted for "issue pleading." Mills v. Bing, 181 Ga. App. 475, 352 S.E.2d 798 (1987).

Notice pleading requirements. — Under notice pleading procedure of the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9), only a short and plain statement of the claim is required; nevertheless, a complaint must give a defendant notice of the claim in terms sufficiently clear to enable the defendant to frame a responsive pleading thereto. Allen v. Bergman, 201 Ga. App. 781, 412 S.E.2d 549 (1991).

Purpose of notice pleading. — Objective in adopting the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9), and rejecting "issue" pleading was to avoid dismissal on technicalities and to give parties fair notice of claims and/or defenses to be asserted against the parties; the discovery process was to be used to fill in details. The substance or function of a pleading, rather than the pleading's name, should determine the pleading's nature. Edelschick v. Blanchard, 177 Ga. App. 410, 339 S.E.2d 628 (1985).

Word "hearing," as contained in the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9), is limited in its context to court hearings on motions. Knowles v. Knowles, 125 Ga. App. 642, 188 S.E.2d 800 (1972); Montgomery v. USS Agri-Chemical Div., 155 Ga. App. 189, 270 S.E.2d 362 (1980).

Special plea of mistaken identity not required. — Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) does not require that a party must specially plead or raise by motion the defense that the plaintiff sued the wrong person (in this case, individuals rather than a corporation). Calhoun v. Herrin, 125 Ga. App. 518, 188 S.E.2d 273 (1972).

Since the Declaratory Judgment Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) contains no special provisions for pleading, the test of what is needed to withstand a motion to dismiss petition for declaratory judgment is determined under the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9). Southeastern Fid. Fire Ins. Co. v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 118 Ga. App. 861, 165 S.E.2d 887 (1968).

Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) is applicable to actions seeking declaratory judgment, and the test of what is needed to withstand a motion to dismiss petition for declaratory judgment is determined under that Act. Rockdale County v. City of Conyers, 231 Ga. 477, 202 S.E.2d 436 (1973).

Declaratory judgments. — Declaratory Judgment Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 4, T. 9, is governed by the practice rules contained in the Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9. Town of Thunderbolt v. River Crossing Apts., Ltd., 189 Ga. App. 607, 377 S.E.2d 12 (1988).

Suit on contract that only licensed person can enter. — Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9, does not require a person suing on a contract permitted to be entered into only by licensed persons to plead the existence of such a license in order to state a claim, but, at whatever stage of the proceedings it appears that the plaintiff is seeking to recover upon a contract permitted to be entered into only by persons holding licenses issued as a regulatory measure, it becomes imperative for the plaintiff to prove that the plaintiff holds such a license and held such a license at the time the contract was entered into in order to authorize a recovery. Myers v. Wynn, 201 Ga. App. 764, 412 S.E.2d 581 (1991).

Criminal contempt is tried under rules of civil procedure, rather than under rules of criminal procedure, and the preponderance of the evidence is sufficient to convict the defendant. Hill v. Bartlett, 124 Ga. App. 56, 183 S.E.2d 80 (1971). But see In re Crane, 253 Ga. 667, 324 S.E.2d 443 (1985).

does not apply to juvenile courts. In re N.N.G., 196 Ga. App. 765, 397 S.E.2d 40 (1990).

Claim for indebtedness. — While a creditor may bring separate actions to foreclose a security interest and on an indebtedness, and both remedies may be sought in the same action, the claim for indebtedness, whether filed in a separate action or in the same action as foreclosure proceeding under former Code 1933, § 67-701 (see now O.C.G.A. § 44-14-230 et seq.), must stand or fall upon the principles set forth in the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9), including, but not limited to, process and service of process, and may not be “piggy-backed” into court using special rules applicable to foreclosure actions under former Code 1933, § 67-701 (see now O.C.G.A. § 44-14-230 et seq.). Porter v. Midland-Guardian Co., 242 Ga. 1, 247 S.E.2d 743 (1978).

Other statutory time periods control. — Provisions of the Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9, which deal with time frames do not apply to periods of time which are definitely fixed by other statutes, such as O.C.G.A. § 32-3-14. Bates & Assocs. v. Department of Transp., 186 Ga. App. 828, 368 S.E.2d 544, cert. denied, 186 Ga. App. 917, 368 S.E.2d 544 (1988).

Act creating municipal court repealed. — Adoption of the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) had effect of repealing provisions of Ga. L. 1952, p. 2184 et seq., the Act creating Municipal Court of Columbus, which are contrary to its provisions. Lee v. G.A.C. Fin. Corp., 130 Ga. App. 44, 202 S.E.2d 221 (1973).

Waiver of jury trial. — Passage of the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) did not change the time-honored rule of law that when a party has the right to demand a jury trial and fails to do so, the party may be held to have waived the jury trial. Marler v. Citizens & S. Bank, 139 Ga. App. 851, 229 S.E.2d 786 (1976), aff'd, 239 Ga. 342, 236 S.E.2d 590 (1977).

Equitable complaint in appeal from probate court not maintainable. — Nothing in the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) can be construed as authorizing the superior court to entertain a complaint in equity in a case on appeal from the probate court as on appeal jurisdiction of superior court is no greater than that of probate court. Logan v. Nunnally, 230 Ga. 588, 198 S.E.2d 321 (1973).

Party dismissed only when no set of facts supports claim. — Party should not be dismissed for failure to state a claim against such party, unless it appears beyond doubt that the plaintiff can prove no set of facts in support of the plaintiff's claim which would entitle the plaintiff to relief against that party. Sheppard v. Yara Eng'g Corp., 248 Ga. 147, 281 S.E.2d 586 (1981).

(5th Cir. 1980); Bowers v. Continental Ins. Co., 753 F.2d 1574 (11th Cir. 1985).

Use of Case Law Construing Former Law and Federal Rules

Precedential value of case law construing former actions. — While provisions which have been repealed specifically by the Act which enacted the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) have been rendered void and are generally no longer effective, cases construing such former sections are of precedential value in construing the same or similar provisions found elsewhere in the Code. Bowen v. State, 239 Ga. 517, 238 S.E.2d 62 (1977).

Use of federal case law in construing chapter. — Since the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) is modeled and predicated on the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, federal cases, while not binding precedent, will be considered as persuasive authority in construing pertinent provisions. Poole v. City of Atlanta, 117 Ga. App. 432, 160 S.E.2d 874 (1968).

As the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) is substantially identical to the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, it is appropriate to resort to federal cases for its construction. Harper v. DeFreitas, 117 Ga. App. 236, 160 S.E.2d 260 (1968).

Because of the similarity between the state Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9, and the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, it is proper that the court give consideration and great weight to constructions placed on the federal rules by the federal courts. Bicknell v. CBT Factors Corp., 171 Ga. App. 897, 321 S.E.2d 383 (1984).

Retroactive Application of Chapter

Remedial statutes are not inoperative, although of a retrospective nature, provided the statutes do not impair contracts, and only go to confirm rights already existing, in furtherance of the remedy, by curing defects and adding to means of enforcing existing obligations.

Berry v. Siskin, 128 Ga. App. 3, 195 S.E.2d 255 (1973).

Law which merely alters procedure may be made applicable to past transactions. Berry v. Siskin, 128 Ga. App. 3, 195 S.E.2d 255 (1973).

No person has a vested right in any course of procedure, nor in the power of delaying justice, nor of deriving benefit from technical and formal matters of pleading. Berry v. Siskin, 128 Ga. App. 3, 195 S.E.2d 255 (1973).

Effect of simultaneous repeal and reenactment of automatic dismissal provisions. Berry v. Siskin, 128 Ga. App. 3, 195 S.E.2d 255 (1973).

Appeals

Chapter controls over Appellate Practice Act. — Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9), being the latest expression of legislative will, must control over provisions of the Appellate Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Art. 2, Ch. 6, T. 5), if conflict exists. Howard v. Smith, 226 Ga. 850, 178 S.E.2d 159 (1970).

Application of chapter on appeal. — Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) may be applied on appeal in reviewing the judgment of the trial court rendered under the former procedure in cases filed prior to the chapter's effective date. Bazemore v. Burnet, 117 Ga. App. 849, 161 S.E.2d 924 (1968).

Regardless of when judgment was entered below, the appellate court must apply the new rules of the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9). Grubbs v. Duskin, 118 Ga. App. 82, 162 S.E.2d 762 (1968).

In reviewing enumeration of errors, the appellate court must apply the new rules of the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) regardless of when judgment was entered below. Ghitter v. Edge, 118 Ga. App. 750, 165 S.E.2d 598 (1968).

Court of appeals must apply the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) as it exists at the time of its judgment rather than the law prevailing at the rendition of judgment under review. Turner v. Bank of Zebulon, 128 Ga. App. 404, 196 S.E.2d 668 (1973).

ARTICLE 1

SCOPE OF RULES AND FORM OF ACTION

9-11-1. Scope of chapter; construction.

This chapter governs the procedure in all courts of record of this state in all actions of a civil nature whether cognizable as cases at law or in equity, with the exceptions stated in Code Section 9-11-81. This chapter shall be construed to secure the just, speedy, and inexpensive determination of every action. This chapter shall also apply to courts which are not courts of record to the extent that no other rule governing a particular practice or procedure of such courts is prescribed by general or local law applicable to such courts. (Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 1.)

ANALYSIS

COURTS TO WHICH CHAPTER APPLICABLEGeneral Consideration

Divorce proceedings. — Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) is applicable to divorce proceedings. Price v. Price, 243 Ga. 4, 252 S.E.2d 402 (1979).

Administrative procedure. — Motions for judgment on the pleadings and for summary judgment are functionless and inappropriate in superior court when that court is sitting as an appellate court under authority of the Administrative Procedure Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 13, T. 50). Walker v. Harden, 129 Ga. App. 782, 201 S.E.2d 483 (1973).

Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) has no application to judicial review of administrative agency decisions under Ga. L. 1964, p. 338, § 20 (see now O.C.G.A. § 50-13-19). Walker v. Harden, 129 Ga. App. 782, 201 S.E.2d 483 (1973); Hewes v. Cooler, 169 Ga. App. 762, 315 S.E.2d 276 (1984).

Workers' compensation. — Provisions of the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) with regard to taking depositions are not applicable to workers' compensation claims unless made so by statute pertaining specifically to workers' compensation claims. National Biscuit Co. v. Martin, 225 Ga. 198, 167 S.E.2d 140 (1969).

O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15(c) has not been incorporated into the Georgia Workers' Compensation Act, O.C.G.A. § 34-9-1 et seq. McLendon v. Advertising That Works, 292 Ga. App. 677, 665 S.E.2d 370 (2008).

Uninsured Motorist Act, O.C.G.A. § 33-7-11(d), which gives insurance companies wide latitude in deciding whether to join a lawsuit against an uninsured motorist and requiring uninsured motorist carriers to follow the same rules of civil procedure that apply to every other litigant does not limit or impede an insurer's ability under that statutory framework to opt-in or opt-out of litigation. Kelly v. Harris, 329 Ga. App. 752, 766 S.E.2d 146 (2014).

Habeas corpus proceeding. — Habeas court's order denying an inmate's verified petition, which asserted that trial counsel rendered ineffective assistance, was reversed as the allegations contained in that petition served as sufficient evidence to support the inmate's claim that counsel failed to file a notice of appeal after being instructed by the inmate to do so. Rolland v. Martin, 281 Ga. 190, 637 S.E.2d 23 (2006).

In rem quiet title actions. — Default judgment against owners in a quiet title action based on the owner's failure to answer was improper because, once the in rem proceeding was instituted, the trial court was required, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 23-3-63, to submit the matter to a special master, and a special master was never appointed such that service could have properly been completed pursuant to the Quiet Title Act, O.C.G.A. § 23-3-60 et seq.; since the Quiet Title Act provided specific rules of practice and procedure with respect to an in rem quiet title action against all the world, the Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9, was inapplicable. Woodruff v. Morgan County, 284 Ga. 651, 670 S.E.2d 415 (2008).

Civil procedure rules not adequate substitute for substantive constitutional rights of in personam forfeiture proceedings. — In an in personam forfeiture proceeding, pursuant to the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act, O.C.G.A. § 16-14-7(m), a trial court erred by finding that the civil procedural rules set forth in the Georgia Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9, were an adequate substitute for the substantive constitutional rights to which the property owners were entitled. As a result, the Supreme Court of Georgia held that § 16-14-7(m) was unconstitutional because the statute deprived in personam forfeiture defendants of the safeguards of criminal procedure guaranteed by the United States and Georgia Constitutions. Cisco v. State, 285 Ga. 656, 680 S.E.2d 831 (2009).

Chapter not applicable to appellate courts. — Scope of the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) is procedure in the trial courts of record, and it does not deal with powers of appellate courts. Buckhead Doctors' Bldg., Inc. v. Oxford Fin. Cos., 116 Ga. App. 503, 157 S.E.2d 767 (1967).

Construction with court rules. — Upon reading the rules within the Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9, in para materia with Ga. Unif. Super. Ct. R. 24.6(B), the trial court was authorized to grant a divorce well after 30 days from the time an answer would have been due; hence, the trial court did not err in denying a wife's motion to set that judgment aside. Hammack v. Hammack, 281 Ga. 202, 635 S.E.2d 752 (2006).

"No cure" rule contravenes chapter. — "No cure" rule, requiring party to dismiss present action, pay costs in that and all previous actions, and then refile the same action, places an unnecessary burden on trial courts, delays determination of action on its merits, and increases expense to courts and litigants; hence, that rule contravenes the purpose of the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) as set out in Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-1) to "secure the just, speedy, and inexpensive determination of every action." McLanahan v. Keith, 239 Ga. 94, 236 S.E.2d 52 (1977), but see Couch v. Wallace, 249 Ga. 568, 292 S.E.2d 405 (1982); Little v. Walker, 250 Ga. 854, 301 S.E.2d 639 (1983).

Want of prosecution rule. — Regardless of efficiency of local two-year want of prosecution rule, the General Assembly has set forth a five-year rule for all actions of a civil nature in all courts whose practice and procedure is governed by this chapter, so that for those courts the local two-year rule would be conflicting. Johnson v. Barnes, 237 Ga. 502, 229 S.E.2d 70 (1976).

Appeal from a decision of the policemen's pension board should be taken in accordance with the procedures provided for in statute (Ga. L. 1953 (Nov.-Dec. Sess.), p. 2707). Simmons v. Board of Trustees, 167 Ga. App. 511, 306 S.E.2d 759 (1983).

Requirements of the Condemnation Act override all provisions of the Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9, in conflict with the Condemnation Act's special purposes. DOT v. Defoor, 173 Ga. App. 218, 325 S.E.2d 863 (1984).

Section invoked to make error harmless when not involving genuine issue of material fact. — Trial court's failure to consider two timely filed depositions when ruling on a motion for summary judgment was manifestly harmless since there was nothing in the depositions which raised a genuine issue of material fact; thus, to reverse and remand the case under these circumstances would only serve to prolong litigation and undermine the policy in favor of "the just, speedy, and inexpensive determination of every action." Miller Grading Contractors v. Georgia Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 247 Ga. 730, 279 S.E.2d 442 (1981).

Court of Appeals will not reverse a grant of summary judgment, even if it appears that the trial court erroneously failed to consider a portion of the record, unless the appellant can show that a genuine issue of material fact remains for trial. Holtzendorf v. Seckinger, 195 Ga. App. 177, 393 S.E.2d 13 (1990).

There is no requirement generally that a party litigant show what deposition would prove before the litigant is allowed to take the deposition. Brown Transp. Corp. v. Truett, 174 Ga. App. 189, 329 S.E.2d 521 (1985).

Construction of pleadings. — Even though it is true that, when the sufficiency of a complaint is questioned, the pleadings must be construed in a light most favorable to a plaintiff, the trial court correctly dismissed the defendant business from the terminated employees' lawsuit for lack of jurisdiction when the pleadings so construed did not demonstrate that the business committed a tort in Georgia. Balmer v. Elan Corp., 261 Ga. App. 543, 583 S.E.2d 131 (2003), aff'd, 278 Ga. 227, 599 S.E.2d 158 (2004).

Insufficiency of service. — Trial court did not err in refusing to dismiss the petitioner's application for a writ of habeas corpus; even assuming that a requirement existed that the district attorney had to be served with a copy of the application, the state failed to timely raise the argument that it applied since it did not set forth the argument either in its answer to the petitioner's application or by motion filed before or simultaneously with the answer, and thus the defense of insufficiency of service was waived. State v. Jaramillo, 279 Ga. 691, 620 S.E.2d 798 (2005).

Courts to Which Chapter Applicable

Legislative authority to enact procedure for particular court. — Legislature has specific constitutional authority for enacting special rules of procedure applicable only to a particular court. Critz Buick, Inc. v. Aliotta, 145 Ga. App. 805, 245 S.E.2d 56 (1978).

Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) is a general law of this state and applies to all courts classified as courts of record herein. Electro-Kinetics Corp. v. Wilson, 122 Ga. App. 171, 176 S.E.2d 604 (1970).

Chapter controls over special laws in conflict therewith. — Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9), being a general law relating to that classification of courts known as courts of record, must necessarily be controlling over any special law applicable to a particular court of record in a particular locality in conflict therewith. Electro-Kinetics Corp. v. Wilson, 122 Ga. App. 171, 176 S.E.2d 604 (1970).

When provision of special Act establishing court of record conflicts with a provision of the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9), the Civil Practice Act controls. Pittman v. McKinney, 135 Ga. App. 192, 217 S.E.2d 446 (1975).

Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) applies only to courts specified in this section, as limited by Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 33 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-81) and as extended by Ga. L. 1970, p. 679, § 8, relating to state courts of counties. Martin v. Prior Tire Co., 122 Ga. App. 637, 178 S.E.2d 306 (1970).

Characteristics of court of record. — Presence of the following characteristics is indicative that a particular court is a court of record: (1) the court has power to fine and imprison; (2) the court exercises the court's functions independently of the person of the magistrate; (3) the court proceeds according to the course of the common law; (4) the court has a seal; and (5) the acts and judicial proceedings are enrolled in parchment for a perpetual memorial and testimony, which rolls are called the record of the court and are of such high and supereminent authority that their truth is not to be called in question. DeKalb County v. Deason, 221 Ga. 237, 144 S.E.2d 446 (1965), answer conformed to, 113 Ga. App. 555, 149 S.E.2d 155 (1966).

Permanent record essential feature of court of record. — One essential feature necessary to constitute a court of record is that a permanent record of the proceedings of the court must be made and kept, that is, a precise history of a suit from its commencement to its termination, including conclusions of law thereon drawn by the proper officer for the purpose of perpetuating the exact state of facts. DeKalb County v. Deason, 221 Ga. 237, 144 S.E.2d 446 (1965), answer conformed to, 113 Ga. App. 555, 149 S.E.2d 155 (1966).

State courts. — All state courts having concurrent jurisdiction with superior courts to try misdemeanor cases by jury trial or having civil jurisdiction unlimited in amount with superior courts in all matters, with certain exceptions, became subject to rules of practice and procedure applicable to the superior courts as set forth in the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9). Marler v. C & S Bank, 239 Ga. 342, 236 S.E.2d 590 (1977).

Probate courts. — Probate court is a court of record. Slocumb v. Ross, 119 Ga. App. 567, 168 S.E.2d 208 (1969).

Probate court is a court of record and thus is bound by the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9). Leathers v. Gilland, 141 Ga. App. 681, 234 S.E.2d 336 (1977).

Appeals to superior court from probate court. — Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) generally governs in de novo investigations in superior court on appeal from probate court. McKnight v. Mitchell, 142 Ga. App. 344, 235 S.E.2d 763 (1977).

Juvenile courts. — Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9), although not in itself applicable to juvenile courts, may be adopted as to procedures not specifically provided for in the Juvenile Code (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 15). In re L.L.W., 141 Ga. App. 32, 232 S.E.2d 378 (1977).

Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) is not applicable in the juvenile courts unless its rules are adopted by the courts as to procedures not specifically provided for in the Juvenile Court Code (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 15). Crook v. Georgia Dep't of Human Resources, 137 Ga. App. 817, 224 S.E.2d 806 (1976).

Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) is not per se made applicable to juvenile courts, but its provisions may be adopted by a juvenile court as to procedures for which provision is not specifically made in the Juvenile Code (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 15). Ray v. Department of Human Resources, 155 Ga. App. 81, 270 S.E.2d 303 (1980).

Civil and Criminal Court of DeKalb County not court of record. — In making the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) applicable only in courts of record, the General Assembly did not include Civil and Criminal Court of DeKalb County, which court is not required to enroll nor does it enroll for permanent memorial its acts and proceedings. DeKalb County v. Deason, 221 Ga. 237, 144 S.E.2d 446 (1965), answer conformed to, 113 Ga. App. 555, 149 S.E.2d 155 (1966).

Conflicting local municipal court rule void. — Local rule of the Municipal Court of Columbus (a court of record), which provides that if a party fails to file a demand for a trial by jury on or before 5:00 p.m. on the last business day before docket call, the right to a jury trial is “presumed waived” and the case is set down on the nonjury calendar, is in conflict with O.C.G.A. § 9-11-39, and, to the extent of the conflict, it is void. Raintree Farms, Inc. v. Stripping Ctr., Ltd., 166 Ga. App. 848, 305 S.E.2d 660 (1983).

Special master's award in condemnation proceeding. — Trial court properly refused to dismiss a landowner's appeal on grounds that it failed to express dissatisfaction with the compensation awarded by the special master, as it provided the utility with sufficient notice under the Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9, that the landowner was objecting to the valuation given on the property; moreover, in light of the interest that the utility acquired in the property, and the purposes for which the utility intended to use that property, consequential damages potentially represented a significant portion of the compensation the landowner could recover. Ga. Power Co. v. Stowers, 282 Ga. App. 695, 639 S.E.2d 605 (2006).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Justice of the peace court is not a court of record, and it is therefore not subject to the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9). 1967 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 67-351.

City Court of Albany is a court of record within the meaning of the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9). 1974 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U74-31.

Neither Professional Practices

Commission nor local board of education is a court of record for purposes of the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) and, therefore, such commission is without authority to compel a party to proceeding before it to submit to medical examination pursuant to Ga. L. 1972, p. 510, § 8 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-35). 1977 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 77-48.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

This section furnishes a single uniform procedure by which a litigant may present a litigant's claim in an orderly manner to a court empowered to give the litigant whatever relief is appropriate and just; the substantive and remedial principles that applied prior to it are not changed. *Burnham v. 9-11-3. Commencement of action; filing of civil case filing form.

(a) A civil action is commenced by filing a complaint with the court.

(b) At the time of filing the complaint for a civil action in superior court or state court, the plaintiff shall file the appropriate civil case filing form with the clerk of the court. The form shall contain complete information and shall be substantially in the form prescribed in Code Section 9-11-133. The filing of the complaint shall not be delayed for the filing of the case filing form. If, after a civil action has been filed, the court presiding over the civil action decides that the civil case filing form has not been filed or has been filed incorrectly, the court shall require the plaintiff to file the civil case filing form or an amended form. In no case shall the failure to accurately complete the civil case filing form required by this Code section provide a basis to dismiss a civil action. (Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 3; Ga. L. 2000, p. 850, § 1; Ga. L. 2001, p. 4, § 9; Ga. L. 2006, p. 648, § 1/ HB 1195.)

Ga. L. 2006, p. 648, § 3/ HB 1195, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that the amendment to this Code section shall apply to actions and judgments filed on or after July 1, 2006.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Civil Code 1910, § 5570 and former Code 1933, § 81-112 are included in the annotations for this Code section.

Section integral part of statutes of limitations. — By holding that service of process does not relate back to toll statutes of limitations unless the plaintiff has acted diligently, the Georgia courts have interpreted O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-3 and 9-11-4 as integral parts of the state statutes of limitations. Cambridge Mut. Fire Ins. Co. v. City of Claxton, 720 F.2d 1230 (11th Cir. 1983).

Appeal to superior court from county tax assessment is a “complaint”, which is required to be answered by responsive pleading. Hall County Bd. of Tax Assessors v. Reed, 142 Ga. App. 556, 236 S.E.2d 532 (1977).

Filing must be followed by service. — Filing of the petition is treated as the commencement of the suit only when followed by due and legal service. Murphy v. Ferguson-McElhaney Motor Co., 40 Ga. App. 847, 151 S.E. 663 (1930) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5570); Hilton v. Maddox, Bishop, Hayton Frame & Trim Contractors, 125 Ga. App. 423, 188 S.E.2d 167 (1972).

Date of filing of petition in clerk’s office is the date of commencement of the suit, but this is so only when service is had on the defendant. Duren v. Pollock, 46 Ga. App. 706, 169 S.E. 44 (1933) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-112).

Filing is not commencement of an action unless followed by service within a reasonable time, but once service is perfected the service will relate back to original date of filing, which will be considered the date of commencement of lawsuit. Franek v. Ray, 239 Ga. 282, 236 S.E.2d 629 (1977); Robinette v. Johnston, 637 F. Supp. 922 (M.D. Ga. 1986).

Georgia cases interpreting the language of O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-3 and 9-11-4 conclude that the filing of the complaint does not toll the statute of limitations unless a plaintiff exercises diligence and ensures the complaint is served as quickly as possible; filing is still not the commencement of suit unless followed by service within a reasonable time, but once service is perfected upon a defendant, service will relate back to the original date of the filing which will be considered the date of the commencement of the law suit. Roberts v. Jones, 390 F. Supp. 2d 1333 (M.D. Ga. May 9, 2005).

Despite the fact that the Court of Appeals of Georgia could not discern whether a personal injury action filed by a husband and wife against a driver was dismissed because the statute of limitation had expired or because the husband and wife were not diligent in attempting service, the trial court did not abuse the court’s discretion in dismissing the action because the driver had never been personally served with the complaint prior to the expiration of the statute of limitation. Nyass v. Tilahun, 281 Ga. App. 542, 636 S.E.2d 714 (2006).

Timeliness of service. — Trial court properly dismissed a plaintiff’s personal injury action filed against the defendant on insufficient service of process grounds as: (1) plaintiff did little to pursue service; (2) plaintiff inappropriately shifted the burden of the search on the court; and (3) the fact that the defendant served interrogatories and a request for production did not amount to a waiver of an insufficient service of process defense. Kelley v. Lymon, 279 Ga. App. 849, 632 S.E.2d 734 (2006).

Bankruptcy trustee’s late service on a driver did not relate back to the filing of the personal injury complaint when the trustee failed to show that the trustee reasonably and diligently insured that service was made as quickly as possible after the driver made the trustee aware of the driver’s true residence. Webster v. Western Express, Inc., No. 5:05-CV-350 (WDO), 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 70011 (M.D. Ga. Sept. 21, 2007).

Because a plaintiff did not satisfy the plaintiff’s burden of showing that the plaintiff exercised due diligence in perfecting service of process on the defendant, the trial court abused the court’s discretion in denying the defendant’s motion to dismiss. Jones v. Brown, 299 Ga. App. 418, 683 S.E.2d 76 (2009).

Action commenced as of filing date. — Service or waiver is essential, but when made service relates back to the date of filing, which establishes the date on which the action is commenced. Taylor v. Kohlmeyer & Co., 123 Ga. App. 493, 181 S.E.2d 496 (1971).

Trial court did not err in dismissing an officer’s claims against an entity on the ground that the claims were filed in violation of an automatic bankruptcy stay provided by 11 U.S.C. § 362 because, when the original complaint was filed, that entity was a debtor in bankruptcy; the automatic stay was in effect at the time the action was commenced, rendering the claims against the entity void ab initio. Odion v. Varon, 312 Ga. App. 242, 718 S.E.2d 23 (2011), cert. denied, No. S12C0399, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 561 (Ga. 2012).

Failure to file civil case filing form not fatal. — Putative biological father's failure to pay a filing fee and file a civil case filing form required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-3(b) was not fatal to the father's legitimation claim because the clerk, when asked by the father, did not require payment of a filing fee, and the father's attorney merely followed the procedure suggested by the clerk. Brewton v. Poss, 316 Ga. App. 704, 728 S.E.2d 837 (2012).

Action not pending until service is perfected. — Court does not have jurisdiction of the defendant until after service of process, and, accordingly, while action commences when petition is filed, it is not a "pending suit" between the parties until after service of process. Hilton v. Maddox, Bishop, Hayton Frame & Trim Contractors, 125 Ga. App. 423, 188 S.E.2d 167 (1972).

Laches finding against plaintiff. — In a personal injury suit, although the plaintiff passenger attempted to serve the defendant driver only once prior to the expiration of the statute of limitation, upon encountering difficulty locating the driver, the passenger's response was delayed at best, notwithstanding the imminent running of the statute of limitation, and the passenger did not even try to serve the driver until after the statute had run; thus, under the circumstances, the trial court properly found the passenger guilty of laches. Patterson v. Lopez, 279 Ga. App. 840, 632 S.E.2d 736 (2006).

Good faith delivery to deputy sheriff instead of clerk deemed filing of complaint. — When there is a timely and good faith compliance with a deputy clerk's uncontroverted intention that the act of delivery of a complaint to a deputy sheriff would constitute delivery to and receipt by the clerk for purposes of filing, the complaint is to be considered filed as of the date of the compliance with that expressed intention. Forsyth v. Hale, 166 Ga. App. 340, 304 S.E.2d 81 (1983).

Venue will be determined as of date of filing as long as service is subsequently perfected upon the defendant within a reasonable time period. Franek v. Ray, 239 Ga. 282, 236 S.E.2d 629 (1977).

For purposes of venue and other jurisdictional questions, a party's residence at the time of filing suit is the determining factor. Franek v. Ray, 239 Ga. 282, 236 S.E.2d 629 (1977).

Effect of instructions to "hold" pleadings at the time of filing. — Handing the clerk a petition, with instructions to endorse upon the petition an entry of filing and to issue process, but to "hold it" until plaintiff notified the clerk further, was not filing of a suit or commencement of an action within the meaning of the former statute, until such instructions were withdrawn; and if bar of statute of limitations attached before such instructions were withdrawn, the action was barred, notwithstanding service was regularly perfected after withdrawal of the instructions. Roddy v. Hartford Accident & Indem. Co., 65 Ga. App. 632, 16 S.E.2d 81 (1941) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-112).

Application for contempt may not, standing alone, serve to commence a civil action for damages as it is not a complaint. Opatut v. Guest Pond Club, Inc., 254 Ga. 258, 327 S.E.2d 487 (1985).

9-11-4. Process.

(a) Summons — Issuance. Upon the filing of the complaint, the clerk shall forthwith issue a summons and deliver it for service. Upon request of the plaintiff, separate or additional summons shall issue against any defendants.

(b) Summons — Form. The summons shall be signed by the clerk; contain the name of the court and county and the names of the parties; be directed to the defendant; state the name and address of the plaintiff's attorney, if any, otherwise the plaintiff's address; and state the time within which this chapter requires the defendant to appear and file appropriate defensive pleadings with the clerk of the court, and shall notify the defendant that in case of the defendant's failure to do so judgment by default will be rendered against him or her for the relief demanded in the complaint.

(c) Summons — By whom served. Process shall be served by:

(1) The sheriff of the county where the action is brought or where the defendant is found or by such sheriff's deputy;

(2) The marshal or sheriff of the court or by such official's deputy;

(3) Any citizen of the United States specially appointed by the court for that purpose;

(4) A person who is not a party, not younger than 18 years of age, and has been appointed by the court to serve process or as a permanent process server; or

(5) A certified process server as provided in Code Section 9-11-4.1.

Where the service of process is made outside of the United States, after an order of publication, it may be served either by any citizen of the United States or by any resident of the country, territory, colony, or province who is specially appointed by the court for that purpose. When service is to be made within this state, the person making such service shall make the service within five days from the time of receiving the summons and complaint; but failure to make service within the five-day period will not invalidate a later service.

(d) Waiver of service.

(1) A defendant who waives service of a summons does not thereby waive any objection to the venue or to the jurisdiction of the court over the person of the defendant.

(2) Upon receipt of notice of an action in the manner provided in this subsection, the following defendants have a duty to avoid unnecessary costs of serving the summons:

(A) A corporation or association that:

(i) Is subject to service under paragraph (1) or (2) of subsection (e) of this Code section; and

(ii) Receives notice of such action by an agent other than the Secretary of State; and

(B) A natural person who:

(i) Is not a minor; and

(ii) Has not been judicially declared to be of unsound mind or incapable of conducting his or her own affairs.

(3) To avoid costs, the plaintiff may notify such a defendant of the commencement of the action and request that the defendant waive service of a summons. The notice and request shall:

(A) Be in writing and shall be addressed directly to the defendant, if an individual, or else to an officer or managing or general agent or other agent authorized by appointment to receive service of process for a defendant subject to service under paragraph (1) or (2) of subsection (e) of this Code section;

(B) Be dispatched through first-class mail or other reliable means;

(C) Be accompanied by a copy of the complaint and shall identify the court in which it has been filed;

(D) Make reference to this Code section and shall inform the defendant, by means of the text prescribed in subsection (l) of this Code section, of the consequences of compliance and of failure to comply with the request;

(E) Set forth the date on which the request is sent;

(F) Allow the defendant a reasonable time to return the waiver, which shall be at least 30 days from the date on which the request is sent, or 60 days from that date if the defendant is addressed outside any judicial district of the United States; and

(G) Provide the defendant with an extra copy of the notice and request, as well as a prepaid means of compliance in writing.

(4) If a defendant located within the United States that is subject to service inside or outside the state under this Code section fails to comply with a request for a waiver made by a plaintiff located within the United States, the court shall impose the costs subsequently incurred in effecting service on the defendant unless good cause for the failure is shown.

(5) A defendant that, before being served with process, returns a waiver so requested in a timely manner is not required to serve an answer to the complaint until 60 days after the date on which the request for waiver of service was sent, or 90 days after that date if the defendant was addressed outside any judicial district of the United States.

(6) When the plaintiff files a waiver of service with the court, the action shall proceed, except as provided in paragraph (5) of this subsection, as if a summons and complaint had been served at the time of filing the waiver, and no proof of service shall be required.

(7) The costs to be imposed on a defendant under paragraph (4) of this subsection for failure to comply with a request to waive service of summons shall include the costs subsequently incurred in effecting service, together with the costs, including a reasonable attorney's fee, of any motion required to collect the costs of service.

(e) Summons — Personal service. Except for cases in which the defendant has waived service, the summons and complaint shall be served together. The plaintiff shall furnish the clerk of the court with such copies as are necessary. Service shall be made by delivering a copy of the summons attached to a copy of the complaint as follows:

(1)(A) If the action is against a corporation incorporated or domesticated under the laws of this state or a foreign corporation authorized to transact business in this state, to the president or other officer of such corporation or foreign corporation, a managing agent thereof, or a registered agent thereof, provided that when for any reason service cannot be had in such manner, the Secretary of State shall be an agent of such corporation or foreign corporation upon whom any process, notice, or demand may be served. Service on the Secretary of State of any such process, notice, or demand shall be made by delivering to and leaving with him or her or with any other person or persons designated by the Secretary of State to receive such service a copy of such process, notice, or demand, along with a copy of the affidavit to be submitted to the court pursuant to this Code section. The plaintiff or the plaintiff's attorney shall certify in writing to the Secretary of State that he or she has forwarded by registered mail or statutory overnight delivery such process, service, or demand to the last registered office or registered agent listed on the records of the Secretary of State, that service cannot be effected at such office, and that it therefore appears that such corporation or foreign corporation has failed either to maintain a registered office or to appoint a registered agent in this state. Further, if it appears from such certification that there is a last known address of a known officer of such corporation or foreign corporation outside this state, the plaintiff shall, in addition to and after such service upon the Secretary of State, mail or cause to be mailed to the known officer at the address by registered or certified mail or statutory overnight delivery a copy of the summons and a copy of the complaint. Any such service by certification to the Secretary of State shall be answerable not more than 30 days from the date the Secretary of State receives such certification.

(B) As used in this paragraph, the term “managing agent” means a person employed by a corporation or a foreign corporation who is at an office or facility in this state and who has managerial or supervisory authority for such corporation or foreign corporation;

(2)(A) If the action is against a foreign corporation doing business in this state without authorization to transact business in this state that has a managing agent or against a nonresident individual, partnership, joint-stock company, or association doing business in this state that has a managing agent, to such agent, or to a registered agent designated for service of process.

(B) As used in this paragraph, the term “managing agent” means a person employed by a foreign corporation doing business in this state without authorization to transact business in this state or a nonresident individual, partnership, joint-stock company, or association doing business in this state who is at an office or facility in this state and who has managerial or supervisory authority for such foreign corporation, nonresident individual, partnership, joint-stock company, or association;

(3) If against a minor, to the minor, personally, and also to such minor’s father, mother, guardian, or duly appointed guardian ad litem unless the minor is married, in which case service shall not be made on the minor’s father, mother, or guardian;

(4) If against a person residing within this state who has been judicially declared to be of unsound mind or incapable of conducting his or her own affairs and for whom a guardian has been appointed, to the person and also to such person’s guardian and, if there is no guardian appointed, then to his or her duly appointed guardian ad litem;

(5) If against a county, municipality, city, or town, to the chairman of the board of commissioners, president of the council of trustees, mayor or city manager of the city, or to an agent authorized by appointment to receive service of process. If against any other public body or organization subject to an action, to the chief executive officer or clerk thereof;

(6) If the principal sum involved is less than $200.00 and if reasonable efforts have been made to obtain personal service by attempting to find some person residing at the most notorious place of abode of the defendant, then by securely attaching the service copy of the complaint in a conspicuously marked and waterproof packet to the upper part of the door of the abode and on the same day mailing by certified or registered mail or statutory overnight delivery an additional copy to the defendant at his or her last known address, if any, and making an entry of this action on the return of service; or

(7) In all other cases to the defendant personally, or by leaving copies thereof at the defendant's dwelling house or usual place of abode with some person of suitable age and discretion then residing therein, or by delivering a copy of the summons and complaint to an agent authorized by appointment or by law to receive service of process.

(f) Summons — Other service.

(1) Service by publication.

(A) General. When the person on whom service is to be made resides outside the state, or has departed from the state, or cannot, after due diligence, be found within the state, or conceals himself or herself to avoid the service of the summons, and the fact shall appear, by affidavit, to the satisfaction of the judge or clerk of the court, and it shall appear, either by affidavit or by a verified complaint on file, that a claim exists against the defendant in respect to whom the service is to be made, and that he or she is a necessary or proper party to the action, the judge or clerk may grant an order that the service be made by the publication of summons, provided that when the affidavit is based on the fact that the party on whom service is to be made resides outside the state, and the present address of the party is unknown, it shall be a sufficient showing of such fact if the affiant shall state generally in the affidavit that at a previous time such person resided outside this state in a certain place (naming the place and stating the latest date known to affiant when the party so resided there); that such place is the last place in which the party resided to the knowledge of affiant; that the party no longer resides at the place; that affiant does not know the present place of residence of the party or where the party can be found; and that affiant does not know and has never been informed and has no reason to believe that the party now resides in this state; and, in such case, it shall be presumed that the party still resides and remains outside the state, and the affidavit shall be deemed to be a sufficient showing of due diligence to find the defendant. This Code section shall apply to all manner of civil actions, including those for divorce.

(B) Property. In any action which relates to, or the subject of which is, real or personal property in this state in which any defendant, corporate or otherwise, has or claims a lien or interest, actual or contingent, or in which the relief demanded consists wholly or in part of excluding such defendant from any interest therein, where the defendant resides outside the state or has departed from the state, or cannot, after due diligence, be found within the state, or conceals himself or herself to avoid the service of summons, the judge or clerk may make an order that the service be made by publication of summons. The service by publication shall be made in the same manner as provided in all cases of service by publication.

(C) Publication. When the court orders service by publication, the clerk shall cause the publication to be made in the paper in which sheriff's advertisements are printed, four times within the ensuing 60 days, publications to be at least seven days apart. The party obtaining the order shall, at the time of filing, deposit the cost of publication. The published notice shall contain the name of the parties plaintiff and defendant, with a caption setting forth the court, the character of the action, the date the action was filed, the date of the order for service by publication, and a notice directed and addressed to the party to be thus served, commanding him or her to file with the clerk and serve upon the plaintiff's attorney an answer within 60 days of the date of the order for service by publication and shall bear teste in the name of the judge and shall be signed by the clerk of the court. Where the residence or abiding place of the absent or nonresident party is known, the party obtaining the order shall advise the clerk thereof; and it shall be the duty of the clerk, within 15 days after filing of the order for service by publication, to enclose, direct, stamp, and mail a copy of the notice, together with a copy of the order for service by publication and complaint, if any, to the party named in the order at his or her last known address, if any, and make an entry of this action on the complaint or other pleadings filed in the case. The copy of the notice to be mailed to the nonresident shall be a duplicate of the one published in the newspaper but need not necessarily be a copy of the newspaper itself. When service by publication is ordered, personal service of a copy of the summons, complaint, and order of publication outside the state in lieu of publication shall be equivalent to serving notice by publication and to mailing when proved to the satisfaction of the judge or otherwise. The defendant shall have 30 days from the date of such personal service outside the state in which to file defensive pleadings.

(2) Personal service outside the state. Personal service outside the state upon a natural person may be made: (A) in any action where the person served is a resident of this state, and (B) in any action affecting specific real property or status, or in any other proceeding in rem without regard to the residence of the person served. When such facts shall appear, by affidavit, to the satisfaction of the court and it shall appear, either by affidavit or by a verified complaint on file, that a claim is asserted against the person in respect to whom the service is to be made, and that he or she is a necessary or proper party to the action, the court may grant an order that the service be made by personal service outside the state. Such service shall be made by delivering a copy of the process together with a copy of the complaint in person to the persons served.

(3) Service upon persons in a foreign country. Unless otherwise provided by law, service upon a person from whom a waiver has not been obtained and filed, other than an infant or an incompetent person, may be effected in a place not within the United States:

(A) By any internationally agreed means reasonably calculated to give notice, such as those means authorized by the Hague Convention on the Service Abroad of Judicial and Extrajudicial Documents;

(B) If there is no internationally agreed means of service or the applicable international agreement allows other means of service, provided that service is reasonably calculated to give notice:

(i) In the manner prescribed by the law of the foreign country for service in that country in an action in any of its courts of general jurisdiction;

(ii) As directed by the foreign authority in response to a letter rogatory or letter of request; or

(iii) Unless prohibited by the law of the foreign country, by:

(I) Delivery to the person of a copy of the summons and the complaint; or

(II) Any form of mail requiring a signed receipt, to be addressed and dispatched by the clerk of the court to the party to be served; or

(C) By other means not prohibited by international agreement as may be directed by the court.

(4) Service upon persons residing in gated and secured communities.

(A) As used in this paragraph, the term “gated and secured communities” means multiple residential or commercial properties, such as houses, condominiums, offices, or apartments, where access to the multiple residential or commercial properties is restricted by a gate, security device, or security attendant that restricts public entrance onto the property; provided, however, that a single residence, farm, or commercial property with its own fence or gate shall not be included in this definition.

(B) Any person authorized to serve process shall be granted access to gated and secured communities for a reasonable period of time during reasonable hours for the purpose of performing lawful service of process upon:

- (i) Identifying to the guard or managing agent the person, persons, entity, or entities to be served;
- (ii) Displaying a current driver’s license or other government issued identification which contains a photograph; and
- (iii) Displaying evidence of current appointment as a process server pursuant to this Code section.

(C) Any person authorized to serve process shall promptly leave gated and secured communities upon perfecting service of process or upon a determination that process cannot be effected at that time.

(g) Territorial limits of effective service. All process may be served anywhere within the territorial limits of the state and, when a statute so provides, beyond the territorial limits of the state.

(h) Return. The person serving the process shall make proof of such service with the court in the county in which the action is pending within five business days of the service date. If the proof of service is not filed within five business days, the time for the party served to answer the process shall not begin to run until such proof of service is filed. Proof of service shall be as follows:

- (1) If served by a sheriff or marshal, or such official’s deputy, the affidavit or certificate of the sheriff, marshal, or deputy;
- (2) If by any other proper person, such person’s affidavit;
- (3) In case of publication, the certificate of the clerk of court certifying to the publication and mailing; or

(4) The written admission or acknowledgment of service by the defendant.

In the case of service otherwise than by publication, the certificate or affidavit shall state the date, place, and manner of service. Failure to make proof of service shall not affect the validity of the service.

(i) Amendment. At any time in its discretion and upon such terms as it deems just, the court may allow any process or proof of service thereof to be amended, unless it clearly appears that material prejudice would result to the substantial rights of the party against whom the process issued.

(j) Alternative service. The methods of service provided in this Code section are cumulative and may be utilized with, after, or independently of other methods of service. Whenever a statute provides for another method of service, service may be made under the circumstances and in the manner prescribed by the statute or under any other methods prescribed in this Code section. The provisions for service by publication provided in this Code section shall apply in any action or proceeding in which service by publication may be authorized by law; and, where by law special provision is made for service by publication, the procedure for such service by publication provided in this Code section may be utilized in lieu thereof. In all cases or special proceedings where the requirements or procedure for service, or both, are not prescribed by law and in any situation where the provisions therefor are not clear or certain, the court may prescribe service according to the exigencies of each case, consistent with the Constitution.

(k) Service in probate courts and special statutory proceedings. The methods of service provided in this Code section may be used as alternative methods of service in proceedings in the probate courts and in any other special statutory proceedings and may be used with, after, or independently of the method of service specifically provided for in any such proceeding; and, in any such proceeding, service shall be sufficient when made in accordance with the statutes relating particularly to the proceeding or in accordance with this Code section.

NOTICE OF LAWSUIT AND REQUEST FOR
WAIVER OF SERVICE OF SUMMONS

TO: (Name of individual defendant or name of officer or agent of corporate defendant) as (title, or other relationship of individual to corporate defendant) of (name of corporate defendant to be served, if any)

A lawsuit has been commenced against you (or the entity on whose behalf you are addressed). A copy of the complaint is attached to this notice. The complaint has been filed in the (court named on the complaint) for the State of Georgia in and for the County of (county) and has been assigned (case number of action).

This is not a formal summons or notification from the court, but rather my request pursuant to Code Section 9-11-4 of the Official Code of Georgia Annotated that you sign and return the enclosed Waiver of Service in order to save the cost of serving you with a judicial summons and an additional copy of the complaint. The cost of service will be avoided if I receive a signed copy of the waiver within 30 days (or 60 days if located outside any judicial district of the United States) after the date designated below as the date on which this Notice of Lawsuit and Request for Waiver of Service of Summons is sent. I enclose a stamped and addressed envelope (or other means of cost-free return) for your use. An extra copy of the Waiver of Service is also attached for your records. YOU ARE ENTITLED TO CONSULT WITH YOUR ATTORNEY REGARDING THIS MATTER.

If you comply with this request and return the signed Waiver of Service, the waiver will be filed with the court and no summons will be served on you. The action will then proceed as if you had been served on the date the waiver is filed except that you will not be obligated to answer or otherwise respond to the complaint within 60 days from the date designated below as the date on which this notice is sent (or within 90 days from that date if your address is not in any judicial district of the United States).

If you do not return the signed waiver within the time indicated, I will take appropriate steps to effect formal service in a manner authorized by the Georgia Rules of Civil Procedure and then, to the extent authorized by those rules, I will ask the court to require you (or the party on whose behalf you are addressed) to pay the full cost of such service. In that connection, please read the statement concerning the duty of parties to avoid unnecessary costs of service of summons, which is set forth on the Notice of Duty to Avoid Unnecessary Costs of Service of Summons enclosed herein.

I affirm that this Notice of Lawsuit and Request for Waiver of Service of Summons is being sent to you on behalf of the Plaintiff on this _____ day of _____.

WAIVER OF SERVICE OF SUMMONS

To: (Name of plaintiff's attorney or unrepresented plaintiff)

I acknowledge receipt of your request that I waive service of a summons in the action of (caption of action), which is case number (docket number) in the (name of court) of the State of Georgia in and for the County of (county). I have also received a copy of the complaint in the action, two copies of this instrument, and a means by which I can return the signed waiver to you without cost to me. I understand that I am entitled to consult with my own attorney regarding the consequences of my signing this waiver.

I agree to save the cost of service of a summons and an additional copy of the complaint in this lawsuit by not requiring that I (or the entity on whose behalf I am acting) be served with judicial process in the manner provided by the Georgia Rules of Civil Procedure.

I (or the entity on whose behalf I am acting) will retain all defenses or objections to the lawsuit or to the jurisdiction or venue of the court except for objections based on a defect in the summons or in the service of the summons.

I understand that a judgment may be entered against me (or the entity on whose behalf I am acting) if an answer is not served upon you within 60 days after the date this waiver was sent, or within 90 days after that date if the request for the waiver was sent outside the United States.

This _____ day of _____, _____.

NOTICE OF DUTY TO AVOID UNNECESSARY COSTS OF SERVICE OF SUMMONS

Subsection (d) of Code Section 9-11-4 of the Official Code of Georgia Annotated requires certain parties to cooperate in saving unnecessary costs of service of the summons and the pleading. A defendant located in the United States who, after being notified of an action and asked by a plaintiff located in the United States to waive service of a summons, fails to do so will be required to bear the cost of such service unless good cause be shown for such defendant's failure to sign and return the waiver.

It is not good cause for a failure to waive service that a party believes that the complaint is unfounded, or that the action has been brought in an improper place or in a court that lacks jurisdiction over the subject matter of the action or over its person or property. A party who waives service of the summons retains all defenses and objections (except any relating to the summons or to the service of the summons), and may later object to the jurisdiction of the court or to the place where the action has been brought.

A defendant who waives service must, within the time specified on the waiver form, serve on the plaintiff's attorney (or unrepresented plaintiff) a response to the complaint and also must file a signed copy of the response with the court. If the answer is not served within this time, a default judgment may be taken against that defendant. By waiving service, a defendant is allowed more time to answer than if the summons had been actually served when the request for waiver of service was received. (Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 4; Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, §§ 1-3, 51; Ga. L. 1968, p. 1036, § 1; Ga. L. 1968, p. 1104, §§ 1, 2; Ga. L. 1969, p. 487, § 1; Ga. L. 1972, p. 689, §§ 1-3; Ga. L. 1980, p. 1124, § 1; Ga. L. 1982, p. 3, § 9; Ga. L. 1984, p. 22, § 9; Ga. L. 1989, p. 364, § 1; Ga. L. 1991, p. 626, § 1; Ga. L. 1993, p. 91, § 9; Ga. L. 2000, p. 1225, § 1; Ga. L. 2000, p. 1589, §§ 3, 4; Ga. L. 2002, p. 1244, § 1; Ga. L. 2010, p. 822, §§ 2, 3, 4/SB 491; Ga. L. 2012, p. 695, § 1/HB 1048; Ga. L. 2013, p. 591, § 1/SB 113.)

The 2013 amendment, effective July 1, 2013, added the subparagraph (e)(1)(A) designation; in subparagraph (e)(1)(A), in the first sentence, substituted "such corporation or foreign corporation, a managing agent thereof, or a registered agent thereof," for "the corporation, secretary, cashier, managing agent, or other agent thereof," and inserted "or foreign corporation", in the third sentence, inserted "registered" in the middle and substituted "such corporation or foreign corporation" for "the corporation", in the fourth sentence, substituted "appears" for "shall appear" and substituted "such corporation or foreign corporation outside this" for "the corporation outside the", and substituted a period for a semicolon at the end; added subparagraph (e)(1)(B); rewrote paragraph (e)(2); and inserted a comma in the first sentence of paragraph (e)(5).

SPECIAL STATUTORY PROCEEDINGS

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Civil Code 1910, §§ 5552, 5554, 5556, 5562, and 5566 and former Code 1933, §§ 81-201 through 81-220, 81-1201, 81-1205, and 81-1313 are included in the annotations for this Code section.

Strict construction. — Statutes providing for service of process must be construed with strictness as this is the method by which the court obtains jurisdiction over a person sued in order to be able to render judgment against that person. Cawthon v. McCord, 83 Ga. App. 158, 63 S.E.2d 287 (1951) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-202).

Provisions of this section must be strictly construed, since notice is the very bedrock of due process. Thompson v. Lagerquist, 232 Ga. 75, 205 S.E.2d 267 (1974); Lanier v. Foster, 133 Ga. App. 149, 210 S.E.2d 326 (1974); Cook v. Bright, 150 Ga. App. 696, 258 S.E.2d 326 (1979).

Federal rules. — Georgia law does not add to the ways in which service may be effected under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. Dorman v. Simpson, 893 F. Supp. 1073 (N.D. Ga. 1995).

Georgia Tort Claims Act. — O.C.G.A. § 50-21-35 does not provide the exclusive method for service of process on a state entity under the Georgia Tort Claims Act, O.C.G.A. § 50-21-20 et seq., rather, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4(e)(5), part of the Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9, applies to claims brought under the Georgia Tort Claims Act, and accordingly service on a community board was not improper when the summons and complaint were not handed personally to the board's director. Ga. Pines Cmty. Serv. Bd. v. Summerlin, 282 Ga. 339, 647 S.E.2d 566 (2007).

Substantial compliance with requisites of law with respect to issuing and serving of process will be sufficient, and when notice is given, no technical or formal objection shall invalidate any process. Gainesville Feed & Poultry Co. v. Waters, 87 Ga. App. 354, 73 S.E.2d 771 (1952) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-220).

Purpose of service. — Object of process is to notify the defendant when to appear and answer. Minsk v. Cook, 48 Ga. App. 567, 173 S.E. 446 (1934) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5552).

Law requires service not simply for form, or as a snare to trap litigants, or to prevent adjudication of a legal controversy, but its sole purpose is to put defendant on notice that the defendant is being sued and afford the defendant ample opportunity to be heard on any defense that the defendant may wish to make thereto. Jones v. Jones, 209 Ga. 861, 76 S.E.2d 801 (1953) (decided under former Code 1933, §§ 81-201 and 81-211).

Only purpose of process is to give the party proper notice of proceedings and when that party's appearance will be required, and when that is done, process has served its purpose. Heffner v. Dutton, 106 Ga. App. 786, 128 S.E.2d 337 (1962) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-220).

Purpose of process and service is to bring defendant into court. Tyree v. Jackson, 226 Ga. 690, 177 S.E.2d 160 (1970).

Object of service on the defendant is to afford the defendant notice of pendency of proceeding and to afford the defendant an opportunity to appear and to be heard. Tyree v. Jackson, 226 Ga. 690, 177 S.E.2d 160 (1970).

Summons issued by a clerk of court under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4 is not an order of court for the purpose of requiring an answer to an amended complaint and a defendant is not required to file an answer to an amended complaint unless the trial court itself has affirmatively ordered such answer. Shields v. Gish, 280 Ga. 556, 629 S.E.2d 244 (2006).

Process is means whereby court compels appearance of defendant before it for compliance with its demands. Burch v. Crown Laundry, 78 Ga. App. 421, 50 S.E.2d 768 (1948), aff'd, 205 Ga. 211, 53 S.E.2d 116 (1949) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-201).

Meaning of "substituted" service. — As the only mode of service known to common law was personal service, the only legal alternative type of service is that authorized by statute; thus, any service other than personal service is that type substituted by statute to be used in lieu of personal service. Lexington Developers, Inc. v. O'Neal Constr. Co., 142 Ga. App. 434, 236 S.E.2d 98, rev'd on other grounds, 240 Ga. 376, 240 S.E.2d 856 (1977).

Actual notice. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4 should be liberally construed to effectuate service when actual notice of suit has been received by the defendant. Trammel v. National Bank, 159 Ga. App. 850, 285 S.E.2d 590 (1981).

Necessity of service is not dispensed with by mere fact that defendant may in some way learn of or have actual knowledge of filing of the action. Trammel v. National Bank, 159 Ga. App. 850, 285 S.E.2d 590 (1981).

Mere fact that the defendant knew of the lawsuit brought by the plaintiff is irrelevant when no summons was issued and served upon the defendant. Elmore v. Elmore, 177 Ga. App. 682, 340 S.E.2d 651 (1986).

Effect of mere passage of time on validity of service. — Complaint should not have been dismissed when, although service was not perfected until 13 days after the complaint was filed, which was 11 days after the expiration of the six-month grace period of the renewal statute, the trial judge made no finding of laches, lack of diligence or any factor other than mere lapse of time, nor would the facts have supported such a finding. Bennett v. Matt Gay Chevrolet Oldsmobile, Inc., 200 Ga. App. 348, 408 S.E.2d 111, cert. denied, 200 Ga. App. 895, 408 S.E.2d 111 (1991).

Rule nisi may be used as process in lieu of a summons when the defendant is required to appeal at a time other than within 30 days after service. Chancey v. Hancock, 233 Ga. 734, 213 S.E.2d 633 (1975).

Custody judgment sought to be enforced by attachment for contempt is separate and independent proceeding from one in which visitation rights are granted, and being so, it is necessary in latter case to perfect service of petition and rule nisi on parent in custody. Connell v. Connell, 221 Ga. 379, 144 S.E.2d 722 (1965), later appeal, 221 Ga. 859, 148 S.E.2d 294 (1966) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-202).

Notice of habitual violator status and concomitant license revocation is not service of civil process as described in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4, but rather under O.C.G.A. § 40-5-58(b), a driver is to be informed of the driver's status as an habitual violator by certified mail or by personal service, accomplished in the case at bar when the police officer delivered the notice to the licensee. Hardison v. Booker, 179 Ga. App. 693, 347 S.E.2d 681 (1986).

No default judgment for failure to file defensive pleadings in appeal from property evaluation. — Appeal procedure outlined in O.C.G.A. § 48-5-311(f) does not contemplate the filing of a “complaint” or “answer,” and a default judgment will not lie for failure to file defensive pleadings in a de novo hearing on appeal in the superior court from a property evaluation. Rogers v. DeKalb County Bd. of Tax Assessors, 247 Ga. 726, 279 S.E.2d 223 (1981).

Motion for summary judgment and statute of limitation. — Whether the defendant's motion for summary judgment to dismiss the complaint as barred by the statute of limitation should be granted is determined by whether the plaintiffs' have shown that the plaintiffs acted in a reasonable and diligent manner in attempting to assure that a proper service was made as quickly as possible. Abelt v. Nelson, 204 Ga. App. 501, 419 S.E.2d 749 (1992).

Statutory limitation period is not waived by insurer through initial denial of coverage for a claim. The denial of any claim by an insurer generally constitutes notice to the insured that the insured must pursue the insured's legal remedies under the policy, which includes perfecting service upon the insurer within a reasonable time following the filing of a complaint. Bowman v. United States Life Ins. Co., 167 Ga. App. 673, 307 S.E.2d 134 (1983).

Motion to dismiss is the proper vehicle to seek resolution of the issue of lack of service or insufficient service of process, and such a motion, when tried on affidavits pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-43(b) does not become a motion for summary judgment. Terrell v. Porter, 189 Ga. App. 778, 377 S.E.2d 540 (1989).

Because a personal representative failed to effectuate proper service of a personal injury suit on a passenger of a vehicle involved in an accident in which the decedent was killed, especially after having been placed on notice that service had not been perfected, the passenger's motion to dismiss that suit was properly granted. Ballenger v. Floyd, 282 Ga. App. 574, 639 S.E.2d 554 (2006).

Because service of process of a consolidated declaratory judgment action was not sufficiently perfected on two defendant brothers, neither waived service, and despite the fact that one brother might have had notice of the earlier action, the clear requirements of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4(e)(7) were not dispensed with, and the trial court erred in denying the brothers' motion to dismiss the action. Tavakolian v. Agio Corp., 283 Ga. App. 881, 642 S.E.2d 903 (2007).

Reasonable diligence established. — Because the plaintiff presented sufficient evidence that, after filing its complaint, it provided the sheriff's office with the defendant's correct address, and a few weeks later, contacted the sheriff's office to inquire whether service had been completed upon the defendant and learned that repeated service attempts were unsuccessful, evidence of reasonable diligence supporting the denial of a motion to set aside a default judgment was found; moreover, unlike O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4(e)(1), service via overnight delivery was supported and did not violate the defendant's due process rights. B&B Quick Lube, Inc. v. G&K Servs. Co., 283 Ga. App. 299, 641 S.E.2d 198 (2007).

Reasonable diligence not shown. — Motorist sued a driver over injuries allegedly sustained in an auto accident. As the motorist took no steps whatsoever to perfect service for approximately four months after the limitations period of O.C.G.A. § 9-3-33 lapsed, the motorist did not act diligently; therefore, service of process did not relate back to the original filing date. McCullers v. Harrell, 298 Ga. App. 798, 681 S.E.2d 237 (2009), cert. denied, No. S09C1914, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 55 (Ga. 2010).

Notice to debtor in foreclosure sale. — There is no indication of a legislative intent to incorporate within the reporting provision of O.C.G.A. § 44-14-161 the time requirement of subsection (c) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4, for service on a debtor within five days from the day the report of a foreclosure sale is presented to the judge. Oviedo v. Connecticut Nat'l Bank, 194 Ga. App. 626, 391 S.E.2d 417 (1990).

Service of process made on Sunday is no longer invalid due solely to fact that it was made on Sunday. Trammel v. National Bank, 159 Ga. App. 850, 285 S.E.2d 590 (1981).

Service properly made in county where defendant found instead of county of venue. Georgia Power Co. v. Harrison, 253 Ga. 212, 318 S.E.2d 306 (1984).

County of service of divorce pleadings. — There is no requirement that defendant in divorce proceeding shall be served within county where venue properly lies. Alcorn v. Alcorn, 245 Ga. 1, 262 S.E.2d 778 (1980).

Objection to improper venue. — When party has received actual notice of suit, there is no due process problem in requiring the party to object to improper venue within period prescribed. Williams v. Mells, 138 Ga. App. 60, 225 S.E.2d 501 (1976).

Failure to comply with statute. — Trial court did not err in granting a creditor's motion for default judgment on the ground that a debtor failed to answer the complaint within thirty days pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(a) because the trial court was authorized to conclude that the debtor's counsel executed an acknowledgment and waiver pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-10-73, that, therefore, the debtor's answer was due within thirty days after the acknowledgment and waiver, and that because it failed to serve an answer within that thirty-day period, its answer was untimely. O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4 did not apply because the acknowledgment of service the creditor drafted and submitted to the debtor did not make reference to § 9-11-4, and the creditor also did not inform the debtor by means of the text prescribed in § 9-11-4(1). Satnam Waheguru Corp. v. Buckhead Cmty. Bank, 304 Ga. App. 438, 696 S.E.2d 430 (2010).

No proof of issuance of summons in the record.

— There was no proof in the record that a summons was issued identifying the law firm that foreclosed on a plaintiff's home as a defendant, although the law firm was mentioned in the complaint. Therefore, no jurisdiction was obtained over the law firm, and the law firm was not in default. Fairfax v. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A., 312 Ga. App. 171, 718 S.E.2d 16 (2011).

Constitutional RequirementsConstitutional validity of service.

— Constitutional validity of any chosen method of service may be defended on the ground that it is in itself reasonably certain to inform those affected or, when conditions do not reasonably permit such notice, that the form chosen is not substantially less likely to bring home notice than other of the feasible and customary substitutes. Benton v. Modern Fin. & Inv. Co., 244 Ga. 533, 261 S.E.2d 359 (1979).

Regardless of whether a proceeding is in rem or in personam, due process requires that a chosen method of service be reasonably certain to give actual notice of the pendency of a proceeding to those parties whose liberty or property interests may be adversely affected by the proceeding. Abba Gana v. Abba Gana, 251 Ga. 340, 304 S.E.2d 909 (1983).

Oral notice inadequate. — Constitutional requirement of adequate notice is not fulfilled when the only probative evidence in the record concerning actual notice is to the effect that the opposing party was orally told that an action had been filed against that party; such cursory notice clearly failed to rise above the level of casual information and rumor. Abba Gana v. Abba Gana, 251 Ga. 340, 304 S.E.2d 909 (1983).

Form

Prayer for process not required. — Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) contains no requirement that prayer for process be included in the complaint as a prerequisite to valid service of process. Matthews v. Fayette County, 233 Ga. 220, 210 S.E.2d 758 (1974); Black v. Black, 245 Ga. 281, 264 S.E.2d 216 (1980).

Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, §§ 1-3 and 8 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-4 and 9-11-8) eliminated the necessity of a prayer for process. Hunt v. Denby, 128 Ga. App. 523, 197 S.E.2d 489 (1973).

Plaintiff's address. — This section requires that plaintiff's address be given only if that of plaintiff's attorney is not given. Thibadeau v. Thibadeau, 133 Ga. App. 154, 210 S.E.2d 340 (1974).

Objections merely to form of process. — While Ga. L. 1969, p. 487, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4) uses only word "service" and does not purport to deal with form of process, it is indicative of spirit and intent of the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) with regard to both process and service, and, accordingly, when it is clear that the defendant has been served, has appeared, and has been heard on the merits, the proceeding should not be vitiated by objections going merely to form of process. Tyree v. Jackson, 226 Ga. 690, 177 S.E.2d 160 (1970).

Who May Serve Process

Appointment of permanent process servers. — Mandamus did not require a state court judge to appoint permanent process servers pursuant to subsection (c) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4 since, even if the petitioners had no other specific legal remedy, the statute provided the court with the authority as well as the discretion to appoint disinterested persons, who are citizens of the United States and at least 18 years of age, as permanent process servers, but did not mandate that the court make such an appointment when the statutory requirements have been satisfied. Tamaroff v. Cowen, 270 Ga. 415, 511 S.E.2d 159 (1999).

Trial court did not err in finding that service upon the county school district employees was perfected pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4(c) because a court order appointing the process server in question as a permanent process server for the Superior Courts of the Ocmulgee Judicial Circuit, which included Hancock County, authorized that process server to serve the complaint, and the employees did not dispute that the employees were actually served with the complaint; whether the permanent process server was authorized to file the sheriff's entries of service rather than the server's own affidavits as proof of service bore no weight in determining whether proper service was in fact made. Cosby v. Lewis, 308 Ga. App. 668, 708 S.E.2d 585 (2011).

Disinterested person to execute process. — Law has entrusted decision of disputes to persons wholly disinterested in the litigation, and this is equally true of the person selected to execute process necessary to adjustment of such dispute. Dotson v. Luxtron, Inc., 155 Ga. App. 504, 271 S.E.2d 644 (1980).

Specially appointed person authorized to serve process. — In order for a citizen to be authorized to serve process, the citizen must be specially appointed by the court in which the action has been brought. Capra v. Rogers, 200 Ga. App. 131, 407 S.E.2d 101 (1991).

Because a personal injury plaintiff failed to file an action against an uninsured/underinsured motorist insurer within the applicable statutory period, and the action was not subject to renewal, as the magistrate court's determination that service was made by an unauthorized person, thus rendering the original action void, the insurer was entitled to dismissal. Lewis v. Waller, 282 Ga. App. 8, 637 S.E.2d 505 (2006).

Permanent process server. — Courts have the discretion and authority to appoint permanent process servers but are not required to do so. In re Denhardt, 231 Ga. App. 203, 498 S.E.2d 772 (1998).

Specially appointed attorney not disinterested. — Evidence was sufficient to establish that an attorney specially appointed by the court for service of process at the request of plaintiff's counsel was not a wholly disinterested party and, thus, grant of a motion to dismiss for insufficient service was proper. Yeary v. Bell, 228 Ga. App. 522, 492 S.E.2d 278 (1997).

Service by a private process server hired by the plaintiffs was a nullity since the process server was not appointed by the trial court as provided by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4. Mann v. Atlanta Cas. Co., 215 Ga. App. 747, 452 S.E.2d 130 (1994).

Process serving company or the company's designated agent was appointed by the trial court to effectuate service on the out-of-state tortfeasor in the injured parties' personal injury action; although the better practice would have been to obtain an order naming a specific person to effect service, the injured parties did not transgress the requirements of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4(c). Passmore v. Thomas, 255 Ga. App. 612, 565 S.E.2d 923 (2002).

Party may not serve process. — It was not legislative intent that party could be appointed as agent to serve process in the party's own case. Abrams v. Abrams, 239 Ga. 866, 239 S.E.2d 33 (1977).

Cousin may not serve process. — When plaintiff's cousin handed the defendant an unopened shoe box containing the complaint and summons, the plaintiff's cousin has not been shown to be one of the people enumerated in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4 who may serve process in Georgia. Therefore, the service was insufficient to secure personal jurisdiction over the defendant. Fortson v. Fortson, 204 Ga. App. 827, 421 S.E.2d 106 (1992).

Attorney for the plaintiff in an action does not "stand equal" between the plaintiff and the defendant, and when so engaged is not a proper person to serve process in that action. Dotson v. Luxtron, Inc., 155 Ga. App. 504, 271 S.E.2d 644 (1980).

Chief of police lacks authority to serve process, being neither a sheriff nor a deputy sheriff, nor an officer of the court, nor a "specially appointed" person, and the police chief's attempt to do so is without effect. Townsend v. Williams, 170 Ga. App. 766, 318 S.E.2d 510 (1984).

Deputy sheriff of county adjacent to the county where the defendant was found may not properly serve process even though the defendant's residence was near the border of the counties and the sheriff was mistaken about where that border fell. Zimmerman v. Hammer, 220 Ga. App. 864, 470 S.E.2d 688 (1996).

Correctional officer. — Personal service of a summons and a petition of deprivation, by a correctional officer upon an incarcerated father, was sufficient as the service procedures in the Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9, were not adopted nor were binding on the juvenile court, and the correctional officer was acting under the direction of the court for the purposes of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1(c) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-161, 15-11-282, 15-11-424, and 15-11-531). In the Interest of A.J.M., 277 Ga. App. 646, 627 S.E.2d 399 (2006).

Service could be by either of two sheriffs and by original or second original. — Although he appellant was incarcerated in the county jail in one county, the superior court of a different county correctly held that it had personal jurisdiction over the appellant for purposes of resolving a dispute over title to property located in that county, and it was immaterial which county sheriff personally served the appellant or whether that service was accomplished by delivery of the original or second original. Elrod v. Elrod, 272 Ga. 188, 526 S.E.2d 339 (2000).

Timeliness of Service

Five-day period not absolute. — Five-day period specified in subsection (c) of this section is not absolute. Childs v. Catlin, 134 Ga. App. 778, 216 S.E.2d 360 (1975).

Fact that the registered agent of a hospital was located outside the county in which a medical malpractice complaint was filed did not render untimely the subsequent service made on a hospital agent more than five days after the filing of the complaint. Floyd v. Piedmont Hosp., 213 Ga. App. 749, 445 S.E.2d 844 (1994).

Five-day time limit in subsection (c) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4 provides a time frame for performance by the process server once service is sought, but does not provide a time limit within which service must be initiated by the plaintiff. Jackson v. Doe, 243 Ga. App. 210, 532 S.E.2d 761 (2000).

Plaintiffs are not required to perfect service within O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4(c)'s five-day period; the five-day period specifically applies to the process server. Roberts v. Jones, 390 F. Supp. 2d 1333 (M.D. Ga. May 9, 2005).

Within the context of a parental rights termination proceeding, a juvenile court had the discretion to determine whether to grant an extension of time for a putative father to serve his legitimation petition on the mother, pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96(i) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-283) and O.C.G.A. § 19-7-22(b), and Georgia case law that allowed application of the procedural rules set out in the Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9, including O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4(c) relating to service and extensions thereto; accordingly, the juvenile court's refusal to hear the legitimation petition was error as was the decision to terminate the putative father's parental rights under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-310, 15-11-311, and 15-11-320) without first determining that he had standing under the legitimation action. In the Interest of A.H., 279 Ga. App. 77, 630 S.E.2d 587 (2006).

Section integral part of statutes of limitations. — By holding that service of process does not relate back to toll statutes of limitations unless the plaintiff has acted diligently, the Georgia courts have interpreted O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-3 and 9-11-4 as integral parts of the state statutes of limitations. Cambridge Mut. Fire Ins. Co. v. City of Claxton, 720 F.2d 1230 (11th Cir. 1983).

Effect of service of process on statute of limitations. — Although normally the timely filing of the complaint tolls the statute of limitations with regard to process served after expiration of the statute, if the plaintiff fails to act in a reasonable and diligent manner to insure that process is properly served, the timely filing of the complaint will not toll the statute. Ingram v. Grose, 180 Ga. App. 647, 350 S.E.2d 289 (1986).

Owners' personal injury and property damages action against a manufacturer, which concerned a fire in January 30, 2000, was barred by the two- and four-year statutes of limitations because the owners failed to timely perfect service, as required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4(c), until February 23, 2004, which was more than five days after the owners filed a renewed complaint under O.C.G.A. § 9-2-61(a) on October 28, 2003. Johnson v. Am. Meter Co., 412 F. Supp. 2d 1260 (N.D. Ga. 2004).

Based on sufficient evidence that a resident stood idle for six months after learning of the difficulties in serving a non-resident, the resident's personal injury complaint was properly dismissed on grounds that the resident failed to exercise due diligence in effectuating service of process; hence, the statute of limitations under O.C.G.A. § 9-3-33 was not tolled. Livingston v. Taylor, 284 Ga. App. 638, 644 S.E.2d 483 (2007).

Relation back of service to avoid bar of statute of limitations. —

If filing of the petition is followed by timely service, perfected as required by law, even though the statute of limitations runs between the date of filing of the petition and the date of service, such service will relate back to the time of filing so as to avoid the limitation. Childs v. Catlin, 134 Ga. App. 778, 216 S.E.2d 360 (1975).

When the complaint is filed near the expiration of the statute of limitations, and service of process does not occur within five days, nor within period of the statute of limitation, but the plaintiff shows that the plaintiff acted in a reasonable and diligent manner in attempting to assure that proper service was made as quickly as possible, the defendant's motion to dismiss should not be granted. McCane v. Sowinski, 143 Ga. App. 724, 240 S.E.2d 132 (1977).

Statute of limitation is tolled by the commencement of a civil action at law. If an action is filed within the period of limitation, but not served upon the defendant within five days or within the limitation period, the plaintiff must establish that service was made in a reasonable and diligent manner in an attempt to ensure that proper service is made as quickly as possible. If reasonable and diligent efforts are not made to ensure proper service as quickly as possible, the plaintiff is guilty of laches and, in such a case, service will not relate back to the time of the filing of the complaint for the purpose of tolling the statute of limitation. Bowman v. United States Life Ins. Co., 167 Ga. App. 673, 307 S.E.2d 134 (1983); Brumbalow v. Fritz, 183 Ga. App. 231, 358 S.E.2d 872 (1987).

Under Georgia law, in the event the statute of limitations has run between the filing and the service of the complaint, service will relate back to the date of filing only if perfected within five days of filing the complaint. Beyond the five days, service relates back only if the plaintiff diligently attempted to perfect service. Robinette v. Johnston, 637 F. Supp. 922 (M.D. Ga. 1986).

Under subsection (c) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4, when the limitation accrues between the date of filing and the date of service and is more than five days after the filing, whether or not the service relates back is a question for the trial court, which considers the length of the elapsed time and the diligence of the plaintiff, and when the court did not consider this issue, the case will be remanded for its resolution. Ellerbee v. Interstate Contract Carrier Corp., 183 Ga. App. 828, 360 S.E.2d 280 (1987); Day v. Burnett, 189 Ga. App. 905, 377 S.E.2d 734 (1989).

When service is made after the expiration of the applicable statute of limitation, the timely filing of the complaint tolls the statute only if the plaintiff shows that the plaintiff acted in a reasonable and diligent manner in attempting to insure that proper service was made as quickly as possible. The burden rests on the plaintiff to show lack of fault. Slater v. Blount, 200 Ga. App. 470, 408 S.E.2d 433, cert. denied, 200 Ga. App. 897, 408 S.E.2d 433 (1991).

Five-day relation back doctrine of subsection (c) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4 applies in cases where service is completed outside the applicable statute of limitation. Dyer v. Paffenroth, 197 Ga. App. 888, 399 S.E.2d 710 (1990).

If service is within the five days, even though the statute of limitation runs between the date of filing suit and the date of service, the service will relate back to the time of filing so as to avoid the limitation. Day v. Burnett, 199 Ga. App. 494, 405 S.E.2d 316 (1991).

Service of an uninsured motorist carrier within five business days after the date of filing of the complaint, in an action for personal injuries, related back to the date of filing as a matter of law, for statute of limitation purposes. Williams v. Colonial Ins. Co., 199 Ga. App. 760, 406 S.E.2d 99 (1991).

Delay between the insured's filing of a tort claim and service on the uninsured motorist carrier did not require dismissal when, within the applicable period of limitations, the insured sought to serve the insurer and the failure to make service within the limitation period was not the result of the insured's lack of diligence, but the result of the unavailability of the insurer's registered agent; whether diligence was exercised was determined from the time the insured became aware that the process server failed to perfect service, not from the date of filing the complaint. Georgia Farm Bureau Mut. Ins. Co. v. Kilgore, 265 Ga. 836, 462 S.E.2d 713 (1995).

When a complaint is filed near the expiration of the applicable statute of limitation, and service is made after the five-day grace period of subsection (c) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4, the plaintiff bears the burden of showing that the plaintiff exercised due diligence in performing service. Scott v. Taylor, 234 Ga. App. 543, 507 S.E.2d 798 (1998).

Since a plaintiff supplied the sheriff's office with the correct service address for the defendant when the complaint was filed, the plaintiff was justified in relying on the sheriff to perform the duty to serve process within five days of receiving the process papers under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4(c); thus, the dismissal of the complaint on the ground that the sheriff did not serve the complaint until 13 days after it was filed and 11 days after the statute of limitations had run, was error even though the trial court expressly found that the delay constituted laches. Lee v. Kim, 275 Ga. App. 891, 622 S.E.2d 99 (2005).

Extraterritorial service of process upon the president of a foreign corporation doing business within this state and having an agent within this state was not valid. Cherokee Warehouses Inc. v. Babb Lumber Co., 244 Ga. App. 197, 535 S.E.2d 254 (2000).

If defendant not served, no "relation back." — In a legal malpractice action alleging that a medical malpractice action was handled wantonly and recklessly, the limitation period commenced running at the time the statute of limitations had expired on the medical malpractice action without a valid suit being filed. Because the defendant in the medical malpractice action was never served, the doctrine of "relation back" could not apply. Plumlee v. Davis, 221 Ga. App. 848, 473 S.E.2d 510 (1996).

Plaintiff must act reasonably diligently. — When, despite all plaintiff's diligence, service cannot be obtained within five days and before expiration of the statute of limitations, the trial judge should look at all the facts involved and ascertain whether the plaintiff was in any way guilty of laches, and if the plaintiff acted in a reasonably diligent manner then the plaintiff would not be barred. Childs v. Catlin, 134 Ga. App. 778, 216 S.E.2d 360 (1975).

Correct test must be whether the plaintiff shows that the plaintiff acted in a reasonable and diligent manner in attempting to ensure that proper service was made as quickly as possible. Childs v. Catlin, 134 Ga. App. 778, 216 S.E.2d 360 (1975).

It was error to use the "greatest due diligence" standard in determining that a medical malpractice plaintiff had not served certain defendants in a timely manner under O.C.G.A. § 9-3-71(a) as the proper standard was that of a reasonable and diligent manner pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4(c); remand was required for a determination as to whether service upon most defendants within 30 days of filing the complaint, which was filed on the last day of the limitations period, and service on the remainder by 44 days, was within the proper standard to avoid dismissal. Tenet Healthcare Corp. v. Gilbert, 277 Ga. App. 895, 627 S.E.2d 821 (2006).

Plaintiff had to act with greatest possible diligence. — Trial court properly dismissed a plaintiff's personal injury action filed against the defendant on insufficient service of process grounds as: (1) the plaintiff did little to pursue service; (2) the plaintiff inappropriately shifted the burden of the search on the court; and (3) the fact that the defendant served interrogatories and a request for production did not amount to a waiver of an insufficient service of process defense. Kelley v. Lymon, 279 Ga. App. 849, 632 S.E.2d 734 (2006).

In a personal injury suit, although plaintiff passenger attempted to serve defendant driver only once prior to the expiration of the statute of limitation, upon encountering difficulty locating the driver, the passenger's response was delayed at best, notwithstanding the imminent running of the statute of limitation, and the passenger did not even try to serve the driver until after the statute had run; thus, under the circumstances, the trial court properly found the passenger guilty of laches. Patterson v. Lopez, 279 Ga. App. 840, 632 S.E.2d 736 (2006).

In a personal injury action arising from an auto accident filed two days before the expiration of the applicable statute of limitation, because the record failed to show that the plaintiff acted with the greatest possible diligence to personally serve the defendant, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in dismissing the plaintiff's complaint based on insufficient service of process. Moody v. Gilliam, 281 Ga. App. 819, 637 S.E.2d 759 (2006).

Because a husband and wife failed to show what efforts they took in exercising due diligence in serving a driver close to the running of the relevant statute of limitations under O.C.G.A. § 9-3-33, their personal injury claim was properly dismissed, but the wife's loss of consortium claim survived. Parker v. Silviano, 284 Ga. App. 278, 643 S.E.2d 819 (2007).

Although a personal injury litigant hired a "skip tracer," and received the report the next day, because that litigant neglected to attempt to move for an order for service by publication until almost two weeks later, and did not secure the order until over a month after that, and, there was no evidence of any contact between the litigant during the interim, the trial court did not err in finding that the litigant did not exercise the greatest possible diligence; moreover, a finding that the litigant exercised the requisite due diligence to authorize service by publication did not compel a finding that the litigant exercised the greatest possible diligence in serving the opposing party personally three months after the opposing party filed an answer, and nearly four months after the statute of limitation had run. Green v. Cimafranca, 288 Ga. App. 16, 653 S.E.2d 782 (2007).

In a family's lawsuit against a driver after a collision, the trial court properly granted the driver summary judgment based on insufficient service of process. Once the driver filed an answer asserting insufficient service, the family was obligated to exercise the greatest possible diligence in effecting service, but the family did not explain the family's lack of diligence other than by a late-filed affidavit. Abimbola v. Pate, 291 Ga. App. 769, 662 S.E.2d 840 (2008).

Judicial determination of diligence. — If a plaintiff has taken some action to perfect service when suit is timely filed but service is perfected outside the limitation period, the trial court must determine, exercising the court's legal discretion, whether the plaintiff was diligent. Watters v. Classon, 193 Ga. App. 493, 388 S.E.2d 397 (1989).

Trial court's exercise of discretion in determining diligence will not be reversed on appeal unless the discretion has been actually abused and cannot be supported as a matter of law. Morse v. Flint River Community Hosp., 215 Ga. App. 224, 450 S.E.2d 253 (1994).

Trial court erred in dismissing a client's legal malpractice action on the ground that the client did not act with reasonable diligence in serving the attorney because the court failed to consider the client's efforts at service outside the five-day period of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4(c); the record presented a number of factual issues that had to be resolved in determining whether the client exercised the appropriate diligence in perfecting service on the attorney or whether the client was guilty of laches, but the trial court failed to address those issues under the appropriate standards. Cleveland v. Katz, 311 Ga. App. 880, 717 S.E.2d 500 (2011).

Reasonable diligence not shown. — When, in a suit for personal injuries arising out of a collision, service on a defendant was perfected approximately a year after the complaint filing and more than ten months after the statute of limitation expired, the trial court erred in finding that the plaintiff exercised reasonable diligence in perfecting service of process upon the defendant. Land v. Casteel, 195 Ga. App. 455, 393 S.E.2d 710 (1990).

Inordinate and unexplained delay on the part of the plaintiff in obtaining personal service on the defendant, particularly after being placed on due notice of the deficiency in the plaintiff's original service, constituted failure to exercise due diligence so as to preclude the relation back of subsequent perfected service to the original filing of the complaint. Bailey v. Hall, 199 Ga. App. 602, 405 S.E.2d 579 (1991).

In an action for personal injuries sustained in an automobile accident filed three days before the expiration of the statute of limitation, when the plaintiff established that the defendants no longer resided at the address shown on the accident report and were not listed in the local area city or telephone directories, but did not attempt service by publication, it was not an abuse of discretion to conclude that the plaintiff failed to establish due diligence in insuring proper service. Lowes v. Allstate Ins. Co., 204 Ga. App. 148, 418 S.E.2d 465 (1992).

When the record reflected absolutely no investigative attempt to locate the defendant for a period of four and one-half years before the defendant acknowledged the untimely filed service, the trial court abused the court's discretion in denying the motion to dismiss. Cason v. Williams, 207 Ga. App. 550, 428 S.E.2d 444 (1993).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion as a matter of law in deciding that the plaintiff did not use reasonable diligence to pursue service when the record showed an unexplained lapse of over a month during the 81-day period in which there was no effort by the plaintiff to verify the defendant's address. Devoe v. Callis, 212 Ga. App. 618, 442 S.E.2d 765 (1994).

Trial court properly determined that the plaintiff had not been diligent in perfecting service due to the plaintiff's own failure to correctly determine the county in which the defendant resided. Cantin v. Justice, 224 Ga. App. 195, 480 S.E.2d 250 (1997); Robison v. Green, 228 Ga. App. 27, 491 S.E.2d 95 (1997).

Plaintiffs' mailing of waiver forms to in-state defendants more than a month after the running of the statute of limitations did not constitute diligence. Lau v.

Klinger, 46 F. Supp. 2d 1377 (S.D. Ga. 1999).

When plaintiffs offered no evidence to support their assertion that the secretary of state played a role in causing the delay in service of process, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in determining that the plaintiffs did not show that the plaintiffs acted in a reasonable and diligent manner in attempting service. Pringle v. Jaganauth, 240 Ga. App. 65, 522 S.E.2d 560 (1999), overruled on other grounds, Farrie v. McCall, 256 Ga. App. 446, 568 S.E.2d 603 (2002).

Because the evidence presented before the trial court failed to show that an injured passenger exercised either reasonable diligence or the greatest possible diligence in attempting service of process on an opposing driver, but instead showed that: (1) numerous attempts at service were unsuccessful; (2) the passenger filed the complaint eight days before the expiration of the limitation period, and service was not perfected until 16 months after the statute ran; (3) long lapses in time existed between failed attempts when apparently no actions were taken to effectuate service; and (4) the driver continued to reside in the same small community during the 16 months that it took to ultimately perfect service, the trial court did not err in granting summary judgment to the driver. Moore v. Wilkerson, 283 Ga. App. 340, 641 S.E.2d 578 (2007).

Bankruptcy trustee's late service on a driver did not relate back to the filing of the personal injury complaint since the trustee failed to show that the trustee reasonably and diligently insured that service was made as quickly as possible after the driver made the trustee aware of the driver's true residence. Webster v. Western Express, Inc., No. 5:05-CV-350 (WDO), 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 70011 (M.D. Ga. Sept. 21, 2007).

Complaint against a defendant who was never served was properly dismissed for insufficient service of process because the affidavit did not contain sufficient dates or a chronology to show that diligence had been exercised. The record did not show that the plaintiff had diligently pursued service on an ongoing basis or whether there were any unreasonable lapses in time during this period when no efforts were made. Montague v. Godfrey, 289 Ga. App. 552, 657 S.E.2d 630 (2008).

Delay of service by sheriff. — Even though service was not perfected on the defendant until 17 days after expiration of the statute of limitation, dismissal of the claim was erroneous since the plaintiffs turned the matter over to the sheriff for service on the date the complaint was timely filed and were justified in relying on the sheriff to make service within five days of receiving the summons and complaint. Jackson v. Nguyen, 225 Ga. App. 599, 484 S.E.2d 337 (1997).

Inadequate justification for delay in perfecting service. — Being unaware of the concept that service of process has anything to do with the tolling of the statute of limitations, as opposed to the filing of the complaint, is not an adequate justification for delay in perfecting service. Robinette v. Johnston, 637 F. Supp. 922 (M.D. Ga. 1986).

Service perfected. — Trial court had jurisdiction over a home inspector, and the inspector was required under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(a) of the Georgia Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9, to file an answer to the purchaser's complaint within 30 days, but because the inspector failed to do so, the inspector was in default; the caption of the purchaser's original complaint named both the inspector and another as defendants, and because the purchaser obtained a summons against the inspector when the purchaser filed a duplicate of the complaint, and service was effected upon the inspector five days later, the new summons could have perfected the filing of the purchaser's action against the inspector and allowed for the inspector to be served, but the absence of a summons for the inspector at the time of the original filing did not change the fact that the inspector was named as a defendant in the original suit. Strickland v. Leake, 311 Ga. App. 298, 715 S.E.2d 676 (2011).

Reliance upon clerk's statement regarding service. — Even if the plaintiffs initially were justified in relying on a court clerk's statement that the defendant had been served, their receipt of the defendant's answer, in which the defendant alleged an affirmative defense of insufficient service, should have put the plaintiffs on notice and inspired the plaintiffs, through counsel, to exercise the greatest possible diligence to ensure proper and timely service. Given that the plaintiffs had the defendant's correct address and were informed that the apparent agent who had accepted service was not authorized to do so, their assertions that any delay was attributable to court personnel did not explain their 29-day delay in effecting service after the defendant filed an answer. Consequently, the court did not abuse the court's discretion by determining that the plaintiffs did not exercise due diligence so as to toll the statute of limitation. Robinson v. Stuck, 194 Ga. App. 311, 390 S.E.2d 603 (1990).

Unreasonable delay. — Dismissal was properly granted upon the trial court's determination that unsuccessful efforts to perfect service on the defendant, who had moved, were not sufficient because the plaintiff had considerable information about the defendant which could have easily led to timely service but was not availed of, resulting in an unreasonable delay in service. Watters v. Classon, 193 Ga. App. 493, 388 S.E.2d 397 (1989).

Abuse of discretion. — Trial court's determination constituted an abuse of discretion in denying the appellant's motion regarding the appellee's failure to exercise due diligence in perfecting service within the statute of limitation since there was no support in the record for the appellee's contentions that the appellant evaded service. Abelt v. Nelson, 204 Ga. App. 501, 419 S.E.2d 749 (1992).

Late perfection of service and laches doctrine. — When a complaint is filed within the applicable statute of limitation but service is perfected more than five days after the statute expires, whether or not it relates back depends on the length of time and the diligence used by a plaintiff; so, a trial court, in the exercise of the court's discretion, must look at the facts involved and determine whether the plaintiff is in any way guilty of laches. If the plaintiff is, the plaintiff would be barred, but if the plaintiff has acted in a reasonably diligent manner then the plaintiff would not be barred.

Carver v. Tift County Hosp. Auth., 268 Ga. App. 153, 601 S.E.2d 475 (2004).

Effect of hospital governmental entity's delayed non-waiver of service. — Patients exercised due diligence (under a laches-type of test) to serve hospital after the hospital informed them, after the statute of limitations expired, that the hospital was a governmental entity that, under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4(d), could not accept the patients' request to waive service of process; so, the patient's suit, filed before the statute of limitations expired, related back under laches and O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(b) so that the statute did not bar the dismissed claims against the hospital and the trial court abused the court's discretion in finding otherwise. Carver v. Tift County Hosp. Auth., 268 Ga. App. 153, 601 S.E.2d 475 (2004).

Belated service as laches. — Belated service, particularly when the delay is great, is laches, authorizing the court to dismiss an action when the statute of limitations ran before service was so belatedly perfected. Hilton v. Maddox, Bishop, Hayton Frame & Trim Contractors, 125 Ga. App. 423, 188 S.E.2d 167 (1972), distinguished in Childs v. Catlin, 134 Ga. App. 778, 216 S.E.2d 360 (1975).

Finding of laches in regard to service may be made as a matter of law even when the plaintiff has made some attempt at service. Anderson v. Hughes, 196 Ga. App. 186, 395 S.E.2d 623 (1990).

Plaintiff has burden of showing lack of fault. — If a plaintiff has taken no action to perfect service, then a petition to permit belated service should be denied as a matter of law. If the plaintiff has taken some action, the trial judge must determine, exercising legal discretion, whether the plaintiff was diligent in the plaintiff's efforts. The burden of showing lack of fault is on the plaintiff. Anderson v. Hughes, 196 Ga. App. 186, 395 S.E.2d 623 (1990).

Although late service is not "invalidated," it results in no pending suit between the parties until the date of service. Hilton v. Maddox, Bishop, Hayton Frame & Trim Contractors, 125 Ga. App. 423, 188 S.E.2d 167 (1972), distinguished in Childs v. Catlin, 134 Ga. App. 778, 216 S.E.2d 360 (1975).

Defendants not prejudiced by late service. — When the defendants, after later service upon the defendants, adopted motions and defensive pleadings of other defendants and were represented by the same attorneys, those defendants were not harmed by the late service, and the complaint was not subject to dismissal because of the late service. Pressley v. Jennings, 227 Ga. 366, 180 S.E.2d 896 (1971).

Reliance upon information given in accident report. — Trial court abused the court's discretion in finding the plaintiff failed to show due diligence in perfecting service since the plaintiff showed that the plaintiff relied upon information contained within an accident report and that the plaintiff made steady efforts, although after the expiration of the limitation period, to discover the defendant's whereabouts. Starr v. Wimbush, 201 Ga. App. 280, 410 S.E.2d 776, cert. denied, 201 Ga. App. 904, 410 S.E.2d 776 (1991); overruled on other grounds, Ragan v. Mallow, 319 Ga. App. 443, 2012 Ga. App. LEXIS 1061 (Ga. Ct. App. 2012).

Service procedure after expiration of statute of limitations. — Under Georgia law, there are essentially three rules governing service of process in cases in which the statute of limitations has expired: (1) if service is made within five days after the statute expires, service will relate back to the timely filing; (2) if service is not perfected within the five-day period, but some action is taken, and a plaintiff makes a showing that the plaintiff acted reasonably and diligently to insure service was made as quickly as possible, service may relate back to the timely filing of the complaint; and (3), when the five-day grace period has expired and the plaintiff has failed to show that the plaintiff diligently tried to serve the defendant, the court must dismiss the case. Roberts v. Jones, 390 F. Supp. 2d 1333 (M.D. Ga. May 9, 2005).

Failure to perfect service within statute of limitations. — Trial court was presented with evidence sufficient to support the court's judgment dismissing the appellant's complaint against the ap-pellee for failure to perfect service of process because the appellant failed to serve the appellee within five days of the two-year statute of limitations, O.C.G.A. § 9-3-33; the appellee proffered evidence that: (1) the appellee did not reside in the town where service was allegedly made at the time service was attempted; (2) the appellee's brother resided at that address during the relevant time period; (3) the appellee's brother advised the appellee of the appellant's complaint after being provided with a copy of the complaint by the process server; and (4) the appellee also presented evidence from the appellee's landlord confirming that the appellee had lived at a different residence. Jones v. Lopez-Herrera, 308 Ga. App. 81, 706 S.E.2d 609 (2011).

Court erred in calculating five-day period. — Trial court erred in calculating the five-day period under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4(c) for service of a client's complaint because the provisions of O.C.G.A. § 1-3-1(d)(3) applied since the five-day requirement was less than seven days; because the client filed the complaint on Friday, August 14, 2009, the client had until Friday, August 21, 2009, in which to achieve service in accordance with O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4(c) since the intervening Saturday and Sunday, August 15 and 16, 2009, were excluded from the calculation of the five-day period. Cleveland v. Katz, 311 Ga. App. 880, 717 S.E.2d 500 (2011).

Waiver

Right to waive service. — Service is a right conferred on the defendant for the defendant's own benefit and protection, and the defendant is free to waive service if the defendant so chooses. Jones v. Jones, 209 Ga. 861, 76 S.E.2d 801 (1953) (decided under former Code 1933, §§ 81-201 and 81-211).

Process must be attached unless waived. — To every petition there must be annexed a process unless the process be waived. Burch v. Crown Laundry, 78 Ga. App. 421, 50 S.E.2d 768 (1948), aff'd, 205 Ga. 211, 53 S.E.2d 116 (1949) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-201).

Process is not absolutely essential to validity of pending action as process may be waived. Jones v. State, 69 Ga. App.

883, 27 S.E.2d 102 (1943) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-201).

When there is no process and no waiver of process, no valid action arises. State Hwy. Dep't v. Noble, 220 Ga. 410, 139 S.E.2d 318 (1964) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-201).

No case can proceed without service upon defendant in one of the modes prescribed by law, unless service is waived. Trammel v. National Bank, 159 Ga. App. 850, 285 S.E.2d 590 (1981).

In absence of service in conformity with this section or waiver thereof, no jurisdiction over the defendant is obtained by the court, and any judgment adverse to the defendant is absolutely void. DeJarnette Supply Co. v. F.P. Plaza, Inc., 229 Ga. 625, 193 S.E.2d 852 (1972); Thompson v. Lagerquist, 232 Ga. 75, 205 S.E.2d 267 (1974); Lexington Developers, Inc. v. O'Neal Constr. Co., 142 Ga. App. 434, 236 S.E.2d 98, rev'd on other grounds, 240 Ga. 376, 240 S.E.2d 856 (1977); Collins v. Collins, 148 Ga. App. 103, 250 S.E.2d 870 (1978); Lester v. Crooms, Inc., 157 Ga. App. 377, 277 S.E.2d 751 (1981).

Since the defendant was never served with a copy of the complaint and summons attached thereto, and neither waived service or made a general appearance in the case, there is no valid suit pending in the trial court and the court does not acquire personal jurisdiction over the defendant. Bigley v. Lawrence, 149 Ga. App. 249, 253 S.E.2d 870 (1979).

Effect of no legal service. — When there has been no legal service or waiver of service, the court's judgment is null and void. Henry v. Hiwassee Land Co., 246 Ga. 87, 269 S.E.2d 2 (1980).

Waiver equivalent to service. — When a petition has been filed and service has been waived by the defendant, such waiver, as between the parties, is equivalent of service. Cutcliffe v. Pryse, 187 Ga. 51, 200 S.E. 124 (1938) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-209).

Express waiver of process required. — Acknowledgment of service, without an express waiver of process, does not constitute a waiver of valid service of process. Bailey v. Hall, 199 Ga. App. 602, 405 S.E.2d 579 (1991).

Document containing an "acknowledgment of service" and "consent to jurisdiction" filed with a complaint did not constitute a waiver of service of summons as required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4. Stamps v. Bank South, 221 Ga. App. 406, 471 S.E.2d 323 (1996).

Capacity to waive. — Defective service is not cured by consent of a party who lacked capacity to waive the defect at the time consent was given. Collins v. Collins, 148 Ga. App. 103, 250 S.E.2d 870 (1978).

In a divorce proceeding, although the spouse acknowledged service of the complaint prior to the action being filed, the spouse did not, and could not, acknowledge receipt of a summons that had not yet issued. Bonner v. Bonner, 272 Ga. 545, 533 S.E.2d 72 (2000).

Waiver before commencement of action. — Party may waive process, service of process, and time of filing with respect to a suit against the party; and such waiver, being a different matter from a confession of judgment, may be executed before commencement of the action. Henry & Co. v. Johnson, 178 Ga. 541, 173 S.E. 659 (1934) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5562).

Counsel's action waived service. — Because defendant's counsel waived service of the summons in an acknowledgment counsel executed, defendant was not entitled to receive any further service of the action. Atlanta Medical Accounting Corp. v. Financial Software, Inc., 227 Ga. App. 311, 489 S.E.2d 93 (1997).

Appearance on motion to set aside not waiver. — When judgment is void for want of personal service of process, the defendant does not waive the question of jurisdiction or validate the void judgment by appearance after judgment in support of a motion to set aside such judgment. Hicks v. Hicks, 193 Ga. 446, 18 S.E.2d 754 (1942) (decided under former Code 1933, §§ 81-209 and 81-211).

Waiver of service. — When there is irregular or insufficient service or no service at all, but the defendant, not objecting to service, files a plea to jurisdiction on the ground of nonresidence in the county, the object of service (opportunity to be heard) becomes accomplished of record in the case; hence, filing of such a plea without objecting to service is a waiver of service. Weddington v. Kumar, 149 Ga. App. 857, 256 S.E.2d 141 (1979).

Although a father never filed a written response to a change of custody petition, a claim that the court lacked personal jurisdiction was waived based on the father's appearance at both the temporary hearing and at the final hearing; moreover, the father waived any claim regarding the insufficiency of process or service of process. Jones v. Van Horn, 283 Ga. App. 144, 640 S.E.2d 712 (2006).

Trial court did not err in denying the motion for an extension of time to answer the complaint because the defendants agreed to a waiver of service yet still filed the answer late, the motion for an extension was made after the time for filing an answer had expired, and a judicial extension of the statutory time for filing the answer, in essence, would have allowed a circumvention of the default status of the action. Mecca Constr., Inc. v. Maestro Invs., LLC, 320 Ga. App. 34, 739 S.E.2d 51 (2013).

Motion to dismiss for a failure to timely perfect service was denied. — Because the plaintiffs acknowledged that O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4(c) controlled and the plaintiffs sought to comply with Fed. R. Civ. P. 4 by seeking a waiver of service within 25 days of filing the complaint, the defendants knew, or should have known, that the statute of limitations had expired, and when the defendants accepted service by waiver without complaint, the defendants' motion to dismiss for a failure to timely perfect service was denied; the plaintiffs' actions were reasonable and diligent. Roberts v. Jones, 390 F. Supp. 2d 1333 (M.D. Ga. May 9, 2005).

Acknowledgment of service ineffective to operate as waiver. — In forfeiture action when acknowledgment of service filed by claimant in the family division of the trial court was not served upon the prosecutor, and when the state did not ask the claimant to waive the requisite service of summons as authorized by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4(d)(3), the acknowledgment was ineffective to operate as waiver of service. Mitchell v. State, 255 Ga. App. 507, 566 S.E.2d 24 (2002), cert.

Because a notice and waiver of service did not satisfy the requirements of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4(d)(3), it was deemed to be a waiver of service under O.C.G.A. § 9-10-73, and the 60-day time within which to answer under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4(d)(3) did not apply; the waiver of service under O.C.G.A. § 9-10-73 did not require any particular form, and was merely an effort to dispense with the formality and expense of actual service. SRM Realty Servs. Group, LLC v. Capital Flooring Enters., 274 Ga. App. 595, 617 S.E.2d 581 (2005).

Motion for summary judgment as waiver of service. — When the defendant files a motion for summary judgment based upon the merits of a case, the defendant has made a general appearance and waived any defects in service of the complaint. Bigley v. Lawrence, 149 Ga. App. 249, 253 S.E.2d 870 (1979).

Defective Service

Evidence of defective service. — Defective service was shown by evidence that the complaint was not served by a sheriff or deputy, that the person was not identified as someone specially or permanently appointed by the court to serve process, and that a summons did not accompany the complaint. Wilkinson v. Udinsky, 242 Ga. App. 464, 530 S.E.2d 215 (2000).

Dismissal of a lawsuit for improper service was affirmed because the summons was left with an individual defendant's estranged wife at an address where the individual never lived, and because a summons was left with the father of a corporation's registered agent, and the father was not authorized to accept service for the corporation. Thornton v. Lee, 270 Ga. App. 224, 606 S.E.2d 32 (2004).

As the evidence showed that a subcontractor had actual knowledge of a limited liability company's (LLC's) business address when the subcontractor filed suit, but did not try to serve the LLC's officers, employees, or agents at that address, or explain why the subcontractor could not do so, substituted service on the Georgia Secretary of State's Office was not authorized by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4(e)(1). Anthony

Hill Grading, Inc. v. SBS Invs., LLC, 297 Ga. App. 728, 678 S.E.2d 174 (2009).

Defense of lack of personal jurisdiction. — When the defense of lack of personal jurisdiction due to defective service is raised by way of a motion to set aside the judgment, the trial court sits as the trier of fact. Smith v. Wood, 174 Ga. App. 799, 331 S.E.2d 636 (1985).

Review of denial of motion to set aside. — Review of a trial court's decision denying a motion to set aside a judgment based on the defense of lack of personal jurisdiction due to defective service is by the any evidence standard. Smith v. Wood, 174 Ga. App. 799, 331 S.E.2d 636 (1985).

Defect not cured by defendant's actual knowledge of filing. — Defective service of process is insufficient, notwithstanding the fact that the defendant acquires knowledge of pending lawsuit. Glass v. Byrom, 146 Ga. App. 1, 245 S.E.2d 345 (1978).

Even if the defendant has knowledge of a pending suit, sine qua non is service of process in manner provided by law; hence, a default judgment based upon other than legal service is a nullity. Collins v. Peacock, 147 Ga. App. 424, 249 S.E.2d 142 (1978).

Actual knowledge by a defendant that a complaint has been filed does not cure a defect in service. Anderson v. Hughes, 196 Ga. App. 186, 395 S.E.2d 623 (1990).

Defendant who defaults does not waive defects in service, even when the defendant receives actual notice of the lawsuit. Cook v. Bright, 150 Ga. App. 696, 258 S.E.2d 326 (1979); Dotson v. Luxtron, Inc., 155 Ga. App. 504, 271 S.E.2d 644 (1980).

Attack of judgment for lack of service. — Court of equity may entertain a direct proceeding to set aside judgment in court of law when it is alleged that the defendant in the suit had not been legally served with process, had not waived service, and had no knowledge of the proceedings. Termplan, Inc. v. Miller, 228 Ga. 428, 186 S.E.2d 102 (1971).

When service is insufficient to give the court jurisdiction to render judgment, and there is no waiver of service, judgment may be attacked by any person whose rights are affected by the judgment.

Order terminating an out-of-state incarcerated parent's parental rights was reversed as: (1) service of the termination petition and summons upon the parent via certified mail was insufficient under both former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96(c) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-281 and 15-11-282) and O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4; (2) a correctional officer who personally delivered the documents to the parent did not amount to sufficient and lawful personal service as the officer lacked the inherent authority to perfect service under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4(c) and no court order existed to grant authority; and (3) the trial court's reliance on the service provisions of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-161, 15-11-282, 15-11-424, and 15-11-531), a statute dealing with service in juvenile court proceedings generally, was misplaced. In the Interest of C.S., 282 Ga. 7, 644 S.E.2d 812 (2007).

Right of defendant to ignore suit when not validly served. — When no valid process has been served upon the defendant, the defendant was entirely within the defendant's rights in regarding suit as a nullity as to the defendant and in filing no defensive pleadings. Jones v. Roberts Marble Co., 90 Ga. App. 830, 84 S.E.2d 469 (1954) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-202).

Summons cured by pleadings. — As a general rule, a defective summons will be regarded as aided or cured by pleadings served with the summons when, with all the information contained in the two papers in the defendant's possession, the defendant could not be misled as to the nature of the relief demanded, or as to the court in which proceedings are to be instituted. W.T. Rawleigh Co. v. Watts, 68 Ga. App. 786, 24 S.E.2d 213 (1943).

When service was not perfected on the defendant, the fact that the defendant participated in discovery and made motions in the trial court did not waive the defense of insufficiency of service since the defendant preserved the defense by specifically raising the defense in the defendant's answer, reasserted the defense in the defendant's responses to interrogatories, and engaged in no conduct manifestly indicative of an intention to relinquish the defense. Joyner v. Schiess, 236 Ga. App. 316, 512 S.E.2d 62 (1999).

Failure to correct deficient service. — When the plaintiff did not seek to amend or correct the deficiency in service of process by serving the codefendant personally at any time before the trial court ruled on the defendant's motion to dismiss, the trial court should have granted the codefendant's motion to dismiss on the ground of insufficiency of service of process and abused the court's discretion by failing to do so. Nazli v. Scott, 203 Ga. App. 523, 417 S.E.2d 187, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 907, 417 S.E.2d 187 (1992).

In a divorce case, the husband's affidavit in support of service by publication was not sufficient because the husband failed to state that the wife resided outside of Georgia at a previous time and in a certain place; that the certain place was the last place where the wife resided to the husband's knowledge; that the wife no longer resided at that place; that the husband did not know where the wife presently resided or could be found; and that the husband did not know, had never been informed, and had no reason to believe that the wife now resided in Georgia. Reynolds v. Reynolds, 296 Ga. 461, 769 S.E.2d 511 (2015).

Service by publication in custody proceeding inadequate. — Trial court erred in entering a finding of contempt against a mother and in changing custody of a child from the mother to the father because the court lacked personal jurisdiction over the mother due to insufficient service of process; the trial court erred in granting the father's motion to serve the mother by publication because the father's search for the mother was legally inadequate, and the father had the mother's cell phone number, email address, and mailing address. Coker v. Moemeka, 311 Ga. App. 105, 714 S.E.2d 642 (2011).

Personal Service1. In General

Provisions relating to personal service are strictly construed because notice is the very bedrock of due process. Headrick v. Fordham, 154 Ga. App. 415, 268 S.E.2d 753 (1980).

Strict or liberal construction. — Although the personal service requirements in paragraph (d)(7) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4 are generally construed strictly because notice is central to due process, when actual notice of the suit has been received by the actual defendant, paragraph (d)(7) should be liberally construed to effectuate service. Anderson v. Bruce, 248 Ga. App. 733, 548 S.E.2d 638 (2001).

Failure of personal service renders judgment void. — Failure to obtain service by leaving a copy of the summons and complaint at the defendant's dwelling house or usual place of abode with some person of suitable age and discretion then residing therein renders the judgment void, even if the defendant had knowledge of the pending lawsuit. Morgan v. Pacific Fin. Co., 142 Ga. App. 342, 236 S.E.2d 28 (1977).

Evasion of process. — Resident who is present within state and has actual knowledge that an action has been filed against the resident in the resident's county of residence cannot avoid answering the complaint by evading the process server. Melton v. Johnson, 242 Ga. 400, 249 S.E.2d 82 (1978).

Trial court did not err in concluding that the debtors had been properly served pursuant to O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-4 and 44-14-161(c) because there was undisputed evidence from which the trial court could have concluded that the debtors were attempting to evade service; a private process server, who had a description of a vehicle that had been parked at the address of one of the debtors, saw the vehicle and followed the vehicle, but the driver noticed the server, drove past the address of the house, and when the server pulled into the driveway after the driver and approached the garage door, which was not yet closed, and announced that the server had papers, no one responded. Winstar Dev., Inc. v. SunTrust Bank, 308 Ga. App. 655, 708 S.E.2d 604 (2011).

Personal service required to constitute "valid action" under § 9-2-61. — In order for the filing of a complaint to qualify under O.C.G.A. § 9-2-61 as a valid renewal of a previously dismissed action, the proceedings which were dismissed must have constituted a "valid action." Pursuant to this, it is essential that the declaration filed in the first instance should have been served personally upon the defendant or otherwise in accordance with paragraph (d)(7) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4. Service upon the defendant's parent at the parent's residence is not "service" within the meaning of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4(d)(7). Osborne v. Hughes, 200 Ga. App. 558, 409 S.E.2d 58, cert. denied, 200 Ga. App. 896, 409 S.E.2d 58 (1991).

Alimony requires personal service. — Alimony is an in personam issue and requires personal service, and any form of substituted service will not suffice. Benefield v. Harris, 143 Ga. App. 709, 240 S.E.2d 119 (1977).

All types of services not excluded by Jackson. — In light of the Jackson decision, it is not reasonable to read "proper service" as to exclude all service other than personal service. Roberts v. Jones, 390 F. Supp. 2d 1333 (M.D. Ga. May 9, 2005).

2. Corporations

Strict construction of substituted service provisions. — Substituted mode of service on domestic corporations, in lieu of personal service, being a creature of statute and in derogation of the common law, must be strictly construed. Lexington Developers, Inc. v. O'Neal Constr. Co., 142 Ga. App. 434, 236 S.E.2d 98, rev'd on other grounds, 240 Ga. 376, 240 S.E.2d 856 (1977).

Service under this section is not the sole method of serving corporate defendant. Daniel & Daniel, Inc. v. Stewart Bros., 139 Ga. App. 372, 228 S.E.2d 586 (1976) (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4).

Service by publication. — Service by publication on a corporation is not proper since, if service cannot be had on the president or other officer or agent in an action against a corporation, the Secretary of State is the agent upon whom service may be served. Kannady v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 214 Ga. App. 492, 448 S.E.2d 374 (1994).

Process must be served on agent. — Corporation can only be served by service of process upon agent of the corporation. Browning v. Europa Hair, Inc., 244 Ga. 222, 259 S.E.2d 473 (1979).

Who may act as agent. — Not every employee of a corporation is an agent subject to being validly served with process directed to the corporation, since not every employee can reasonably be expected to notify corporate officers of the receipt of the complaint, but it can be expected that the attorney for the corporation, if served with process, will notify the corporate officers. Browning v. Europa Hair, Inc., 244 Ga. 222, 259 S.E.2d 473 (1979).

Under Georgia law, to be proper agent to receive service, it is not necessary that the employee in question be an officer or that the employee be authorized to enter into contracts on behalf of the corporation. Henderson v. Cherry, Bekaert & Holland, 932 F.2d 1410 (11th Cir. 1991).

Agent must be in position to inform corporation. — Since object of service of process is to transmit notice of suit to corporation, it must be made on an agent whose position is such as to afford reasonable assurance that the person will inform the corporate principal that such process has been served. Scott v. Atlanta Dairies Coop., 239 Ga. 721, 238 S.E.2d 340 (1977).

Service on corporation's president. — It is inconsequential whether the corporate address stated in service under paragraph (d)(1) of this section is in fact the place of doing business of the corporation or not, if it is there that defendant's president was found and served. B-X Corp. v. Fulton Plumbing Co., 140 Ga. App. 131, 230 S.E.2d 331 (1976) (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4).

When the defendant, in verifying "special appearance" which is in fact a motion to dismiss for lack of service, states on oath that the defendant is the president of the defendant corporation, the defendant's further statement that the defendant is not its agent for service of process is contrary to law and presents no issue. B-X Corp. v. Fulton Plumbing Co., 140 Ga. App. 131, 230 S.E.2d 331 (1976).

Corporations were not properly served through their presidents since the returns of service did not show that the corporations were served through the presidents, only that the presidents were served individually. Kidd v. First Commerce Bank, 264 Ga. App. 536, 591 S.E.2d 369 (2003).

Service on spouse of corporate president insufficient. — Service upon wife of corporation's president is not on the "president or other officer of the corporation, secretary, cashier, managing agent, or other agent thereof," nor is it service which conforms with any other provisions of law for service upon corporations. DeJarnette Supply Co. v. F.P. Plaza, Inc., 229 Ga. 625, 193 S.E.2d 852 (1972).

Although service effected upon defendant's spouse was insufficient as to the professional corporation because the spouse was not an agent authorized to accept service on its behalf, the burden of showing harmful error is on the appellant, which appellant must do by the record, not by assertions appearing only in the appellant's brief or in appellant's enumerations of error and since the record provides no support for the defendant's corporation's claim of improper service, in this regard, the trial court did not err by denying the motion to dismiss the complaint. Nazli v. Scott, 203 Ga. App. 523, 417 S.E.2d 187, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 907, 417 S.E.2d 187 (1992).

Registered agent of corporation. — Former Code 1933, § 22-403 (see now O.C.G.A. § 14-2-501 et seq.) is designed to supplement Ga. L. 1972, p. 689, §§ 1-3 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4) by adding registered agent to the list of those who may be served and thus virtually to eliminate the possibility of domestic corporations evading service of process. O'Neal Constr. Co. v. Lexington Developers, Inc., 240 Ga. 376, 240 S.E.2d 856 (1977).

In five consolidated aviation wrongful death cases and one aviation property case, the trial court properly denied the motion to dismiss filed by an out-of-state damper part seller on the ground of insufficient service of process as personal service upon the seller's registered agent was appropriate under both the seller's State of Delaware and under Georgia law. Vibratech, Inc. v. Frost, 291 Ga. App. 133, 661 S.E.2d 185 (2008).

Service on Secretary of State. — Paragraph (d)(1) provides that if service cannot be made on an officer or agent of the corporation service may be perfected upon the Secretary of State, provided the plaintiff or the attorney files an affidavit showing that personal service on or notice to officers, the managing agent, or other agent of that corporation cannot be had within the state. Lexington Developers, Inc. v. O'Neal Constr. Co., 142 Ga. App. 434, 236 S.E.2d 98, rev'd on other grounds, 240 Ga. 376, 240 S.E.2d 856 (1977).

When a domestic corporation fails to maintain a registered agent in this state, service upon the Secretary of State under former Code 1933, § 22-403 (see now O.C.G.A. § 14-2-501 et seq.) is proper, although other possibilities for service, e.g., this section's permission to serve an officer or other agent, have not been exhausted. O'Neal Constr. Co. v. Lexington Developers, Inc., 240 Ga. 376, 240 S.E.2d 856 (1977).

When service is sought upon a corporation, pursuant to former Code 1933, § 22-403 (see now O.C.G.A. § 14-2-501 et seq.), the process server must make a reasonably diligent effort to serve the registered agent at the registered office before perfecting service on the Secretary of State; however, the affidavit required by paragraph (d)(1) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4 before service on the Secretary of State is not necessary under that section's procedure. Bricks v. Walker Showcase, Inc., 255 Ga. 122, 336 S.E.2d 37 (1985).

When it was shown that the defendant corporation had vacated the addresses it had given the Secretary of State for both its principal and registered offices, the plaintiff was authorized to effect substituted service under paragraph (d)(1) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4 without making any additional efforts to effect personal service. Daly's Driving Sch., Inc. v. Scott, 238 Ga. App. 443, 519 S.E.2d 1 (1999).

Because a contractor presented sufficient evidence showing that an assignee that sued it had actual knowledge through its assignor of the contractor's physical address, yet failed to attempt service at that address before serving the Secretary of State, the trial court erred in denying the contractor's motion to set aside the default judgment entered in favor of the assignee. TC Drywall & Plaster, Inc. v. Express Rentals, Inc., 287 Ga. App. 624, 653 S.E.2d 70 (2007).

Service on attorney acting for foreign corporation. — When a foreign corporation files suit and obtains judgment in this state, and thereafter institutes garnishment on that judgment in this state, process in suit in equity to set aside that judgment may be served upon an attorney for the foreign corporation who filed first suit and garnishment as during the pendency of the garnishment such attorney is the agent of the foreign corporation subject to being served with suit to set aside. Browning v. Europa Hair, Inc., 244 Ga. 222, 259 S.E.2d 473 (1979).

Service on an attorney is not permitted when personal service is required. Estate of Thurman v. Dodaro, 169 Ga. App. 531, 313 S.E.2d 722 (1984).

Service cannot be upon "mere employee". — For service of process upon a corporation to be valid the service must be made upon one of the types of individuals listed in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4 and not upon a "mere employee." Northwestern Nat'l Ins. Co. v. Kennesaw Transp., Inc., 168 Ga. App. 701, 309 S.E.2d 917 (1983).

Doctor's medical assistant whose duties were not managerial or supervisory, but purely medical, was not authorized to accept service of process on behalf of the doctor's professional corporation. G.J. Soracco, M.D. v. Domineck, 233 Ga. App. 166, 502 S.E.2d 732 (1998).

Service upon a receptionist who had never had supervisory or managerial responsibilities in the course of the receptionist's employment was insufficient. Bowers v. Economation, Inc., 208 Ga. App. 661, 431 S.E.2d 420 (1993).

In a worker's suit against a corporation, there was evidence supporting the finding that service had not been perfected; the worker had not shown that the receptionist who allegedly received the complaint had managerial or supervisory responsibility, and the registered agent testified that the agent had never authorized the receptionist to receive service of process. Aikens v. Brent Scarbrough & Co., 287 Ga. App. 296, 651 S.E.2d 214 (2007).

Service on president's personal secretary insufficient. — Personal secretary of corporation's president was not an agent of the corporation upon whom service of the corporation could be effected pursuant to subsection (d) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4 since the secretary did not occupy any position of managerial or supervisory responsibility within the organization. Whatley's Interiors, Inc. v. Anderson, 176 Ga. App. 406, 336 S.E.2d 326 (1985).

Service on president's personal secretary sufficient. — Service on the secretary of the company's president was sufficient since the secretary assured the serving officer that the secretary would "make certain" the president received the summons and complaint, and the company had been served with civil process perfected upon the secretary in the past. Billy Cain Ford Lincoln Mercury, Inc. v. Kaminski, 230 Ga. App. 598, 496 S.E.2d 521 (1998).

Service upon the secretary of a corporate hospital's secretary was sufficient service upon the defendant corporation since the evidence showed the secretary in question regularly accepted service of process. Southwest Community Hosp. & Medical Ctr. v. Thompson, 165 Ga. App. 442, 301 S.E.2d 501 (1983).

Service upon an executive secretary of a hospital who was paid a salary exceeding that of some of the hospital's department heads, who was delegated a great deal of responsibility, and who simultaneously served the hospital as an officer of its corporate parent, was sufficient. Floyd v. Piedmont Hosp., 213 Ga. App. 749, 445 S.E.2d 844 (1994).

Service upon administrative assistant. — Although the administrative assistant was neither an officer of the corporation nor the corporation's registered agent for service of process, when nothing in the record indicated that the assistant's actual duties did not entail managerial or supervisory responsibilities and when the assistant was the person who spoke to the process server and was aware that the defendant was not available for service, it could be found from the officer's affidavit that the assistant led the officer to believe the assistant was in charge of the office and was authorized to accept service for the defendant corporation; thus, it was error to grant the defendant's motion to dismiss for insufficient service of process. Murray v. Sloan Paper Co., 212 Ga. App. 648, 442 S.E.2d 795 (1994).

Service upon a corporation was inadequate, notwithstanding the sheriff's affidavit showing that the sheriff habitually requested whether the person accepting service was authorized to do so, since the administrative assistant who accepted service testified unequivocally that the assistant never told the sheriff that the assistant was authorized to accept service. Hardin Constr. Group v. Fuller Enter., Inc., 233 Ga. App. 717, 505 S.E.2d 755 (1998).

Service upon insurer's divisional claim superintendent may have been sufficient if it was established that the superintendent had managerial or supervisory responsibility and that the position afforded reasonable assurance that the superintendent would inform the company that process had been served. McClendon v. Elzora, 237 Ga. App. 557, 515 S.E.2d 860 (1999).

Store manager a qualified agent. — Store manager of one of the defendant-corporation's locations within the county where the alleged tortious conduct took place, who was responsible for the store's daily operations, including the supervision of other store employees and the submission of daily reports to corporate headquarters, was a qualified agent upon whom to perfect service of process, although the manager was not an officer and was not authorized to enter into contracts on behalf of the corporation. Ogles v. Globe Oil Co., 171 Ga. App. 785, 320 S.E.2d 848 (1984).

Service on bank manager sufficient. — Deputy sheriff's service of a wrongful foreclosure complaint on a mortgagee's local branch manager at a branch office, rather than on the designated registered agent for service, was proper service pursuant to O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-4 and 14-2-1510(d), and the trial court properly denied the mortgagee's motion to open a default pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55(b).

based on the mortgagee's claim that there was no jurisdiction due to improper service; the deputy's testimony that the manager indicated that the manager was authorized to accept service and that the manager did in fact accept the papers was entitled to a presumption in favor of the return of service. GMAC Mortg. Corp. v. Bongiorno, 277 Ga. App. 328, 626 S.E.2d 536 (2006).

Service upon independent broker insufficient to serve insurer. — When insurer was served by service on an insurance broker who placed business with a number of companies, including the insurer, but was not officially employed or authorized for service receipt, suit was dismissed for insufficiency of service. Standard Guar. Ins. Co. v. Landers, 206 Ga. App. 803, 426 S.E.2d 574 (1992).

Service on registered agent in another state. — When personal service was required to be made on a foreign corporation's registered agent designated under the provisions of the Georgia Corporation Code, extraterritorial service upon the corporation's registered agent in another state did not confer personal jurisdiction upon the court in Georgia. Todd v. Harnischfeger Corp., 177 Ga. App. 356, 340 S.E.2d 22 (1985).

Service by mail. — Attempt to effect service by sending a copy of the summons and complaint directly to a corporation's office via certified mail was inadequate. KMM Indus., Inc. v. Professional Ass'n, 164 Ga. App. 475, 297 S.E.2d 512 (1982).

Erroneous finding of fact regarding status of corporate officer. — Trial court erred in finding as fact that the person who accepted service for a corporation was at that time the secretary/treasurer and managing agent, since it could not be inferred that because the person was secretary/treasurer when the annual report was filed, the person still held that office when served. Due W. Assocs. v. Renfro Mining & Grading Co., 194 Ga. App. 397, 391 S.E.2d 13 (1990).

Corporation not properly served. See Georgia Power Co. v. O'Bryant, 169 Ga. App. 491, 313 S.E.2d 709 (1983).

Service upon the designated agent of a German corporation's wholly-owned American subsidiary did not constitute adequate service of process upon the German corporation. May v. Volkswagen of Am., Inc., 125 F.R.D. 521 (N.D. Ga. 1989).

Neither O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4 nor O.C.G.A. § 14-2-504, the corporate service statute, authorized service on an agent of a domestic subsidiary as constituting proper service on a foreign parent corporation. Rovema Verpackungsmaschinen v. Deloache, 232 Ga. App. 212, 500 S.E.2d 647 (1998).

Plaintiff did not effect service on a corporation by service on a franchisee's employee who was not authorized to act as an agent for the corporation. Stephens v. McDonald's Corp., 245 Ga. App. 109, 536 S.E.2d 566 (2000).

Trial court did not obtain jurisdiction over the defendant due to nonconformity of the service of process with O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4(e)(1), since the documents attached to the certificate of filing did not include either the required certification or the required affidavit and the affidavit of the private process server was inadequate. Gamlins, Solicitors & Notaries v. A.E. Roberts & Assocs., Inc., 254 Ga. App. 763, 564 S.E.2d 29 (2002).

Failure to use diligence in serving corporation. — When pleadings show officer charged with executing process did not comply with O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4 by attempting with reasonable diligence to perfect the service of summons and the complaint at registered address, service was not irregular but defective, and the judgment was void. Lexington Developers, Inc. v. O'Neal Constr. Co., 142 Ga. App. 434, 236 S.E.2d 98, rev'd on other grounds, 240 Ga. 376, 240 S.E.2d 856 (1977).

Service of process held sufficient. — Because a corporation failed in the corporation's burden of showing that the person who actually received service of process was not authorized to accept service on behalf of the corporation's registered agent, the service was properly found to be sufficient. Thus, the trial court was not required to dismiss the action based on a lack of sufficient service of process. Holmes & Co. v. Carlisle, 289 Ga. App. 619, 658 S.E.2d 185 (2008).

O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4(e)(1) did not govern service of process in a manufacturer's breach of contract action against a distributor because the distributor was not "authorized to transact business in the State" as that phrase was used in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4(e)(1); the distributor did not show that the distributor was a corporation incorporated or domesticated under the laws of Georgia because the distributor pointed to no evidence that the distributor obtained the requisite certificate of authority to transact business in the state from the Georgia Secretary of State pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 14-2-1501(a) and because the distributor was a nonresident subject to the long-arm statute, O.C.G.A. § 9-10-90 et seq. Kitchen Int'l, Inc. v. Evans Cabinet Corp., 310 Ga. App. 648, 714 S.E.2d 139 (2011).

3. Minors

Minor not bound absent proper service. — Unlike most defenses, infancy, so far as service of process is concerned, is not a defense personal to the defendant, but is a statutory method of making parties, in absence of which minor defendant is not bound by judgment. Smith v. Lamb, 103 Ga. App. 157, 118 S.E.2d 924 (1961).

Both minor and parent or guardian must be served. — In order to perfect service upon a minor in this state, both the minor and the minor's father, mother, guardian, or guardian ad litem must be served. Collins v. Collins, 148 Ga. App. 103, 250 S.E.2d 870 (1978).

In order to perfect service upon a minor in this state, both the minor and the father, mother, guardian, or guardian ad litem must be served; if this imperative is not satisfied, the minor defendant cannot be found to be in default. Lanier v. Foster, 133 Ga. App. 149, 210 S.E.2d 326 (1974).

Minor cannot waive multiple service requirements of this section, for to permit such a waiver would be utterly inconsistent with the obvious intent of this section to protect minors. Collins v. Collins, 148 Ga. App. 103, 250 S.E.2d 870 (1978).

Appearance of minor not sufficient to validate judgment. — Appearance and pleading to an action by an infant, personally and through counsel, is not of itself sufficient to validate a judgment when there was no service of process according to law, unless the infant is subject to an estoppel in pais based on fraud and deceit when the infant has reached such years of discretion that fraud may be imputed to the infant. Smith v. Lamb, 103 Ga. App. 157, 118 S.E.2d 924 (1961).

Waivers or estoppels not ordinarily being imputable against infants, mere filing of an answer and participation by an infant in legal proceedings or a trial, in the infant's own behalf or through an attorney at law employed by the infant, would not operate as estoppel or legal waiver of statutory requirements regarding service. Brown v. Anderson, 186 Ga. 220, 197 S.E. 761 (1938).

Invalid service on minor third-party defendant. — When minor third-party defendant was served but minor's father was never served with a copy of the third-party complaint and summons in official capacity as father and natural guardian, nor was the guardian ad litem ever appointed, neither the fact that the minor defendant had been married previously nor the fact that the father was also the plaintiff in the case validated service since failure to comply strictly with the statutory provision rendered service invalid. Harvey v. Harvey, 147 Ga. App. 154, 248 S.E.2d 214 (1978).

Service on minor under Nonresident Motorist Act. — Minor is not sui juris; accordingly, in order to perfect service upon a nonresident minor defendant under O.C.G.A. Ch. 12, T. 40, both the nonresident minor defendant and the minor's guardian must be served. Medlin v. Church, 157 Ga. App. 876, 278 S.E.2d 747 (1981).

While injured party was required to serve process on a parent in addition to serving the process on the minor, the trial court erred in dismissing the injured party's renewal action on the ground that the injured party did not amend the party's original complaint to allege the stepdaughter was no longer a Georgia resident as the stepdaughter had been properly served in the original action while the stepdaughter was a Georgia resident and service was completed once the mother was served under Georgia's Long Arm

Statute at the family's new residence in the Dominican Republic. Trent v. Franco, 253 Ga. App. 104, 558 S.E.2d 66 (2001).

4. Persons of Unsound Mind or Incapable of Conducting Own Affairs

Service valid. — Service of process on an individual with a mental condition in jail was proper because the individual had not been adjudicated as incompetent by the probate court and had a guardian appointed. Trammel v. Bradberry, 256 Ga. App. 412, 568 S.E.2d 715 (2002).

5. Counties, Municipalities, Cities, and Towns

Service on mayor was insufficient to constitute service on a city school district because the governing body of the school district, that is the chief executive officer or clerk of the city board of education, was required to be served under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4(e)(5). Foskey v. Vidalia City Sch., 258 Ga. App. 298, 574 S.E.2d 367 (2002).

6. Posting at Place of Abode

Posting ineffective when amount exceeds $200. — Service by leaving the complaint, summons, and amended pleadings attached to the door of a residence was not effective when the amount in controversy exceeded $200. Silvious v. Pharaon, 54 F.3d 697 (11th Cir. 1995).

Posting not authorized in divorce actions. — Paragraph (d)(6) was intended to apply only to complaints involving claims for money when the principal sum sought is less than $200, and does not apply to divorce cases which are equitable in nature. Reynolds v. Reynolds, 231 Ga. 178, 200 S.E.2d 766 (1973); and see Benton v. Modern Fin. & Inv. Co., 244 Ga. 533, 261 S.E.2d 359 (1979), holding paragraph (d)(6) unconstitutional.

7. Service at Dwelling House or Usual Place of Abode

Suitable age and discretion. — When the defendants received service from person served there is some indication that that person was of suitable age and discretion and that service was effectuated in such a manner to reasonably accomplish it. Trammel v. National Bank, 159 Ga. App. 850, 285 S.E.2d 590 (1981).

It is not a matter of law that a 12 year old is not a person of suitable age and discretion. It is a factual matter and the presumption of valid service stands unless rebutted by the party which moves to set aside the service. Trammel v. National Bank, 159 Ga. App. 850, 285 S.E.2d 590 (1981).

Service on spouse at residence. — Service of the affidavit and summons upon the garnishee's spouse at their dwelling house and usual place of abode is proper service upon the garnishee under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4. Cartwright v. Alpha Transp. Serv., Inc., 161 Ga. App. 274, 289 S.E.2d 827 (1982).

When the trial court found a continuing familial relationship between the defendant and the defendant's resident spouse in Augusta; that the defendant was not permanently separated from the spouse at the time service was perfected; that the defendant had the title to their house changed to the defendant's name after the defendant claimed they had separated but the defendant permitted the spouse to continue to live in the house; and that they continued to cohabit as soon as the spouse disposed of the house and joined the defendant in Ohio where they continued their familial relationship for another six months before the spouse filed for divorce, and there is evidence of record to support the trial court's finding that the appellant was a legal resident of their house in Augusta with the spouse when service was made, the Court of Appeals must affirm the finding of a relationship and adequate service. Wolfe v. Rhodes, 166 Ga. App. 845, 305 S.E.2d 606 (1983).

When a summons and complaint in the plaintiff's action to set aside a conveyance of property was served on a husband and wife by serving the husband personally at the marital home and serving the wife through delivery of the papers to the husband at the marital home, such action constituted proper service under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4(d)(7), despite the wife's assertions that she never received the papers from the husband because at the time the

Evidence as to place of abode of service personal. — When evidence was silent as to whether a service person had established a new residence where the service person was stationed and was silent as to whether the service person intended to return to the mother's home upon discharge, the facts were insufficient to sustain a dismissal based on inadequate service of process since it could not be said that the service person's mother's home was not the service person's "usual place of abode" under paragraph (d)(7) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4. Tolbert v. Murrell, 253 Ga. 566, 322 S.E.2d 487 (1984).

Return of service did not need to reflect that defendant was served at "his dwelling or usual place of abode," since the return reflected that the defendant was personally served. Patterson v. Citizens & S. Bank, 163 Ga. App. 539, 294 S.E.2d 730 (1982).

Service left with adult boarder. — When the defendant received copy of process at the defendant's dwelling house on the same date that process was left with adult boarder in the defendant's place of abode, who in a responsible manner caused the summons and complaint to be placed in the defendant's hands, such service sufficiently complied with this section so as to support venue. Williams v. Mells, 138 Ga. App. 60, 225 S.E.2d 501 (1976).

Service on home visitor. — Proper service was not made by leaving the summons and complaint at the defendant's residence with a person who was not a resident there but was a student of the defendant and who had agreed to gather the defendant's mail and water the defendant's plants while the defendant was out of the country. Coombs v. Koblasz, 246 Ga. App. 67, 539 S.E.2d 562 (2000).

Service on family member. — Service made on the defendant's sister was proper since the sister lived in a separate dwelling located within a family compound in which the defendant's trailer was situated and there was evidence of "a continuing familial relationship between" the defendant and the rest of the family sufficient to satisfy the presumption of proper service. Finch v. Weaver, 213 Ga. App. 514, 445 S.E.2d 289 (1994).

Service on the defendant's brother at the brother's residence was insufficient under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4(e)(7) as the defendant did not reside there, did not authorize the brother to accept service, had not lived in Georgia for three months prior to the time of service, and was never personally served with the complaint. Merriweather v. Voss, 277 Ga. App. 240, 626 S.E.2d 201 (2006).

Service on resident at address listed on return of service held sufficient. — Service of process to a person at least 15 years old who resided at the residence listed on the return of service was sufficient; moreover, adequate and proper service of process was presumed given that the party charged with service timely filed an answer. Holmes & Co. v. Carlisle, 289 Ga. App. 619, 658 S.E.2d 185 (2008).

Service at father's residence. — Leaving copy of summons and complaint with the defendant's father at a place where the defendant no longer resided was not sufficient service, and the defect was not cured by the defendant's actual knowledge that a complaint had been filed against the defendant. Terrell v. Porter, 189 Ga. App. 778, 377 S.E.2d 540 (1989).

Even though the defendant had moved from the defendant's father's residence, service on the father there was sufficient since there was substantial evidence that the defendant considered that address the defendant's permanent residence. Cushman v. Raiford, 221 Ga. App. 785, 472 S.E.2d 554 (1996).

Leaving copy of summons and complaint with the defendant's father at a place where the defendant no longer resided was not sufficient service, and the defect was not cured by the defendant's actual knowledge that a complaint had been filed against the defendant. Terrell v. Porter, 189 Ga. App. 778, 377 S.E.2d 540 (1989).

In a personal injury action, service on the driver's father was not effective service on the driver under O.C.G.A.

§ 9-11-4(e)(7) since the place of service was not the driver's dwelling house or usual place of abode. Webster v. Western Express, Inc., No. 5:05-CV-350 (WDO), 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 70011 (M.D. Ga. Sept. 21, 2007).

Service upon the defendant's mother at her residence, not the defendant's, was not service within the meaning of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4. Seabolt v. Edghill, 192 Ga. App. 715, 386 S.E.2d 376 (1989).

Service at mother's residence. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in dismissing the complaint for insufficiency of service of process since: (1) service was made at the address shown on the defendant's driver's license, which was her mother's home, but (2) the defendant no longer lived with her mother, having next lived with her father and then with friends, (3) the defendant's stepfather averred that he told the officer who served process that the defendant did not live there but that she sometimes stayed there, and (4) the defendant explained that she had not changed the address on her license, still received mail at her mother's house because her father moved a lot, and considered her mother's address to be more stable for receiving important communications. Duke v. Buice, 249 Ga. App. 164, 547 S.E.2d 561 (2001).

Service of process on defendant's minor daughter, who lived with mother, from whom the defendant was separated, at an address where the defendant had never resided, was completely nugatory, and the court had no jurisdiction to authorize taking of a default judgment against the defendant. Holloway v. Frey, 130 Ga. App. 224, 202 S.E.2d 845 (1973).

Service left with babysitter. — When a copy of the summons and the complaint is left at the defendant's dwelling place with the babysitter not residing with the defendant, there is a failure to obtain lawful service, and the fact that the defendant acquired knowledge of the pending action does not cure such defective service. Mahone v. Marshall Furn. Co., 142 Ga. App. 242, 235 S.E.2d 672 (1977).

Service on nonresiding daughter-in-law at defendants' residence held improper. — Alternative service made at the defendants' residence upon their daughter-in-law, who did not reside there, was improper because it was contrary to the requirement of paragraph (d)(7) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4. Acord v. Maynard, 198 Ga. App. 296, 401 S.E.2d 315 (1991).

Service on sister insufficient. — When the defendant was married and had a residence separate from the defendant's codefendant father and this residence was correctly given in the complaint and in the service documents, but no attempt was ever made to serve the defendant personally at the defendant's residence, rather, a copy of this summons and complaint was left with the defendant's sister at the home of the defendant's father, this service was insufficient. Freeman v. Nodvin, 181 Ga. App. 663, 353 S.E.2d 546 (1987).

Service upon a relative of the defendant at a place other than the defendant's residence or usual place of abode is insufficient. Garrett v. Godby, 189 Ga. App. 183, 375 S.E.2d 103 (1988); Yelle v. United States Suburban Press, Inc., 216 Ga. App. 46, 453 S.E.2d 108 (1995).

Service on relative at place of business insufficient. — When the evidence established without contradiction that service was attempted by leaving a copy of the summons with a relative of the defendant at the defendant's place of business, such service was insufficient. American Erectors, Inc. v. Hanie, 157 Ga. App. 687, 278 S.E.2d 196 (1981).

When copy of process was left with the defendant's spouse at the defendant's place of business, the fact that the defendant ultimately received a summons from the spouse did not perfect otherwise invalid service. Collins v. Peacock, 147 Ga. App. 424, 249 S.E.2d 142 (1978).

Service to daughter living next door. — Service of process on the defendant's daughter, who lived next door to the defendant, was insufficient. Forsythe v. Gay, 226 Ga. App. 602, 487 S.E.2d 128 (1997).

Service on girlfriend insufficient. — Service was not properly had when the process server left the summons with the debtor's girlfriend, who did not reside with the debtor, and the server did not ascertain whether or not the girlfriend resided at the debtor's residence. Finlon v. W&J Factors, Inc., 253 Ga. App. 754, 560 S.E.2d 273 (2002).

8. Agents

Service of process on apparent agent is not sufficient; service must be made on actual agent. Headrick v. Fordham, 154 Ga. App. 415, 268 S.E.2d 753 (1980); Thaxton v. Georgia Insurer's Insolvency Pool, 158 Ga. App. 407, 280 S.E.2d 421 (1981); News-Press Publishing Co. v. Kalle, 173 Ga. App. 411, 326 S.E.2d 582 (1985).

When a former member of a parent-teacher student association asserted false arrest, defamation, and other claims, dismissal of claims for failure to effect service of process was proper because the former member tried to serve the education board's registered agent, but the former member did not prove that the agent was authorized to accept service on behalf of employees of the school system. Reeves v. Wilbanks, No. 12-16611, 2013 U.S. App. LEXIS 20204 (11th Cir. Oct. 3, 2013) (Unpublished).

Burden of proof. — When the plaintiff challenged the service which was purportedly made on the plaintiff personally through the plaintiff's secretary, as the plaintiff's agent, the plaintiff bore the burden of coming forward with evidence that the plaintiff was not served personally through the plaintiff's agent for purposes of paragraph (d)(7) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4. Baughan v. Alaoui, 240 Ga. App. 661, 524 S.E.2d 536 (1999).

Service on attorney not permitted. — Service of process cannot be perfected by service on an attorney of the defendant, in lieu of serving the defendant personally, when the defendant has a legal residence in this state at which service can be perfected on the defendant. Benefield v. Harris, 143 Ga. App. 709, 240 S.E.2d 119 (1977).

Presiding judge, by order, may not authorize service to the defendant's attorney and by sending a copy by registered mail to the defendant, even if the defendant is absent from the state on business for an indefinite time. Benefield v. Harris, 143 Ga. App. 709, 240 S.E.2d 119 (1977).

When personal service upon an individual is required, service of process upon that person's attorney usually is not permitted. Browning v. Europa Hair, Inc., 244 Ga. 222, 259 S.E.2d 473 (1979).

Service on city attorney. — Service of process was properly effectuated on a city when the city attorney was personally served because the sole provision of the city's charter regarding service of process provided that the city attorney was authorized to acknowledge service of any suit against the city; not only was evidence presented that the city attorney held oneself out to the process server as someone who could accept service on behalf of the city, the attorney's paralegal, the city clerk, and the office manager for the chief of police all claimed that the city attorney was authorized to accept service of process on the city's behalf and that anyone seeking to serve the city would be directed to the city attorney, and the city's mayor also acknowledged that the mayor designated the city attorney to accept service of process and that the mayor instructed persons seeking to serve the city not to provide the summons and complaint to the mayor but rather to serve the summons and complaint upon the city attorney. City of East Point v. Jordan, 300 Ga. App. 891, 686 S.E.2d 471 (2009), cert. denied, No. S10C0494, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 337 (Ga. 2010).

Service on a receptionist or a secretary is not effective service under Georgia law unless that person is an agent authorized to receive service of process on behalf of the party. Smith v. Sentry Ins., 674 F. Supp. 1459 (N.D. Ga. 1987).

Service on secretary of physician at the physician's office is not personal service unless the secretary has been appointed as agent for such service. Bible v. Hughes, 146 Ga. App. 769, 247 S.E.2d 584 (1978); Exum v. Melton, 244 Ga. App. 775, 536 S.E.2d 786 (2000).

Service on office manager insufficient. — When, in a medical malpractice action, the service papers were not left at the defendant's place of abode but at the defendant's place of business while the defendant was not present on the premises, service upon the physician's office manager, who was not appointed as the agent for service, was insufficient. Adams v. Gluckman, 183 Ga. App. 666, 359 S.E.2d 710 (1987).

Fact that the defendant consented to substituted service upon unidentified individuals on other occasions does not establish that the defendant's office manager was authorized to receive legal process. Adams v. Gluckman, 183 Ga. App. 666, 359 S.E.2d 710 (1987).

Service of process on psychiatrist's office manager, who was not a registered or authorized agent for process, was insufficient, even though the doctor may have been on the premises at the time. Hudgins v. Bawtinheimer, 196 Ga. App. 386, 395 S.E.2d 909 (1990).

Service on company's agent sufficient. — Catamaran purchasers' service of process was sufficient as to the company because under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4(e)(7) personal service upon a business association could only be accomplished by delivering a copy of the summons and complaint to an agent authorized by appointment or by law to receive service of process. Because the company and the agent, as the moving party, had the initial burden of producing affidavits that demonstrated the absence of sufficient service of process before shifting the burden to the purchasers to demonstrate that service was proper, and because the company and the agent failed to meet that initial burden, the court rejected the company and the agent's argument that service of process was insufficient as to the company. Carrier v. Jordaan, No. CV208-068, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 114596 (S.D. Ga. Oct. 17, 2008).

In a suit alleging fraud and other claims, the trial court erred by granting the motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction of two property companies for not being served with the summons and complaint because the trial court erred in rejecting the plaintiff's evidence of a settlement proposal between the plaintiff and the two property companies since the settlement proposal was not prohibited by former O.C.G.A. § 24-3-37 (see now

O.C.G.A. § 24-4-408) as the proposal was being offered to show an agency relationship between the two property companies and a defending business person. Cox v. Mayan Lagoon Estates Ltd., 319 Ga. App. 101, 734 S.E.2d 883 (2012).

Service on sheriff's captain insufficient service on deputy. — When a complaint was delivered to a sheriff's captain who delivered the complaint to the deputy named as a defendant in the complaint, service upon the deputy was insufficient since the prohibition against disclosure of the home address of a law enforcement officer under O.C.G.A. § 50-18-72 did not validate the delivery to the captain as service under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4(e)(7). Melton v. Wiley, No. 07-10959, 2008 U.S. App. LEXIS 1069 (11th Cir. Jan. 15, 2008) (Unpublished).

Service at former place of business. — When service was attempted at the defendant's last known place of business and was made upon the defendant's former long-time partner and apparent agent, the defendant's new office was located a short distance from the defendant's former place of business, and the defendant's new business address (as well as the defendant's residence address) could have been easily obtained by a number of means—including the simple expedient of consulting the telephone directory—making proper service nearly 300 days after the filing of the complaint was an unreasonably long time to effect service. Roberts v. Bienert, 183 Ga. App. 751, 360 S.E.2d 25 (1987).

Insurance agents. — Service of process on an independent agent who represented numerous insurance companies, but who had no relationship with an uninsured motorist carrier other than to sell its policies, was insufficient to effect proper service on the carrier. Commercial Union Ins. Co. v. Gibson, 210 Ga. App. 823, 437 S.E.2d 808 (1993).

Service station attendant not agent. — Casual salaried laborer, with neither discretionary power nor managing authority, hired as service station attendant and working solely in that capacity, is not an "agent" in the sense contemplated by this section. Thoni Oil Co. v. Tinsley, 140 Ga. App. 887, 232 S.E.2d 162 (1977).

Due process must be met for service. — General Assembly may enact laws providing procedure for service of process on Georgia residents by publication and by mail if state and federal concepts of due process are not violated. Melton v. Johnson, 242 Ga. 400, 249 S.E.2d 82 (1978).

Legislature intended that substituted service be consistent with Constitution. — General Assembly intends that substituted service be limited to such service as is consistent with the Constitution. Melton v. Johnson, 242 Ga. 400, 249 S.E.2d 82 (1978).

Service by publication may be sufficient for personal jurisdiction. — Moreno v. Naylor, 305 Ga. App. 504 (2010) supports the proposition that service by publication alone is insufficient for the trial court to obtain personal jurisdiction and to the extent that Moreno and the following cases hold that service by publication is never sufficient to confer personal jurisdiction against any defendant, those cases are overruled by the Georgia Court of Appeals: Brasile v. Beck, 312 Ga. App. 77 (2011); Long v. Bellamy, 296 Ga. App. 263 (2009); State Farm v. Manders, 292 Ga. App. 793 (2008); Wyatt v. House, 287 Ga. App. 739 (2007); Costello v. Bothers, 278 Ga. App. 750 (2006); Patel v. Sanders, 277 Ga. App. 152 (2006); Cohen v. Allstate Ins. Co., 277 Ga. App. 437 (2006); Williams v. Jackson, 273 Ga. App. 207 (2005); Saxton v. Davis, 262 Ga. App. 72 (2003); Hawkins v. Wilbanks, 248 Ga. App. 264 (2001); Wilson v. State Farm, 239 Ga. App. 168 (1999); Winters v. Goins, 235 Ga. App. 558 (1998); Bailey v. Lawrence, 235 Ga. App. 73 (1998); Smith v. Johnson, 209 Ga. App. 305 (1993); Douglas v. Woon, 205 Ga. App. 355 (1992); Starr v. Wimbush, 201 Ga. App. 280 (1991); and Norman v. Daniels, 142 Ga. App. 456 (1977). Ragan v. Mallow, 319 Ga. App. 443, 744 S.E.2d 337 (2012).

Substituted service must be reasonably calculated to give notice. — Substituted service is dependent on whether or not form of substituted service provided and employed is reasonably calculated to give actual notice of the proceedings and an opportunity to be heard. Melton v.

Reasonable diligent attempt to ascertain whereabouts must be shown.

— Because notice by publication is a notoriously unreliable means of actually informing interested parties about pending suits, the constitutional prerequisite for allowing such service when the addresses of those parties are unknown is a showing that reasonable diligence has been exercised in attempting to ascertain their whereabouts. Abba Gana v. Abba Gana, 251 Ga. 340, 304 S.E.2d 909 (1983).

In a divorce case, the husband could have ascertained the wife's address through reasonably diligent efforts but failed to do so because the husband knew that the wife was living with a boyfriend; a few days before the trial court issued an order requiring service by publication, the wife was charged with criminal damage to the husband's property at an address in Forsyth, Georgia; and the wife's daughter, who had contact with both the wife and the husband, was aware of the wife's address; thus, service by publication did not meet the constitutional requirements of due process, and the court erred in denying the wife's motion to set aside. Reynolds v. Reynolds, 296 Ga. 461, 769 S.E.2d 511 (2015).

Personal service must not be possible. — Service by publication and mail does not provide due process when personal service was possible. Melton v. Johnson, 242 Ga. 400, 249 S.E.2d 82 (1978).

Service by publication must be specifically authorized. — By its own terms paragraph (e)(1) of this section is limited by qualification in subsection (i) that provisions for service of publication shall apply only in actions or proceedings in which service by publication now or hereafter may be authorized by law. National Sur. Corp. v. Hernandez, 120 Ga. App. 307, 170 S.E.2d 318 (1969); Schwind v. Gordon, 93 F.R.D. 517 (N.D. Ga. 1982).

Provisions in paragraph (e)(1) of this section as to service of nonresidents by publication, which provision also includes persons who cannot be found within the state, is applicable only in those instances when service by publication is allowed by law. Barnes v. Continental Ins. Co., 231

Ga. 246, 201 S.E.2d 150 (1973).

Residence out of state is sufficient to invoke service by publication under subparagraph (e)(1)(A) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4 when its use is authorized. O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4 does not require that a defendant be avoiding service, nor must there have been prior attempts at personal service. Schwind v. Gordon, 93 F.R.D. 517 (N.D. Ga. 1982).

Service by publication not authorized for in personam judgments. — There is no provision in this state whereby courts may acquire jurisdiction over a defendant by service by publication and then render an in personam judgment against the defendant. Veal v. General Accident Fire & Life Assurance Corp., 128 Ga. 610, 197 S.E.2d 410 (1973); Tapley v. Proctor, 150 Ga. App. 337, 258 S.E.2d 25 (1979); Schwind v. Gordon, 93 F.R.D. 517 (N.D. Ga. 1982).

Service by publication improper on LLC. — Default judgment in favor of a limited liability company (LLC) against a second LLC was void because the trial court erred in allowing service by publication. Although service was attempted on the second LLC's registered agent without success, the first LLC did not show why service could not be had at the second LLC's address on one of the other persons listed in the statute; the first LLC had actual knowledge of the second LLC's business address and had even attempted service there; and even if the first LLC had attempted unsuccessfully to serve another person at the second LLC's principal place of business, service by publication would not have been proper because personal service through the Secretary of State could have been made. Brock Built City Neighborhoods, LLC v. Century Fire Prot., LLC, 295 Ga. App. 205, 671 S.E.2d 240 (2008).

Including personal judgments for torts. — There is no provision in Title 51 for service by publication in any action for personal judgment for a tort against any person, resident or nonresident. Barnes v. Continental Ins. Co., 231 Ga. 246, 201 S.E.2d 150 (1973); Gould v. Latorre, 227 Ga. App. 32, 488 S.E.2d 116 (1997).

Personal judgment for alimony cannot be rendered against nonresident defendant by substituted service. Benefield v. Harris, 143 Ga. App. 709, 240 S.E.2d 119 (1977).

Jurisdiction of "in rem" action affecting out-of-state defendants' interest in property may be acquired by service by publication, and personal jurisdiction by submission to jurisdiction of the court is not necessary. Powell v. Powell, 244 Ga. 25, 257 S.E.2d 531 (1979).

Service person not liable to in rem proceeding on basis of salary. — Defendant's salary as a member of the United States armed forces would not subject the defendant to in rem proceeding in this state when the defendant was not a resident or domiciled in this state. Williamson v. Williamson, 155 Ga. App. 271, 270 S.E.2d 692 (1980), aff'd, 247 Ga. 260, 275 S.E.2d 42, cert. denied, 454 U.S. 1097, 102 S. Ct. 669, 70 L. Ed. 2d 638 (1981).

Requirement of subparagraph (e)(1)(C) that notice of service by publication be published four times at least seven days apart are met when publication is made on the same day of successive weeks. Mickas v. Mickas, 229 Ga. 10, 189 S.E.2d 81 (1972).

Compliance with subparagraph (f)(1)(A). — Because the moving party complied with O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4(f)(1)(A) in obtaining the order for service by publication and the opponents failed to object to the movant's affidavit, the trial court did not err in ordering service by publication. Mateen v. Dicus, 286 Ga. App. 760, 650 S.E.2d 272 (2007), 129 S. Ct. 89, 172 L.Ed.2d 30 (2008).

Requirements of publication not met. — Trial court erred when the court found that a debtor was served properly because there was no evidence that the requirements of publication under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4(f)(1) were met, and a bank offered no evidence to show that the notice requirements of O.C.G.A. § 44-14-161(c) were met; the published advertisement for service on the debtor provided no specifics as to the date or time of the confirmation hearing as was required under the confirmation statute, O.C.G.A. § 44-14-161. Winstar Dev., Inc. v. SunTrust Bank, 308 Ga. App. 655, 708 S.E.2d 604 (2011).

Service by publication was invalid because the clerk of the superior court failed to strictly comply with the requirements for service by publication, set forth in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4(f)(1)(C), in that the clerk did not mail copies of the order for service by publication, notice of publication, and the complaint to the defendant's known address. Hutcheson v. Elizabeth Brennan Antiques & Ints., Inc., 317 Ga. App. 123, 730 S.E.2d 514 (2012).

Unsuccessful attempt to serve at last known address must be shown. — In order to justify service by publication where the address of the defendant is known, or believed to be known, generally it must be shown that service was attempted unsuccessfully at the defendant's last known address and that personal service was proven impossible. Girard v. Weiss, 160 Ga. App. 295, 287 S.E.2d 301 (1981), overruled on other grounds, Amerireach.com, LLC v. Walker, 290 Ga. 261, 719 S.E.2d 489 (2011).

Duty of court to determine whether due diligence shown. — It is the duty of the courts to determine whether the movant has exercised due diligence in pursuing every reasonably available channel of information as the decision whether due diligence has been exercised cannot be left to the movant for publication service; and, although it is the trial court which first passes upon the legality of notice, the appellate courts must independently decide whether under the facts of each case the search for the absentee interested party was legally adequate. Abba Gana v. Abba Gana, 251 Ga. 340, 304 S.E.2d 909 (1983).

Trial court erred by granting the defendant's motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction because the court granted the plaintiff's motion for service by publication and since the defendant was so served, the court was required to determine whether service by publication was sufficient to confer personal jurisdiction over the defendant. Ragan v. Mallow, 319 Ga. App. 443, 744 S.E.2d 337 (2012).

When it appears that the applicant knew of reasonably available possible channel of information concerning the opposing party's whereabouts, or that the applicant could have discovered such a channel through the exercise of reasonable diligence, the court should assume, absent a contrary showing by the applicant, that the opposing party's address could have been ascertained by reasonably diligent efforts. Abba Gana v. Abba Gana, 251 Ga. 340, 304 S.E.2d 909 (1983).

Service of nonresident defendant in divorce action. — When the nonresident defendant in a divorce action was served by publication pursuant to subsection (e) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4 and the clerk sent a copy of the order, notice, and the complaint to the defendant by regular mail at the defendant's last known address, and the defendant stated that the defendant had not resided in Georgia for 14 years and had only visited the defendant's children in Georgia on five occasions in that time, but admitted that the defendant received a copy of the summons and complaint, the defendant was properly served. Marbury v. Marbury, 256 Ga. 651, 352 S.E.2d 564 (1987).

Service by publication in deprivation proceeding. — Juvenile court erred in granting service by publication of the paternal grandparents' petition alleging that the mother's children were deprived because the grandparents failed to exercise reasonable diligence to find the mother, the juvenile court concluded that the mother could not be found with due diligence within the State of Georgia without any competent evidence to support that finding, and the juvenile court failed to place any burden on the grandparents to determine what notice they had given to the mother of their deprivation petition and simply relied on evidence about the father's efforts to contact her; the grandparents did not file a written motion for service by publication and supporting affidavit as required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4(f)(1)(A), they had some means of communicating with the mother because the father had the mother's telephone number and was able to notify the mother by phone of the 72-hour hearing, the grandparents could have contacted the mother's relatives to ascertain the mother's whereabouts, and they could have attempted to serve the mother personally or by registered or certified mail at the mother's prior address. Taylor v. Padgett, 300 Ga. App. 314, 684 S.E.2d 434 (2009).

Remand required. — In the absence of a showing that the defendant had received or waived receipt of actual notice of the lawsuit, or that reasonable diligence had been exercised in attempting to find the defendant, the judgment was vacated and the case remanded to the trial court for a determination whether service by publication met due process constitutional guarantees. McDade v. McDade, 263 Ga. 456, 435 S.E.2d 24 (1993).

Trial court did not err in dismissing the plaintiff's complaint since the first publication was printed only three days before the 60-day period for publication expired and the remaining three publications occurred outside the period. Fudge v. Balkissoon, 199 Ga. App. 755, 406 S.E.2d 116 (1991).

Service by Mail

Registered mail. — Forwarding by registered mail of a copy of the petition does not subject the defendant to the jurisdiction of the superior court, especially when it is equally clear that the defendant does not waive the failure of service and moves to dismiss the petition on that ground. Gormong v. Cleveland Elec. Co., 180 Ga. App. 481, 349 S.E.2d 500 (1986), cert. denied, 479 U.S. 1103, 107 S. Ct. 1335, 94 L. Ed. 2d 186 (1987).

Fact that statutorily authorized service of additional pleadings (once service has been obtained) may be by registered mail does not justify original service of pleadings by such mail. Gormong v. Cleveland Elec. Co., 180 Ga. App. 481, 349 S.E.2d 500 (1986), cert. denied, 479 U.S. 1103, 107 S. Ct. 1335, 94 L. Ed. 2d 186 (1987).

Service by certified mail could not have been made pursuant to the local service methods for Georgia courts because Georgia law has no provision for service by mail. Madden v. Cleland, 105 F.R.D. 520 (N.D. Ga. 1985).

In a negligence action filed by an injured driver against an insured and an insurer, the trial court did not err in dismissing the injured driver's complaint after the record revealed that: (1) the insured was never served with process and service upon the insurer via certified mail was inadequate; (2) no privity of contract existed among the parties; (3) no unsatisfied judgment against the insured existed; and (4) no statute or provision in the insurance policy permitted the suit. Crane v. Lazaro, 281 Ga. App. 127, 635 S.E.2d 319 (2006), cert. denied, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 907 (Ga. 2006); cert. dismissed, mot. denied, 549 U.S. 1200, 127 S. Ct. 1278, 167 L. Ed. 2d 69 (2007).

U.S. postal employee was not agent of defendant for service of process. — District court did not abuse the court's discretion in dismissing without prejudice plaintiff's claims against the defendant for failure to serve under Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(m) because the record indicated that, after two failed attempts to serve the defendant at a United States Postal Service Post Office Box, the plaintiff instead delivered the complaint and summons to the Attorney General and to an unnamed United States Postal Service employee; even assuming that the defendant had a contract with the United States Postal Service to maintain a Post Office Box, nothing in the record indicated that the defendant authorized any United States Postal Service employee to act as the defendant's agent to receive service of process, and Georgia law did not create such an agency. Cox v. Mills, No. 11-12018, 2012 U.S. App. LEXIS 6579 (11th Cir. Apr. 2, 2012) (Unpublished).

Nonresidents; Residents Outside State

Courts of this state have no extra-territorial jurisdiction, and cannot make citizens of foreign states amenable to their process, or conclude them by judgment in personam, without their consent. Tuten v. Tuten, 227 Ga. 228, 180 S.E.2d 233 (1971); Benefield v. Harris, 143 Ga. App. 709, 240 S.E.2d 119 (1977).

Personal service or waiver required. — In order for the court to bind nonresidents by the court's judgments in personam, there must be personal service or waiver of personal service upon such nonresidents; this requirement has not been changed by the enactment of this section. Tapley v. Proctor, 150 Ga. App. 337, 258 S.E.2d 25 (1979).

Nonresidents; Residents Outside State (Cont'd)

Registered mailing insufficient. — In equitable proceeding to modify a divorce decree with respect to custody of children, mere forwarding by registered mail of a copy of the petition, process, and order did not subject the nonresident defendant to the jurisdiction of the court. Briggs v. Briggs, 207 Ga. 614, 63 S.E.2d 371 (1951) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-204).

Personal service required for in personam judgments against nonresidents. — In order for courts to bind nonresidents by their judgments in personam, there must be personal service or waiver of personal service upon such nonresidents. Pettie v. Roberts, 214 Ga. 750, 107 S.E.2d 657 (1959) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-207).

Judgments in personam cannot validly be rendered against nonresident defendants when service is had only by publication. James Talcott, Inc. v. Allahabad Bank, Ltd., 444 F.2d 451 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 940, 92 S. Ct. 280, 30 L. Ed. 2d 253 (1971) (decided under former Code 1933, §§ 81-204, 81-205, and Ga. L. 1946, p. 761).

Law of this state does not provide for service by publication or otherwise upon nonresidents in actions in personam. James Talcott, Inc. v. Allahabad Bank, Ltd., 444 F.2d 451 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 940, 92 S. Ct. 280, 30 L. Ed. 2d 253 (1971) (decided under former Code 1933, §§ 81-204, 81-205, and Ga. L. 1946, p. 761, § 4).

When paternal grandparents petitioned for visitation rights, the parent of the child was not properly served with process under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4(e)(7) because the parent had moved to Arizona to attend college, but the sheriff's deputy made service upon the maternal grandparent in Georgia, even though the maternal grandparent told the deputy that the parent had moved to Arizona. The parent should have been served personally, or by leaving copies thereof at the parent's dwelling house or usual place of abode. Oglesby v. Deal, 311 Ga. App. 622, 716 S.E.2d 749 (2011).

Who may serve process under long arm statute. — While the method of service under the long arm statute must conform to the laws of Georgia, the issue of who may serve process is determined by the law of the foreign jurisdiction in which service is made. Samay v. Som, 213 Ga. App. 812, 446 S.E.2d 230 (1994).

Service by publication authorized for actions in rem against nonresidents. — State statute authorizing service of process, by publication or otherwise, upon absent and nonresident defendants has no application to suits in personam, but it is sufficient authority for institution of suits in rem when, under recognized principles of law, such suits may be instituted against nonresident defendants. Irons v. American Nat'l Bank, 178 Ga. 160, 172 S.E. 629 (1933) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, §§ 5554 and 5556 et seq.).

Petition seeking accounting and settlement of partnership affairs and decree of title to one-half interest in land alleged to be the property of the partnership, legal title to which was in the defendant, was an action in personam, and the defendant, a nonresident, was not served and did not waive service, the superior court was without jurisdiction of such action. Sternbergh v. McClure, 217 Ga. 278, 122 S.E.2d 217 (1961) (decided under former Code 1933, §§ 81-204 and 81-205).

Divorce and alimony. — While service of a nonresident by publication would be sufficient to give the court jurisdiction of the defendant so far as to authorize a decree for divorce, it would not give jurisdiction so far as to authorize also a decree for alimony; while such proceeding is in rem insofar as it adjudicates the marital status, when it undertakes as an incident of the divorce proceeding to deal with the defendant's property rights, it becomes in that respect a proceeding in personam. Axtell v. Axtell, 181 Ga. 24, 181 S.E. 295 (1935) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-204).

When the husband is a nonresident served by publication, the court having jurisdiction of the res of the marriage relation may render a valid decree of divorce, as well as a valid judgment or decree in rem with respect to such property when necessary to enforce the wife's claim to permanent alimony. Grimmett v.

Personal judgment for alimony cannot be rendered against a nonresident, or resident absent from the state, based upon service by publication, even though the act of the defendant in leaving the state may have been for the purpose of evading the support obligation. Hicks v. Hicks, 193 Ga. 446, 18 S.E.2d 754 (1942) (decided under former Code 1933, §§ 81-204 and 81-207).

Extent of available judicial relief in reference to alimony against nonresident defendant who is not personally served in this state, does not acknowledge service, or does not voluntarily submit to the jurisdiction of the court by appearing and pleading, is confined to seizure and utilization of such property as defendant may own, situated within the jurisdiction of the court. Hicks v. Hicks, 193 Ga. 446, 18 S.E.2d 754 (1942) (decided under former Code 1933, §§ 81-201 and 81-211).

Although the superior court rendering a divorce decree retains exclusive jurisdiction to enforce provisions therein relating to custody of minor children of the parties by attachment for contempt, even when subsequent to rendition of the order party sought to be adjudged in contempt has removed the party's residence to another jurisdiction, nevertheless in order for the court to bind nonresidents by the court's judgments in personam there must be personal service or waiver of personal service upon such nonresidents. Tuten v. Tuten, 227 Ga. 228, 180 S.E.2d 233 (1971).

Service of process on West Virginia tort defendants was insufficient to subject the defendants to the personal jurisdiction of a Georgia court, when process was not made on the defendants personally and, even though the Georgia process server was accompanied by a West Virginia process server, there was no evidence that service was made by the West Virginia process server according to the laws of that state. Shahan v. Scott, 189 Ga. App. 514, 376 S.E.2d 221 (1988), writ vacated, 259 Ga. 172, 377 S.E.2d 859 (1989).

Service on Georgia residents outside state. — Positive sworn statement that the defendant was a resident of a county in this state combined with the fact, shown by the record, that the defendant was actually served at a place indicated in another state, was sufficient, prima facie, to prevent dismissal of the pleadings and return of service alone. Burnett v. Hope, 124 Ga. App. 273, 183 S.E.2d 505 (1971).

Personal service on the defendant in another state was valid, since there was evidence that at the time of service of the complaint the defendant was a resident of this state, e.g., that the defendant owned property here, received mail here, filed federal and state tax returns here, titled the defendant's motor vehicles here, and purchased motor vehicle license tags and safety inspection stickers here. Rice v. Rice, 240 Ga. 272, 240 S.E.2d 29 (1977).

Service of process outside the state upon parties defendant who are state residents is subject to the service-of-process requirements of the Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9, and not the Long Arm Statute, O.C.G.A. § 9-10-91. Shahan v. Scott, 259 Ga. 172, 377 S.E.2d 859 (1989).

When plaintiff husband in divorce action alleged in his complaint that the defendant wife was a resident of Georgia but could be served at an address in South Carolina, and service on the wife was made by leaving a copy of the complaint and summons at her home in South Carolina with the wife's employee, who did not live there, the trial court erred in denying the wife's motion to dismiss for improper service since O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4 means exactly what it states, and service under that Code section must be made as provided. Bible v. Bible, 259 Ga. 418, 383 S.E.2d 108 (1989).

Substituted service on spouse at defendant's Florida home. — Plaintiff's substituted service on the defendant's spouse at the defendant's home in Florida was sufficient under the long-arm statute. Jacobson v. Garland, 227 Ga. App. 81, 487 S.E.2d 640 (1997).

Service at dwelling house or usual place of abode. — Service of process was properly made in California upon security deed holder even though the record showed a copy of the complaint and summons was left at the security deed holder's address with a person who was a cotenant and not the security deed holder as the service of process allowed for such service. Lebbos v. Davis, 256 Ga. App. 1, 567 S.E.2d 345 (2002).

Amendment of defectively served complaint. — When the plaintiffs' first complaint did not meet the conditions for personal service on a Georgia resident outside the state, a valid action was not initiated, and an amendment of the complaint to show the defendant's status as a Michigan resident, without proper service, did not cure the defective service of the first complaint. Driver v. Nunnallee, 226 Ga. App. 563, 487 S.E.2d 122 (1997). But see Lau v. Klinger, 46 F. Supp. 2d 1377 (S.D. Ga. 1999).

Because international service of process against an automobile manufacturer was properly effectuated by registered mail under the Hague Convention, the manufacturer's motion to dismiss the action based on improper service of process was properly denied; moreover, as the manufacturer refused to acknowledge service of the renewal third-party complaint, even though it had done so in the initial action, and given that the address used in the initial action was apparently incorrect, that leave of court to use a special process server upon discovering the problem was granted, that service by registered mail using the correct address was effectuated, and that perfected personal service was ultimately obtained, a due diligence finding was proper. Mitsubishi Motors Corp. v. Colemon, 290 Ga. App. 86, 658 S.E.2d 843 (2008).

Service of process proper on out of state resident. — Defendant failed to make an affirmative showing that the trial court lacked personal jurisdiction on the ground that service of process upon the defendant was insufficient because although the defendant contended that the service made upon the defendant failed to comply with the provisions of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4(f)(2) of the Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9, service of process outside the state upon state residents was subject to the service-of-process requirements of the Act, and the record supported the trial court's conclusion that the defendant was a nonresident of Georgia; the record did not suggest, and the defendant did not argue, that the defendant was a resident of the state, and the service complied with the provisions of the Long Arm Statute, O.C.G.A. § 9-10-91 et seq. Haamid v. First Franklin Fin. Corp., 299 Ga. App. 828, 683 S.E.2d 891 (2009).

Given service on an Alabama resident by a private process server who verified the resident's identity through a closed door at the resident's residence before leaving the papers at the door as instructed, a trial court did not err in finding that service was proper under O.C.G.A. § 9-10-94 and striking the resident's untimely answer. The timing of the filing of the return of service was not relevant under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4(h). Newsome v. Johnson, 305 Ga. App. 579, 699 S.E.2d 874 (2010).

Trial court erred by denying the husband's motion for a new trial in a divorce and child support action because the husband was not properly served with the summons and complaint as there was an absence of any evidence that service was made upon a resident of the husband's dwelling or usual place of abode in California; therefore, the court had to conclude that service was improper. Guerrero v. Guerrero, 296 Ga. 432, 768 S.E.2d 451 (2015).

Proof of Service

Presumption that officer performed duty. — While deputy sheriff is not authorized to leave copy of service and summons on one who is not of suitable age or discretion or who does not reside with the defendant, presumption is that public officer faithfully and lawfully performs duties devolving upon the officer by law. Woods v. Congress Fin. Corp., 149 Ga. App. 156, 253 S.E.2d 834 (1979).

Although deputy sheriff is not authorized to leave copy of service and summons on one who is not of suitable age and discretion, one is presumed to have performed one's duties faithfully and lawfully so as to allow the court to accept a certificate of service signed by a deputy sheriff as proof of personal service upon the defendant. Trammel v. National Bank, 159 Ga. App. 850, 285 S.E.2d 590 (1981).

Entry prima facie conclusive. — Entry made by sheriff or any officer of court having jurisdiction of the defendant and of subject matter of the suit is prima facie conclusive as to all facts properly recited therein. Baxter v. Crandall, 45 Ga. App. 125, 163 S.E. 526 (1932) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5566).

Entry of record made by proper officer, reciting that defendants were personally served with copy of process, is conclusive evidence of service until set aside. Deich v. American Disct. Co., 218 Ga. 726, 130 S.E.2d 595 (1963) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-214).

Entry of service of the sheriff or the sheriff's deputy imports verity. Wolfe v. Rhodes, 166 Ga. App. 845, 305 S.E.2d 606 (1983).

Fact of service determinative. — Return of the officer is but evidence of service; it is fact of service that gives the court jurisdiction of the defendant, and not the entry of the officer, and although it is necessary, before the court can proceed, to have before it evidence of service, return of service itself is not jurisdictional. Busey v. Milam, 95 Ga. App. 198, 97 S.E.2d 533 (1957) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-202).

It is the fact of service, rather than proof thereof by the return, which is of vital importance. Busey v. Milam, 95 Ga. App. 198, 97 S.E.2d 533 (1957) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-202).

Critical question is fact of service and not nature of return. Montgomery v. USS Agri-Chemical Div., 155 Ga. App. 189, 270 S.E.2d 362 (1980); Attwell v. Heritage Bank Mt. Pleasant, 161 Ga. App. 193, 291 S.E.2d 28 (1982).

Burden on plaintiff to show diligence. — Burden is on the plaintiff, not the sheriff, to show diligence in attempting to ensure that proper service has been made as quickly as possible. Jarmon v. Murphy, 164 Ga. App. 763, 298 S.E.2d 510 (1982).

In a personal injury lawsuit, because, as a matter of law, an injured individual failed to carry the burden of showing that reasonable diligence was used in attempting to serve the complaint, the trial court abused the court's discretion in denying a motion to dismiss the complaint; moreover, despite the individual's attempt to argue to the contrary, the applicable test was whether the plaintiff exercised due diligence, not whether the defendant had suffered harm from the delay in service of process. Duffy v. Lyles, 281 Ga. App. 377, 636 S.E.2d 91 (2006).

Diligence in serving opposing party not shown. — Trial court did not err in holding that the appellant failed to act diligently in serving appellee 21 days after filing a renewal action as the appellant provided no evidence to show that the appellant exercised diligence since the appellant did not ensure that the renewal action was served. Zeigler v. Hambrick, 257 Ga. App. 356, 571 S.E.2d 418 (2002).

There was no abuse of discretion by a trial court's dismissal of a personal injury action by a plaintiff against a defendant due to lack of service and expiration of the limitations period as the plaintiff did not exercise reasonable diligence in attempting to serve the defendant because, although it appeared that the defendant was evading service, the plaintiff did not seek an order to serve by publication under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4(f)(1)(A); further, there was no indication that the greatest possible diligence was exhibited upon the defendant's filing of a motion to dismiss the complaint due to lack of service. Atcheson v. Cochran, 297 Ga. App. 568, 677 S.E.2d 749 (2009).

Burden to show error in matter reflected in a return of service is on the defendant. Wolfe v. Rhodes, 166 Ga. App. 845, 305 S.E.2d 606 (1983).

Defendant's affidavits shifting burden of proof to plaintiff. — Defendant's motion to dismiss for insufficiency of personal service should have been granted when the affidavits submitted by the defendant were based on the direct personal knowledge of the affiants and were sufficient to carry the defendant's burden to overcome the prima facie presumption that service was properly made, and when the plaintiff did not provide additional evidence in support of proper service. Yelle v. United States Suburban Press, Inc., 216 Ga. App. 46, 453 S.E.2d 108 (1995).

While a sheriff's return of service is prima facie evidence of service, it was successfully rebutted by the defendant who submitted an affidavit demonstrating that the defendants had no agents authorized to accept service. Ritts v. Dealers Alliance Credit Corp., 989 F. Supp. 1475 (N.D. Ga. 1997).

Certificate as proof of personal service. — In absence of contradictory evidence, the trial court is warranted in accepting a certificate of service as proof of personal service because the presumption is that a public officer faithfully and lawfully performed the duties devolving the officer by law. Lester v. Crooms, Inc., 157 Ga. App. 377, 277 S.E.2d 751 (1981).

Validity of service not affected by failure to make proof. — Both Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 4 and Ga. L. 1972, p. 689, §§ 1-3 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-4 and 9-11-5) provide that failure of proof of service, by return made thereof on face of the record, does not affect the validity of the service, and the purpose of this provision is to prevent the defendant who has been served from attacking the validity of service upon the defendant on the technical ground that the person making service failed to make proper proof thereof. Daniel & Daniel, Inc. v. Stewart Bros., 139 Ga. App. 372, 228 S.E.2d 586 (1976).

Under subsection (g) of Ga. L. 1972, p. 689, §§ 1-3 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4) and subsection (b) of Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 4 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-5), failure to make proof of service shall not affect the validity of service. Montgomery v. USS Agri-Chemical Div., 155 Ga. App. 189, 270 S.E.2d 362 (1980).

"Void" return not fatal when proper service was had. — Under this section what has formerly been characterized as a "void" return of service is not fatal to the validity of the judgment rendered under proper service, even if such judgment arises by default. Montgomery v. USS Agri-Chemical Div., 155 Ga. App. 189, 270 S.E.2d 362 (1980).

Return of service is mere evidence of service. Daniel & Daniel, Inc. v. Stewart Bros., 139 Ga. App. 372, 228 S.E.2d 586 (1976).

Return of service constitutes prima facie showing that personal service was accomplished on third-party defendant. Harvey v. Harvey, 147 Ga. App. 154, 248 S.E.2d 214 (1978).

Return only set aside by clear and convincing evidence. — While return of service may be traversed and impeached, it is of itself evidence of a high order, and can only be set aside upon evidence which is not only clear and convincing, but strongest of which nature of the case will admit. Williams v. Mells, 138 Ga. App. 60, 225 S.E.2d 501 (1976); Woods v. Congress Fin. Corp., 149 Ga. App. 156, 253 S.E.2d 834 (1979); Lester v. Crooms, Inc., 157 Ga. App. 377, 277 S.E.2d 751 (1981); Wolfe v. Rhodes, 166 Ga. App. 845, 305 S.E.2d 606 (1983).

While the return of service imports verity and is itself evidence of a high order, it is not conclusive as to the facts stated therein but may be set aside upon evidence which is not only clear and convincing, but the strongest of which the nature of the case will admit. Daniel v. Leibolt, 178 Ga. App. 186, 342 S.E.2d 334 (1986).

Proof in complaint. — Return of service entered upon a declaration is not conclusive as to the facts therein recited. Attwell v. Heritage Bank Mt. Pleasant, 161 Ga. App. 193, 291 S.E.2d 28 (1982).

Return of service on corporation. — Return of service of process on corporate party defendant was not proof of proper service of process on an individual defendant for whom there was no return of service. Greene v. First Lease, Inc., 152 Ga. App. 605, 263 S.E.2d 483 (1979).

Late filing of return of service, at least when it is not shown that any party was deceived thereby, does not void service, because while process and service are essential, return of service is only evidence of what the officer has done and is not itself jurisdictional. Olvey v. Citizens & S. Bank, 146 Ga. App. 484, 246 S.E.2d 485 (1978).

Amendment or proof of return after judgment. — Although the trial court should not proceed to judgment without an affirmative showing of service in the record, if the court does so proceed and upon a subsequent challenge to the judgment it appears to the satisfaction of the court that proper service was in fact made, the original return may be amended or, if no return exists, it may be supplied so as to save that which has been done under service valid in fact. Montgomery v. USS Agri-Chemical Div., 155 Ga. App. 189, 270 S.E.2d 362 (1980).

Voluntary dismissal after announcement of verdict not timely. — Voluntary dismissal which was presented to the trial court for filing after the plaintiff's counsel received notice that the jury was prepared to announce its verdict, which the court initially declined to accept, but which, following the entry of the verdict for the defendants, the court did accept, backdating the court's decision to reflect an earlier filing, was not timely filed, and the judgment of the trial court was reversed, with direction that the judgment be entered on the verdict. Vanderbreggen v. Hodge, 171 Ga. App. 868, 321 S.E.2d 218 (1984).

When deputy marshal declared on return that the marshal personally served the defendant, and there was no evidence to the contrary other than the marshal's written comments that the defendant refused to open the door, there was proper service. Hickey v. Merritt, 128 Ga. App. 764, 197 S.E.2d 833 (1973).

Service on clerk of chief operating officer. — Administratrix's acts of serving ante litem notice of the claims in a wrongful death action upon the clerk of a service provider's chief executive officer at the office address of the officer was sufficient under both O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-4 and 50-21-35 to avoid summary judgment on this issue; moreover, the provider waived any service of process defense through its: (1) actual knowledge of the instant suit; (2) active participation in discovery; and (3) failure to show prejudice by any alleged defect in the service of process. Summerlin v. Ga. Pines Cmty. Serv. Bd., 278 Ga. App. 831, 630 S.E.2d 115 (2006), aff'd, 282 Ga. 339, 647 S.E.2d 566 (2007).

Amendments

Service of amended summons. — Amendment to a summons in a dispossessory action which changed the time for the defendant's answer was required to be served with the same formalities required for the original summons. Tampa Pipeline Corp. v. City Mills Co., 216 Ga. App. 783, 456 S.E.2d 270 (1995).

Defective return may be amended. — Process which is merely defective and not void is amendable and is cured by the verdict. W.T. Rawleigh Co. v. Watts, 68 Ga. App. 786, 24 S.E.2d 213 (1943) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-1313).

If there has been good service, but an irregular or incomplete return, defect may be cured by entry making the return conform to the facts, and thus save what is in reality a judgment based on valid service; such amendment may be made by the officer voluntarily while the officer remains in commission, or nunc pro tunc by order of court. Busey v. Milam, 95 Ga. App. 198, 97 S.E.2d 533 (1957) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-202).

Defective return of valid service of process may be amended to speak the truth. Smith v. Hartrampf, 106 Ga. App. 603, 127 S.E.2d 814 (1962) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-1313).

Irregularity in direction of process is amendable. Everett v. McCary, 93 Ga. App. 474, 92 S.E.2d 112 (1956) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-1313).

When process contains command to the defendant to appear in court at a certain time for a specified purpose, and this process is actually executed by the proper officer, the mere fact that formal direction to the officer to execute process is omitted therefrom would be at most a mere clerical omission or irregularity, which could be cured by amendment. Gay v. Sylvania Cent. Ry., 79 Ga. App. 362, 53 S.E.2d 713 (1949) (decided under former Code 1933, §§ 81-201, 81-220, 81-1201, and 81-1205).

Relation back. — Amendment of the return, which makes the return speak the truth, can be made, and when so amended, the amendment relates back to the date of service and is to be considered the initial return. Busey v. Milam, 95 Ga. App. 198, 97 S.E.2d 533 (1957) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-202).

Facility of amendment as to a misnomer under subsection (h) of Ga. L. 1968, p. 1104, §§ 1 and 2 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4) was no less than under former Code 1933, § 81-1206 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-10-132). Robinson v. Reward

Ceramic Color Mfg., Inc., 120 Ga. App. 380, 170 S.E.2d 724 (1969).

Misdescription of corporation in complaint. — Description of defendant corporation in the complaint as “U.S. Shelter Corporation of Delaware” instead of “U.S. Shelter Corporation” was a mere misnomer and not a nonamendable defect which would warrant setting aside a default judgment against the corporation. Miller v. United States Shelter Corp., 179 Ga. App. 469, 347 S.E.2d 251 (1986).

Divorce action, as amendment to maintenance action, unauthorized. — When a husband had filed an action for separate maintenance, he could not institute a new cause of action for divorce through an amendment to the original action and the service provisions of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-5; he was required to serve his wife with process under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4 so as to afford her notice of the divorce action and to afford the trial court personal jurisdiction over her with regard to the new action. Southworth v. Southworth, 265 Ga. 671, 461 S.E.2d 215 (1995).

Alternative Service

Dispossession proceedings. — Since former Code 1933, § 61-302 (see now O.C.G.A. § 44-7-51), relating to dispossession proceedings, did not expressly prescribe that the cumulative service provisions of subsection (i) of Ga. L. 1968, p. 1104, §§ 1 and 2 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4) were unavailable, Ga. L. 1968, p. 1104, § 2 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-81), providing for exceptions to the applicability of the Civil Practice Act (see O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9), was inoperable. Navaho Corp. v. Stuckey, 141 Ga. App. 271, 233 S.E.2d 217 (1977).

Garnishment proceedings. — Alternative methods of service may be used in a garnishment proceeding. Cartwright v. Alpha Transp. Serv., Inc., 161 Ga. App. 274, 289 S.E.2d 827 (1982).

Application for contempt is a special proceeding within the meaning of subsection (j). Austin v. Austin, 245 Ga. 487, 265 S.E.2d 788 (1980).

Motion to dismiss for improper service under Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(h) was denied because a consumer attempted service on a business's registered agent on three occasions, and when those attempts failed the consumer had reason to believe the business was evading service, the business had done on prior occasions, and the consumer proceeded with substitute service pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4(e)(1). Davis v. Frederick J. Hanna & Assocs., P.C., 506 F. Supp. 2d 1322 (N.D. Ga. 2007).

Prescription of alternate service by court unavailable when another method specified. — Although alternate service for special situations may be prescribed by court when requirements for service are not prescribed by law or are not clear or certain, such alternate service is not available when another method is prescribed by statute. American Photocopy Equip. Co. v. Lew Deadmore & Assocs., 127 Ga. App. 207, 193 S.E.2d 275 (1972).

Special Statutory Proceedings

Action involving minors. — When the plaintiff filed an original action when the defendant was a minor, but did not serve the defendant's parents as required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4, the plaintiff's first suit was void and no valid action existed which was renewable under O.C.G.A. § 9-9-61. Brooks v. Young, 220 Ga. App. 47, 467 S.E.2d 230 (1996), overruled on other grounds, Allen v. Kahn, 231 Ga. App. 438, 499 S.E.2d 164 (1998).

Validity of service of original action outside statute of limitation. — When an original action was filed prior to the running of the statute of limitation and proper service was not perfected on the defendants until after the expiration thereof, the renewal statute, O.C.G.A. § 9-2-61, remained available to the plaintiff because the plaintiff voluntarily dismissed the original action before the trial court ruled on the reasonableness of the service therein. This decision overrules Brooks v. Young, 220 Ga. App. 47, 467 S.E.2d 230 (1996), to the extent it holds that there can be no valid service of an original action outside the statute of limitations. Allen v. Kahn, 231 Ga. App. 438, 499 S.E.2d 164 (1998).

Proper dismissal of second complaint. — When the trial court's dismissal in the original action was based upon the court's finding that the plaintiff had not acted diligently in perfecting service on the defendant, that the determination rendered the original action void; accordingly, the renewal statute did not apply and the trial court properly dismissed the plaintiff's second complaint. King v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 250 Ga. App. 103, 550 S.E.2d 673 (2001).

Service in renewal action. — Court of appeals correctly reversed a trial court's grant of summary judgment to a driver and a corporation based on a second driver's lack of diligence in serving the second driver's complaint in the driver's voluntarily dismissed original action because the supreme court previously held that inasmuch as diligence in perfecting service of process in an action properly refiled under O.C.G.A. § 9-2-61(a) had to be measured from the time of filing the renewed suit, any delay in service in a valid first action was not available as an affirmative defense in the renewal action; the first driver and corporation essentially sought the rewriting of an unambiguous statute, but their arguments were properly directed to the General Assembly because when the General Assembly wished to put a firm deadline on filing lawsuits, the legislature knew how to enact a statute of repose instead of a statute of limitation. Robinson v. Boyd, 288 Ga. 53, 701 S.E.2d 165 (2010).

Lack of diligence not shown. — Trial court erred in dismissing the plaintiff's action based on the fact that the defendant had been served after the limitation period expired and that the plaintiff failed to act diligently to ensure service in a timely fashion as the undisputed factual record showed that the plaintiff did in fact pay the filing fees and service fee; and apart from the unsupported finding that the plaintiff failed to pay the filing fees, the trial court provided no further justification for the court's conclusion that the plaintiff lacked due diligence in serving the defendant, nor did the record show any. Callaway v. Goodwin, 327 Ga. App. 875, 761 S.E.2d 407 (2014).

Application for dismissal of guardian. — Because the application for dismissal of a guardian was published as required by O.C.G.A. § 29-2-84(a), the probate court did not lack personal jurisdiction even though the ward was never served with notice of the dismissal under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4 or O.C.G.A. § 29-2-77. Utica Mut. Ins. Co. v. Mitchell, 227 Ga. App. 830, 490 S.E.2d 489 (1997).

Personal service on garnishee. — O.C.G.A. § 18-4-62, relating to the method for service of process on a garnishee, does not expressly state that the personal service provisions of subsection (d) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4 are unavailable, and further, subsection (j) of that section provides that "service shall be sufficient when made in accordance with the statutes relating particularly to the proceeding or in accordance with this section." Alpha Transp. Serv., Inc. v. Cartwright, 248 Ga. 701, 285 S.E.2d 713 (1982).

In rem forfeiture actions. — Property owner's motion to dismiss was properly denied in city's in rem forfeiture action because the service requirements of the Civil Procedure Act, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4(a), did not apply and the property owner was informed of the owner's appellate rights as required by O.C.G.A. § 32-3-1 et seq. Whigham v. City of Atlanta, 262 Ga. App. 742, 586 S.E.2d 412 (2003).

Construction with other law. — O.C.G.A. § 9-6-27(a) complemented, rather than conflicted with O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4(k), which expressly established that the methods of service could have been used as alternative methods of service in special statutory proceedings; a taxpayer's failure to comply with O.C.G.A. § 9-6-27(a) in a case seeking mandamus and injunctive relief against a county was immaterial because the taxpayer served the county in the ordinary manner. Haugen v. Henry County, 277 Ga. 743, 594 S.E.2d 324, cert. denied, 543 U.S. 816, 125 S. Ct. 63, 160 L. Ed. 2d 22 (2004).

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, opinions decided under former Code 1933, § 81-204 and Ga. L. 1975, pp. 1291 and 1292 are included in the annotations for this Code section.

Service by private citizen. — Private citizen may serve process only if the citizen is specially appointed in a particular case. 1988 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U88-27.

Garnishment is a quasi-in-rem action, and consequently, when the defendant is out of state or cannot be found or served, service can be effected by publication. 1975 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U75-72 (opinion based on former Ga. L. 1975, pp. 1291, 1293).

Personal service ordinarily required. — Unless some other mode is especially provided for by statute, service of process or legal notice must ordinarily be made personally on the party or individual in question. 1965-66 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 66-94 (opinion rendered under former Code 1933, § 81-204).

Necessity and permissibility of raising claim for abuse of process by reply or counterclaim in same proceeding in which abuse occurred — state cases, 82 ALR4th 1115.

9-11-4.1. Certified process servers.

(a) Certified process servers. A person at least 18 years of age who files with a sheriff of any county of this state an application stating that the movant complies with this Code section and any procedures and requirements set forth in any rules or regulations promulgated by the Judicial Council of Georgia regarding this Code section shall, absent good cause shown, be certified as a process server. Such certification shall be effective for a period of three years or until such approval is withdrawn by a superior court judge upon good cause shown, whichever shall first occur. Such certified process server shall be entitled to serve in such capacity for any court of the state, anywhere within the state, provided that the sheriff of the county for which process is to be served allows such servers to serve process in such county.

(b) Certification procedures.

(1) Any person seeking certification under this Code section shall upon applying for certification present evidence that he or she:

(A) Has undergone a criminal record check based on fingerprints and has never been convicted of a felony or of impersonating a peace officer or other public officer or employee under Code Section 16-10-23;

(B) Completed a 12 hour course of instruction relating to service of process which course has been approved by the Administrative Office of the Courts in consultation with the Georgia Sheriffs' Association;

(C) Passed a test approved by the Administrative Office of the Courts which will measure the applicant's knowledge of state law regarding serving of process and other papers on various entities and persons;

(D) Obtained a commercial surety bond or policy of commercial insurance conditioned to protect members of the public and persons employing the certified process server against any damage arising from any actionable misconduct, error, or omission on the part of the applicant while serving as a certified process server; and

(E) Is a citizen of the United States.

(2) A sheriff of any county of this state shall review the application, test score, criminal record check, and such other information or documentation as required by that sheriff and determine whether the applicant shall be approved for certification and authorized to act as a process server in this state.

(3) Upon approval the applicant shall complete a written oath as follows: "I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will conduct myself as a process server truly and honestly, justly and uprightly, and according to law; and that I will support the Constitution of the State of Georgia and the Constitution of the United States. I further swear (or affirm) that I will not serve any papers or process in any action where I have a financial or personal interest in the outcome of the matter or where any person to whom I am related by blood or marriage has such an interest."

(c) Renewal and revocation of certification. A certified process server shall be required to renew his or her certification every three years. Any certified process server failing to renew his or her certification shall no longer be approved to serve as a certified process server. At the time of renewal, the certified process server shall provide evidence that he or she has completed three annual five-hour courses of continuing education which courses have been approved by the Administrative Office of the Courts and has undergone an updated criminal record check. The certification of a process server may be revoked or suspended by a superior court judge for cause at any time. If a complaint has been filed by a sheriff alleging serious misconduct by the process server, such judge may suspend the certification for up to five business days while the matter is considered by the judge.

(d) Fees. The sheriff shall collect a fee of $80.00 for processing the application required by this Code section.

(e) Registry. The sheriff shall forward $30.00 of each fee received to the Georgia Sheriffs' Association. The Georgia Sheriffs' Association shall maintain a registry of certified process servers.

(f) Service by off-duty deputy sheriff. An off-duty deputy sheriff may serve process with the approval of the sheriff by whom he or she is employed and shall be exempt from certification under this Code section.

(g) Impersonation of public officer or employee. It shall be unlawful for a certified process server to falsely hold himself or herself out as a peace officer or public officer or employee and any violation shall be punished as provided in Code Section 16-10-23.

(h) Notice to sheriff. (1) Prior to the first time that a certified process server serves process in any county he or she shall file with the sheriff of the county a written notice, in such form as shall be prescribed by the Georgia Sheriffs' Association, of his or her intent to serve process in that county. Such notice shall only be accepted by a sheriff who allows certified process servers to serve process in his or her county. Such notice shall be effective for a period of one year; and a new notice shall be filed before the certified process server again serves process in that county after expiration of the one-year period.

(2) The provisions of this subsection shall not apply to a certified process server who was appointed by the court to serve process or who was appointed as a permanent process server by a court.

(i) Credentials. A sheriff of any county of this state shall at the time of certification provide credentials in the form of an identification card to each certified process server. The identification card shall be designed to clearly distinguish it from any form of credentials issued to certified peace officers and will not be in the shape or form of a law enforcement badge. A certified process server shall display his or her credentials at all times while engaged in the service of process.

(j) False representation. It shall be unlawful for any person who is not a certified process server to hold himself or herself out as being a certified process server. Any person who violates this subsection shall upon conviction be guilty of a misdemeanor. (Code 1981, § 9-11-4.1, enacted by Ga. L. 2010, p. 822, § 5/SB 491; Ga. L. 2015, p. 1065, § 1-1/SB 135.)

The 2015 amendment, effective May 6, 2015, deleted former subsection (k), which read: "Sunset and legislative review. This Code section shall be repealed effective July 1, 2015, unless continued in effect by the General Assembly prior to that date. At its 2013 regular session the General Assembly shall review this Code section to determine whether it should be continued in effect."

9-11-5. Service and filing of pleadings subsequent to the original complaint and other papers.

(a) Service — When required. Except as otherwise provided in this chapter, every order required by its terms to be served, every pleading subsequent to the original complaint unless the court otherwise orders because of numerous defendants, every written motion other than one which may be heard ex parte, and every written notice, appearance, demand, offer of judgment, and similar paper shall be served upon each of the parties. However, the failure of a party to file pleadings in an action shall be deemed to be a waiver by him or her of all notices, including notices of time and place of trial and entry of judgment, and all service in the action, except service of pleadings asserting new or additional claims for relief, which shall be served as provided by subsection (b) of this Code section.

(b) Same — How made. Whenever under this chapter service is required or permitted to be made upon a party represented by an attorney, the service shall be made upon the attorney unless service upon the party is ordered by the court. Service upon the attorney or upon a party shall be made by delivering a copy to the person to be served or by mailing it to the person to be served at the person's last known address or, if no address is known, by leaving it with the clerk of the court. As used in this Code section, the term "delivery of a copy" means handing it to the person to be served or leaving it at the person to be served's office with a person in charge thereof or, if such office is closed or the person to be served has no office, leaving it at the person to be served's dwelling house or usual place of abode with some person of suitable age and discretion residing therein. "Delivery of a copy" also means transmitting a copy via e-mail in portable document format (PDF) to the person to be served using all e-mail addresses provided pursuant to subsection (f) of this Code section and showing in the subject line of the e-mail message the words "STATUTORY ELECTRONIC SERVICE" in capital letters. Service by mail is complete upon mailing. Proof of service may be made by certificate of an attorney or of his or her employee, by written admission, by affidavit, or by other proof satisfactory to the court. Failure to make proof of service shall not affect the validity of service.

(c) Same — Numerous defendants. In any action in which there are unusually large numbers of defendants, the court, upon motion or of its own initiative, may order that service of the pleadings of the defendants and replies thereto need not be made as between the defendants, and that any cross-claim, counterclaim, or matter constituting an avoidance or affirmative defense contained therein shall be deemed to be denied or avoided by all other parties, and that the filing of any such pleading and service thereof upon the plaintiff constitutes due notice of it to the parties. A copy of every such order shall be served upon the parties in such manner and form as the court directs.

(d) Filing. All papers after the complaint required to be served upon a party shall be filed with the court within the time allowed for service.

(e) “Filing with the court” defined. The filing of pleadings and other papers with the court as required by this chapter shall be made by filing them with the clerk of the court, except that the judge may permit the papers to be filed with him, in which event he shall note thereon the filing date and forthwith transmit them to the office of the clerk.

(f) Electronic service of pleadings.

(1) A person to be served may consent to being served with pleadings electronically by:

(A) Filing a notice of consent to electronic service and including the person to be served’s e-mail address or addresses in such pleading; or

(B) Including the person to be served’s e-mail address or addresses in or below the signature block of the complaint or answer, as applicable to the person to be served.

(2) A person to be served may rescind his or her election to be served with pleadings electronically by filing and serving a notice of such rescission.

(3) If a person to be served agrees to electronic service of pleadings, such person to be served bears the responsibility of providing notice of any change in his or her e-mail address or addresses.

(4) If electronic service of a pleading is made upon a person to be served, and such person certifies to the court under oath that he or she did not receive such pleading, it shall be presumed that such pleading was not received unless the serving party disputes the assertion of nonservice, in which case the court shall decide the issue of service of such pleading. (Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 5; Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 4; Ga. L. 2001, p. 854, § 1; Ga. L. 2009, p. 73, §§ 1, 2/HB 29.)

Editor’s notes. — Ga. L. 2001, p. 854, § 3, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that the 2001 amendment shall apply to judgments or decisions entered on and after July 1, 2001.

Ga. L. 2009, p. 73, § 5/HB 29, not codified by the General Assembly, provides, in part, that the amendment to this Code section shall apply to motions to dismiss filed after July 1, 2009.

General Consideration

Arbitration award is not a pleading within the meaning of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-5. Davis v. Gaona, 260 Ga. 450, 396 S.E.2d 218 (1990).

Amendment of complaint. — Complaint against unnamed municipal employees may be deemed amendable by the trial court under subsection (c) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-5 and, thus, the plaintiff may substitute the proper named individuals. Harper v. Savannah Police Dep't, 179 Ga. App. 449, 346 S.E.2d 891 (1986).

Dismissal of the appellant's claims against the city is not authorized on the ground that the plaintiff named the "City of Savannah," rather than the "Mayor and Aldermen of the City of Savannah," because a misnomer in a defendant's name is an amendable defect as the record fails to reflect that the trial court exercised the court's discretion in determining whether to allow appellant to amend the appellant's complaint in this respect. Harper v. Savannah Police Dep't, 179 Ga. App. 449, 346 S.E.2d 891 (1986).

Divorce action, as amendment to maintenance action, unauthorized. — When a husband filed an action for separate maintenance, he could not institute a new cause of action for divorce through an amendment to the original action and the service provisions of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-5; he was required to serve his wife with process under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4, so as to afford her notice of the divorce action and to afford the trial court personal jurisdiction over her with regard to the new action. Southworth v. Southworth, 265 Ga. 671, 461 S.E.2d 215 (1995).

Duty to keep in touch with attorney. — There is a duty on the defendant's part to keep in touch with the defendant's attorney, in order to answer interrogatories or take such other action as the defendant's attorney might find necessary pending litigation, and the defendant's failure to maintain such contact amounts to conscious indifference to the consequences, which the courts equate with willful misconduct. Carter v. Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, 130 Ga. App. 522, 203 S.E.2d 766 (1974).

Proper notice served on counsel. — Trial court was authorized to find that proper notice had been served on counsel and that the plaintiff's failure to maintain contact and cooperate with the plaintiff's counsel about the pending litigation so that discovery could be made was willful misconduct. Addington v. Anneewakee, Inc., 204 Ga. App. 521, 420 S.E.2d 60 (1992).

Failure to appear due to lack of notice. — Trial court erred in dismissing defensive pleadings for failure to appear because the buyer did not receive notice of the proceeding. Keogh v. Bryson, 319 Ga. App. 294, 735 S.E.2d 293 (2012).

When Service Required

Every written notice must be served. — Statute requires every written notice to be served. Jones v. Jones, 230 Ga. 738, 199 S.E.2d 239 (1973).

Normally, appearance is made by filing defensive pleadings, and language contained in this section is based on such normal procedure. Moss v. Bishop, 235 Ga. 616, 221 S.E.2d 38 (1975). but see; Shaheen v. Dunaway Drug Stores, Inc., 246 Ga. 790, 273 S.E.2d 158 (1980).

Approval of consent judgment extending restraining order as appearance. — When no defensive pleadings were filed by the defendants, but a consent judgment extending a temporary restraining order was entered in the case, upon which approval of the defendant's counsel was shown, this appearance was sufficient to require notice of amendments, etc., in the litigation. Moss v. Bishop, 235 Ga. 616, 221 S.E.2d 38 (1975). But see Shaheen v. Dunaway Drug Stores, Inc., 246 Ga. 790, 273 S.E.2d 158 (1980).

Answer and cross action in divorce proceeding. — When, in a pending suit for divorce filed by the husband, the wife files an answer and cross action seeking divorce, child custody, and alimony, statutory provisions with respect to process and service are applicable to such cross action. Walker v. Walker, 228 Ga. 615, 187 S.E.2d 289 (1972).

Notice of hearing on motion. — Publication in an official county organ of notice of the date of hearing on a motion was not sufficient because notice of a hearing on a motion is required to be served. TMS Ins. Agency, Inc. v. Galloway, 205 Ga. App. 896, 424 S.E.2d 71 (1992); King v. Board of Regents, 215 Ga. App. 570, 451 S.E.2d 482 (1994); Edens v. O'Connor, 238 Ga. App. 252, 519 S.E.2d 691 (1999).

In a personal injury case, the trial court erred in granting partial summary judgment to the property owner because the court conducted a hearing on the motion for summary judgment despite the court's failure to give written notice to the parties of the hearing date in accordance with O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-5(b) and 9-11-6(d). Cofield v. Halpern Enters., 316 Ga. App. 582, 730 S.E.2d 63 (2012).

Late notice of hearing on motion did not cause prejudice. — In a suit for breach of a promissory note and related guaranties, while the guarantors were not properly served with the rule nisi order setting the April 15, 2014 hearing, the guarantors learned of the hearing on April 10, 2014, and the lack of notice, thus, did not prevent the guarantors' counsel from preparing for or appearing at the April 15 hearing nor was there any evidence that the guarantors were deprived of the guarantors' right under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-6(d) to serve affidavits opposing the motion as late. MJL Props. v. Cmty. & S. Bank, 330

Withdrawal of demand for jury. — There is no provision in the laws of this state that notice of withdrawal of demand for jury by the plaintiff must be served on the defendant. Newton v. Newton, 226 Ga. 440, 175 S.E.2d 543 (1970).

Notice of additional claim. — It is the spirit of this section that when a claim is undefended, written notice must be served on the party before an additional claim can be demanded. Lambert v. Gilmer, 228 Ga. 774, 187 S.E.2d 855 (1972).

Divorce petition which gives no indication by its pleadings that the wife is seeking alimony cannot be amended by introduction of evidence when the husband has filed no pleadings and does not litigate issues at the trial. Lambert v. Gilmer, 228 Ga. 774, 187 S.E.2d 855 (1972).

Service of motion for substitution of parties provided for in Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 25 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-25(a)(1)) is to be effected on the parties as provided in Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 4 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-5) and upon persons not parties as provided in Ga. L. 1972, p. 689, §§ 1-3 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4) for service of a summons. Anderson v. Southeastern Capital Corp., 243 Ga. 498, 255 S.E.2d 12 (1979).

Joining of party. — When a motion to add a party is granted, or when the court orders an additional party brought in on the party's own motion, service of process must be made in the usual way. Housing Auth. v. Millwood, 472 F.2d 268 (5th Cir. 1973).

Summary judgment without notice improper. — When summary judgment is obtained by the defendant in the plaintiff's absence at a hearing on a motion, without notice to the plaintiff, on grounds entirely distinct from those plead in a prior summary judgment motion, and by support of an affidavit of which the plaintiff had likewise no notice, grant of summary judgment was in error. Jackson v. Bekele, 152 Ga. App. 417, 263 S.E.2d 225 (1979).

When service is properly made, actual notice is not required. Allen v. Board of Tax Assessors, 247 Ga. 568, 277 S.E.2d 660 (1981).

Motion for substitution. — If an executor of a deceased party desires the protection of the 180-day limitation period for a motion for substitution, the executor can file a suggestion of death on the record and serve it on the other party's counsel. Having failed to so act, the executor cannot complain of lack of diligence on the part of the other party. Dubberly v. Nail, 166 Ga. App. 378, 304 S.E.2d 504 (1983).

How Service Made

Notice to an attorney is notice to client employing the attorney, and knowledge of attorney is knowledge of client, when such notice and knowledge come to attorney in and about subject matter of the attorney's employment. Austin v. Austin, 245 Ga. 487, 265 S.E.2d 788 (1980).

Jurisdiction not afforded by service on attorney. — Service upon attorney who represents a person is not service upon the person so as to give the court jurisdiction when personal service is required. Souter v. Carnes, 229 Ga. 220, 190 S.E.2d 69 (1972).

Service of pleadings and orders may be made upon party not represented by counsel by delivering a copy to the party or by mailing it to the party at the party's last known address. The envelope used for mailing need not include a post office box or zip code number when the address shown of record does not contain such information. Regante v. Reliable-Triple Cee of N.J., Inc., 251 Ga. 629, 308 S.E.2d 372 (1983).

Service on a party's attorney was invalid when the attorney served was representing the party's insurer in the pending proceeding, although the attorney was representing the party's interests in another proceeding. Southern Intermodal Logistics v. Carolina Cas. Ins. Co., 181 Ga. App. 110, 351 S.E.2d 509 (1986).

Mailing of an amended complaint to the defendant's attorney was not proper service because, although O.C.G.A. § 9-11-5 permits service of pleadings subsequent to the first complaint on a party's attorney, it does not allow service of process on an attorney. Driver v. Nunnallee, 226 Ga. App. 563, 487 S.E.2d 122 (1997); but see

Service by mail when party aware of lawsuit. — Once apprised of the pendency of a lawsuit, a party's constitutional right to notice and an opportunity to be heard is met by service by mail provided by subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-5. Allen v. Board of Tax Assessors, 247 Ga. 568, 277 S.E.2d 660 (1981); Sun v. Jones, 188 Ga. App. 552, 373 S.E.2d 656 (1988).

Service by mail proper when case proceeded as pending action. — Court properly confirmed the foreclosure sales because the case proceeded as a pending action, not an entirely new action and service of all subsequent pleadings and written notices were authorized to be made by mail in accordance with O.C.G.A. § 9-11-5(b). Following entry of the remittitur from the first case, the matter was reinstated in the trial court and was returned to the posture the matter occupied prior to judgment. Belans v. Bank of Am., N.A., 309 Ga. App. 208, 709 S.E.2d 853 (2011).

Service complete upon mailing. — Service by mail is permissible and upon mailing of the service copy, service is complete; thus, the fact that service is complete, if unrefuted, controls. Allen v. Board of Tax Assessors, 247 Ga. 568, 277 S.E.2d 660 (1981).

When a party opposing summary judgment filed an affidavit and served the affidavit by mail the same day, one day before the summary judgment hearing as required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(c), the affidavit was not untimely; under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-5(b), service by mail was complete upon mailing. Kirkland v. Kirkland, 285 Ga. App. 238, 645 S.E.2d 626 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 646 (Ga. 2007); 552 U.S. 1312, 128 S. Ct. 1898, 170 L.Ed.2d 749 (2008).

Mailing of call of inactive cases. — "Calendar Call of Inactive Cases" is an order of the court when properly drawn and signed by the judge, and upon proof of mailing to counsel's last known address, the court is authorized to dismiss cases listed for want of prosecution. Roark v. Northeast Sales Distrib. Co., 124 Ga. App. 10, 183 S.E.2d 83 (1971).

When counterclaim is pending at time original action is dismissed, attorney of record in initial action continues to be the attorney of record in the counterclaim unless discharged, and is the person upon whom motions may be served until final judgment. Maslia v. Maslia, 243 Ga. 44, 252 S.E.2d 469 (1979).

Service of request for admissions may be perfected by mail. Tyson v. Automotive Controls Corp., 147 Ga. App. 409, 249 S.E.2d 99 (1978).

Motion for discovery sanctions may be mailed. — Motion to impose sanctions under Ga. L. 1972, p. 510, § 10 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37) can be properly served upon the defendant's attorney by mail pursuant to subsection (b) of Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 4 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-5). Phillips v. Peachtree Hous., 138 Ga. App. 596, 226 S.E.2d 616 (1976).

Service of rule nisi by mail. — Service by mail made of motions for new trial, as well as of "all notices and other papers hereunder" and "all other similar motions, orders and proceedings" includes rules nisi issued on motions for new trial. Short v. Riles, 141 Ga. App. 881, 234 S.E.2d 710 (1977).

Notice of contempt action. — After final decree of divorce, alimony, and child custody has been entered and no action is pending, contempt proceeding requires personal service on the defendant; however, if a contempt action is still pending in the trial court, notice can properly be served on the attorney of record. Smith v. Smith, 244 Ga. 230, 259 S.E.2d 480 (1979).

Two discovery requests to married parties sufficient. — When discovery requests were served in one envelope at the parties' marital residence, but there were separate discovery requests in the envelope for the husband and the wife, the discovery met the service requirements of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-5(a), wherein "each of the parties" was to be served; the fact that the return of service on the discovery listed "discovery responses" rather than "discovery requests" did not invalidate the service thereof, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-5(b). Adams v. Adams, 260 Ga. App. 597, 580 S.E.2d 261 (2003).

Acknowledgment of waiver of service. — After a realty group acknowledged a waiver of service under O.C.G.A. § 9-10-73, the group had 30 days to file an answer, and upon failing to do so in that time period, a default judgment under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55 was validly entered in favor of a flooring company despite the fact that the company failed to provide the group with notice pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-5(a); the group failed to assert a timely defense, and the default certificate filed by the company satisfied the requirements of Ga. Unif. Super. Ct. R. 15. SRM Realty Servs. Group, LLC v. Capital Flooring Enters., 274 Ga. App. 595, 617 S.E.2d 581 (2005).

Subsection (b) virtually eliminates requirement of proof of service, except such as will satisfy the trial court, in the court's discretion. Roberts v. Roberts, 226 Ga. 203, 173 S.E.2d 675 (1970).

Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 4 and Ga. L. 1968, p. 1104, § 4 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-5 and 9-11-15) require only that party amending pleading certify service of the amendment on the other party's counsel by mail contemporaneous with filing of the amendment. Locklear v. Morgan, 127 Ga. App. 326, 193 S.E.2d 208 (1972).

Proof by certificate of counsel. — Proof of service of pleadings and other papers subsequent to the filing of the original complaint may be by certificate of counsel. Such service is perfected when there is proof of service in one of the ways specified in the statute, even though the adverse party may not have in fact received actual notice. Owen v. M & M Metro Supply, Inc., 198 Ga. App. 420, 401 S.E.2d 612 (1991).

In an employment dispute, the trial court was authorized to find that the employer was served with requests for admissions, based on the employee's counsel's assertion, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-5(b), and therefore partial summary judgment based on matters deemed admitted was proper. Am. Radiosurgery, Inc. v. Rakes, 325 Ga. App. 161, 751 S.E.2d 898 (2013).

ceeding erred when the court refused to consider guilty plea transcripts that had been attached to the state's responsive brief due to a finding that the transcripts were not served on the petitioner, when the attorney's certificate of service had indicated that only the brief was served on the petitioner; pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-5(b), the attorney's certificate of service of the brief was prima facie proof of service of the attached transcripts, which were incorporated in the brief. Scott v. Wright, 276 Ga. 12, 573 S.E.2d 49 (2002).

When a voluntary dismissal is clearly shown to bear a certificate of service so that the defendant is served with notice of the voluntary dismissal prior to the defendant's attempt to initiate a counterclaim, there is no pending counterclaim which might permit the defendant to object to the voluntary dismissal under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41(a), despite the fact that the defendant may not have received actual notice. Young v. Johnson, 167 Ga. App. 837, 307 S.E.2d 730 (1983).

Service not invalid for failure to make proof. — Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, §§ 1-4 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-4 and 9-11-5) provides that failure of proof of service does not affect the validity of the service; purpose of this rule is to prevent a defendant who has been served from attacking the validity of service upon the defendant on the technical ground that the person making service failed to make proper proof thereof. Daniel & Daniel, Inc. v. Stewart Bros., 139 Ga. App. 372, 228 S.E.2d 586 (1976).

Under Ga. L. 1972, p. 689, §§ 1-3 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4(g)) and subsection (b) of Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 4 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-5), failure to make proof of service shall not affect the validity of service. Montgomery v. USS Agri-Chemical Div., 155 Ga. App. 189, 270 S.E.2d 362 (1980).

Service not invalidated by incorrect certificate. — Fact that a defendant's attorney incorrectly indicated on a certificate of service that service of a motion to dismiss had been made by mail when service was made electronically was of no legal consequence and did not invalidate the service, pursuant to O.C.G.A.

On late filing of return. — Late filing of return of service, at least when it is not shown that any party was deceived thereby, does not void the service because while process and service are essential, return of service is only evidence of what the officer has done and is not itself jurisdictional. Olvey v. Citizens & S. Bank, 146 Ga. App. 484, 246 S.E.2d 485 (1978).

Notice of hearing presumed served. — When a trial court indicated that the court sent a notice of a combined rescheduled hearing on a construction manager's motion for summary judgment and a hearing on the issue of unliquidated damages to a condominium owner, it was presumed that such notice was sent and received in compliance with O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-5(b) and § 9-11-6(d), and the owner's mere contention that the owner did not receive notice of the hearing was not controlling and did not satisfy the owner's burden of showing that notice was in fact not received; accordingly, the owner's claim that the owner did not appear at the hearing because notice was insufficient lacked merit, due process was met, and the judgment entered from the hearing was affirmed. Blue Stone Lofts, LLC v. D'Amelio, 268 Ga. App. 355, 601 S.E.2d 719 (2004).

Insufficient evidence that parties properly served with notice of summary judgment hearing. — Summary judgment order was vacated because the record contained insufficient evidence upon which the court of appeals could base a decision; the record contained no rule nisi or other evidence indicating that the parties were properly served with notice of the summary judgment hearing date pursuant to O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-5(b) and 9-11-6(d), and there was no indication in the record that a transport company actually received notice, although its notice of appeal asked the trial court clerk to omit nothing from the record on appeal. Sprint Transp. Group, Inc. v. China Shipping NA Agency, Inc., 313 Ga. App. 454, 721 S.E.2d 659 (2011).

Filing

Filing means filing with clerk of court under subsection (d) of this section.

Hopkins v. Harris, 130 Ga. App. 489, 203 S.E.2d 762 (1973).

Despite the claim by the owners of a corporation that the trial court erred in refusing to allow the owners to intervene in the case as the true owners of the property in question, because the owners never properly filed or asserted a motion to intervene, no error resulted; moreover, their argument that the trial court erred in refusing to allow them to file their motion to intervene also provided no basis for relief. Rice v. Champion Bldgs., Inc., 288 Ga. App. 597, 654 S.E.2d 390 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 326 (Ga. 2008).

Only exception to filing of pleadings at clerk's office is that judge may file papers and transmit the papers to the clerk's office. State v. Jones, 125 Ga. App. 361, 187 S.E.2d 902 (1972).

Trial judge merely signing the rule nisi is not the equivalent of filing under subsection (e) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-5. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. Curry, 206 Ga. App. 775, 426 S.E.2d 581 (1992).

Filing by mail not provided for. — If the legislature intended to say filing by mail was permissible and should date from date of mailing, he legislature would have so provided. Hopkins v. Harris, 130 Ga. App. 489, 203 S.E.2d 762 (1973) (on motion for rehearing).

Subsection (b) of this section does not enlarge upon the time allowed for filing papers with the clerk under subsection (d), nor make provision for filing by mail. Hopkins v. Harris, 130 Ga. App. 489, 203 S.E.2d 762 (1978) (on motion for rehearing).

In transmitting complaint to clerk by mail, counsel takes risk of delays in the mail. State v. Jones, 125 Ga. App. 361, 187 S.E.2d 902 (1972).

Judge not required to permit filing with judge. — Subsection (e) of this section does not require judge to permit papers to be filed with the judge. English v. Atlanta Transit Sys., 134 Ga. App. 621, 215 S.E.2d 304 (1975).

While this section authorizes a judge to permit papers to be filed with the judge, it does not require that the judge do so.

Smith v. Forrester, 145 Ga. App. 281, 243 S.E.2d 575, cert. denied, 439 U.S. 863, 99 S. Ct. 185, 58 L. Ed. 2d 172 (1978); Hannula v. Ramey, 177 Ga. App. 512, 339 S.E.2d 735 (1986).

Filing to be made within time allowed for service. — Under subsection (d) of this section, filing of pleadings must take place within time allowed for service. Hopkins v. Harris, 130 Ga. App. 489, 203 S.E.2d 762 (1973).

Time for filing answer with clerk of court is 30 days after complaint has been served on the defendant. Hopkins v. Harris, 130 Ga. App. 489, 203 S.E.2d 762 (1973) (on motion for rehearing).

Response to motion for summary judgment is timely filed if filed on date of hearing, notwithstanding language in subsection (d) of this section requiring all papers after complaint to be filed within time allowed for service. Gross v. Pyrofax Gas Corp., 151 Ga. App. 130, 259 S.E.2d 137 (1979).

Agreement to continue hearing on summary judgment motion and time for response. — When the hearing on the plaintiff's motion for summary judgment and time for response was continued by agreement to date of hearing and the defendant's response was filed on that date, such filing was timely. Liberty Forest Prods., Inc. v. Interstate Paper Corp., 138 Ga. App. 153, 225 S.E.2d 731 (1976).

Timely service of pro se responses. — Under the circumstances, when timely service of pro se responses was made on the plaintiff, failure to file responses to requests for admission in the trial court did not support a judgment on the merits in favor of the plaintiff as such result would not be consistent with the principles of substantial justice. Mundt v. Olson, 155 Ga. App. 145, 270 S.E.2d 344 (1980).

Filing of judgment constitutes entry of judgment. — Filing of a judgment in open court with the trial judge as provided in subsection (e) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-5 is the entry of judgment within the meaning of O.C.G.A. § 5-6-31. Storch v. Hayes Microcomputer Prods., Inc., 181 Ga. App. 627, 353 S.E.2d 350 (1987).

Failure to timely file affidavit may cause affidavit to be stricken. — Trial court can exercise the court's discretion in determining whether to consider an affidavit filed on the hearing date, and there is no abuse of this discretion in striking an affidavit when the evidence shows that the defendant had this affidavit prior to the first hearing date and was negligent in failing to timely file the affidavit with the court. Crucet v. Bovis, Kyle & Burch, 180 Ga. App. 765, 350 S.E.2d 322 (1986).

Differentiation between response to summary judgment motion and affidavit supporting such motion not required. — In determining whether to strike an affidavit as untimely filed, the trial court is not required to differentiate between a response to a summary judgment and an affidavit filed in support of such a motion, as O.C.G.A. § 9-11-6(d) provides that opposing affidavits must be served no later than one day before the date of the hearing and subsection (d) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-5 provides all papers served upon a party shall be filed with the court within the time allowed for service. Crucet v. Bovis, Kyle & Burch, 180 Ga. App. 765, 350 S.E.2d 322 (1986).

Depositions properly filed notwithstanding incorrect case numbers. — When the plaintiff filed depositions with the clerk of the court via cover letter properly identifying the case by style and case number, the mere fact that the depositions themselves did not bear the correct case number did not negate the fact that the depositions were filed. Inasmuch as the clerk of the court received the depositions for filing, the depositions would be deemed to have been filed. Whisenant v. Fulton Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 194 Ga. App. 192, 390 S.E.2d 100 (1990).

Depositions properly filed despite judge's error. — When depositions were filed with a judge, but the judge through oversight failed to transmit the depositions to the clerk's office, the court verified that the parties were aware the court had considered the depositions, and the defendants' attorney failed to file the depositions in the clerk's office, the court properly ordered that the depositions be sent by supplemental record, as authorized by subsection (f) of O.C.G.A. § 5-6-41, and the depositions were considered part of the record. Custom Lighting & Decorating, Ltd. v. Hampshire Co., 204 Ga. App.

Fee payment may be required. — Clerk of court may justifiably refuse to file a complaint until the proper fees have been paid. Orr v. Culpepper, 161 Ga. App. 801, 288 S.E.2d 898 (1982).

Fee nonpayment does not invalidate filing. — Statutes making the payment of fees a prerequisite to filing a complaint are directory only, and a failure to pay these fees will not render the filing of a complaint invalid. Orr v. Culpepper, 161 Ga. App. 801, 288 S.E.2d 898 (1982).

Filing in separate courts. — As the clerks of the state court of one county and the clerks of the superior court of that same county are different persons, the receipt of the notice of appeal by the state court of the county may not be imputed in any way to be equivalent to receipt of that document by the clerk of the superior court of that county. Pittman v. Curry, 161 Ga. App. 384, 288 S.E.2d 661 (1982).

Defendant is not entitled to notice of trial if the defendant does not file defensive pleadings in the action. Wallace v. Wallace, 229 Ga. 607, 193 S.E.2d 832 (1972).

Construction with § 9-11-54. — Provisions of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-54(c)(3), requiring that notice of trial be served upon a defaulting party in a medical malpractice case involving a claim for damages exceeding $10,000.00, prevail over the provisions of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-5(a) providing that a defaulting party waives all notices of trial. Southwest Community Hosp. & Medical Ctr. v. Thompson, 165 Ga. App. 442, 301 S.E.2d 501 (1983).

Waiver of notice in divorce action. — When the defendant fails to file pleadings in a divorce action, the defendant waives all notices, including notice of time and place of trial. Gibson v. Gibson, 234 Ga. 528, 216 S.E.2d 824 (1975); Brooks v. Brooks, 242 Ga. 444, 249 S.E.2d 244 (1978).

When the defendant in a divorce action fails to file defensive pleadings the divorce is, by definition, uncontested, and such failure constitutes waiver of notice of the hearing on the final decree. Hardwick v. Hardwick, 245 Ga. 570, 266 S.E.2d 184 (1980).

When a party fails to file defensive pleadings in a divorce action, the party waives notice of the hearing on the final divorce decree. Harris v. Harris, 258 Ga. 496, 371 S.E.2d 399 (1988).

Defendant in a divorce action who failed to file a responsive pleading waived notice of the final hearing, and because the defendant was represented by counsel the professional responsibilities of opposing counsel did not require that opposing counsel inform the defendant of the final hearing. Lucas v. Lucas, 273 Ga. 240, 539 S.E.2d 807 (2000).

Notice of issues not raised in complaint. — Party is entitled to notice of issues not raised in complaint which are decided by the court in a divorce action, notwithstanding the fact that no answer has been filed. Harris v. Harris, 258 Ga. 496, 371 S.E.2d 399 (1988).

Husband's dismissal of divorce suit does not amount to waiver of notice requirements because a failure to file an answer to wife's counterclaim; absent order of court requiring husband to answer the counterclaim upon dismissal of his action, it remains automatically denied and husband is entitled to notice under the statute. Carroll v. Carroll, 237 Ga. 441, 228 S.E.2d 832 (1976).

Personal jurisdiction for a contempt proceeding is properly based upon personal jurisdiction obtained in previous pending action in which injunction is issued. Anthony v. Anthony, 239 Ga. 273, 236 S.E.2d 621 (1977).

Waiver provisions control over local rules. — Waiver of further notice of hearings and trial provided for in subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-5 controls over conflicting local court rules. Hulsey Pool Co. v. Troutman, 167 Ga. App. 192, 306 S.E.2d 83 (1983).

Waiver provisions inapplicable to party whose pleading dismissed as discovery sanction. — Provision in subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-5 that "failure of a party to file pleadings in an action shall be deemed to be a waiver by him of all notices, including notices of time and place of trial..." applies only to parties who fail to file pleadings and not to a party whose pleadings are dismissed as the result of a discovery sanction. Green v. Snellings, 260 Ga. 751, 400 S.E.2d 2 (1991).

When an owner's suit did not arise out of a title insurance company's business as an insurer, pursuant to Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. II, Para III, the trial court erred in finding venue under O.C.G.A. § 33-4-1(2); in addition, the grant of an interlocutory injunction was error because there was no showing that the title company had any opportunity to challenge the applicability of an amendment to add a quiet title action under O.C.G.A. § 23-3-62 to the complaint. First Am. Title Ins. Co. v. Broadstreet, 260 Ga. App. 705, 580 S.E.2d 676 (2003).

Court's assurance of notice. — Although, as a general rule, a party who fails to file defensive pleadings waives all right to notice, when the plaintiff appeared at the hearing pro se two days after the plaintiff's answer would have been due and the plaintiff was assured by the court that the hearing regarded only matters of temporary custody and support and that the plaintiff would receive notice of the final hearing, although the plaintiff may have initially waived the plaintiff's right to notice of the final hearing, the plaintiff was given the court's assurance that the plaintiff would receive notice of the final hearing, and was, therefore, entitled to such notice. Anderson v. Anderson, 264 Ga. 88, 441 S.E.2d 240 (1994).

Court's order to opposing party to notify defaulting party of judgment. — Although a bicyclist failed to comply with the trial court's order to notify a driver of a default judgment against the driver for $2.9 million, such failure did not permit the trial court to vacate the judgment under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(g) because the trial court had no duty to notify the driver of the judgment, pursuant to O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-5(a) and 15-6-21(c). Winslett v. Guthrie, 326 Ga. App. 747, 755 S.E.2d 287 (2014).

Summary judgment motion. — Even though the defendant was never served with a motion for summary judgment, since the trial court gave the defendant fair notice of an opportunity to respond to the motion, the statutorily-mandated service requirement was waived. Ferguson v. Duron, Inc., 244 Ga. App. 19, 534 S.E.2d 142 (2000).

Ex parte default judgment against codefendant was proper under subsection (a) of this section since 116 days had passed without response to the complaint seeking liquidated damages in an action on the contract. Hubert v. Lawson, 146 Ga. App. 698, 247 S.E.2d 223 (1978).

When defendant failed to answer the complaint, the defendant waived any notice of further action in the case. T.A.I. Computer, Inc. v. CLN Enters., Inc., 237 Ga. App. 646, 516 S.E.2d 340 (1999).

No reversible error was found because a contestant in a quiet title action waived service of process, neglected to file any pleadings, and failed to file a record to support the claims of error on appeal, and given that the special master found three independent bases, which on their face supported the judgment entered. Brown v.

Fokes Props. 2002, Inc., 283 Ga. 231, 657 S.E.2d 820 (2008).

Although a default judgment was not permissible in a divorce case, O.C.G.A. § 19-5-8, a trial court did not err in entering a judgment of divorce on the pleadings pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 19-5-10(a) after a defendant failed to file responsive pleadings, thereby waiving notice of the hearing under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-5. The trial court properly relied on the plaintiff's verified complaint and domestic relations affidavit in dividing the parties' property. Ellis v. Ellis, 286 Ga. 625, 690 S.E.2d 155 (2010).

Notice of challenge to sufficiency of answer not waived. — Waiver contemplated by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-5 does not include waiver of notice of a challenge to the sufficiency of the defendant's answer since one had been timely filed. Brown v. Brown, 217 Ga. App. 245, 457 S.E.2d 215 (1995).

9-11-6. Time.

(a) Computation. In computing any period of time prescribed or allowed by this chapter, by the rules of any court, by order of court, or by an applicable statute, the computation rules prescribed in paragraph (3) of subsection (d) of Code Section 1-3-1 shall be used.

(b) Extension of time. When by this chapter or by a notice given thereunder or by order of court an act is required or allowed to be done at or within a specified time, the parties, by written stipulation of counsel filed in the action, may extend the period, or the court for cause shown may at any time in its discretion (1) with or without motion or notice, order the period extended if request therefor is made before the expiration of the period originally prescribed or as extended by a previous order, or (2) upon motion made after the expiration of the specified period, permit the act to be done where the failure to act was the result of excusable neglect; provided, however, that no extension of time shall be granted for the filing of motions for new trial or for judgment notwithstanding the verdict.

(c) Unaffected by expiration of term. The period of time provided for the doing of any act or the taking of any proceeding is not affected or limited by the continued existence or expiration of a term of court, except as otherwise specifically provided by law. The continued existence or expiration of a term of court in no way affects the power of a court to do any act or take any proceeding in any civil action which has been pending before it, except as otherwise specifically provided by law.

(d) For motions; for affidavits. A written motion, other than one which may be heard ex parte, and notice of the hearing thereof shall be served not later than five days before the time specified for the hearing, unless a different period is fixed by this chapter or by order of the court. Such an order may for cause shown be made on ex parte application. When a motion is supported by affidavit, the affidavit shall be served with the motion. Opposing affidavits may be served not later than one day before the hearing, unless the court permits them to be served at some other time.

(e) Additional time after service by mail or e-mail. Whenever a party has the right or is required to do some act or take some proceedings within a prescribed period after the service of a notice or other paper, other than process, upon him or her, and the notice or paper is served upon the party by mail or e-mail, three days shall be added to the prescribed period. Construction with Appellate Practice Act. — While O.C.G.A. § 9-14-52(a) provides that appeals in habeas corpus cases shall be governed by the Appellate Practice Act (Act), O.C.G.A. § 5-6-30 et seq., that provision only means that appeals in habeas corpus cases, once begun, are to be handled in the same way as other civil appeals, and the Act does not provide for every single act involved in an appeal as there is no provision in the Act for computing time limits, and it is necessary to supplement the provisions of the Act by reference to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-6. Head v. Thomason, 276 Ga. 434, 578 S.E.2d 426, cert. denied, 540 U.S. 957, 124 S. Ct. 409, 157 L. Ed. 2d 294 (2003).

Inapplicable to judicial review of medicaid determination. — Georgia Civil Practice Act's (see O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) three-day rule under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-6(e) was inapplicable to a determination of timeliness with respect to a petition for judicial review of a Medicaid applicant's claim for benefits, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 50-13-19; similarly, the certified mail rule under O.C.G.A. § 50-13-23 was expressly deemed inapplicable pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 49-4-153(c) and, accordingly, the applicant's petition was properly denied as untimely. Gladowski v. Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 281 Ga. App. 299, 635 S.E.2d 886 (2006).

“Day” defined. — Day consists of 24 hours, from midnight to midnight. Gilmore v. State, 127 Ga. App. 249, 193 S.E.2d 219 (1972), rev’d on other grounds, 235 Ga. 348, 219 S.E.2d 447 (1975).

Absent contrary policy, computation hereunder applies. — Computation of time provided for by this section has been held applicable unless a contrary policy is expressed in a governing statute or court decision. Zeeman Mfg. Co. v. L.R. Sams Co., 123 Ga. App. 99, 179 S.E.2d 552 (1970).

Subsection (a) is applicable to proceeding which is had after commencement of the action. Warrick v. Mid-State Homes, Inc., 139 Ga. App. 301, 228 S.E.2d 234 (1976).

Phrase “applicable statute” in subsection (a) of this section refers directly only to statutes applicable to proceedings had after commencement of the action and, hence, would not apply expressly to a statute of limitations. Zeeman Mfg. Co. v. L.R. Sams Co., 123 Ga. App. 99, 179 S.E.2d 552 (1970).

Subsection (a) not applicable to statutes of limitation. — Subsection (a) of this section is a rule of procedure relating to acts done or proceedings had after commencement of an action and to any statutes expressly applicable to such proceedings, and is not intended to modify and change existing statutes of limitation. Davis v. U.S. Fid. & Guar. Co., 119 Ga. App. 374, 167 S.E.2d 214 (1969); Georgia Power Co. v. Whitmire, 146 Ga. App. 29, 245 S.E.2d 324 (1978).

Subsection (a) of this section does not apply directly to determine computation of period of time involved in a statute of limitation. Davis v. U.S. Fid. & Guar. Co., 119 Ga. App. 374, 167 S.E.2d 214 (1969).

Adoption of subsection (a) of this section by analogy, for application to statutes of limitation, is not warranted in view of case law holding that when the time prescribed for bringing an action is computed by years or months, Sundays are to be excluded. Davis v. U.S. Fid. & Guar. Co., 119 Ga. App. 374, 167 S.E.2d 214 (1969).

Subsection (a) of this section provides for computations of time applicable to proceedings after commencement of the action, and does not apply in determining time within which an action may be instituted, or when an action may be barred by a statute of limitation. Schaefer v. Mayor of Athens, 120 Ga. App. 301, 170 S.E.2d 339 (1969).

Service of uninsured motorist carrier within five business days after the date of filing of the complaint in an action for personal injuries related back to the date of filing as a matter of law for statute of limitation purposes. Williams v. Colonial Ins. Co., 199 Ga. App. 760, 406 S.E.2d 99 (1991).

Time prescribed by § 5-6-43 computed hereunder. — Subsection (a) of Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, §§ 5 and 6 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-6) applies to computation of time prescribed by Ga. L. 1968, p. 1072, § 6 (see now O.C.G.A. § 5-6-43), providing for transmittal of record to appellate court by trial court clerk within five days after filing of transcript of evidence. Zeeman Mfg. Co. v. L.R. Sams Co., 123 Ga. App. 99, 179 S.E.2d 552 (1970).

When Sunday is last day to file pleading. — When the last day for filing a petition for a writ of certiorari falls on a Sunday, the appellant has until Monday to file the petition. Salter v. City of Thomaston, 200 Ga. App. 536, 409 S.E.2d 88 (1991).

Period relating to insurance policy. — Ten-day notice period required for cancellation of an insurance policy is governed by O.C.G.A. § 1-3-1 for computation of time rather than by O.C.G.A.

§ 9-11-6. Southern Trust Ins. Co. v. First Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 168 Ga. App. 899, 310 S.E.2d 712 (1983).

Extension of Time

Subsections (b) and (d) provide flexibility in filing times. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(c), relating to affidavits in support of summary judgments, requires that only supporting material which is “on file” at least 30 days before the hearing shall be considered for the movant and subsections (b) and (d) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-6 provide flexibility by authorizing the trial judge, or the parties by stipulation, to extend the filing times. Porter Coatings v. Stein Steel & Supply Co., 247 Ga. 631, 278 S.E.2d 377 (1981).

Subsection (b) not applicable to periods of time fixed by other statutes. — Subsection (b) of this section does not apply to periods of time which are definitely fixed by statute, such as time for filing notice of appeal. Buckhead Doctors' Bldg., Inc. v. Oxford Fin. Cos., 116 Ga. App. 503, 157 S.E.2d 767 (1967).

Subsection (b) of this section applies only to an act required or allowed to be done by the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9), a notice given thereunder, or an order of the court, and does not apply to periods of time which are definitely fixed by other statutes. Wilson v. City of Waycross, 130 Ga. App. 253, 203 S.E.2d 301 (1973); Miller v. Georgia Real Estate Comm'n, 136 Ga. App. 718, 222 S.E.2d 183 (1975).

Granting of extensions of time, as permitted under certain circumstances by the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) does not apply to periods of time which are definitely fixed by other statutes. McClure v. Department of Transp., 140 Ga. App. 564, 231 S.E.2d 532 (1976).

Because the time for filing a petition for judicial appraisal is set by O.C.G.A. § 14-2-1330, subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-6 did not apply to permit a trial court to grant an extension of time before the commencement of such a legal action; thus, when a corporation failed to commence the proceeding within the statutory 60-day period, the court did not have subject matter jurisdiction to reach the merits of the petition. Riddle-Bradley, Inc. v. Riddle, 217 Ga. App. 725, 459 S.E.2d 576 (1995).

Response to discovery requests. — Extension of time to respond to plaintiff's motions for summary judgment, sanctions, and discovery requests was upheld because trial judges have broad discretion in controlling discovery and the appellate courts will not interfere with a trial court's exercise of that discretion in the absence of abuse. Butler v. Household Mortg. Servs., Inc., 244 Ga. App. 353, 535 S.E.2d 518 (2000).

Appeal from administrative agency not covered. — Subsection (b) of this section may not be utilized to obtain an extension which would allow the late filing of an appeal to the superior court from an administrative agency after extension of a specified time. Miller v. Georgia Real Estate Comm'n, 136 Ga. App. 718, 222 S.E.2d 183 (1975).

Judicial discretion to extend time. — Subsection (b) of this section gives the trial court wide discretionary authority to enlarge the time within which an act may be done, but the discretion to be exercised is a judicial discretion, not an unrestrained one. Jones v. Howard, 153 Ga. App. 137, 264 S.E.2d 587 (1980).

In a summary judgment action, while O.C.G.A. § 9-11-6(b) permitted late service of affidavits in support of a motion, in giving such permission, the trial court was not required to make a written finding of excusable neglect; accordingly, the court was not required to state the court's basis for finding excusable neglect. Green v. Bd. of Dirs. of Park Cliff Unit Owners Ass'n, 279 Ga. App. 567, 631 S.E.2d 769 (2006).

Trial court did not err in denying the motion for an extension of time to answer the complaint because the defendants agreed to a waiver of service yet still filed the answer late, the motion for an extension was made after the time for filing an answer had expired, and a judicial extension of the statutory time for filing the answer, in essence, would have allowed a circumvention of the default status of the action. Mecca Constr., Inc. v. Maestro Invs., LLC, 320 Ga. App. 34, 739 S.E.2d 51 (2013).

Failure to move to reopen within 30 days. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-6 is inapplicable when the plaintiffs did not move to reopen a case within 30 days of entry of the judgment and although the court had discretion to act on the motion, the case was no longer pending at the time the court acted on the motion. Gabel v. Revels, 203 Ga. App. 131, 416 S.E.2d 103 (1992).

Judgment obtained against a deceased defendant is void, and the trial court does not err in vacating the judgment, setting the judgment aside, and dismissing the action, when no party has been substituted since the suggestion of death and no reason has been shown that the failure to act was the result of excusable neglect so as to allow an extension of time. Franklin v. Collins, 167 Ga. App. 596, 307 S.E.2d 66 (1983).

In order to obtain enlargement of time within which to do an act, request for enlargement must be made before the expiration of the period originally prescribed, or as extended by previous order, and if such request is made after expiration of the period of time within which the act should have been done, there must be a showing of excusable neglect. Wall v. Citizens & S. Bank, 145 Ga. App. 76, 243 S.E.2d 271 (1978).

Private agreement between counsel to extend time to file pleadings is not binding on the court, except when a written stipulation by counsel is filed in the case. Minnesota Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Love, 120 Ga. App. 502, 171 S.E.2d 361 (1969); Peterson v. American Int'l Life Assurance Co., 203 Ga. App. 745, 417 S.E.2d 402, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 907, 417 S.E.2d 402 (1992).

Private agreement between counsel extending time to file pleadings is not binding except when in compliance with O.C.G.A. § 9-11-6 and the agreement is filed with the court. Ewing v. Johnston, 175 Ga. App. 760, 334 S.E.2d 703 (1985); Fadum v. Liakos, 186 Ga. App. 556, 367 S.E.2d 843, cert. denied, 186 Ga. App. 917, 367 S.E.2d 843 (1988).

Defendant was in default for failure to timely answer a complaint, even if there was an agreement to extend the time to answer during settlement negotiations, since the defendant failed to comply with the requirements of subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-6 for extending the time to answer. Roberson v. Gnann, 235 Ga. App. 112, 508 S.E.2d 480 (1998).

Burden of obtaining order or stipulation. — When counsel for the defendant knew that the time for filing defensive pleadings had expired, but believed that the plaintiff had agreed to extend the time for filing an answer, the burden was upon counsel to obtain the proper order or stipulation. Minnesota Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Love, 120 Ga. App. 502, 171 S.E.2d 361 (1969).

Extension of time to answer request for admissions. — Trial judge has authority under subsection (b) of Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, §§ 5 and 6 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-6) to grant an extension of time for filing answers to request for admissions of fact, if the request is within time allowed under Ga. L. 1972, p. 510, § 9 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-36(a)) for such filing, with or without motion; if such time has expired, there must be a motion to allow late filing. National Bank v. Great S. Bus. Enterprises, Inc., 130 Ga. App. 221, 202 S.E.2d 848 (1973).

While a trial judge has authority to grant extensions of time for filing a response after the time for answering a request for admissions has expired, there must be a motion to allow the late filing under subsection (b) of Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, §§ 5 and 6 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-6), or a motion for withdrawal of the admissions under Ga. L. 1972, p. 510, § 9 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-36(b)). Custom Farm Servs., Inc. v. Faulk, 130 Ga. App. 583, 203 S.E.2d 912 (1974).

Excusable neglect. — That defendant's original counsel was confused as to the rule in Georgia for filing an answer to a suit did not constitute excusable neglect as a matter of law. Barone v. McRae & Holloway, P.C., 179 Ga. App. 812, 348 S.E.2d 320 (1986).

"Press of business" does not constitute excusable neglect which would justify the untimely filing of defensive pleadings. Labat v. Bank of Coweta, 218 Ga. App. 187, 460 S.E.2d 831 (1995).

Pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-36(b), a trial court properly granted a bank a one-day extension to respond to a request to admit after the bank served the bank's response one day late because the trial court found excusable neglect based on the bank's counsel's mistaken belief that the opposing party's counsel had granted a one-day extension in which to respond. 131 Ralph McGill Blvd., LLC v. First Intercontinental Bank, 305 Ga. App. 493, 699 S.E.2d 823 (2010).

Error to deny motion to dismiss absent showing of excusable neglect.

— When there was no evidence from which the trial court could find excusable neglect as a matter of fact and, as a matter of law, the plaintiff's explanation that counsel was confused as to the law in Georgia regarding substitution of an executor of a decedent's estate in place of a deceased defendant did not constitute excusable neglect, the trial court abused the court's discretion in denying the executor's motion to dismiss the plaintiff's suit for failure to seek substitution of parties within the 180-day limitation period in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-25(a)(1). King v. Green, 189 Ga. App. 105, 375 S.E.2d 53, cert. denied, 189 Ga. App. 912, 375 S.E.2d 53 (1988).

Expiration of Term

As to background of subsection (c) of this section, see Union Circulation Co. v. Trust Co. Bank, 143 Ga. App. 715, 240 S.E.2d 100 (1977), rev'd on other grounds, 241 Ga. 343, 245 S.E.2d 297 (1978).

Amendment or revocation of interlocutory ruling. — Rule against amending or revoking a judgment after expiration of term in which the judgment was entered has no application to interlocutory rulings, so long as the case continues from term to term, until final judgment. Union Circulation Co. v. Trust Co. Bank, 143 Ga. App. 715, 240 S.E.2d 100 (1977), rev'd on other grounds, 241 Ga. 343, 245 S.E.2d 297 (1978).

Motions and Affidavits1. In General

Citation for contempt not covered by subsection (d). — Subsection (d) of this section applies to written motions in a pending case and has no application to a citation for contempt, which is an independent proceeding authorized by law. Gibson v. Gibson, 234 Ga. 528, 216 S.E.2d 824 (1975).

Purpose of subsection (d). — Purpose of subsection (d) of this section is to prevent a party from being surprised on the day of hearing by an affidavit that the party is not in a position to answer. Fairington, Inc. v. Yeargin Constr. Co., 144 Ga. App. 491, 241 S.E.2d 608 (1978); Bailey v. Dunn, 158 Ga. App. 347, 280 S.E.2d 388 (1981).

Purpose of subsection (d) of this section is to provide parties with sufficient notice to prepare a response to a motion, and a postponement granted by the trial court serves that purpose. Southwest Ga. Prod. Credit Ass'n v. Wainwright, 241 Ga. 355, 245 S.E.2d 306 (1978).

Opposing affidavits. — Right of the court to set another date for the hearing affects only the five-day rule which is found in the first sentence of subsection (d) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-6. The last sentence of the same subsection grants an opposing party the right to file opposing affidavits up to one day before the hearing. The court cannot deny an opposing party the party's statutory right to file opposing affidavits up to one day before the scheduled hearing. Operation Rescue v. City of Atlanta, 259 Ga. 676, 386 S.E.2d 126 (1989).

Time for objection to affidavit. — There is no requirement that the party moving for a summary judgment object to the opposing affidavits prior to the time when the affidavits will actually be considered, even when the affidavits were filed before the statutory deadline. Mitchell v. Haygood's Hauling & Grading, Inc., 194 Ga. App. 671, 391 S.E.2d 481 (1990).

Notice of hearing on motion. — Publication in an official county organ of notice of the date of hearing on a motion was not sufficient because notice of a hearing on a motion is required to be served. TMS Ins. Agency, Inc. v. Galloway, 205 Ga. App. 896, 424 S.E.2d 71 (1992); King v. Board of Regents, 215 Ga. App. 570, 451 S.E.2d 482 (1994); Edens v. O'Connor, 238 Ga. App. 252, 519 S.E.2d 691 (1999).

When a trial court indicated that the court sent a notice of a combined rescheduled hearing on a construction manager's motion for summary judgment and a hearing on the issue of unliquidated damages to a condominium owner, it was presumed that such notice was sent and received in compliance with O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-5(b) and 9-11-6(d), and the owner's mere contention that the owner did not receive notice of the hearing was not controlling and did not satisfy the owner's burden of showing that notice was in fact not received; accordingly, the owner's claim that the owner did not appear at the hearing because notice was insufficient lacked merit, due process was met, and the judgment entered from the hearing was affirmed. Blue Stone Lofts, LLC v. D'Amelio, 268 Ga. App. 355, 601 S.E.2d 719 (2004).

In a suit for breach of a promissory note and related guaranties, while the guarantors were not properly served with the rule nisi order setting the April 15, 2014 hearing, the guarantors learned of the hearing on April 10, 2014, and the lack of notice, thus, did not prevent the guarantors' counsel from preparing for or appearing at the April 15 hearing nor was there any evidence that the guarantors' were deprived of the guarantors' right under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-6(d) to serve affidavits opposing the motion as late. MJL Props. v. Cmty. & S. Bank, 330 Ga. App. 524, 768 S.E.2d 111 (2015).

Notice of trial. — Denial of motion to set aside a default judgment against a corporation was not an abuse of discretion as the trial was properly noticed by publication of the trial calendar in the county's legal gazette; publication of a court calendar in the county's legal organ of record was sufficient notice to the parties to appear. Migmar, Inc. v. Williams, 281 Ga. App. 870, 637 S.E.2d 471 (2006).

Insufficient evidence that parties properly served with notice of summary judgment hearing. — Summary judgment order was vacated because the record contained insufficient evidence upon which the court of appeals could base a decision; the record contained no rule nisi or other evidence indicating that the parties were properly served with notice of the summary judgment hearing date pursuant to O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-5(b) and 9-11-6(d), and there was no indication in the record that a transport company actually received notice, although the company's notice of appeal asked the trial court clerk to omit nothing from the record on appeal. Sprint Transp. Group, Inc. v. China Shipping NA Agency, Inc., 313 Ga. App. 454, 721 S.E.2d 659 (2011).

Motion for continuance may be heard ex parte under subsection (d) of this section. Piper v. Piper, 139 Ga. App. 19, 227 S.E.2d 842 (1976).

Subsection (d) provides a minimum of five days between service and hearing of any motion, unless a different period is fixed by order of court. Burger Chef Sys. v. Newton, 126 Ga. App. 636, 191 S.E.2d 479 (1972) (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-6).

Affidavit served on day of hearing. — Affidavit which shows on the affidavit's face that the affidavit was served on the day of the hearing cannot be considered as evidence on the hearing unless accompanied by something in the record, such as an order of court, showing that the court has exercised the court's discretion and allowed the affidavit to be served. Malone v. Ottinger, 118 Ga. App. 778, 165 S.E.2d 660 (1968).

Failure to give five-day notice required by subsection (d) of this section, absent order by the court, is fatal to intervention. Osteen v. GECC, 137 Ga. App. 546, 224 S.E.2d 453 (1976).

Five-day rule not absolute. — Five-day service rule of subsection (d) of this section is not a hard and fast one. Burger Chef Sys. v. Newton, 126 Ga. App. 636, 191 S.E.2d 479 (1972).

Affidavit served eight months before trial court's decision gave sufficient notice. — On a lessor's motion for summary judgment on a lease and guaranty, because neither party requested a hearing on the lessor's motion and no hearing was held, the 30-day period for filing the lessor's counsel's affidavit in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(c) did not apply. The requirement in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-6(d) that the affidavit be served with the motion was to ensure adequate notice; in this case, the affidavit was filed eight months prior to the trial court's decision. Triple T-Bar, LLC v. DDR Southeast Springfield,

Untimely filing of affidavits in response. — Married couple who brought a professional malpractice suit against a hospital authority and a physical therapist did not timely respond to renewed motions to dismiss, but waited almost a year to file the couple's response. Because the response was patently untimely under Ga. Unif. Super. Ct. R. 6.2 and without leave of court to be filed late, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion when the court struck the response as well as an expert's new affidavit under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-6(d). Cogland v. Hosp. Auth., 290 Ga. App. 73, 658 S.E.2d 769 (2008).

Consideration of untimely affidavits discretionary. — Court is vested with discretion whether to consider affidavits untimely served. Strickland v. DeKalb Hosp. Auth., 197 Ga. App. 63, 397 S.E.2d 576 (1990).

Although the trial court is vested with discretion to consider affidavits not timely filed, the refusal to exercise that discretion is not error. Trend-Pak of Atlanta, Inc. v. Arbor Commercial Div., Inc., 197 Ga. App. 137, 397 S.E.2d 592 (1990).

Showing of excusable neglect under statute not required in malpractice case. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1(e) expressly allowed the trial court, in the court's discretion, to extend the time for filing amendments to defective affidavits and granted the court the authority to consider an untimely filed amended or supplemental affidavit. Thus, in a medical malpractice case, the trial court erred by finding that in the absence of a showing of excusable neglect under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-6(b), the court had no discretion to allow a patient to file a late-filed amended affidavit. Schofill v. Phoebe Putney Health Sys., Inc., 315 Ga. App. 817, 728 S.E.2d 331 (2012).

Simultaneous filing requirement not absolute. — Requirement of simultaneous filing of motion and supporting affidavits is not absolute, but this section would, in a proper case authorize the trial court to extend the period for filing the movant's affidavits. Wall v. Citizens & S. Bank, 145 Ga. App. 76, 243 S.E.2d 271 (1978), overruled on other grounds, McKeever v. State, 189 Ga. App. 445, 375 S.E.2d 899 (1988).

Second affidavit properly considered. — In a breach of contract action between a business and an advertiser, while the best evidence rule required the advertiser to produce the first affidavit provided by the advertiser's senior director of business affairs, and the trial court erred in considering the first affidavit without requiring the affidavit's production, given that the second affidavit showed that the parties entered into the contract at issue, which included the forum selection clause, the trial court properly considered the affidavit to that effect to support the advertiser's motion to dismiss on personal jurisdiction grounds. Consequently, when this second affidavit was not filed in violation of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-6(d), the trial court properly considered the second affidavit. Alcatraz Media, LLC v. Yahoo! Inc., 290 Ga. App. 882, 660 S.E.2d 797 (2008).

Requirement of simultaneous filing in subsection (d) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-6 is not absolute, and the trial court is authorized to extend the period for filing the movant's affidavits. Riberglass, Inc. v. ECO Chem. Specialties, Inc., 194 Ga. App. 417, 390 S.E.2d 616 (1990).

Late affidavit improperly considered absent extension. — Trial court improperly considered a late affidavit which was not filed with a motion when there was nothing in the record to show that the movant requested an extension of time in which to serve and file the affidavit or a finding of excusable neglect in failing to serve the affidavit with the notice of the motion. Big Canoe Corp. v. Williamson, 168 Ga. App. 179, 308 S.E.2d 440 (1983).

Error to consider late-filed material in support of motion absent extension. — Since movant elected to rely on certain documentary evidence in support of the movant's motion for summary judgment but neither filed the motion 30 days prior to the hearing nor requested an enlargement of time within which to make such a filing, the trial court erred in considering this material in support of the motion for summary judgment. Benton Bros. Ford Co. v. Cotton States Mut. Ins. Co., 157 Ga. App. 448, 278 S.E.2d 40 (1981).

When notice of motion to intervene was personally served two days prior to confirmation hearing, the plaintiff's objection to such motion for lack of proper notice was well taken since the motion to intervene was not timely; such motion could not, in view of the objection, be taken up until a day subsequent to the confirmation hearing date. Greer v. Federal Land Bank, 158 Ga. App. 60, 279 S.E.2d 308 (1981).

Motion in limine. — Five-day service rule of subsection (d) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-6 is not applicable to motions in limine. Walton v. Datry, 185 Ga. App. 88, 363 S.E.2d 295, cert. denied, 185 Ga. App. 911, 363 S.E.2d 295 (1987).

Discretion to consider affidavits not timely filed. — While the trial court is vested with discretion to consider affidavits not timely filed, the refusal to exercise that discretion is not error. Empire Shoe Co. v. Nico Indus., Inc., 197 Ga. App. 411, 398 S.E.2d 440 (1990).

Trial court's denial of a buyer's request to amend a fee petition was not an abuse of discretion; the buyer failed to request to supplement the evidence at the fee petition hearing and only requested permission to submit additional affidavits after the petition was denied. Scoggins v. Kia Motors Am., Inc., 272 Ga. App. 495, 612 S.E.2d 823 (2005).

In a mandamus action wherein a principal sued a school superintendent seeking reinstatement to a former position, the trial court did not err by considering the principal's affidavit filed late in support of the principal's petition for mandamus, showing that the principal was earning less in an assignment as a math teacher because of a reduction in working hours, as it was within the trial court's discretion to consider opposing affidavits not served within statutory time limits. Hall v. Nelson, 282 Ga. 441, 651 S.E.2d 72 (2007).

Finding of excusable neglect did not constitute abuse of discretion. — When the trial court denied a motion by the defendants for permission to serve late responses to certain requests for admissions filed by the plaintiff and subsequently awarded summary judgment to the plaintiff based on the admissions created by the defendants' failure to respond to the requests in a timely manner, the defendants' only reason for the delay in submitting the responses being that the defendants had been without legal representation at the time the requests for admission were served upon the defendants, and had neither knowledge of the time limitation nor that the defendants' failure to respond would be considered an admission of the requests, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in concluding that this assertion failed to constitute a showing of excusable neglect. Haynes v. Hight, 190 Ga. App. 497, 379 S.E.2d 21 (1989).

2. Summary Judgment Proceedings

Purpose of section. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-6 ensures that the party against whom summary judgment is sought will be provided with a full and final opportunity to meet and attempt to controvert assertions against that party. Bailey v. Dunn, 158 Ga. App. 347, 280 S.E.2d 388 (1981).

Thirty-day pre-hearing time period implements due process. — Statutory requisite that, unless waived or extended, supporting material must be on file at least 30 days before a summary judgment hearing is an implementation of the fundamental principle of due process. Bonds v. John Wieland Homes, Inc., 177 Ga. App. 254, 339 S.E.2d 318 (1985).

Waiver of thirty-day pre-hearing time period. — Affidavit relied on in support of a motion for summary judgment must be on file for at least 30 days prior to the hearing. This strict requirement may be waived by the opposing party's acquiescence in the use of the untimely materials, or if the movant seeks and obtains an order from the trial court under subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-6 extending the time for filing. Gunter v. Hamilton Bank, 201 Ga. App. 379, 411 S.E.2d 115 (1991).

While trial judges may exercise judicial discretion to permit the late filing of affidavits, the party seeking to file affidavits late must make a motion and obtain an extension from the court pursuant to subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-6. Hershiser v. Yorkshire Condominium Ass'n, 201 Ga. App. 185, 410 S.E.2d 455 (1991); Pierce v. Wendy's Int'l, Inc., 233 Ga. App. 227, 504 S.E.2d 14 (1998).

Application of subsection (d) to affidavits supporting summary judgment motion. — Affidavits in support of a motion for summary judgment, not served in compliance with subsection (d) of this section, are not properly before the court considering such motion. Fairington, Inc. v. Yeargin Constr. Co., 144 Ga. App. 491, 241 S.E.2d 608 (1978).

Construction of subsection (d) and § 9-11-56 together in determining timeliness of affidavits. — In determining whether affidavits in support of a motion for summary judgment are properly before the court considering such motion, Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, §§ 5, 6 and 25 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-6(d) and 9-11-56(e)) must be read together. Jones v. Howard, 153 Ga. App. 137, 264 S.E.2d 587 (1980).

To determine whether affidavits in support of a motion for summary judgment are properly before the court considering the motion, O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-6 and 9-11-56 must be read together. Bailey v. Dunn, 158 Ga. App. 347, 280 S.E.2d 388 (1981); Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank v. Dorsey, 159 Ga. App. 784, 285 S.E.2d 242 (1981).

Service of affidavits with motion for summary judgment. — Provision of subsection (d) of this section that when a motion is supported by an affidavit, affidavit shall be served with the motion applies to affidavits in support of a motion for summary judgment. Wall v. Citizens & S. Bank, 145 Ga. App. 76, 243 S.E.2d 271 (1978), overruled on other grounds, McKeever v. State, 189 Ga. App. 445, 375 S.E.2d 899 (1988).

Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, §§ 5, 6 and 25 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-6(d) and 9-11-56(e)) require affidavits in support of a motion for summary judgment to be served with the motion, unless a movant seeks and obtains an extension from the court pursuant to subsection (b), and any such extension should also ensure that the party opposing the motion will have 30 days within which to respond. Jones v. Howard, 153 Ga. App. 137, 264 S.E.2d 587 (1980).

Trial court did not err in denying motions to strike the amended affidavits of a bank employee on the ground that the affidavits were not filed contemporaneously with the bank's motions for summary judgment because the trial court extended the time for filing the amended affidavits pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-6(d); the bank explained the bank's reasons for filing the amended affidavits. Shropshire v. Alostair Bank of Commerce, 314 Ga. App. 310, 724 S.E.2d 33 (2012).

Burden on movant to invoke court's discretion. — When affidavit made in support of summary judgment motion is not served with the motion, the burden is on the movant, not the opposing party, to invoke the trial court's discretion with regard to late filing, and an objection by the opposing party at a hearing instead of by motions is not a waiver of that objection. Jones v. Howard, 153 Ga. App. 137, 264 S.E.2d 587 (1980).

Failure to request extension or show excusable neglect. — When no request is made prior to making a motion for summary judgment for enlargement of the time to file and serve affidavits, nor a finding of excusable neglect in failing to serve the affidavits with notice of the motion for summary judgment, the movant for summary judgment has failed to proceed in a manner that would permit the trial court to exercise the court's discretion. Jones v. Howard, 153 Ga. App. 137, 264 S.E.2d 587 (1980).

Affidavits not timely served. — Even though subsection (d) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-6 and O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(c) require an opposing affidavit to be served at least one day prior to a summary judgment hearing, the trial court is vested with discretion to consider affidavits not so served. Liberty Nat'l Life Ins. Co. v. Houk, 248 Ga. 111, 281 S.E.2d 583 (1981).

Untimely secondary affidavit voided summary judgment. — Trial court improperly relied upon the defendant's second affidavit in granting the defendant's motion for summary judgment when the second affidavit, not filed in a timely fashion, contained new averments specifically relied upon by the trial court. Corry v. Robinson, 207 Ga. App. 167, 427 S.E.2d 507 (1993).

Differentiation between response to summary judgment motion and supporting affidavit not required. — In determining whether to strike an affidavit as untimely filed, the trial court is not required to differentiate between a response to a summary judgment and an affidavit filed in support of such a motion, as subsection (d) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-6 provides that opposing affidavits must be served no later than one day before the date of the hearing and O.C.G.A. § 9-11-5(d) provides that all papers served upon a party shall be filed with the court within the time allowed for service. Crucet v. Bovis, Kyle & Burch, 180 Ga. App. 765, 350 S.E.2d 322 (1986).

Dismissal of counter-affidavit proper when filing untimely. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in ruling that a counter-affidavit filed in opposition to a motion for summary judgment was untimely when counsel had notice of a hearing as originally scheduled for over a month prior to that hearing yet had not procured counter-affidavits to those filed by the movant, a week's continuance had been granted with counsel having been expressly advised that the summary judgment statute would be followed closely, and the counter-affidavit was not mailed nor otherwise served until the very day of the hearing as rescheduled. Saville v. Purvis, 172 Ga. App. 116, 322 S.E.2d 321 (1984).

Court need not consider motion supported by untimely affidavits. — Trial court's "failure to rule" on a motion to consider additional evidence in opposition to a grant of summary judgment is not error when the affidavits to be filed would be untimely. Splash Splash Waterslides, Inc. v. Cherokee Ins. Co., 167 Ga. App. 589, 307 S.E.2d 107 (1983).

Affidavits supplied before court's decision considered. — When the trial court made no decision at the summary judgment hearing but took the matter under advisement, and it was undisputed that the defendant supplied the supporting affidavits before the trial court's decision on the matter, the trial court was authorized to consider the evidence submitted by the defendant. Howell Mill/Collier Assocs. v. Gonzales, 186 Ga. App. 909, 368 S.E.2d 831 (1988).

Objection to the timeliness of an affidavit submitted in response to a motion for summary judgment will be deemed waived unless the objection is itself timely raised in the trial court. Pruitt v. Tyler, 181 Ga. App. 174, 351 S.E.2d 539 (1986).

Waiver for failure to object. — When the plaintiff failed to raise an objection below to the defendant's affidavit on the ground that the objection was not timely filed and served, the plaintiff's contentions in that regard will not be considered on appeal. Mahaffey v. First Nat'l Bank, 157 Ga. App. 844, 278 S.E.2d 729 (1981).

Any error arising from a failure to file timely an affidavit in support of a motion for summary judgment is waived by the adverse party's failure to object to the filing of the affidavit in question in the trial court. Southeastern Hose, Inc. v. Prudential Ins. Co. of Am., 167 Ga. App. 356, 306 S.E.2d 308 (1983).

Failure of a maker and guarantors to obtain rulings on their motions to strike the amended affidavits of a bank employee on the ground that the affidavits were not filed contemporaneously with the bank's motions for summary judgment resulted in a waiver of appellate review of the issue. Shropshire v. Alostair Bank of Commerce, 314 Ga. App. 310, 724 S.E.2d 33 (2012).

Mere reference to local court rules is not sufficient notice. — Subsection (d) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-6, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56, and the spirit of the summary judgment procedure contemplate that the respondent shall have actual notice of a day upon which the matter will be heard and judgment rendered upon the record then existing. A mere reference to the local court rules sent by the attorney does not give such actual notice and opportunity to be heard. Ferguson v. Miller, 160 Ga. App. 436, 287 S.E.2d 363 (1981).

Discretion as to late affidavits. — Strict requirement that affidavits in support of motions for summary judgment shall be served with the motion is not absolute, but trial judges may exercise judicial discretion to permit the late filing of affidavits. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank v. Dorsey, 159 Ga. App. 784, 285 S.E.2d 242 (1981).

Record must show court allowed late filing. — Affidavit made in opposition to motion for summary judgment not served at least one day before the hearing is barred by the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) from consideration as evidence unless the record discloses the trial court, in the exercise of the court's discretion, has allowed the affidavit to be served and considered. Talley v. City Tank Corp., 158 Ga. App. 130, 279 S.E.2d 264 (1981); Brown v. Rowe, 178 Ga. App. 575, 344 S.E.2d 245 (1986).

On a motion for summary judgment in a wrongful death against an adult care home, the trial court erred in disregarding supplemental briefing by the parties; the trial court authorized the supplemental briefing itself and the opposing party had not objected. Blake v. KES, Inc., 329 Ga. App. 742, 766 S.E.2d 138 (2014).

Court's error in conducting hearing in absence of proper service of notice of the hearing, on the motion for summary judgment, on plaintiff was not harmless since the plaintiff was deprived of the plaintiff's statutory right to file opposing affidavits up to one day before the hearing. Goodwin v. Richmond, 182 Ga. App. 745, 356 S.E.2d 888 (1987).

Failure to give notice of hearing. — In a personal injury case, the trial court erred in granting partial summary judgment to the property owner because the court conducted a hearing on the motion for summary judgment despite the court's failure to give written notice to the parties of the hearing date as required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-6(d). Cofield v. Halpern Enters., 316 Ga. App. 582, 730 S.E.2d 63 (2012).

Response to motion for summary judgment filed on date of hearing is timely, notwithstanding the language in subsection (d) of this section requiring all papers after the complaint to be filed within the time allowed for service. Gross v. Pyrofax Gas Corp., 151 Ga. App. 130, 259 S.E.2d 137 (1979); Martin v. Newman, 162 Ga. App. 725, 293 S.E.2d 18 (1982).

Time for service of affidavits opposing summary judgment. — Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, §§ 5, 6 and 25 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-6(d) and 9-11-56(c)) should be read together so as to vest in the court discretion to permit opposing affidavits to a motion for summary judgment to be served at some other time than that provided in Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 25 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56). Sasser & Co. v. Griffin, 133 Ga. App. 83, 210 S.E.2d 34 (1974).

Generally, affidavits must be served on the opposing parties, and affidavits made in opposition to a motion for summary judgment not served at least one day before the hearing are barred. Johnson v. Aetna Fin., Inc., 139 Ga. App. 452, 228 S.E.2d 299 (1976).

Party opposing motion for summary judgment has until the day prior to the hearing to serve opposing affidavits, unless the trial court in the court's discretion permits the affidavits to be served at a later date. Gross v. Pyrofax Gas Corp., 151 Ga. App. 130, 259 S.E.2d 137 (1979).

Trial court, in the court's discretion, can consider affidavit filed on day of the hearing. Leagan v. Levine, 158 Ga. App. 293, 279 S.E.2d 741 (1981).

Trial court's decision to consider affidavits not reversed absent abuse of discretion. — Affidavit made in opposition to a motion for summary judgment should, under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(c) and subsection (d) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-6, be served on the opposite party at least one day prior to hearing the motion; the court has discretion to consider affidavits not so filed, however, and the court's ruling on this issue will not be reversed unless there is an abuse of discretion. Liberty Nat'l Life Ins. Co. v. Houk, 157 Ga. App. 540, 278 S.E.2d 120, aff'd, 248 Ga. 111, 281 S.E.2d 583 (1981).

Trial court cannot exercise the court's discretion under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-6 if no request is made for an extension of time within which to file and serve affidavits prior to making a motion for summary judgment, and there is no finding of excusable neglect in failing to serve the affidavits with notice of the motion for summary judgment. Bailey v. Dunn, 158 Ga. App. 347, 280 S.E.2d 388 (1981).

Late-filed affidavit in opposition. — Affidavit made in opposition to a motion for summary judgment may be admitted without objection, the time of service may be waived, or the court may for some other reason find it in the interest of justice to consider the evidence. Liberty Nat'l Life Ins. Co. v. Houk, 157 Ga. App. 540, 278 S.E.2d 120, aff'd, 248 Ga. 111, 281 S.E.2d 583 (1981).

Borrowers received sufficient notice under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-6(d) of a summary judgment hearing because the borrowers' counsel received notice of a hearing on a lender's summary judgment motion in January 2005 and the summary judgment hearing was held on March 3, 2005. Hawk v. DaimlerChrysler Servs. N. Am., LLC, 275 Ga. App. 712, 621 S.E.2d 828 (2005).

When timely response to motion filed, oral argument erroneously denied. — Because the responding party timely responded to a summary judgment motion, pursuant to Ga. Unif. Super. Ct. R. 6.3, given the appellate court's construction of both O.C.G.A. §§ 1-3-1 and 9-11-6, the trial court erred in denying that party oral argument on the motion and in granting summary judgment to the movant. Green v. Raw Deal, Inc., 290 Ga. App. 464, 659 S.E.2d 856 (2008).

Additional Time after Mailing

Rationale underlying subsection (e) of this section is to insure that a party is not unduly burdened by uncertainty of postal delivery. Akins v. Magbee Bros. Lumber & Supply Co., 152 Ga. App. 904, 264 S.E.2d 334 (1980).

When three-day rule replaced by "rule of reason." — When and only when notice is effectuated by regular mail, and statutes prescribe that another method will satisfy the notice requirement, three-day extension gives way to a "rule of reason" for which there is no sound argument to the contrary; however, when transmittal by ordinary mail is the prescribed method of giving notice, and statutes specify that such mailing (not certified or registered) will satisfy notice requirement, the fact that the legislature specified that such mailing alone is sufficient to satisfy the notice requirement is a sound argument to the contrary. Favors v. Travelers Ins. Co., 150 Ga. App. 741, 258 S.E.2d 554 (1979); DeLoach v. Georgia Firemen's Pension Fund, 213 Ga. App. 202, 444 S.E.2d 137 (1994).

Subsection (e) of Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, §§ 5 and 6 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-6) is not applicable to computations under former Code 1933, § 20-506 (see now O.C.G.A. § 13-1-11), relating to enforcement of obligations to pay attorney's fees on notes, etc. Calvert Fire Ins. Co. v. Environs Dev. Corp., 601 F.2d 851 (5th Cir. 1979).

Three-day rule applied. — Order granting summary judgment on the 32nd day after filing and service of a motion for summary judgment was premature, when the plaintiff had served the defendants with notice via regular mail and therefore had 33 days from the date of mailing to respond to the motion. Pyramid Constr. Co. v. Star Mfg. Co., 195 Ga. App. 644, 394 S.E.2d 598 (1990).

When a habeas corpus petitioner cross-appealed the trial court's decision after the warden appealed it, the petitioner's cross-appeal was timely because it was filed within the 15 days allowed by O.C.G.A. § 5-6-38(a) plus the 3-day extension provided in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-6(e), as the warden's notice of appeal was mailed to the petitioner. Head v. Thomason, 276 Ga. 434, 578 S.E.2d 426, cert. denied, 540 U.S. 957, 124 S. Ct. 409, 157 L. Ed. 2d 294 (2003).

Because a party served the party's requests for admissions by mail, three days were added to the prescribed thirty-day response period pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-6(e). Patel v. Columbia Nat'l Ins. Co., 315 Ga. App. 877, 729 S.E.2d 35 (2012).

9-11-7. Pleadings allowed; form of motions.

(a) Pleadings. There shall be a complaint and an answer; a third-party complaint, if a person who is not an original party is summoned under Code Section 9-11-14; and a third-party answer, if a third-party complaint is served. There may be a reply to a counterclaim denominated as such and an answer to a cross-claim, if the answer contains a cross-claim. No other pleading shall be allowed, except that the court may order a reply to an answer or a third-party answer.

(b) Motions and other papers.

(1) An application to the court for an order shall be by motion which, unless made during a hearing or trial, shall be made in writing, shall state with particularity the grounds therefor, and shall set forth the relief or order sought. The requirement of writing is fulfilled if the motion is stated in a written notice of the hearing of the motion.

(2) The rules applicable to captions, signing, and other matters of form of pleadings apply to all motions and other papers provided for by this chapter.

(c) Demurrers, pleas, etc., abolished. Demurrers, pleas, and exceptions for insufficiency of a pleading shall not be used. (Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 7; Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 7.)

Pleadings

Response to defense raised in answer. — Plaintiff is not required to plead estoppel by replication to defeat the defense raised by the defendant in an answer. Harris v. First Nat'l Bank, 163 Ga. App. 49, 292 S.E.2d 725 (1982).

No responsive pleadings are required to an amendment. Grand Lodge, I.O.O.F. v. City of Thomasville, 226 Ga. 4, 172 S.E.2d 612 (1970).

Answer to amended complaint not required. — Construing the pertinent provisions of O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-7, 9-11-8, 9-11-12, 9-11-15, and 9-11-21 in pari materia, it is clear that the Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9, authorizes the addition of parties, by order of the court, and that an “amended complaint” effecting such an addition does not require a responsive pleading, unless the trial court orders a reply thereto. Chan v. W-East Trading Corp., 199 Ga. App. 76, 403 S.E.2d 840 (1991); Hamelberg v. National Ass'n of Gov't Employees, 221 Ga. App. 337, 471 S.E.2d 283 (1996); Random Access, Inc. v. Atlanta Datacom, Inc., 232 Ga. App. 269, 501 S.E.2d 610 (1998).

Amendment of admissions not a pleading. — Response to requests for admission is not a pleading as pleadings are defined as seven specific filings, including a complaint and an answer and case law distinguishes an amendment of a complaint from the withdrawal or amendment of admissions, which are governed by different statutory procedures and schemes. Brougham Casket & Vault Co., LLC v. DeLoach, 323 Ga. App. 701, 747 S.E.2d 707 (2013).

Deposition allowed after case is already in default is not generally considered a pleading. Hazzard v. Phillips, 249 Ga. 24, 287 S.E.2d 191 (1982).

Motions and Other Papers

Unreported calendar call does not constitute a “hearing or trial” in which oral motions to strike or dismiss can be received and considered. Woods v. State, 243 Ga. App. 195, 532 S.E.2d 747 (2000).

Application for contempt is a motion. — Since an application for contempt does not come within the definition of a pleading, it is necessarily a motion as defined in subsection (b) of this section. Hines v. Hines, 237 Ga. 755, 229 S.E.2d 744 (1976); Fields v. Fields, 240 Ga. 173, 240 S.E.2d 58 (1977).

Contempt action to enforce court-ordered child support payments is an independent proceeding that is ancillary to the divorce action and is not a new civil action requiring 30-days notice of hearing. Brown v. King, 266 Ga. 890, 472 S.E.2d 65 (1996).

Application for contempt was motion as defined in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-7(b) and was not a pleading. Black v. Mealor, 268 Ga. App. 612, 602 S.E.2d 325 (2004).

Probate court contempt motion under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-7(b) was not subject to the requirement of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52 for a probate court to make findings of fact; and, even if it was, the ousted executor did not request such findings in advance of the hearing. Black v. Mealor, 268 Ga. App. 612, 602 S.E.2d 325 (2004).

Application for order for preliminary hearing may be made by motion.

Howland v. Weeks, 133 Ga. App. 843, 212 S.E.2d 487 (1975).

Findings and conclusions not required for motions. — Provisions of Ga. L. 1970, p. 170, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52) which require findings of fact and conclusions of law by the trial court are not applicable to motions. Hines v. Hines, 237 Ga. 755, 229 S.E.2d 744 (1976); Fields v. Fields, 240 Ga. 173, 240 S.E.2d 58 (1977); Lupo v. Long, 145 Ga. App. 876, 245 S.E.2d 73 (1978).

Motion for summary judgment may be made orally at hearing for temporary relief. Royston v. Royston, 236 Ga. 648, 225 S.E.2d 41 (1976).

Oral motion may not raise insufficiency of process or service. — Defense of insufficiency of process or service does not come within the scope of this section allowing oral motions at trial or hearing. Petroleum Carrier Corp. v. Jones, 127 Ga. App. 676, 194 S.E.2d 670 (1972) (see O.C.G.A. § 9-11-7).

Motion opposing motion not authorized. — There is no provision for motion opposing a motion, and a motion to dismiss a motion is unauthorized, though not expressly prohibited, the same purpose being accomplished by opposing the motion; hence, the court did not err in overruling a motion to dismiss the defendants' "motion to quash service, etc." Howland v. Weeks, 133 Ga. App. 843, 212 S.E.2d 487 (1975).

Civil action for damages not commenced by contempt application. — Application for contempt may not, standing alone, serve to commence a civil action for damages as it is not a complaint. Opatut v. Guest Pond Club, Inc., 254 Ga. 258, 327 S.E.2d 487 (1985).

Oral motion to dismiss made during hearing before the answer was filed effectively presents the matter to the trial court. Newport Timber Corp. v. Floyd, 247 Ga. 535, 277 S.E.2d 646 (1981).

Effect of default judgment. — Defendants were not precluded by operation of a default judgment against the defendants from arguing that no claim existed that would allow the plaintiff any recovery. Spears v. Mack & Bernstein, P.C., 227 Ga. App. 743, 490 S.E.2d 463 (1997).

Demand for jury trial on damages issue. — Upon a review of the evidence before the trial court, because neither of an individual's filed documents amounted to a "pleading" which placed damages in issue, neither document was in the nature of a formal answer, and neither actually disputed the amount of damages claimed, the trial court did not err in denying the individual a jury trial on the issue of damages; hence, the appeals court noted that to avoid doubt and confusion in the future, a defendant desiring a jury trial should file an answer specifically contesting damages and a demand for jury trial on the issue of damages, both clearly labeled as such. Diaz v. Wills, 286 Ga. App. 357, 649 S.E.2d 353 (2007).

Closure of hearing. — Motion for closure of a hearing to the public or press must be in writing, be served upon the opposing party, be filed with the clerk of the court, and be posted on the case docket for at least one 24 hour period in advance of the time when the motion will be heard. R.W. Page Corp. v. Lumpkin, 249 Ga. 576, 292 S.E.2d 815 (1982).

Post-verdict oral request converted request for fees in counterclaim to motion. — In a civil suit involving the title of real property, a trial court erred by denying the prevailing parties' oral post-verdict request for an award of attorney fees under O.C.G.A. § 9-15-14(a) as such oral request converted the original request made in a counterclaim to a motion, and the opposing party had the opportunity to be heard and argue against the award. Nesbit v. Nesbit, 295 Ga. App. 763, 673 S.E.2d 272 (2009).

Failure to move to dismiss in custody case. — Although the defendants argued that the trial court in a custody case erred in failing to dismiss the action based on collateral estoppel, abatement, res judicata, and forum non conveniens, the record did not reflect that the defendants moved to dismiss the action based on these doctrines. Wiepert v. Stover, 298 Ga. App. 683, 680 S.E.2d 707 (2009), overruled on other grounds, Artson, LLC v. Hudson, 322 Ga. App. 859, 747 S.E.2d 68 (2013) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28).

Abolishment of Demurrers, etc.

Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) abolished demurrers in Abolishment of Demurrers,

civil cases. Bramblett v. State, 239 Ga. 336, 236 S.E.2d 580 (1977), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 1013, 98 S. Ct. 728, 54 L. Ed. 2d 757 (1978).

Construal of demurrer as motion to dismiss. — Court may regard general demurrer for failure to state a cause of action as a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim for which relief may be granted, and when sufficiency of the complaint is thus questioned, this chapter requires that it be construed in the light most favorable to the plaintiff, with all doubts resolved in the plaintiff's favor even though unfavorable constructions are possible, so that not unless allegations of the complaint disclose with certainty that the plaintiff would not be entitled to relief under any state of provable facts should the complaint be dismissed. Ghitter v. Edge, 118 Ga. App. 750, 165 S.E.2d 598 (1968).

Attach on venue by motion not precluded. — Subsection (c) of this section does not prevent an attack on the pleading by motion pointing out alleged insufficiency of venue in the pleading. Williamson v. Perret's Farms, Inc., 128 Ga. App. 687, 197 S.E.2d 754 (1973).

9-11-7.1. Redacted information; exceptions and filings under seal; correction; protective orders; waivers.

(a) Redacted filings. Except as provided in subsections (b) and (c) of this Code section or unless the court orders otherwise, a filing with the court that contains a social security number, taxpayer identification number, financial account number, or birth date shall include only:

- (1) The last four digits of a social security number;
- (2) The last four digits of a taxpayer identification number;
- (3) The last four digits of a financial account number; and
- (4) The year of an individual's birth.

(b) Garnishment. A summons of garnishment that is filed with a court shall only include the last four digits of the defendant's social security number, taxpayer identification number, or financial account number; provided, however, that the plaintiff shall provide the defendant's full social security number, taxpayer identification number, or financial account number, if reasonably available to the plaintiff, on the copies of the summons of garnishment served on the garnishee and defendant.

(c) Exemptions from redaction requirement. Subsection (a) of this Code section shall not apply to the following:

- (1) A financial account number that identifies property allegedly subject to forfeiture in a civil forfeiture proceeding;
- (2) The official record of an administrative or agency proceeding;
- (3) The official record of a court or tribunal in another case or proceeding;
- (4) A filing made in a probate court; and
- (5) A filing made under seal as provided in subsection (d) of this Code section.

(d) Filings made under seal. The court may order that a filing be made under seal without redaction. The court may later unseal the filing or order the filer to file a redacted version for the public record. A filer may petition the court to file an unredacted filing under seal. The court shall retain all filings made under seal as part of the record.

(e) Correction of unredacted information. An inadvertent failure to redact information which is required to be redacted shall be a curable defect and shall not preclude a document from being filed with the court. The court may order an unredacted filing be sealed and may also order that a redacted version of the same filing be filed for the public record.

(f) Protective orders. For good cause, the court may:

- (1) Order a filing which contains additional personal or confidential information, other than the information required to be redacted pursuant to this Code section, be sealed and may also order that a redacted version of the same filing be filed for the public record; and

(2) Limit or prohibit a nonparty's remote electronic access to a document filed with the court.

(g) Option for reference list. A filing that contains redacted information may be filed together with a reference list that identifies each item of redacted information and specifies an appropriate identifier that uniquely corresponds to each item listed. Such reference list shall be filed under seal and may be amended as of right. Any reference in a civil action to a listed identifier shall be construed to refer to the corresponding item of information.

(h) Waiver of protected identifiers. A filer waives the protections provided by subsection (a) of this Code section to the extent that he or she makes his or her own filing without redaction and not under seal. (Code 1981, § 9-11-7.1, enacted by Ga. L. 2014, p. 482, § 2/SB 386.)

Effective date. — This Code section became effective July 1, 2014.

Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 2014, p. 482, § 10/SB 386, not codified by the General Assembly, provides, in part, that this Code section shall apply to any filings made on or after July 1, 2014.

9-11-8. General rules of pleading.

(a) Claims for relief.

(1) “Action for medical malpractice” defined. As used in this Code section, the term “action for medical malpractice” means any claim for damages resulting from the death of or injury to any person arising out of:

(A) Health, medical, dental, or surgical service, diagnosis, prescription, treatment, or care rendered by a person authorized by law to perform such services or by any person acting under the supervision and control of a lawfully authorized person; or

(B) Care or service rendered by any public or private hospital, nursing home, clinic, hospital authority, facility, or institution, or by any officer, agent, or employee thereof acting within the scope of his employment.

(2) Form of complaint, generally; action for malpractice. An original complaint shall contain facts upon which the court's venue depends; and any pleading which sets forth a claim for relief, whether an original claim, counterclaim, a cross-claim, or a third-party claim, shall contain:

(A) A short and plain statement of the claims showing that the pleader is entitled to relief; and

(B) A demand for judgment for the relief to which the pleader deems himself entitled; provided, however, that in actions for medical malpractice, as defined in this Code section, in which a claim for unliquidated damages is made for $10,000.00 or less, the pleadings shall contain a demand for judgment in a sum certain; and, in actions for medical malpractice in which a claim for unliquidated damages is made for a sum exceeding $10,000.00, the demand for judgment shall state that the pleader “demands judgment in excess of $10,000.00,” and no further monetary amount shall be stated.

Relief in the alternative or of several different types may be demanded.

(3) Sanctions. If the provisions of subparagraph (B) of paragraph (2) of this subsection are violated, the court in which the action is pending shall, upon a proper motion, strike the improper portion of the demand for judgment and may impose such other sanctions, including disciplinary action against the attorney, found in Code Section 9-11-37 as are appropriate.

(b) Defenses; form of denials. A party shall state in short and plain terms his defenses to each claim asserted and shall admit or deny the averments upon which the adverse party relies. If he is without knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the truth of an averment, he shall so state, and this has the effect of a denial. Denials shall fairly meet the substance of the averments denied. When a pleader intends in good faith to deny only a part or a qualification of an averment, he shall specify so much of it as is true and material and shall deny only the remainder. Unless the pleader intends in good faith to controvert all the averments of the preceding pleading, he may make his denials as specific denials of designated averments or paragraphs, or he may generally deny all the averments except such designated averments or paragraphs as he expressly admits; but, when he does so intend to controvert all its averments, he may do so by general denial subject to the obligations set forth in Code Section 9-11-11.

(c) Affirmative defenses. In pleading to a preceding pleading, a party shall set forth affirmatively accord and satisfaction, arbitration and award, discharge in bankruptcy, duress, estoppel, failure of consideration, fraud, illegality, injury by fellow servant, laches, license, payment, release, res judicata, statute of frauds, statute of limitations, and waiver. When a party has mistakenly designated a defense as a counterclaim or a counterclaim as a defense, the court on terms, if justice so requires, shall treat the pleadings as if there had been a proper designation.

(d) Effect of failure to deny. Averments in a pleading to which a responsive pleading is required, other than those as to the amount of damage, are admitted when not denied in the responsive pleading.

Averments in a pleading to which no responsive pleading is required or permitted shall be taken as denied or avoided.

(e) Pleading to be concise and direct; alternative statements.

(1) Each averment of a pleading shall be simple, concise, and direct. No technical forms of pleading or motions are required.

(2) A party may set forth two or more statements of a claim or defense alternatively or hypothetically, either in one count or defense or in separate counts or defenses. When two or more statements are made in the alternative and one of them, if made independently, would be sufficient, the pleading is not made insufficient by the insufficiency of one or more of the alternative statements. A party may also state as many separate claims or defenses as he has, regardless of consistency and whether based on legal or on equitable grounds or on both. All statements shall be made subject to the obligations set forth in Code Section 9-11-11.

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code 1933, §§ 81-101, 81-105, and Ch. 3, T. 81 are included in the annotations for this Code section.

Bills in equity are unknown to Georgia practice since the Uniform Procedure Act of 1887, Ga. L. 1887, p. 64. Sengstacke v. American Missionary Ass'n, 196 Ga. 539, 26 S.E.2d 891 (1943) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-101).

Judicial notice. — Pleadings contradicting anything which must be judicially noticed are nugatory. South Am. Managers, Inc. v. Reeves, 220 Ga. 493, 140 S.E.2d 201 (1965).

Maxim res ipsa loquitur has no application to pleadings; it is only a rule of evidence. Chapman v. Phillips, 112 Ga. App. 434, 145 S.E.2d 663 (1965) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-101).

Constitutionality of questions. — In order to raise a question as to the constitutionality of a law, at least three things must be shown: (1) statute or particular part or parts thereof being challenged must be stated or pointed out with fair precision; (2) provision of the Constitution which it is claimed has been violated must be clearly designated; and (3) it must be shown wherein the statute, or designated part thereof, violates such constitutional provision. DeKalb County v. Post Properties, Inc., 245 Ga. 214, 263 S.E.2d 905 (1980).

Construction with other statutes. — In an action for damages, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-8(a)(2)(B), part of the Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9, requires a written demand in the complaint for the damages requested; thus, if a court were to interpret O.C.G.A. § 44-14-3(c) as permitting a demand for liquidated damages to be made in the complaint, the section would have no real meaning because the Civil Practice Act already imposes such a requirement. Accordingly, if § 44-14-3(c) is to serve any real purpose, it must be construed as a requirement that a grantor make a written demand on the grantee for the liquidated damages as a condition precedent to creating the liability that serves as the basis for a lawsuit. SunTrust Bank v. Hightower, 291 Ga. App. 62, 660 S.E.2d 745 (2008).

O.C.G.A. § 9-10-112 is not "faulty" for conflicting with O.C.G.A. § 9-11-8(b). — O.C.G.A. § 9-10-112, as the more specific statute, prevails over § 9-11-8(b). Baylis v. Daryani, 294 Ga. App. 729, 669 S.E.2d 674 (2008).

Municipal ordinance need not be specifically pled. — There is no requirement that municipal ordinances be specifically pled as a prerequisite to the ordinance's admission in evidence. Morgan v. Reeves, 226 Ga. 697, 177 S.E.2d 68 (1970).

Party to action is bound by material allegations in the party's pleadings, so long as they remain in the party's pleadings, and the opposite party may rely upon an admission as having established the fact alleged in the opposing party's favor, no proof thereof being needed. Martin v. Pierce, 140 Ga. App. 897, 232 S.E.2d 170 (1977).

Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9, which permits alternative pleadings does not change the rule of evidence that a party is bound by the party's judicial admissions. Ditch v. Royal Indem. Co., 205 Ga. App. 478, 422 S.E.2d 868, cert. denied, 205 Ga. App. 899, 422 S.E.2d 868 (1992).

Answer required from all parties named in complaint. — When an answer was filed in the name of only one of four separate entities named as the defendants in the action, the other three defendants could not benefit from the answer and, having filed no answer of their own, were in default. McCombs v. Southern Regional Medical Ctr., Inc., 233 Ga. App. 676, 504 S.E.2d 747 (1998).

No waiver of sovereign immunity. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-8 does not constitute a statutory waiver of immunity for suits in negligence against the state. James v. Richmond County Health Dep't, 168 Ga.

App. 416, 309 S.E.2d 411 (1983).

Solemn admissions in judicio as made in pleadings are conclusive against the party making the admissions, unless formally withdrawn from the pleadings, and a party to a suit will not be allowed to disprove an admission made in the party's pleadings, unless it has been withdrawn from the record; the opposite party may rely upon the admission as having established the fact alleged in the opposing party's favor, and no proof thereof is needed. Puppy Love Kennel, Inc. v. Norton, 158 Ga. App. 69, 279 S.E.2d 312 (1981).

Admissions in judicio proper. — Note and guaranty became admissions in judicio and plaintiffs were entitled to rely upon admissions contained in the answer that the copies were identified and authentic and the admittance by the trial court was proper. NationsBank v. Tucker, 231 Ga. App. 622, 500 S.E.2d 378 (1998).

Trial court may hear attack on judgment. — When the trial court orders entry of a settlement amount and dismisses a case with prejudice and the plaintiff files a motion for new trial and a motion to set aside, contending that the plaintiff did not agree to the settlement and that the plaintiff's attorney was without authority to compromise, the trial court does not err in hearing this attack on the judgment; the matter is still in the breast of the trial court and the proceedings toll the time for appeal. Sunn v. Mercury Marine, 166 Ga. App. 567, 305 S.E.2d 6 (1983).

No default judgment for failure to file defensive pleadings in appeal from property evaluation. — Appeal procedure outlined in O.C.G.A. § 48-5-311(f) does not contemplate the filing of a "complaint" or "answer," and a default judgment will not lie for failure to file defensive pleadings in a de novo hearing on appeal in the superior court from a property evaluation. Rogers v. DeKalb County Bd. of Tax Assessors, 247 Ga. 726, 279 S.E.2d 223 (1981).

No judgment on pleadings based on answer only. — In an action to recover under a payment bond filed by a supplier, because the pleadings did not show that the supplier was unable to establish a defect in the notice of commencement, and a general contractor averred in the contractor's first affirmative defense that the contractor had filed a notice of commencement with the Clerk of the Superior Court of Fulton County and had posted the notice of commencement at the project site, such an averment had to be considered to be denied by the supplier for purposes of a motion for judgment on the pleadings. Consol. Pipe & Supply Co. v. Genoa Constr. Servs., Inc., 279 Ga. App. 894, 633 S.E.2d 59 (2006).

Purpose and Construction of Pleadings

General principles. — In applying the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 9, T. 11) to consideration of pleadings, the following principles are applicable: (1) pleadings shall be construed to do substantial justice, that is, shall be liberally construed in favor of the pleader; (2) plaintiff need not allege a cause of action, but only sufficient facts to place the defendant on notice of the claim against the defendant; and (3) the complaint should not be dismissed for insufficiency unless it appears to a certainty that the plaintiff is entitled to no relief under any state of facts which could be proved in support of the claim. Herring v. R.L. Mathis Certified Dairy Co., 118 Ga. App. 132, 162 S.E.2d 863 (1968), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 225 Ga. 67, 166 S.E.2d 89 (1969).

Purpose is fair and just settlement. — Pleadings are intended to serve as means of arriving at fair and just settlements of controversies between litigants; pleadings should not raise barriers which prevent the achievement of that end. Roberts v. Farmer, 127 Ga. App. 237, 193 S.E.2d 216 (1972); Cotton v. Federal Land Bank, 246 Ga. 188, 269 S.E.2d 422 (1980).

Purpose of pleadings to give notice. — Under the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9), issues are no longer formed by pleadings, and the pleadings serve only the purpose of giving notice to the opposite party of the general nature of the contentions of the pleader. DeKalb County v. Georgia Paperstock Co., 226 Ga. 369, 174 S.E.2d 884 (1970).

Because a couple's complaint premised on an erroneous listing in a telephone directory failed to allege any of the claims they sought to pursue, specifically, interfering with their right of quiet enjoyment of their property and nuisance, and even after giving the couple the benefit of all reasonable inferences that could be drawn from their complaint, the fact remained that the directory's publisher was not placed on reasonable notice of whether the couple was asserting a claim in equity, contract, or tort, much less whether the couple were pleading a particular tort such as negligence or libel, the complaint was properly dismissed as failing to state a claim upon which relief could be granted. Patrick v. Verizon Directories Corp., 284 Ga. App. 123, 643 S.E.2d 251 (2007).

This section contemplates practice of notice pleading. Whitworth v. Whitworth, 233 Ga. 53, 210 S.E.2d 9 (1974).

Issue pleading eliminated. — Issue pleading has been eliminated and notice pleading was substituted. Bourn v. Herring, 225 Ga. 67, 166 S.E.2d 89 (1969), appeal dismissed sub nom., Herring v. R.L. Mathis Certified Dairy Co., 400 U.S. 922, 91 S. Ct. 192, 27 L. Ed. 2d 183 (1970); Stevens v. Stevens, 227 Ga. 410, 181 S.E.2d 34 (1971); Garrett v. Garrett, 231 Ga. 754, 204 S.E.2d 140 (1974).

Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) does away with "issue pleading" and substitutes "notice pleading." Hunter v. A-1 Bonding Serv., Inc., 118 Ga. App. 498, 164 S.E.2d 246 (1968); Sheppard v. Yara Eng'g Corp., 248 Ga. 147, 281 S.E.2d 586 (1981).

Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) abolished "issue pleading," substituted in lieu thereof "notice pleading," and directs that all pleadings be so construed as to do substantial justice. Dillingham v. Doctors Clinic, 236 Ga. 302, 223 S.E.2d 625 (1976); Leitzke v. Leitzke, 239 Ga. 17, 235 S.E.2d 500 (1977).

Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) abolished "issue pleading," substituted in lieu thereof "notice pleading," authorized pleading of conclusions, and directed that all pleadings be construed so as to do substantial justice. Nee v. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co., 142 Ga. App. 744, 236 S.E.2d 880 (1977).

Issues are not made and pointed up by pleading, but by discovery, on pretrial and in the pretrial order, on motions for summary judgment, or other available techniques, and by the evidence itself, unless in instances when some matter is required to be specially pled. Hunter v. A-1 Bonding Serv., Inc., 118 Ga. App. 498, 164 S.E.2d 246 (1968).

Notice pleading applicable to both plaintiffs and defendants. — Liberal rules of notice pleading are to be applied to the defendants as well as the plaintiffs. McDonough Constr. Co. v. McLendon Elec.

Co., 242 Ga. 510, 250 S.E.2d 424 (1978).

Setoff is a cross action, and must be pled with as much certainty and definiteness as a declaration in any suit of law. Morris v. International Agric. Corp., 53 Ga. App. 517, 186 S.E. 583 (1936) (decided under former Code 1933, §§ 81-101 and 81-105); City Stores Co. v. Henderson, 116 Ga. App. 114, 156 S.E.2d 818 (1967) (decided under former Code 1933, §§ 81-101 and 81-105).

General allegations in pleadings sufficient. — Under the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9), general allegations are sufficient to support the plaintiff's claim for relief, and in most cases the same liberal rule will apply to the defendant's pleadings. Davis v. Metzger, 119 Ga. App. 750, 168 S.E.2d 866 (1969).

Although a claim against the defendant, as the executrix of an estate, was not explicitly set forth in the plaintiff's complaint, it could be reasonably construed under the liberal pleading requirements of the Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9. Dwyer v. McCoy, 236 Ga. App. 326, 512 S.E.2d 70 (1999).

Conclusions may be pled. — While conclusions may not generally be used in affidavits to support or oppose summary judgment motions, conclusions may generally be pled. Guthrie v. Monumental Properties, Inc., 141 Ga. App. 21, 232 S.E.2d 369 (1977).

No technical forms of pleadings or motions are required under the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9). Mayer v. Interstate Fire Ins. Co., 243 Ga. 436, 254 S.E.2d 825 (1979).

Decisions not made on niceties of pleadings. — Subsection (f) of Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 8 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-8), along with Ga. L. 1972, p. 689, § 6 (see O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15), requires that decisions be made on the merits, and not upon the niceties of pleadings. Owens v. Cobb County, 230 Ga. 707, 198 S.E.2d 846 (1973).

Substance, rather than nomenclature, of legal pleadings determines their nature. Cotton v. Federal Land Bank, 246 Ga. 188, 269 S.E.2d 422 (1980).

Pleadings not judged by name. — No matter by what name a pleading is called, nature of the action is determined by substance. Deen v. State, 216 Ga. 387, 116 S.E.2d 595 (1960) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-101).

"Title" applied to pleadings is not binding on court; pleading is judged by the pleading's contents, not by the pleading's name. Bank of Cumming v. Moseley, 243 Ga. 858, 257 S.E.2d 278 (1979).

Court treats pleadings as if there had been a proper designation when justice requires. Gwinnett Com. Bank v. Flake, 151 Ga. App. 578, 260 S.E.2d 523 (1979).

Single misstep in pleading not irrevocable. — Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) does not penalize a party irrevocably for one misstep in pleading. McDonough Constr. Co. v. McLendon Elec. Co., 242 Ga. 510, 250 S.E.2d 424 (1978).

All pleadings shall be so construed as to do substantial justice. McGravey v. Board of Zoning Appeals, 243 Ga. 714, 256 S.E.2d 781 (1979).

Pleadings construed in light most favorable to pleader. — It is no longer appropriate to construe pleadings against the pleader; pleadings should be construed in the light most favorable to the pleader, with all doubts resolved in the pleader's favor, even though unfavorable constructions are possible. DeKalb County v. Georgia Paperstock Co., 226 Ga. 369, 174 S.E.2d 884 (1970).

Pleading requirements of the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) are to be construed liberally and in favor of the pleader, in furtherance of basic premise behind the Act to substitute "notice pleading" for "issue pleading." Cotton v. Federal Land Bank, 246 Ga. 188, 269 S.E.2d 422 (1980).

Construction of complaint in plaintiff's favor. — Complaint should be construed in the light most favorable to the plaintiff, with all doubts resolved in the plaintiff's favor; the plaintiff is entitled to the most favorable inferences that can reasonably be drawn from the complaint, even if contrary inferences are also possible. Reiner v. David's Super Mkt., Inc., 118 Ga. App. 10, 162 S.E.2d 298 (1968); Hodges v. Youmans, 120 Ga. App. 805, 172 S.E.2d 431 (1969).

Purpose and Construction of Pleadings (Cont'd)

Complaints should be construed in the light most favorable to the pleader with all doubts resolved in the pleader's favor, even though unfavorable constructions are possible. Richter v. D. & M. Assocs., 228 Ga. 599, 187 S.E.2d 253 (1972).

Under the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9), when the sufficiency of the complaint is questioned the complaint must be construed in the light most favorable to the plaintiff. Massey v. Perkerson, 129 Ga. App. 895, 201 S.E.2d 830 (1973).

Complaint is to be construed in the light most favorable to the plaintiff, and all inferences that can be reasonably drawn are to be construed in the plaintiff's favor. City of Rome v. Turk, 235 Ga. 223, 219 S.E.2d 97 (1975).

Pleadings will be construed to serve the best interests of the pleader. Rodgers v. Georgia Tech Athletic Ass'n, 166 Ga. App. 156, 303 S.E.2d 467 (1983).

Complaint is no longer to be construed most strongly against the pleader. Residential Devs., Inc. v. Mann, 225 Ga. 393, 169 S.E.2d 305 (1969); Hodges v. Youmans, 120 Ga. App. 805, 172 S.E.2d 431 (1969); Mitchell v. Dickey, 226 Ga. 218, 173 S.E.2d 695 (1970); Gill v. Myrick, 228 Ga. 253, 185 S.E.2d 72 (1971); Johnson v. Wormsloe Found., Inc., 228 Ga. 722, 187 S.E.2d 682 (1972); Oliver v. Irvin, 230 Ga. 248, 196 S.E.2d 429 (1973); Almaroad v. Giles, 230 Ga. 473, 197 S.E.2d 706 (1973).

Defensive pleadings should be liberally construed in favor of the pleader. Wellbaum v. Murphy, 122 Ga. App. 654, 178 S.E.2d 690 (1970).

When the claim is a traditionally disfavored cause of action, such as malicious prosecution, libel, and slander, the complaint is construed by a somewhat stricter standard. Jacobs v. Shaw, 219 Ga. App. 425, 465 S.E.2d 460 (1995); Willis v. United Family Life Ins., 226 Ga. App. 661, 487 S.E.2d 376 (1997).

Civil rule of construction applicable to criminal cases. — Rule in civil practice that "all pleadings shall be so construed as to do substantial justice" should be no less applicable in a criminal case, especially one involving the death penalty. Birt v. State, 256 Ga. 483, 350 S.E.2d 241 (1986).

Claim sustainable by proof should not be dismissed. — If complaint gives notice of any claim which plaintiff may have against the defendant that may be sustained by proper proof, the complaint should not be dismissed. Hunter v. A-1 Bonding Serv., Inc., 118 Ga. App. 498, 164 S.E.2d 246 (1968).

Unless it appears to a certainty that the plaintiff would be entitled to no relief under any state of facts which could be proved in support of the plaintiff's claim, the complaint should not be dismissed. Richter v. D. & M. Assocs., 228 Ga. 599, 187 S.E.2d 253 (1972).

Party dismissed only when no set of facts supports claim. — Under the Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9, a party should not be dismissed for failure to state a claim against such party unless it appears beyond doubt that the plaintiff can prove no set of facts in support of the plaintiff's claim which would entitle the plaintiff to relief against that party. Sheppard v. Yara Eng'g Corp., 248 Ga. 147, 281 S.E.2d 586 (1981).

Opportunity to amend defective pleadings. — Under the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9), a party is to be given notice and an opportunity to amend defective pleadings when such notice will facilitate a decision on the merits. McDonough Constr. Co. v. McLendon Elec. Co., 242 Ga. 510, 250 S.E.2d 424 (1978).

Judgment to be specific. — While "notice pleading" may cover a multitude of sins, the judgment must be specific enough for the individual without inside knowledge to understand it, especially when the judgment is to be a muniment of title. Sease v. Singleton, 246 Ga. 278, 271 S.E.2d 187 (1980).

Litigation with government not to be decided on technicalities. — People's right to litigate with governmental bodies should not be decided on technicalities any more than one citizen's right to litigate with another citizen. City of Atlanta v. International Soc'y for Krishna Consciousness of Atlanta, Inc., 240 Ga. 96, 239 S.E.2d 515 (1977).

Affidavit requirement exception to liberal rules of general pleading. — Provision that a complaint is subject to dismissal for failure to state a claim for relief if the requisite affidavit is not filed contemporaneously with the complaint constitutes an exception to the general liberality of pleading permitted under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-8. Redmond v. Shook, 218 Ga. App. 477, 462 S.E.2d 172 (1995).

Allegations were sufficient to state a cause of action for breach of contract and raise the inference that the recruitment fee was included in the corporation's debt to the staffing company as the complaint specifically referenced a contract that contained a requirement for a corporation to pay a recruitment fee, and further referenced the numerous requests and demands that a staffing company made to the corporation in the corporation's attempts to collect unpaid bills under the contract. Hope Elec. Enters. v. Proforce Staffing, Inc., 268 Ga. App. 302, 601 S.E.2d 723 (2004).

Buyer had set forth proper counterclaims, under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-8(a)(2) and (f), since the buyer's amended, recast and consolidated answer and counterclaim alleged that all of the alleged acts were done by individuals as agents of the corporate defendant, and that all the claims were asserted jointly and severally against all of the defendants. Raza v. Swiss Supply Direct, Inc., 256 Ga. App. 175, 568 S.E.2d 102 (2002).

Shotgun pleading. — Trial court erred in granting the defendants' motions to dismiss the plaintiffs' complaint for failure to state a claim upon which relief could be granted and for judgment on the pleadings because the trial court should have required the plaintiffs to amend the plaintiffs' complaint and provide a more definite statement of the plaintiffs' claims before passing upon the motions; the amended complaint was a "shotgun pleading" because the complaint was not a short and plain statement of the claims that the plaintiffs asserted as required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-8(a)(2)(A) of the Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9, the complaint did not give the defendants fair notice of the nature of the claims, and the complaint did not conform to several of the specific pleading requirements of the Act, specifically O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-8, 9-11-9, and 9-11-10. Bush v. Bank of N.Y. Mellon, 313 Ga. App. 84, 720 S.E.2d 370 (2011).

Form of Complaint

1. In General

Complaint must give defendant notice of claim in sufficiently clear terms to enable the defendant to frame a responsive pleading. Hodges v. Youmans, 120 Ga. App. 805, 172 S.E.2d 431 (1969).

Short, plain statement giving defendant fair notice required. — "Short and plain statement of the claim showing that pleader is entitled to relief" is generally regarded as satisfied by short and plain statement of the claim that will give the defendant fair notice of what the plaintiff's claim is and grounds upon which the claim rests. Martin v. Martin, 118 Ga. App. 192, 163 S.E.2d 254 (1968).

All that is required as to a claim is a short, plain statement showing the pleader is entitled to relief and a demand for judgment for the relief to which the plaintiff deems to be entitled. Martin v. Approved Bancredit Corp., 224 Ga. 550, 163 S.E.2d 885 (1968), overruled on other grounds, Cochran v. McCollum, 233 Ga. 104, 210 S.E.2d 13 (1974).

Subsection (a) of this section only requires a short and plain statement of the claim that will give the defendant fair notice of what the plaintiff's claim is and grounds upon which the claim rests. White v. Augusta Motel Hotel Inv. Co., 119 Ga. App. 351, 167 S.E.2d 161 (1969).

Requiring the plaintiff to make a more definite statement of the plaintiff's claim saves judicial resources and permits the trial court, when a sufficiently more definite statement has been pled, to determine whether the complaint states a claim by applying the usual standards for the legal adequacy of a complaint; although the Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9, does not expressly authorize a court to order a more definite statement in the absence of a motion, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(e), there is no reason that a court cannot do so as an exercise of the court's inherent powers to manage the court's docket and to compel compliance with the rules and requirements of civil procedure. Bush v. Bank of N.Y. Mellon, 313 Ga. App. 84, 720 S.E.2d 370 (2011).

When a trial court orders a plaintiff to make a more definite statement of his or her claims, the court should identify the ways in which the complaint fails to conform to the pleading requirements of the Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9, and the court also should warn the plaintiff about the potential consequences of a failure to replead in a way that conforms to these requirements; if the court still cannot ascertain the nature of the claims that the plaintiff seeks to assert, the court may enter another order to replead again, but the trial court and the defendants need not become caught in an endless cycle of attempts to replead, and if it appears that a plaintiff is unable or unwilling to plead in conformance to the Civil Practice Act and the directions of the court, the court may be authorized in some cases to dismiss the complaint under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41(b), not for a failure to state a claim, but for disregard of the rules and orders of the court. Bush v. Bank of N.Y. Mellon, 313 Ga. App. 84, 720 S.E.2d 370 (2011).

Plaintiffs' complaint recited allegations sufficient to satisfy Georgia's notice pleading standard because it was sufficient that the plaintiffs alleged that the defendants released toxic chemicals that damaged the plaintiffs' property; each defendant was on notice that the plaintiffs brought eight causes of action against the defendant, and that was all that Georgia law required. Collins v. King Am. Finishing, Inc., No. 612-077, 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 161493 (S.D. Ga. Nov. 9, 2012).

Number of assertable causes of action not limited because complaint contains one count. Medoc Corp. v. Keel, 166 Ga. App. 615, 305 S.E.2d 134 (1983).

Brief, plain statement and demand for relief sufficient. — Brief, plain statement of the claim for which relief is sought, coupled with a demand for such relief, is sufficient to state a claim for relief under subsection (a) of this section. Fowler v. Fowler, 231 Ga. 572, 203 S.E.2d 235 (1974); Ledford v. Meyer, 249 Ga. 407, 290 S.E.2d 908 (1982).

Complaint need not set forth cause of action, but need only set forth claim for relief. Mitchell v. Dickey, 226 Ga. 218, 173 S.E.2d 695 (1970); Gill v. Myrick, 228 Ga. 253, 185 S.E.2d 72 (1971); Seaboard Coast Line R.R. v. Dockery, 135 Ga. App. 540, 218 S.E.2d 263 (1975).

No longer must a cause of action be alleged in a pleading. Johnson v. Wormsloe Found., Inc., 228 Ga. 722, 187 S.E.2d 682 (1972).

With adoption of the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9), a complaint is not required to set forth a cause of action, but need only set forth a claim for relief. Oliver v. Irvin, 230 Ga. 248, 196 S.E.2d 429 (1973); Almaroad v. Giles, 230 Ga. 473, 197 S.E.2d 706 (1973).

Complaint must give the defendant notice of a claim in sufficiently clear terms to enable the defendant to frame a responsive pleading, but it need only state a claim, and need not allege facts sufficient to set forth a cause of action. Bazemore v. Burnet, 117 Ga. App. 849, 161 S.E.2d 924 (1968).

Complaint does not have to allege facts sufficient to set forth a cause of action. Hodges v. Youmans, 120 Ga. App. 805, 172 S.E.2d 431 (1969); Richter v. D. & M. Assocs., 228 Ga. 599, 187 S.E.2d 253 (1972).

Although it need not set forth a cause of action, a complaint must set forth a claim for relief. Hogan v. Peters, 181 Ga. App. 670, 353 S.E.2d 601 (1987).

It is not necessary that a complaint be perfect in form or set out all of the issues with particularity, it is necessary only to place the defendant on notice of the claim against the defendant. Walton v. James & Dean, Inc., 177 Ga. App. 77, 338 S.E.2d 516 (1985).

Complaint alleging breach of contract sufficient. — Defendant's third-party complaint which alleged that a third-party defendant was the city's engineering firm, that the firm had inspected the sewer and drainage systems as part of the firm's contractual obligation to the city, and that the firm had breached the firm's duties and obligations to the city by failing to determine improper construction or design of the systems, coupled with the submission of a copy of the contract in opposition to the motion for summary judgment constituted sufficient notice of a breach of contract allegation. City of Acworth v. John J. Harte Assocs., 165 Ga. App. 438, 301 S.E.2d 499 (1983).

Trial court erred in granting the defendant's motion to dismiss the plaintiff's claim for breach of contract because the allegations that the defendant demanded and received from the plaintiff an additional $3,850 for license and trophy fees in connection with the purchase of the safari arguably showed the flow of consideration directly from the plaintiff to the defendant for goods and services which the defendant failed to provide creating a third party beneficiary right for the plaintiff. Wright v. Waterberg Big Game Hunting Lodge Otjahewita (Pty), Ltd., 330 Ga. App. 508, 767 S.E.2d 513 (2014).

Mere misnomer of a party in the pleadings is a defect which may be waived when the misnamed party is in fact the legally cognizable proper party in interest. Block v. Voyager Life Ins. Co., 251 Ga. 162, 303 S.E.2d 742 (1983).

Dismissal for failure to comply with order for more specific pleading affirmed. — Graham v. Development Specialists, Inc., 180 Ga. App. 758, 350 S.E.2d 294 (1986).

All elements of cause need not be stated. — Complaint should not be dismissed for insufficiency unless it appears to a certainty that the plaintiff is entitled to no relief under any state of facts which could be proved in support of the claim. Poole v. City of Atlanta, 117 Ga. App. 432, 160 S.E.2d 874 (1968).

Under the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9), it is not necessary that the petition state all the elements of the cause of action. General Tel. Co. v. Pritchett, 119 Ga. App. 53, 165 S.E.2d 918 (1969); Nipper v. Crisp County, 120 Ga. App. 583, 171 S.E.2d 652 (1969).

Motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim should not be granted unless it appears to a certainty that the plaintiff would be entitled to no relief under any state of facts which could be proved in support of the plaintiff's claim. Residential Devs., Inc. v. Mann, 225 Ga. 393, 169 S.E.2d 305 (1969); Stevens v. Stevens, 227 Ga. 410, 181 S.E.2d 34 (1971); Gill v. Myrick, 228 Ga. 253, 185 S.E.2d 72 (1971).

Complaint is not subject to dismissal unless allegations disclose with certainty that the plaintiff would not be entitled to relief under any state of facts which could be proved in support of the plaintiff's claim. Tench v. Ivie, 121 Ga. App. 114, 173 S.E.2d 237 (1970).

If, within framework of complaint, evidence may be introduced which will sustain grant of relief to plaintiff, the complaint is sufficient. Hunter v. A-1 Bonding Serv., Inc., 118 Ga. App. 498, 164 S.E.2d 246 (1968); White v. Augusta Motel Hotel Inv. Co., 119 Ga. App. 351, 167 S.E.2d 161 (1969); Stevens v. Stevens, 227 Ga. 410, 181 S.E.2d 34 (1971); Gill v. Myrick, 228 Ga. 253, 185 S.E.2d 72 (1971); Richter v. D. & M. Assocs., 228 Ga. 599, 187 S.E.2d 253 (1972); Oliver v. Irvin, 230 Ga. 248, 196 S.E.2d 429 (1973); Almaroad v. Giles, 230 Ga. 473, 197 S.E.2d 706 (1973); Seaboard Coast Line R.R. v. Dockery, 135 Ga. App. 540, 218 S.E.2d 263 (1975).

If complaint shows claim on which relief, either legal or equitable, may be granted, the complaint is not subject to dismissal. Brittain v. Camp, 228 Ga. 808, 188 S.E.2d 494 (1972).

Fact that plaintiff has an adequate remedy at law is not a good ground of a motion to dismiss a complaint seeking both legal and equitable relief. Brittain v. Camp, 228 Ga. 808, 188 S.E.2d 494 (1972).

Failure to allege lack of adequate remedy at law is not fatal error. Golston v. Garigan, 245 Ga. 450, 265 S.E.2d 590 (1980).

Unless it appears beyond doubt that the plaintiff can prove no set of facts in support of the plaintiff's claim which would entitle the plaintiff to relief, the pleading should not be dismissed for a failure to state a claim. American S. Ins. Co. v. Kirkland, 118 Ga. App. 170, 162 S.E.2d 862 (1968); Byrd v. Ford Motor Co., 118 Ga. App. 333, 163 S.E.2d 327 (1968); Satcher v. James H. Drew Shows, Inc., 122

Ga. App. 548, 177 S.E.2d 846 (1970); Dillingham v. Doctors Clinic, 236 Ga. 302, 223 S.E.2d 625 (1976); Leitzke v. Leitzke, 239 Ga. 17, 235 S.E.2d 500 (1977); Nee v. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co., 142 Ga. App. 744, 236 S.E.2d 880 (1977).

Distinction between facts and conclusions immaterial. — Under notice system of pleading, ancient distinction between pleading “facts” and “conclusions” is no longer significant; the question is simply whether there is a short and plain statement of the claim. Hodges v. Youmans, 120 Ga. App. 805, 172 S.E.2d 431 (1969).

Under notice theory of pleading, it is immaterial whether the pleading states “conclusions” or “facts,” as long as fair notice is given and the statement of the claim is short and plain. Guthrie v. Monumental Properties, Inc., 141 Ga. App. 21, 232 S.E.2d 369 (1977).

True test is whether the pleading gives fair notice and states elements of the claim plainly and succinctly, and not whether as an abstract matter the pleading states “conclusions” or “facts.” Guthrie v. Monumental Properties, Inc., 141 Ga. App. 21, 232 S.E.2d 369 (1977).

It is immaterial whether an allegation is one of fact or conclusion if the complaint effectively states a claim for relief. Guthrie v. Monumental Properties, Inc., 141 Ga. App. 21, 232 S.E.2d 369 (1977).

There are no prohibitions against pleading conclusions and, if pled, the conclusion may be considered in determining whether the complaint sufficiently states a claim for relief. Guthrie v. Monumental Properties, Inc., 141 Ga. App. 21, 232 S.E.2d 369 (1977).

Prayer for process not necessary. — Ga. L. 1972, p. 689, §§ 1-3 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4) and Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 8 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-8) eliminated the necessity of prayer for process. Hunt v. Denby, 128 Ga. App. 523, 197 S.E.2d 489 (1973).

Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) contains no requirement that prayer for process be included in complaint as a prerequisite to valid service of process. Matthews v. Fayette County, 233 Ga. 220, 210 S.E.2d 758 (1974).

Prayer for relief is not an allegation in the complaint which requires an answer and is not part of the plaintiffs’ cause of action. Holloman v. D.R. Horton, Inc., 241 Ga. App. 141, 524 S.E.2d 790 (1999).

Because any pleading which sets forth a claim for relief shall contain a demand for judgment for the relief to which the pleader deems oneself entitled, a general prayer for other relief does not operate to avoid mootness when there was no specific prayer for damages. Babies Right Start v. Ga. Dep’t of Pub. Health, 293 Ga. 553, 748 S.E.2d 404 (2013).

It is not necessary to pray specifically for general or nominal damages in order to present question for the jury as to nominal damages. Bradley v. Godwin, 152 Ga. App. 782, 264 S.E.2d 262 (1979).

Absence of general allegation of negligence not fatal. — Petition which sets out facts upon which is made a claim of injury and consequent damages is sufficient to meet the requirements of notice pleading, even if there is no allegation that any or all of the facts alleged amounted to acts of negligence on the defendant’s part, when the facts alleged are sufficient in themselves to support an allegation of negligence; absence of a general allegation of negligence will not subject the petition to dismissal for failing to state a claim upon which relief can be granted. Beaver v. Southern Greyhound Lines, 120 Ga. App. 576, 171 S.E.2d 658 (1969).

Lack of claims by plaintiff in body of complaint was typographical error. — Since the defendant contended that, although a non-diverse corporation was listed in the caption of the complaint, it had not in fact brought any claims against the defendant because the body of the complaint referenced only the corporation’s sole owner, the complaint did state claims for relief by the corporation, in light of the inclusion of the corporation in the caption, the explanation that the reference to the owner was a typographical error, the obvious intent of the plaintiffs to bring claims on behalf of the corporation, and the absence of prejudice to the defendant. Campbell v. Quixtar, Inc., No. 2:08-CV-0045-RWS, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 46507 (N.D. Ga. June 13, 2008).

Plaintiff is no longer required to plead applicable foreign law in order to state a cause of action. Old Hickory Prods. Co. v. Hickory Specialties, Inc., 366 F. Supp. 913 (N.D. Ga. 1973).

Failure to allege license is not fatal to broker's action for commission. Maxwell v. Tucker, 118 Ga. App. 695, 165 S.E.2d 459 (1968).

When complaint alleges terms of insurance policy and facts upon which the plaintiff relies for relief sought, it places the defendant fairly on notice of its claim, even though the policy is not attached to the complaint. Finney v. Pan-Am. Fire & Cas. Co., 123 Ga. App. 250, 180 S.E.2d 253 (1971).

Counterclaim on same footing as original claim. — Insofar as general rules of pleading are concerned, a counterclaim stands upon the same footing as the original claim. Grant v. Fourth Nat'l Bank, 229 Ga. 855, 194 S.E.2d 913 (1972).

Complaint in third-party tort action is adequate if sufficient facts are alleged which upon proper proof would allow recovery by the third-party plaintiff from the third-party defendant under applicable substantive tort law when the subject matter is the same as that involved in the original action. Koppers Co. v. Parks, 120 Ga. App. 551, 171 S.E.2d 639 (1969).

Complaint in action for fraud, praying for refund of purchase price with interest, punitive damages, attorney fees, expenses of litigation and general relief, sets forth a claim for relief. Mewall Properties & Loan Corp. v. Cutten, 233 Ga. 291, 210 S.E.2d 819 (1974).

Petition sufficient to state negligence action. — When an indigent prisoner filed suit alleging that after the prisoners' fall on a wet floor, the prisoner was left unattended in the prison infirmary for over 14 hours until the prisoner was transported to another medical center for surgery to repair a broken leg, asserted that prison officials were negligent, requested damages for the prisoner's residual pain and disabilities, requested a jury trial, and filed the requisite pauper's affidavit and proceeded in forma pauperis, the petition was more than sufficient to set forth a cause of action as it is only necessary that the defendants be placed on notice of the claim against the defendants. Gonzalez v. Zant, 199 Ga. App. 13, 403 S.E.2d 880 (1991).

It is possible for a litigant to plead oneself out of court by revealing state of facts which affirmatively shows that there is no liability on the defendant. Hodge v. Dixon, 119 Ga. App. 397, 167 S.E.2d 377 (1969).

Complaint showing defendant's nonliability subject to dismissal. — When a complaint reveals facts which affirmatively show that there is no liability on the defendant, the complaint is subject to dismissal. Hatcher v. Moree, 133 Ga. App. 14, 209 S.E.2d 708 (1974).

Dismissal of complaint when clearly without merit. — Complaint may be dismissed on motion if clearly without any merit, which may consist of an absence of law to support a claim of the sort made or of facts sufficient to make a good claim, or in the disclosure of some fact which will necessarily defeat the claim. Poole v. City of Atlanta, 117 Ga. App. 432, 160 S.E.2d 874 (1968).

Discretion of court to strike complaint when not in accord with chapter. — If complaint is not a "short and plain statement of the claim," it is within the trial judge's discretion whether the judge will strike the complaint, granting leave to replead in accordance with the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9). Bulloch County Hosp. Auth. v. Fowler, 124 Ga. App. 242, 183 S.E.2d 586 (1971), overruled on other grounds, Gilson v. Mitchell, 131 Ga. App. 321, 205 S.E.2d 421 (1974).

Jack Jones pleading forms (Ga. L. 1847, p. 490) were not repealed by the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) and are still proper methods of pleading. Airport Assocs. v. Audioptric Instructional Devices, Inc., 125 Ga. App. 325, 187 S.E.2d 567 (1972).

"Jack Jones Forms" which were enacted into law in 1847 may continue to be used as the forms meet the requirement of giving "a short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief". Hunt v. Denby, 128 Ga. App.

2. Venue

Rules as to pleading venue were not changed by enactment of the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9). Martin v. Approved Bancredit Corp., 224 Ga. 550, 163 S.E.2d 885 (1968), overruled on other grounds, Cochran v. McCollum, 233 Ga. 104, 210 S.E.2d 13 (1974); Buchan v. Duke, 153 Ga. App. 310, 265 S.E.2d 308 (1980).

Facts. — Statute requires that facts on which court's venue depends be pled. Chancey v. Hancock, 225 Ga. 715, 171 S.E.2d 302 (1969).

Subsection (a) of this section requires that original complaint contain facts upon which court's venue depends. Reid v. Albright, 142 Ga. App. 826, 237 S.E.2d 229 (1977).

Bare allegation of residence generally sufficient. — In most cases, bare allegation of the defendant's residence within the county will suffice. Aiken v. Bynum, 128 Ga. App. 212, 196 S.E.2d 180 (1973); Atchinson v. Haley, 132 Ga. App. 264, 208 S.E.2d 22 (1974); Reid v. Albright, 142 Ga. App. 826, 237 S.E.2d 229 (1977).

Complaint which fails to show facts establishing venue is subject to dismissal. Chancey v. Hancock, 225 Ga. 715, 171 S.E.2d 302 (1969).

When a complaint does not set forth facts upon which the court's venue depends, as required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-8, the complaint is subject to dismissal. Jones v. Woods, 158 Ga. App. 391, 280 S.E.2d 418 (1981).

Failure to plead venue waived unless asserted by responsive pleading.

— Although O.C.G.A. § 9-11-8 requires that a complaint filed pursuant to the Georgia Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9, must set forth the facts on which venue is predicated, a failure to plead such facts is generally held to be waived unless asserted by responsive pleading. G & H Constr. Co. v. Daniels Flooring Co., 173 Ga. App. 181, 325 S.E.2d 773 (1984).

Third-party complaint which does not contain facts upon which court's venue depends is insufficient as a matter of law. Cantrell v. Coleman Co., 140 Ga. App. 344, 231 S.E.2d 123 (1976).

Complaint improperly dismissed for improper venue. — Trial court erred in dismissing a corporation's complaint for improper venue as the corporation was not bound to fail in the corporation's rescission claim under any provable set of facts because the corporation alleged that a predecessor and an Illinois entity engaged in a fraudulent course of conduct including: (1) the inducement of an unconscionable lease for defective telephone equipment; and (2) the assignment of that lease to the Illinois entity. SRH, Inc. v. IFC Credit Corp., 275 Ga. App. 18, 619 S.E.2d 744 (2005).

Defenses and Denials, Generally

Answer to amended complaint not required. — Construing the pertinent provisions of O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-7, 9-11-8, 9-11-12, 9-11-15, and 9-11-21 in pari materia, it is clear that the Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9, authorizes the addition of parties, by order of the court, and that an "amended complaint" effecting such an addition does not require a responsive pleading, unless the trial court orders a reply thereto. Chan v. W-East Trading Corp., 199 Ga. App. 76, 403 S.E.2d 840, cert. denied, 199 Ga. App. 905, 403 S.E.2d 840 (1991).

Allegations of an amended complaint were deemed denied by operation of law, and because the holding in Division 1 of Teamsters Local 515 v. Roadbuilders, Inc. of Tennessee, 249 Ga. 418, 420, 291 S.E.2d 698 (Ga. 1982), and its progeny, e.g., Wilson Welding Service v. Partee, 234 Ga. App. 619, 620, 507 S.E.2d 168 (Ga. Ct. App. 1998), conflicted with that rule of law, they were overruled; a trial court erred in holding that a defendant was required to answer an amended complaint to avoid a default and in defaulting a defendant upon a failure to answer an amended complaint. Shields v. Gish, 280 Ga. 556, 629 S.E.2d 244 (2006).

Answer primarily vehicle for denial. — Answer, both under present and former law, is primarily a vehicle for denial. Knickerbocker Tax Sys. v. Texaco, Inc., 130 Ga. App. 383, 203 S.E.2d 290 (1973).

Chief change made by the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) with regard to the answer is that an answer can incorporate defenses other than mere denial of allegations. Knickerbocker Tax Sys. v. Texaco, Inc., 130 Ga. App. 383, 203 S.E.2d 290 (1973).

Purpose of an answer is to formulate issues by means of defenses addressed to allegations of the complaint. Knickerbocker Tax Sys. v. Texaco, Inc., 130 Ga. App. 383, 203 S.E.2d 290 (1973).

Answer must be sufficiently definite to inform plaintiffs. — Although the defendant need not set forth any evidence or expose the defendant's defense in detail, it is required that an answer contain a statement of facts sufficiently definite so that the plaintiffs will be informed of the defense the plaintiffs must be prepared to meet. Knickerbocker Tax Sys. v. Texaco, Inc., 130 Ga. App. 383, 203 S.E.2d 290 (1973).

It is immaterial whether allegation is one of fact or conclusion if response effectively states an issuable defense. Crymes v. Crymes, 152 Ga. App. 844, 264 S.E.2d 275 (1979).

Answer may raise question as to constitutionality of a statute that will materially affect the defense. Southern Cotton Oil Co. v. Raines, 171 Ga. 154, 155 S.E. 484 (1930) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-303).

While the defendant must raise all issues of law by proper pleadings, the defendant's answer may raise a question as to the constitutionality of a statute that will materially affect the defense. Buchanan v. Heath, 210 Ga. 410, 80 S.E.2d 393 (1954) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-303).

When question as to constitutionality of statute was properly raised by attacking specific Code sections as denying the defendant equal protection and due process of law, as guaranteed by the state Constitution and U.S. Const., amend. 14, and the answer clearly pointed out wherein the statute in question violated constitutional provisions, the court could not refuse to consider the question merely because the defendant failed to point out the exact location of due process and equal protection clauses in the Constitutions. Buchanan v. Heath, 210 Ga. 410, 80 S.E.2d 393 (1954) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-303).

Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) has no provision similar to former Code 1933, § 81-308, providing that when facts are charged to be within the knowledge of a party or when from all the circumstances such knowledge is necessarily presumed, and that party fails to answer or makes an evasive answer, the charge is taken to be true. Seaboard Coast Line R.R. v. Clark, 122 Ga. App. 237, 176 S.E.2d 596 (1970).

Denial of lack of information under present and former law. — Under former law, denial for lack of sufficient information when the matter was not peculiarly within knowledge of the defendant was a sufficient denial, whereas under subsection (b) of this section, in order to take advantage of lack of information and knowledge the defendant must allege that the defendant is without knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the truth of an averment. Consolidated Pecan Sales Co. v. Savannah Bank & Trust Co., 122 Ga. App. 536, 177 S.E.2d 808 (1970).

Defendant's denial of liability or indebtedness to seller satisfied O.C.G.A. § 15-10-43(c). — In magistrate court proceedings, the defendants were not required to specifically answer each allegation in a plaintiff's complaint, and the defendants were permitted from controverting liability through a general denial pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-8(b); thus, pretermitted whether the defendants' answer met the requirements for a general denial under the Civil Practice Act, (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9 the answer amounted to a sufficient response in the magistrate court, denying any liability or indebtedness to the plaintiff, and the trial court erred in finding otherwise. Jones v. Equip. King Int'l, 287 Ga. App. 867, 652 S.E.2d 811 (2007).

General denial. — Claimant's motion to dismiss the complaint in a forfeiture action was not a responsive pleading in the nature of an answer since the complaint did not raise an assertion that the property was not subject to forfeiture as required by paragraph (o)(3) of O.C.G.A. § 16-13-49, nor did the complaint contain even a general denial of the averments of the allegations of the complaint as would have satisfied subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-8. Turner v. State, 213 Ga. App. 309, 444 S.E.2d 372 (1994).

Plea of insufficient information to admit or deny is a denial. — Defendants' plea that the defendants were without sufficient information to either admit or deny certain allegations of the complaint had the effect of a denial under subsection (b) of this section. Forsyth County Bd. of Comm'rs v. Adams, 228 Ga. 845, 188 S.E.2d 790 (1972), later appeal, 234 Ga. 315, 215 S.E.2d 679 (1975).

Honesty required. — Second sentence of subsection (b) of Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 8 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-8), providing that if a party is without knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the truth of an averment the party shall so state and that this statement shall have the effect of a denial, is subject to the requirements of honesty in pleading set forth in Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 11 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-11). Anderson v. Atlanta Univ., Inc., 134 Ga. App. 365, 214 S.E.2d 394 (1975).

Palpably untrue averment of ignorance. — Principle of subsection (b) does not apply if the fact as to which want of knowledge is asserted is, to the knowledge of the court, so plainly and necessarily within the defendant's knowledge that the defendant's averment of ignorance must be palpably untrue. Weiss v. Moody, 121 Ga. App. 682, 175 S.E.2d 82 (1970); Anderson v. Atlanta Univ., Inc., 134 Ga. App. 365, 214 S.E.2d 394 (1975); North Ga. Prod. Credit Ass'n v. Vandergrift, 239 Ga. 755, 238 S.E.2d 869 (1977).

Knowledge of officers charged to corporation. — If officer or other persons in charge of corporation's affairs have knowledge, then the corporation should be held to have knowledge, and if those officers or others have information sufficient to form a belief as to the truth of an averment, then the corporation has like information. Stuckey's Carriage Inn v. Phillips, 122 Ga. App. 681, 178 S.E.2d 543 (1970).

When the defendant "neither admits nor denies allegations," it does not amount to a denial; it must be alleged that the defendant is without knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the truth of the averment. Stuckey's Carriage Inn v. Phillips, 122 Ga. App. 681, 178 S.E.2d 543 (1970).

"Appearance card" not a pleading. — "Appearance card," containing no admissions, denials, or statements of inability to answer for any reason, does not meet the standards for a pleading as set forth in Ga. L. 1972, p. 689, §§ 4 and 5 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(b)) and subsection (b) of Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 8 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-8). Glenco-Belvedere Animal Hosp. v. Winters, 129 Ga. App. 621, 200 S.E.2d 506 (1973).

Filing of letter as exhibit to defensive pleadings cannot be considered as counterclaim. Carroll v. Afco Credit Corp., 143 Ga. App. 264, 238 S.E.2d 264 (1977).

Answer in response to action on a note, alleging that the note had been satisfied either by credit or by moneys received by complaint, was not a nullity but was sufficient to join the issue in the case and to withstand a motion for judgment on the pleadings and a motion for judgment by default. Robinson v. Rearden, 134 Ga. App. 815, 216 S.E.2d 370 (1975).

Motion to strike a defense should not be granted unless it appears to a certainty that the plaintiff would succeed despite any state of facts which could be proved in support of the defense. Wellbaum v. Murphy, 122 Ga. App. 654, 178 S.E.2d 690 (1970).

Defense of sovereign immunity. — Trial court erred in not granting a city's motion to dismiss the negligence claims against the city because the city was exercising a governmental function when the city demolished an abandoned house claimed to be a nuisance; therefore, the city was entitled to sovereign immunity on those claims. City of Atlanta v. Durham, 324 Ga. App. 563, 751 S.E.2d 172 (2013).

Affirmative Defenses

Properly amended answer is a “pleading to a preceding pleading” within the meaning of subsection (c) of this section. Security Ins. Co. v. Gill, 141 Ga. App. 324, 233 S.E.2d 278 (1977); Spafford v. Maseroni, 186 Ga. App. 290, 367 S.E.2d 102 (1988).

Purpose of requirement that affirmative defenses be pled is to prevent surprise and to give the opposing party fair notice of what the party must meet as a defense. Phillips v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 121 Ga. App. 342, 173 S.E.2d 723 (1970); Roberts v. Farmer, 127 Ga. App. 237, 193 S.E.2d 216 (1972); McFadden Bus. Publications, Inc. v. Guidry, 177 Ga. App. 885, 341 S.E.2d 294 (1986); Ohoopee Prod. Credit Ass’n v. Aspinwall, 183 Ga. App. 306, 358 S.E.2d 884 (1987); Kal-O-Mine Indus., Inc. v. Camp (In re Lumpkin Sand & Gravel, Inc.), 104 Bankr. 529 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. 1989), aff’d, 111 Bankr. 370 (M.D. Ga. 1989).

When the affirmative defenses are pled by the defendant in the defendant’s answer, it is not necessary for the plaintiff to file any additional plea to deny the allegations of the defendant’s answer or to avoid the affirmative defenses set out therein, unless a motion is made to the court and the court directs the plaintiff to file a supplemental pleading. Turner v. Little, 70 Ga. App. 567, 28 S.E.2d 871 (1944) (decided under former Code 1933, §§ 81-309 and 81-311).

Payment, one of the affirmative defenses itemized in subsection (c) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-8, may be raised by amendment. Abdalla v. DDCB, Inc., 216 Ga. App. 617, 455 S.E.2d 598 (1995); Resiventure, Inc. v. National Loan Investors, 224 Ga. App. 220, 480 S.E.2d 212 (1996).

Because the defendant failed to plead payment in the defendant’s answer or by amendment, the trial court erred in allowing evidence of payment. Brown v. Little, 227 Ga. App. 484, 489 S.E.2d 596 (1997).

Insurance company argued that the trial court erred in considering the employer’s affidavit and other evidence that the funds had already been paid, in that the employer had failed to raise the affirmative defense of payment in the employer’s answer; however, there was certainly no surprise as the insurance company at the hearing on the motions for summary judgment claimed that the company understood the employer was asserting payment as an affirmative defense. Companion Prop. & Cas. Group v. Tutt Contr., Inc., 305 Ga. App. 879, 700 S.E.2d 708 (2010).

Accord and satisfaction. — Plea of accord and satisfaction is plea in confession and avoidance, and burden of pleading and proving existence, terms, and effect of an accord and satisfaction is on the party relying upon the same. City of Atlanta v. Gore, 47 Ga. App. 70, 169 S.E. 776 (1933) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-307).

Defense of accord and satisfaction or settlement of claim sued on must be specially pled. Pilgrim Health & Life Ins. Co. v. Jenkins, 47 Ga. App. 441, 170 S.E. 687 (1933) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-307).

Testimony offered to prove accord and satisfaction is inadmissible on behalf of the defendant whose answer does not set up defense to which such testimony is applicable. Blanchard v. Georgia S. & Fla. Ry., 117 Ga. App. 858, 162 S.E.2d 442 (1968).

Accord and satisfaction must be set forth affirmatively as a defense in the defendants’ answer and cannot be raised first by affidavit in support or opposition of a motion for summary judgment. Slappey Bldrs., Inc. v. FDIC, 157 Ga. App. 343, 277 S.E.2d 328 (1981).

Particularity on issues of compromise settlement and accord and satisfaction. — If a pleading is in response to a prior pleading, such issues as compromise settlement or accord and satisfaction must be set out with particularity. J.G.T., Inc. v. Brunswick Corp., 119 Ga. App. 719, 168 S.E.2d 847 (1969).

Failure of consideration is an affirmative defense which must be pled. Dromedary, Inc. v. Restaurant Equip. Mfg. Co., 153 Ga. App. 103, 264 S.E.2d 571 (1980).

Trial court properly granted summary judgment to an attorney in the attorney’s action to collect fees due under a written fee agreement with a former client as the attorney provided the services outlined within the contract, and the former client failed to produce any competent evidence supporting an affirmative defense of failure of consideration after the attorney made a prima facie case for summary judgment. Browning v. Alan Mullinax & Assocs., P.C., 288 Ga. App. 43, 653 S.E.2d 786 (2007).

Plea of total failure of consideration includes partial failure. Carlton Co. v. Allen, 135 Ga. App. 658, 218 S.E.2d 666 (1975).

Bankruptcy. — Discharge in bankruptcy is an affirmative defense, and the defendant had the burden of proving the defense. Commercial & Exch. Bank v. McDaniel, 147 Ga. App. 378, 249 S.E.2d 97 (1978).

Bankruptcy, to be relied upon as a defense, must not only be pled, but must be pled at the proper time; if not pled, the defense will be held to be waived, when no legal reason is shown to account for the neglect. Duncan v. Southern Sav. Bank, 59 Ga. App. 228, 200 S.E. 561 (1938) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 3, T. 81).

Illegality represents an affirmative defense which must be pled. Prudential Timber & Farm Co. v. Collins, 155 Ga. App. 492, 271 S.E.2d 43 (1980).

Fraud and illegality. — Defenses of fraud and illegality are affirmative defenses which, pursuant to subsection (c) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-8, must be expressly pled. Bridges v. Reliance Trust Co., 205 Ga. App. 400, 422 S.E.2d 277 (1992).

Defense of laches must be specifically plead in responsive pleadings before the defense can be considered. Gauker v. Eubanks, 230 Ga. 893, 199 S.E.2d 771 (1973).

Defense of estoppel. — Estoppel is an affirmative defense, and must therefore be set forth affirmatively in pleading to a preceding pleading. Albany Oil Mill, Inc. v. Sumter Elec. Membership Corp., 212 Ga. App. 242, 441 S.E.2d 524 (1994).

Estoppel is an affirmative defense and must be set forth affirmatively in a responsive pleading or in a motion for summary judgment. Rimes Tractor & Equip., Inc. v. Agricredit Acceptance Corp., 216 Ga. App. 249, 454 S.E.2d 564 (1995).

In an action for wrongful foreclosure against a bank by the grantors of security deeds, the bank's theory of estoppel as an affirmative defense against the grantors' claims for cancellation of the bank's deeds under power related to the merits of the grantor's claim, an issue which had no relevancy to the bank's motion to cancel the grantors' notices of lis pendens. Moore v. Bank of Fitzgerald, 266 Ga. 190, 465 S.E.2d 445 (1996).

Trial court erred in finding that a handwritten agreement between the parties constituted an enforceable lease in the landlord's dispossession action as the only terms listed in the document were a payment schedule and brief damages and indemnification provisions, but there was no indication of when the lease term began or which property was covered; the statute of frauds, O.C.G.A. § 13-5-30(5), was violated, and because the affirmative defense of estoppel under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-8(c) was not raised by the parties, it was error for the trial court to have raised the issue sua sponte. Nacoochee Corp. v. Suwanee Inv. Partners, LLC, 275 Ga. App. 444, 620 S.E.2d 641 (2005).

Statute of limitations must be specially pled. Sellers v. City of Summerville, 91 Ga. App. 105, 85 S.E.2d 56 (1954) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-307).

Statute of limitations is an affirmative defense which must be set forth when pleading to a preceding pleading. Gaul v. Kennedy, 246 Ga. 290, 271 S.E.2d 196 (1980).

Trial court erred in granting summary judgment to a dentist and the dental practices in a medical malpractice action, based on misdiagnosis, as the dental defendants failed to meet the defendants' burden pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-8(c) of showing undisputed evidence that the affirmative defense of the two-year limitations period of O.C.G.A. § 9-3-71(a) barred the action. Brown v. Coast Dental of Ga., P.C., 275 Ga. App. 761, 622 S.E.2d 34 (2005).

Buyer's response to a seller's summary judgment motion in which the buyer raised a statute of limitations defense was properly construed as a cross motion for summary judgment as: (1) pleadings were to be judged by the pleadings' substance and a final judgment was to grant the relief to which the successful party was entitled, even if that party had not demanded such relief; (2) Georgia law authorized a trial court to grant summary judgment to a non-moving party, sua sponte; (3) the seller had ample notice of the statute of limitation defense, but did not respond to it or amend its pleadings; and (4) more than the 30-day statutory period passed before the summary judgment was granted. All Tech Co. v. Laimer Unicon, LLC, 281 Ga. App. 579, 636 S.E.2d 753 (2006).

Appellants were entitled to urge on appeal that the appellees failed to show that certain legal bills fell outside the limitation period of O.C.G.A. § 9-3-31, even if they did not raise that specific factual argument in the trial court; the statute of limitations was an affirmative defense, and so the burden was on the appellees to come forward with evidence sufficient to make out a prima facie case that the appellants' billing claim fell outside the limitation period. Falanga v. Kirschner & Venker, P.C., 286 Ga. App. 92, 648 S.E.2d 690 (2007).

In a medical malpractice action, because the undisputed evidence showed that both the personal injury claims and a later-added wrongful death claim were timely filed, both in terms of O.C.G.A. § 9-3-71 and the relevant statute of repose, the doctors sued were properly denied summary judgment as to those claims. Cleaveland v. Gannon, 288 Ga. App. 875, 655 S.E.2d 662 (2007), aff'd, 284 Ga. 376, 667 S.E.2d 366 (2008).

In a medical malpractice case, as the statute of limitations was an affirmative defense, the burden was on the doctors to establish as a matter of law that the patient's "new injury"—metastasized cancer which the doctors failed to diagnose—occurred and manifested itself more than two years before the suit was filed and that the suit was thus time-barred under O.C.G.A. § 9-3-71(a). As the doctors failed to meet that burden, the doctors were not entitled to summary judgment. Cleaveland v. Gannon, 284 Ga. 376, 667 S.E.2d 366 (2008).

Trial court did not err by refusing to consider whether the applicable statute of limitations barred an institute's suit against a debtor on a promissory note and account because the record showed that the debtor failed to raise that defense of any statute of limitation either in the answer or in the response to the institute's motion for summary judgment. Bogart v. Wis. Inst. for Torah Study, 321 Ga. App. 492, 739 S.E.2d 465 (2013).

Res judicata. — Trial court's order vacating divorce judgment was not barred by the doctrine of res judicata when the wife filed no defensive pleadings and thereby failed to assert res judicata as an affirmative defense. McDade v. McDade, 263 Ga. 456, 435 S.E.2d 24 (1993).

Trial court did not err in granting a lender's motion for summary judgment because the doctrine of res judicata barred a debtor's suit alleging that the lender incorrectly charged interest on the debtor's unsecured revolving line of credit; the same matters were already litigated between the same parties in an action previously adjudicated on the merits by a court of competent jurisdiction. Rose v. Household Fin. Corp., 316 Ga. App. 282, 728 S.E.2d 879 (2012).

Res judicata is an affirmative defense that must be raised in a timely filed responsive pleading. Azarat Mktg. Group, Inc. v. Department of Admin. Affairs, 245 Ga. App. 256, 537 S.E.2d 99 (2000).

O.C.G.A. § 9-11-8(c) does not imply that an affirmative defense can be raised only by answer or the defense is forever waived; although defendants did not raise res judicata in their answer, the defendants raised the defense in their motion to dismiss, giving the plaintiffs fair notice of the defense, and thus there was no error in the trial court's consideration of the res judicata issue. Gerschick & Assocs., P.C. v. Pounds, 266 Ga. App. 852, 598 S.E.2d 522 (2004).

Dismissal properly denied based on failure to plead affirmative defense.

— Trial court did not err in denying a garnishee's motion to dismiss because the garnishor, a foreign corporation, was not shown to have been transacting business in the State of Georgia without the proper certification, and the garnishee did not plead an affirmative defense under

O.C.G.A. § 14-2-1502(a). Carrier411 Servs. v. Insight Tech., Inc., 322 Ga. App. 167, 744 S.E.2d 356 (2013).

Affirmative defense of limitations cannot be raised for the first time orally at a hearing on a summary judgment motion without any notice to the opposing party. Hansford v. Robinson, 255 Ga. 530, 340 S.E.2d 614 (1986).

Premature attempt to raise bar of limitations. — Defendant's attempt to raise the bar of the statute of limitations in appeal by the plaintiff from an automatic dismissal for lack of prosecution was premature. Stone v. Green, 163 Ga. App. 18, 293 S.E.2d 506 (1982).

Written misrepresentation to obtain credit. — Former Code 1933, § 105-303 (see now O.C.G.A. § 51-6-3), providing that no action shall be sustained for deceit in representation to obtain credit from another unless the misrepresentation is a signed writing, is an affirmative defense that must be set forth in a responsive pleading or be waived. Funding Sys. Leasing Corp. v. Pugh, 530 F.2d 91 (5th Cir. 1976).

Corporation's existence. — General denial by the defendant, or denial for lack of knowledge or information, is insufficient to raise issue as to the corporation's legal existence, and failure to raise such issue by direct negative averment results in a waiver of the defense. Stuckey's Carriage Inn v. Phillips, 122 Ga. App. 681, 178 S.E.2d 543 (1970).

Unconditional contracts. — This section does not require an affirmative defense for unconditional contracts in writing; a general denial of indebtedness is sufficient. Tankersley v. Security Nat'l Corp., 122 Ga. App. 129, 176 S.E.2d 274 (1970).

Defense of privilege need not be affirmatively pled under subsection (c) of Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 8 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-8), nor under Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 9 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9), and is sufficiently raised by a motion to dismiss. Europa Hair, Inc. v. Browning, 133 Ga. App. 753, 212 S.E.2d 862 (1975).

Comparative negligence no longer must be affirmatively pled in response to a pleading. Jones v. Cloud, 119 Ga. App. 697, 168 S.E.2d 598 (1969).

Affirmative defense of emergency vehicle need not be pled under subsection (c) of Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 8 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-8), nor is the defense one of the special matters listed under Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 9 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9). Walker v. Burke County, 149 Ga. App. 704, 256 S.E.2d 100 (1979).

Immunity is not a defense which must be specifically pled under subsection (c) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-8. State Bd. of Educ. v. Drury, 263 Ga. 429, 437 S.E.2d 290 (1993).

County was immune from a lender's suit because the lender pointed to no statute creating a waiver of immunity or any factual scenario warranting a waiver with respect to the lender's claim that the county failed to give it notice of the availability of excess funds following a tax sale as required by O.C.G.A. § 48-4-5; immunity was not an affirmative defense, and it was the lender's burden to show that it was waived. Bartow County v. S. Dev., III, L.P., 325 Ga. App. 879, 756 S.E.2d 11 (2014).

Motion to be dismissed as defendants, made by individuals who offered evidence to show that the owner of the vehicle whose driver was involved in an accident was a corporation, did not involve a defense which must be pled affirmatively. Calhoun v. Herrin, 125 Ga. App. 518, 188 S.E.2d 273 (1972).

Waiver. — If affirmative defense is not pled, it is generally held that such defense is waived. Roberts v. Farmer, 127 Ga. App. 237, 193 S.E.2d 216 (1972).

Although a dispossessory action was improperly transferred to superior court because a default judgment stood as a final order, appellants, against whom a third-party suit was filed after the transfer, had not challenged the propriety of the transfer in superior court and thus under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-8 had waived their argument that it was improper. Abushmais v. Erby, 282 Ga. 619, 652 S.E.2d 549 (2007).

Defendant may not avail oneself of an affirmative defense which the defendant fails to properly present. Dromedary, Inc. v. Restaurant Equip. Mfg. Co., 153 Ga. App. 103, 264 S.E.2d 571 (1980).

Failure to plead the affirmative defense of the statute of limitations for suits against developers for construction defects, as provided in O.C.G.A. § 9-3-30, results in the defense being waived. Glenridge Unit Owners Ass'n v. Felton, 183 Ga. App. 858, 360 S.E.2d 418 (1987).

Trial court erred in finding that a jury question existed as to the issue of whether a pay-if-paid provision in a contract was waived by the general contractor because a verbal statement from an employee of the general contractor to the subcontractor was insufficient to prove a waiver of that contract provision. Vratsinas Constr. Co. v. Triad Drywall, LLC, 321 Ga. App. 451, 739 S.E.2d 493 (2013).

When failure to plead immaterial. — Failure to plead an affirmative defense is immaterial if evidence of the defense is introduced and not objected to for failure to plead the defense, and no surprise is claimed. Bowers v. Howell, 203 Ga. App. 636, 417 S.E.2d 392 (1992).

Late filed defense waived. — Judgment for the defendant was reversed when the defense of failure to attach an affidavit required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 was not presented, by way of amendment to the answer, until three months after the filing of responsive pleadings, and until the statute of limitations on the underlying claim had run. Glaser v. Meck, 258 Ga. 468, 369 S.E.2d 912 (1988).

Defense of sovereign immunity is not affirmative defense with respect to which the state has the burden of proof. Indeed, neither counsel for the state nor any of the state's agencies may, by affirmative action or by failure to plead, waive the defense of governmental immunity. Kelleher v. State, 187 Ga. App. 64, 369 S.E.2d 341 (1988).

Sovereign immunity is not an affirmative defense that must be established by the party seeking its protection. Rather, immunity from suit is a privilege that is subject to waiver by the party seeking to benefit from the waiver, such that in a wrongful death action against the Department of Human Resources, it was incumbent upon the mental health facility patient's parents to establish the department's waiver of immunity. Georgia Dep't of Human Resources v. Poss, 263 Ga. 347, 434 S.E.2d 488 (1993).

Sovereign immunity is not an affirmative defense within the meaning of subsection (c) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-8 in that it is not lost even if not raised in the first responsive pleading and any waiver must be established by the party benefiting from such waiver. Maxwell v. Cronan, 241 Ga. App. 491, 527 S.E.2d 1 (1999).

Waiver of statute of limitations. — It is incumbent on party pleading to a preceding pleading to set forth affirmatively any statute of limitations as a defense to an action; failure to do so results in the court's determination that this issue is not raised, even though the issue may be present and could operate as a bar to recovery. Nipper v. Crisp County, 120 Ga. App. 583, 171 S.E.2d 652 (1969).

Unless defense of the statute of limitations is pled affirmatively by the defendant, the defense is waived. Leslie, Inc. v. Solomon, 141 Ga. App. 673, 234 S.E.2d 104 (1977).

When the appellant raises no affirmative defense based upon the statute of limitations, that defense is waived. Wood v. Wood, 239 Ga. 120, 236 S.E.2d 68 (1977).

Plaintiff waived the defense of the statute of limitations to a counterclaim by failure to raise the issue prior to the pretrial order. Gaul v. Kennedy, 246 Ga. 290, 271 S.E.2d 196 (1980).

Under subsection (c) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-8, the statute of limitations is an affirmative defense which must be raised at the first opportunity. It is too late to raise the defense initially in the middle of the trial. Owens v. Owens, 248 Ga. 720, 286 S.E.2d 25 (1982).

Failure to raise the defense of the statute of limitation constitutes a waiver of the issue. Coleman v. Burnett, 169 Ga. App. 297, 312 S.E.2d 627 (1983).

Third-party defendant waived any right that the defendant would otherwise have had to rely upon the statute of limitations and the issue could not be considered on appeal, when such defense was not raised in the answer, the motion to dismiss, or other pleading filed in the trial court. Davis v. Betsill, 178 Ga. App. 730, 344 S.E.2d 525 (1986).

No waiver when defense raised by motion, special plea, or summary judgment. — If affirmative defense is not pled, it is generally held that such defense is waived, but if the defense is raised by motion, by special plea in connection with the answer, or by motion for summary judgment, there is no waiver. Phillips v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 121 Ga. App. 342, 173 S.E.2d 723 (1970); Roberts v. Farmer, 127 Ga. App. 237, 193 S.E.2d 216 (1972).

While generally defenses such as statute of limitations or laches must be affirmatively raised by written answer under subsection (c) of this section, yet when facts as to such an issue are uncontradicted, it may be disposed of by summary judgment, motion to dismiss, or motion for judgment on the pleadings. Beazley v. Williams, 231 Ga. 137, 200 S.E.2d 751 (1973).

Pleading not only way to raise affirmative defense. — Language of subsection (c) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-8 does not imply that affirmative defenses may be raised only by a pleading. Brown v. Moseley, 175 Ga. App. 282, 333 S.E.2d 162 (1985).

Affirmative defense may be raised by motion. Brown v. Quarles, 154 Ga. App. 350, 268 S.E.2d 403 (1980).

Affirmative defense is timely raised for the first time in a motion for summary judgment. Rumsey v. Gillis, 329 Ga. App. 488, 765 S.E.2d 665 (2014).

Defendant may raise affirmative defense by motion for summary judgment, but only when a motion for summary judgment is the initial pleading tendered by the defendant. Funding Sys. Leasing Corp. v. Pugh, 530 F.2d 91 (5th Cir. 1976).

Defense of res judicata raised by the defendant as part of the defendant's motion for summary judgment satisfied the requirements of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-8. Hardy v. Georgia Baptist Health Care Sys., 239 Ga. App. 596, 521 S.E.2d 632 (1999).

When accord and satisfaction was raised by evidence in connection with motion for summary judgment, it was error to overrule the motion for summary judgment simply because the defendant did not file a plea or accord and satisfaction as is generally required under subsection (c) of this section. Catalina, Inc. v. Woodward, 124 Ga. App. 26, 182 S.E.2d 921 (1971).

Evidence of failure of consideration and mistake in summary judgment proceedings. — When the defendants did not specially plead affirmative defenses of failure of consideration and mistake, as required by subsections (b) and (c) of Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 8 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-8), and Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 9 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9(b)), but on motion for summary judgment offered evidence in support of such defenses, thus creating issues of fact on a motion for summary judgment, the moving party was not entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Bailey v. Polote, 152 Ga. App. 255, 262 S.E.2d 551 (1979).

Defense of waiver may be raised by motion for summary judgment. Daniel & Daniel, Inc. v. Cosmopolitan Co., 146 Ga. App. 200, 245 S.E.2d 885 (1978).

Some affirmative defenses may properly be raised by motion to dismiss, if the facts are admitted, are not controverted, or are completely disclosed on the face of the pleadings and nothing further can be developed by a trial of the issue; and the rationale of this rule is applicable to the affirmative defense of the statute of frauds. Murrey v. Specialty Underwriters, Inc., 233 Ga. 804, 213 S.E.2d 668 (1975).

Disposition of issue on motion to dismiss, for judgment on pleadings, or for summary judgment. — Ordinarily affirmative defenses listed in subsection (c) of Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 8 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-8) and any other defense not specified in Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 9 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12) must be asserted by answer and cannot be the basis for a motion to dismiss, but if the facts are admitted, are not controverted, or are completely disclosed on the face of the pleadings and nothing further can be developed by a trial of the issue, the matter may be disposed of upon motion to dismiss, motion for judgment on the pleadings, or motion for summary judgment. Ezzard v. Morgan, 118 Ga. App. 50, 162 S.E.2d 793 (1968).

While generally defenses such as statute of limitations or laches must be affirmatively raised by written answer, yet when the facts as to such an issue are uncontradicted, it may be disposed of by summary judgment, motion to dismiss, or motion for judgment on the pleadings. O'Quinn v. O'Quinn, 237 Ga. 653, 229 S.E.2d 428 (1976).

Affirmative defenses listed in this section may be raised by amendment. Security Ins. Co. v. Gill, 141 Ga. App. 324, 233 S.E.2d 278 (1977).

No evidence of affirmative defenses under general denial. — While an express denial of allegations of a complaint is sufficient to create a triable issue, under such general denial the defendant would not be permitted to present any evidence as to the affirmative defenses of the type itemized in subsection (c) of this section. Knickerbocker Tax Sys. v. Texaco, Inc., 130 Ga. App. 383, 203 S.E.2d 290 (1973).

Under general denial, the defendant is not permitted to present evidence as to any affirmative defense of the type itemized in subsection (c) of this section. Dromedary, Inc. v. Restaurant Equip. Mfg. Co., 153 Ga. App. 103, 264 S.E.2d 571 (1980).

Unless plaintiff waives objection. — Even absent a specific pleading, when accord and satisfaction is set out by evidence which is not objected to, such issue is before the court, the plaintiff having waived objection. Wood v. Yancey Bros. Co., 135 Ga. App. 720, 218 S.E.2d 698 (1975).

Defense may be dismissed as a counterclaim. Whitehurst v. Universal C.I.T. Credit Corp., 131 Ga. App. 202, 205 S.E.2d 489 (1974).

Under former Code 1933, § 109A-307, admission by the defendant of execution of a note to the plaintiff gives the plaintiff prima facie right to judgment, and the defendant then has the burden of establishing any claimed defense to an action as set forth in subsection (c) of Ga. L. 1976, p. 1047, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-8). Malone v. Price, 138 Ga. App. 514, 226 S.E.2d 623 (1976).

Defendant's mere denial of debt for various general reasons not contained in Ga. L. 1976, p. 1047, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-8) does not constitute a defense under former Code 1933, § 109A-307, relating to defenses to notes. Malone v. Price, 138 Ga. App. 514, 226 S.E.2d 623 (1976).

Claim of statutory immunity under Georgia's workers' compensation scheme is affirmative defense and subject to waiver under Rule 8(c), Fed. R. Civ. P., in federal diversity of citizenship actions. Troxler v. Owens-Illinois, Inc., 717 F.2d 530 (11th Cir. 1983).

Noncompliance with a contract provision is not an affirmative defense under subsection (c) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-8. Carpenters Local 1977 v. General Ins. Co. of Am., 167 Ga. App. 299, 306 S.E.2d 383 (1983).

Affirmative defense of failure of consideration not barred. — In a suit on a promissory note, the trial court did not err by considering the affirmative defense of failure of consideration, which the maker had not pled, since the payee failed to object when the maker's counsel argued failure of consideration in the maker's opening statement and in the maker's motion for directed verdict; this issue was thus tried by the implied consent of the parties under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15(b). Drake v. Wallace, 259 Ga. App. 111, 576 S.E.2d 87 (2003).

Failure of consideration was waived by not having been raised in the pleadings, and could not be raised by an affidavit in support of a motion for summary judgment. Hanover Ins. Co. v. Nelson Conveyor & Mach. Co., 159 Ga. App. 13, 282 S.E.2d 670 (1981).

Defense of failure of consideration is not available when a note has been renewed. Richards v. Southern Fin. Corp., 171 Ga. App. 268, 319 S.E.2d 103 (1984).

Payment is a matter that must be specially pled. Rahal v. Titus, 107 Ga. App. 844, 131 S.E.2d 659 (1963) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-307).

Defense of payment must be specially pled by a principal debtor or added by amendment. Standard Accident Ins. Co. v. Ingalls Iron Works Co., 109 Ga. App. 574, 136 S.E.2d 505 (1964) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-307).

Raising defense of partial payment in response to summary judgment motion not untimely. — Although the defendant by the defendant's answer denied the substance of the complaint in the various averments and a plea of partial payment could have been added by amendment, the trial court did not err in considering such a claim when raised in response to the plaintiff's motion for summary judgment. White v. McCarty, 171 Ga. App. 666, 320 S.E.2d 796 (1984).

Defense of estoppel must be set forth affirmatively in pleading to a preceding pleading. Jones v. Miles, 656 F.2d 103 (5th Cir. 1981).

Pleading should not be dismissed for failure to state a claim if it appears beyond a doubt that the pleader can prove no set of facts in support of the claim which would entitle the pleader to relief. This principle is applicable to all pleadings, including special matters (fraud, mistake, and conditions precedent) under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9. Skelton v. Skelton, 251 Ga. 631, 308 S.E.2d 838 (1983).

Failure to Deny

Factual assertions contained in unverified pleadings, which do not require a responsive pleading, remain mere allegations of fact unless the allegations are duly admitted by the opposing party. But factual assertions contained in unverified pleadings which do require a responsive pleading are admitted when not denied in the responsive pleading. Behar v. Aero Med Int'l, Inc., 185 Ga. App. 845, 366 S.E.2d 223 (1988).

Defendant barred from disputing matter not denied. — Averments in a pleading to which a responsive pleading is required are admitted when not denied in the responsive pleading, and the defendant, who did not deny a claim of a license under the Georgia Industrial Loan Act (see nw O.C.G.A. Ch. 3, T. 7), was therefore barred from disputing the applicability of the chapter to the loan on appeal. Termplan, Inc. v. Joseph, 151 Ga. App. 689, 261 S.E.2d 433 (1979).

In a declaratory judgment action for a determination that a county's sign ordinance was unconstitutional, because the defendant county did not deny the plain-tiff's averment that a true and correct copy of the applicable ordinance was attached to the complaint, the averment was admitted and no further proof was required. Outdoor Sys., Inc. v. Cherokee County, 243 Ga. App. 406, 533 S.E.2d 446 (2000).

Plaintiff entitled to judgment on pleadings. — Plaintiff was entitled to judgment on the pleadings when the complaint alleged that the defendant converted a vehicle and the pro se defendant merely asserted that the defendant wanted to come before the court to "state her case" since such assertion did not constitute a general denial. Universal Underwriters Ins. Co. v. Albert, 248 Ga. App. 415, 546 S.E.2d 361 (2001).

Insurer not bound by defendant's admissions. — Although a named, served defendant may waive the right to defend against an action, the defendant's waiver and default cannot be permitted to injure the statutory right of the insurer to defend the action in the insurer's own name, which would be the result if the insurer were held bound by the defendant's admissions based upon subsection (d) of this section. Glover v. Davenport, 133 Ga. App. 146, 210 S.E.2d 370 (1974).

Defendant's affirmative defense deemed denied. — If allegations of defendant's affirmative defense are not admitted, they are deemed denied. Hancock v. Nashville Inv. Co., 128 Ga. App. 58, 195 S.E.2d 674 (1973).

Defendant may not obtain judgment on pleadings on basis of answer only. — Defendant may not obtain judgment on the pleadings on basis of allegations in the defendant's answer when no reply is required since under subsection (d) of this section these allegations are deemed denied. GMAC v. Jackson, 119 Ga. App. 221, 166 S.E.2d 739 (1969); Lord v. Smith, 143 Ga. App. 378, 238 S.E.2d 731 (1977).

Alternative and Inconsistent Claims and Defenses1. Claims

Construction of subsection (e). — Subsection (e) of this section allows inconsistent, hypothetical, and alternative claims in pleading, and is to be construed like its federal counterpart, Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(e)(2). D.H. Overmyer Co. v. Kapplin, 122 Ga. App. 51, 176 S.E.2d 207 (1970).

Provision procedural. — Portion of this section which deals with pleading actions sounding simultaneously or alternatively in tort and contract is procedural, and goes only to the remedy. Cohen v. Garland, 119 Ga. App. 333, 167 S.E.2d 599 (1969).

Complaint may now contain as many separate claims against defendants as plaintiff may have, regardless of inconsistency, the claims may be based on legal grounds and equitable grounds, and may arise out of tort and also out of contract. Giordano v. Stubbs, 129 Ga. App. 283, 199 S.E.2d 322 (1973), rev'd on other grounds sub nom., Summer-Minter & Assocs. v. Giordano, 231 Ga. 601, 203 S.E.2d 173 (1974).

Legal and equitable claims in same complaint. — Under the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9), both legal and equitable claims may be set forth in the same complaint. Miller v. Turner, 228 Ga. 701, 187 S.E.2d 688 (1972).

Alternative allegations are now permissible under the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9). Miller v. Turner, 228 Ga. 701, 187 S.E.2d 688 (1972).

Plaintiff has right to try case on alternate theories, and cannot be required to elect upon which theory to proceed. D.H. Overmyer Co. v. Kapplin, 122 Ga. App. 51, 176 S.E.2d 207 (1970).

Complaint which contains alternative statements of claim will not be dismissed if any one alternative statement supports the claim. Hodges v. Youmans, 120 Ga. App. 805, 172 S.E.2d 431 (1969); Utica Mut. Ins. Co. v. Kelly & Cohen, Inc., 233 Ga. App. 555, 504 S.E.2d 510 (1998).

Inconsistent remedies may be pursued until satisfaction is obtained. D.H. Overmyer Co. v. Kapplin, 122 Ga. App. 51, 176 S.E.2d 207 (1970).

Party may pursue any number of inconsistent remedies prior to formulation and entry of judgment. Waller v. Scheer, 175 Ga. App. 1, 332 S.E.2d 293 (1985).

Party's discussion of one theory in opening argument does not limit jury's consideration. — Under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-8, a party may seek recovery under several alternative and inconsistent theories and may sue on one theory and recover under another if supported by the evidence; therefore, a party's discussion of one theory in the party's opening statement does not limit the issues which are presented for consideration by the jury so as to constrain the jury in considering the issues presented by the evidence at trial. Barnett v. Freeman, 157 Ga. App. 760, 278 S.E.2d 694 (1981).

Trial court's instruction that it is common practice to file inconsistent pleadings and that it is perfectly acceptable under the law to do so stated the correct principle of law and was not error. City of Waycross v. Beaty, 157 Ga. App. 765, 278 S.E.2d 697 (1981).

Counterclaim incorrectly stricken. — In suit to recover on purchase order, the trial court erred in striking a counterclaim for breach of warranty because it was allegedly redundant in view of an affirmative defense of right to refuse payment because of nonconformity. Bingham, Ltd. v. Tool Technology, Inc., 166 Ga. App. 220, 303 S.E.2d 761 (1983).

When election between inconsistent remedies must be made. — Election of remedies, though "abolished" by the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9), must be made prior to judgment when inconsistent remedies are sought in one action. Rosenberg v. Mossman, 140 Ga. App. 694, 231 S.E.2d 417 (1976).

Election between inconsistent remedies, when necessary, can be made at any time after the verdict and prior to entry of the judgment. Leslie, Inc. v. Solomon, 141 Ga. App. 673, 234 S.E.2d 104 (1977).

Defense of insufficient service of process. — Trial court abused the court's discretion by dismissing the plaintiff's complaint due to insufficient process because when the defendant moved to dismiss the complaint on the ground that the service copy of the complaint lacked pages containing five paragraphs and the signature page with prayers for relief, the defendant failed to attach an affidavit of the person who received service on the defendant's behalf and, thus, the defendant failed to submit sufficient evidence to show improper service of process. Sampson v. Ga. Dep't of Juvenile Justice, 328 Ga. App. 733, 760 S.E.2d 203 (2014).

2. Defenses

Defendant has right to file as many inconsistent or contradictory pleas as the defendant deems necessary for a defense. Associated Muts., Inc. v. Pope Lumber Co., 200 Ga. 487, 37 S.E.2d 393 (1946) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-310).

Contradictory or inconsistent pleas. — Defendant may in different paragraphs of an answer file contradictory or inconsistent pleas. North British & Mercantile Ins. Co. v. Parnell, 53 Ga. App. 178, 185 S.E. 122 (1936) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-310).

Defendant may file contradictory pleas. Hadden v. Fuqua, 194 Ga. 621, 22 S.E.2d 377 (1942) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-310).

Matters in abatement and in bar may be mixed in same answer, and one defense will not defeat another. Galloway v. Merrill, 213 Ga. 633, 100 S.E.2d 443 (1957) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-305).

Defendant is entitled to file as many separate defenses as the defendant desires, regardless of whether such defenses are inconsistent or contradictory. Brooks v. West Lumber Co., 88 Ga. App. 510, 77 S.E.2d 43 (1953) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-310).

Defendant's pleas and answer may contain as many several matters as defendant thinks necessary for a defense, and no part of the answer shall be stricken out or rejected because it may be contradictory to other portions of the answer. Johnson v. Johnson, 218 Ga. 28, 126 S.E.2d 229 (1962) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-310).

Pleading comparative negligence. — Alternative pleading of a defendant in a negligence suit that even if it were found negligent, the negligence of the plaintiff equaled or exceeded its own is appropriate. Wilson v. Norfolk S. Corp., 200 Ga. App. 523, 409 S.E.2d 84 (1991).

Defenses of negligence and legal accident. — Party is entitled to plead alternative theories of defense. Thus, when the plaintiff's fall in the produce department of a grocery store possibly could have been the result of an event not proximately caused by negligence but which instead arose from an unforeseen or unexplained cause, the trial court did not err in charging the jury on the theory of legal accident. Shennett v. Piggly Wiggly S., Inc., 197 Ga. App. 502, 399 S.E.2d 476 (1990).

Exculpatory clause inadequate. — Trial court erred in granting summary judgment to a rehabilitation company based on a contractual exculpatory clause because the material provisions of the agreement at issue were illegible and given that an affidavit was insufficient to establish a basis for the admission of the alleged exemplar, the company failed to show that the agreement signed by the participant contained an exculpatory clause waiving and releasing the company from liability for the company's own negligence. Sanchez v. Atlanta Union Mission Corp., 329 Ga. App. 158, 764 S.E.2d 178 (2014).

Inconsistent third-party complaint allowed. — In a breach of warranty action involving a survey commissioned by the defendants, the defendant's third-party complaint against the surveyor and filing of an expert's affidavit stating that the survey was incorrect did not estop the defendant from relying on the survey in defense of the action. Ewers v. Cooper, 217 Ga. App. 434, 457 S.E.2d 705 (1995).

Trial court erred to the extent the court ruled that an insurer was prevented from introducing any evidence on liability following a default judgment entered against the insurer because the insurer could still assert policy defenses but, otherwise, by failing to answer timely the insurer was precluded from asserting any affirmative defense included within O.C.G.A. § 9-11-8(c). Willis v. Allstate Ins. Co., 321 Ga. App. 496, 740 S.E.2d 413 (2013).

(a) Capacity. It is not necessary to aver the capacity of a party to bring or defend an action, the authority of a party to bring or defend an action in a representative capacity, or the legal existence of an organized association of persons that is made a party. When a party desires to raise an issue as to the legal existence of any party, the capacity of any party to bring or defend an action, or the authority of a party to bring or defend an action in a representative capacity, he shall do so by specific negative averment, which shall include such supporting particulars as are peculiarly within the pleader's knowledge.

(b) Fraud, mistake, condition of the mind. In all averments of fraud or mistake, the circumstance constituting fraud or mistake shall be stated with particularity. Malice, intent, knowledge, and other condition of mind of a person may be averred generally.

(c) Conditions precedent. In pleading the performance or occurrence of conditions precedent, it is sufficient to aver generally that all conditions precedent have been performed or have occurred. A denial of performance or occurrence shall be made specifically and with particularity.

(d) Official document or act. In pleading an official document or official act it is sufficient to aver that the document was issued or the act done in compliance with law.

(e) Judgment. In pleading a judgment or decision of a domestic or foreign court, of a judicial or quasi-judicial tribunal, or of a board or officer, it is sufficient to aver the judgment or decision without setting forth matter showing jurisdiction to render it.

(f) Time and place. For the purpose of testing the sufficiency of a pleading, averments of time and place are material and shall be considered like all other averments of material matter.

(g) Special damage. When items of special damage are claimed, they shall be specifically stated. (Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 9.)

General Consideration

Construction of pleadings to do justice. — Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 9 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9) is not immune from the command of Ga. L. 1976, p. 1047, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-8(f)) that pleadings be construed so as to do substantial justice. McDonough Constr. Co. v. McLendon Elec. Co., 242 Ga. 510, 250 S.E.2d 424 (1978).

Principle that a pleading should not be dismissed for failure to state a claim unless it appears beyond doubt that the plaintiff can prove no set of facts in support of the plaintiff’s claim which would entitle the plaintiff to relief is applicable to all pleadings, including special matters. Cochran v. McCollum, 233 Ga.

104, 210 S.E.2d 13 (1974); Bryant v. Bryant, 236 Ga. 265, 223 S.E.2d 662 (1976).

Complaint shall not be dismissed unless the averments disclose that the plaintiff would not be entitled to relief under any set of facts that could be proved in support of the claim. Hiller v. Culbreth, 139 Ga. App. 351, 228 S.E.2d 374 (1976).

Under the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9), a pleading should not be dismissed for failure to state a claim unless it appears beyond doubt that the plaintiff can prove no set of facts in support of the plaintiff’s claim which would entitle the plaintiff to relief, and this principle is applicable to all pleadings, including special matters. Moultrie v. Atlanta Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass’n, 148 Ga. App. 650, 252 S.E.2d 77 (1979).

Pleading should not be dismissed for failure to state a claim unless it appears beyond a doubt that the pleader can prove no set of facts in support of the pleader's claim which would entitle the pleader to relief. This principle is applicable to all pleadings including special matters (fraud, mistake, and conditions precedent) under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9. Skelton v. Skelton, 251 Ga. 631, 308 S.E.2d 838 (1983).

Amendment of pleading. — Pleading should not be stricken if under any state of facts within its framework the pleader might prevail, but the trial court should grant a right to amend. Diversified Holding Corp. v. Clayton McLendon, Inc., 120 Ga. App. 455, 170 S.E.2d 863 (1969).

Proper remedy for seeking more particularity is by motion for more definite statement at the pleading stage or by discovery thereafter. Cochran v. McCollum, 233 Ga. 104, 210 S.E.2d 13 (1974); Moultrie v. Atlanta Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 148 Ga. App. 650, 252 S.E.2d 77 (1979).

Remedy for failure to plead special damages is to move for a more definite statement of the plaintiff's claim. Alta Anesthesia Assocs. of Ga., P.C. v. Gibbons, 245 Ga. App. 79, 537 S.E.2d 388 (2000).

Trial court erred in granting the defendants' motions to dismiss the plaintiffs' complaint for failure to state a claim upon which relief could be granted and for judgment on the pleadings because the trial court should have required the plaintiffs to amend the plaintiffs' complaint and provide a more definite statement of the plaintiffs' claims before passing upon the motions; the amended complaint was a "shotgun pleading" because the complaint was not a short and plain statement of the claims that the plaintiffs asserted as required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-8(a)(2)(A) of the Civil Practice Act O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9, the complaint did not give the defendants fair notice of the nature of the claims, and the complaint did not conform to several of the specific pleading requirements of the Act, specifically O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-8, 9-11-9, and 9-11-10. Bush v. Bank of N.Y. Mellon, 313 Ga. App. 84, 720 S.E.2d 370 (2011).

When a trial court orders a plaintiff to make a more definite statement of his or her claims, the court should identify the ways in which the complaint fails to conform to the pleading requirements of the Civil Practice Act O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9 and the court also should warn the plaintiff about the potential consequences of a failure to replead in a way that conforms to these requirements; if the court still cannot ascertain the nature of the claims that the plaintiff seeks to assert, the court may enter another order to replead again, but the trial court and the defendants need not become caught in an endless cycle of attempts to replead, and if it appears that a plaintiff is unable or unwilling to plead in conformance to the Civil Practice Act and the directions of the court, the court may be authorized in some cases to dismiss the complaint under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41(b), not for a failure to state a claim, but for disregard of the rules and orders of the court. Bush v. Bank of N.Y. Mellon, 313 Ga. App. 84, 720 S.E.2d 370 (2011).

Use of motion for more definite statement to enforce section. — Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 9 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9) itself contains no mechanism for enforcing its terms, and common practice has been to use Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 12 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(e)) for that purpose. McDonough Constr. Co. v. McLendon Elec. Co., 242 Ga. 510, 250 S.E.2d 424 (1978).

One context in which a somewhat liberal approach to granting a motion under Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 12 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(e)) is appropriate is when a request for more definite statement is used to enforce special pleading requirements of subsection (c) of Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 9 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9). McDonough Constr. Co. v. McLendon Elec. Co., 242 Ga. 510, 250 S.E.2d 424 (1978).

Emergency vehicle. — Affirmative defense of emergency vehicle need not be pled under Ga. L. 1976, p. 1047, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-8(c)), nor is it one of the special matters listed under Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 9 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9). Walker v. Burke County, 149 Ga. App. 704, 256 S.E.2d 100 (1979).

Privilege. — Defense of privilege need not be affirmatively pled under Ga. L.

1967, p. 226, § 8 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-8(c)), nor specifically pled under Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 9 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9), and is sufficiently raised by a motion to dismiss. Europa Hair, Inc. v. Browning, 133 Ga. App. 753, 212 S.E.2d 862 (1975).

Mere misnomer of a party in the pleadings is a defect which may be waived when the misnamed party is in fact the legally cognizable proper party in interest. Block v. Voyager Life Ins. Co., 251 Ga. 162, 303 S.E.2d 742 (1983).

Damages for mental anguish as an element of general compensatory damages need not be specially pled. Preferred Risk Ins. Co. v. Boykin, 174 Ga. App. 269, 329 S.E.2d 900, cert. denied, 254 Ga. 349, 331 S.E.2d 879 (1985).

Evidence of additional damages in trial de novo. — When the plaintiff appealed from a magistrate court's decision dismissing the plaintiff's claim and awarding damages to the defendant on the defendant's counterclaim, and the plaintiff had notice of additional damages since the original counterclaim, the defendant could present evidence of additional damages of less than $5,000 relating to the defendant's counterclaim, without formal amendment of the defendant's pleadings. Jr. Mills Constr. v. Trichinotis, 223 Ga. App. 19, 477 S.E.2d 141 (1996).

Capacity

Specific negative averment required. — In order to raise an issue as to plaintiff's capacity to sue, it is incumbent upon the defendant to set forth a defense by specific negative averment including all facts known to the defendant bearing on the plaintiff's lack of capacity. Patterson v. Duron Paints of Ga., Inc., 144 Ga. App. 123, 240 S.E.2d 603 (1977).

Effect of pleading by specific negative averment. — Effect of the procedural rule in subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9 that lack of capacity must be pled by specific negative averment is to insure that the plaintiff will have an opportunity to correct the misnomer by amendment. Youmans v. Riley Properties, 180 Ga. App. 176, 349 S.E.2d 1 (1986).

General denial of corporation's existence insufficient. — General denial by the defendant or denial for lack of knowledge or information is insufficient to raise an issue as to the defendant corporation's legal existence, and failure to raise such issue by direct negative averment results in waiver of the defense. Stuckey's Carriage Inn v. Phillips, 122 Ga. App. 681, 178 S.E.2d 543 (1970).

Waiver when issue of capacity not raised before judgment. — Waiver occurs only when the defendant fails to raise issue of capacity any time before judgment. Patterson v. Duron Paints of Ga., Inc., 144 Ga. App. 123, 240 S.E.2d 603 (1977).

By failing to raise issue of legal existence or capacity by specific negative averment any time before judgment, the defendant waives the objection. Prince &

Paul v. Don Mitchell's WLAQ, Inc., 127 Ga. App. 502, 194 S.E.2d 269 (1972).

When a party desires to raise an issue as to the capacity or authority of a party to bring an action, the party must do so by specific negative averment in the responsive pleadings. Otherwise, the defense is deemed waived. Klorer-Willhardt, Inc. v. Martz, 166 Ga. App. 446, 304 S.E.2d 442 (1983), overruled on other grounds Adams v. Cato, 175 Ga. App. 28, 332 S.E.2d 355 (1985).

Challenge on appeal too late. — On appeal, the defendant could not challenge the mother's right to sue for medical expenses, etc., on the theory that such action lay with the father, when the defendant did not question the mother's capacity to sue at the outset. Johnson v. Daniel, 135 Ga. App. 926, 219 S.E.2d 579 (1975) (case decided prior to amendment of § 19-7-1, relating to parental control of child).

In the absence of any negative averment, including supporting particulars, the issue of the plaintiff's capacity to sue is not properly raised in the trial court and may not be raised on appeal. Vanelzas v. Pallardy, 166 Ga. App. 264, 304 S.E.2d 429 (1983).

Mistaken identity. — Defense of individual defendants, who offered evidence to show that the owner of the vehicle and the employer of the driver involved in an accident was a corporation, and made a motion to be dismissed as defendants, did not involve an issue which must be raised by specific negative averment under subsection (a) of this section; closest category into which this defense fits is that of "mistaken identity." Calhoun v. Herrin, 125 Ga. App. 518, 188 S.E.2d 273 (1972).

Lack of capacity due to failure to register need not be specially pled. — When a contractor has not complied with the provisions of O.C.G.A. § 48-13-37 requiring nonresident contractors to register with the state revenue commissioner in order to maintain an action to recover payment in state courts, the defense of the contractor's lack of capacity to maintain the suit may be asserted at trial without being specially pled under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9. Gorrell v. Fowler, 248 Ga. 801,

Defendant was not estopped from asserting the improper party defense on grounds that the defendant did not comply with O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-9 and 9-11-19, since those sections, which govern the issue of legal capacity and joinder of parties, have no bearing on this matter. Benschoter v. Shapiro, 204 Ga. App. 56, 418 S.E.2d 381, cert. denied, 204 Ga. App. 921, 418 S.E.2d 381 (1992).

Fraud, Mistake, and Mental Condition

Subsection (b) is exception to general liberality of pleading. — Subsection (b) of this section is an exception to general liberality of pleading permitted under the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9), and although it is construed in pari materia with the remainder of the chapter, it in effect retains a long-standing rule obtaining at common law and in many states, requiring that facts must be alleged which if proved would lead clearly to the conclusion that fraud had been committed. Continental Inv. Corp. v. Cherry, 124 Ga. App. 863, 186 S.E.2d 301 (1971).

Purpose of subsection (b) of this section is to insure that the defendant has sufficient notice to enable the defendant to prepare a responsive pleading. Hayes v. Hallmark Apts., Inc., 232 Ga. 307, 207 S.E.2d 197 (1974).

Lack of "good faith" is not same as "fraud" under this section. McLendon v. Hartford Accident & Indem. Co., 119 Ga. App. 459, 167 S.E.2d 725 (1969) (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9).

"Ulterior motive" is not required to be stated with particularity. Ace-Hi Elec., Inc. v. Steinberg, 133 Ga. App. 917, 213 S.E.2d 71 (1975).

There is no presumption of fraud; fraud must be pled and proved. Henry v. Allstate Ins. Co., 129 Ga. App. 223, 199 S.E.2d 338 (1973), overruled on other grounds, Tucker v. Chung Studio of Karate, Inc., 142 Ga. App. 818, 237 S.E.2d 223 (1977).

General allegation of fraud amounts to nothing; it is necessary that complainant show, by specifications, wherein fraud consists. Issuable facts must be charged. Candler v. Clover Realty Co., 125 Ga. App. 278, 187 S.E.2d 318 (1972).

Reasonable reliance sufficiently pled. — In claiming fraud and negligent misrepresentation, a shareholder did not fail to allege facts showing reasonable reliance as required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9(b); the amended complaint alleged that the shareholder detrimentally relied upon misrepresentations allegedly made in a press release, “as any similarly situated shareholder and investor would reasonably rely on similar press releases,” and thus it could not be said that the shareholder was bound to fail to establish reasonable reliance. Hedquist v. Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc., 284 Ga. App. 387, 643 S.E.2d 864 (2007).

Reliance not shown. — Plaintiff alleged that an attorney’s statements induced the attorney’s client to breach the contract; the plaintiff does not contend that the plaintiff personally relied on any misrepresentations by the attorney, who was the defendant. Thus, because the plaintiff’s pleading shows on the pleading’s face that the plaintiff was not damaged as a result of the plaintiff’s own reliance on any false misrepresentation made by the attorney, the plaintiff’s fraud claim failed and was properly dismissed. Fortson v. Hotard, 299 Ga. App. 800, 684 S.E.2d 18 (2009).

What petition to show. — Petition which sets forth circumstances to show that the defendant made misrepresentations knowing the misrepresentations were false, with the intention of deceiving the plaintiff, and that the plaintiff did in fact rely on the representations, was deceived thereby, and suffered damage as a result, met requirements of subsection (b) of this section. Johnson v. Cleveland, 131 Ga. App. 560, 206 S.E.2d 704 (1974).

Circumstances constituting alleged fraud must be pled with sufficient definiteness so as to advise adversary of claim which the adversary must meet. Continental Inv. Corp. v. Cherry, 124 Ga. App. 863, 186 S.E.2d 301 (1971).

Circumstances constituting fraud

must be stated with particularity. — Under subsection (b) of this section, circumstances constituting fraud must be stated with particularity; at the very least, pleader should designate occasions on which affirmative misstatements were made and by whom and in what way the statements were acted upon. Diversified Holding Corp. v. Clayton McLendon, Inc., 120 Ga. App. 455, 170 S.E.2d 863 (1969).

Face of a complaint failed to allege any specific facts to support a finding that an engineer intentionally made false statements about the condition of a retaining wall on the plaintiff’s property when the engineer sent an inspection letter to a builder, that the engineer sent the letter to the builder with the intention of inducing the plaintiff, a third party, to rely on the letter or that the plaintiff justifiably relied on the letter; as a result, the plaintiff’s complaint was legally insufficient to present a fraud claim. Dockens v. Runkle Consulting, Inc., 285 Ga. App. 896, 648 S.E.2d 80 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 668 (2007).

In a suit brought by a golf course development company against two other members of a limited liability company and a housing authority, the trial court erred by dismissing one of the member’s counterclaim asserting fraud as that member pled in detail numerous instances of false representations by the golf course development company that, when taken as true for purposes of the motion to dismiss, supported a claim of fraud. Perry Golf Course Dev., LLC v. Hous. Auth., 294 Ga. App. 387, 670 S.E.2d 171 (2008).

When claim of fraud and deceit is stated with particularity. — Construing the pleadings in the light most favorable to the pleader, although unfavorable constructions are possible, a claim of fraud and deceit is stated with particularity when a false representation is alleged to have been made by the defendant, knowing the representation to be false (or knowledge equivalent thereof), with intent to deceive the plaintiff, who relied on such fraudulent representation and sustained loss as a result thereof. Hiller v. Culbreth, 139 Ga. App. 351, 228 S.E.2d 374 (1976).

Allegations of fraud must be specific and factual as to acts comprising the fraud, under both present and former rules of pleading. Continental Inv. Corp. v. Cherry, 124 Ga. App. 863, 186 S.E.2d 301 (1971).

When a company sued the company's attorneys and accountants for fraud and aiding and abetting fraud regarding their participation in a sale of the company's assets because they did not notify the company's principal of the sale, summary judgment was properly granted in favor of the attorneys and accountants because the employee who conducted the sale had apparent authority to do so and actual fraud was insufficiently pled, under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9(b), as a response to the attorneys' and accountants' motion for summary judgment. R.W. Holdco, Inc. v. Johnson, 267 Ga. App. 859, 601 S.E.2d 177 (2004).

Student's allegations of fraud and perjury contained in a one sentence complaint were insufficient and the student did not carry the burden simply by making assertions in an appellate brief. Majeed v. Randall, 279 Ga. App. 679, 632 S.E.2d 413 (2006).

Homeowner failed to state a claim for fraud by overbilling by a lender, which resulted in the wrongful foreclosure of the homeowner's home by a law firm, because the homeowner did not allege fraud with particularity as required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9(b). The homeowner failed to state a claim under the Fair Credit Billing Act because the statute applied solely to creditors of open end credit plans pursuant to 15 U.S.C. § 1602. Fairfax v. Wells Fargo Bank, N. A., 312 Ga. App. 171, 718 S.E.2d 16 (2011).

While a client's complaint contained a count for fraud, the client failed to allege any specific facts to state a cause of action for fraud pursuant to O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-9, 51-6-1, and 51-6-2(b) because the complaint failed to allege any specific facts indicating that a former attorney intentionally made false statements to the client during the course of the representation of the client. Fortson v. Freeman, 313 Ga. App. 326, 721 S.E.2d 607 (2011).

Allegations of fraud in the complaint were well-pled and met the requirements of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9 based on the plaintiff's allegations that showed that the defendant made a promise and did not intend to perform pursuant to the promise. Mecca Constr., Inc. v. Maestro Invs., LLC, 320 Ga. App. 34, 739 S.E.2d 51 (2013).

Conclusory allegations permissible. — General allegation that the plaintiff was unable to read is a conclusory allegation, in that it does not specify why the plaintiff was unable to read, but such allegations are permissible under this section. Simmons v. Wooten, 241 Ga. 518, 246 S.E.2d 639 (1978).

Facts must accompany conclusory statements. — Conclusory statements which allege improper representation and lack of good faith must be followed by supporting facts, and categorical assertions of fraud amounting only to conclusions are not deemed admitted by a motion to dismiss. Continental Inv. Corp. v. Cherry, 124 Ga. App. 863, 186 S.E.2d 301 (1971).

Mere conclusory allegations that defendants defrauded by course of dealing in which unspecified property was purchased too dearly or sold too cheaply, without indicating what transactions were referred to, do not meet statutory standards. Continental Inv. Corp. v. Cherry, 124 Ga. App. 863, 186 S.E.2d 301 (1971).

Averments of fraud cannot be predicated upon misrepresentations of law or misrepresentations as to matters of law. Robbins v. National Bank, 241 Ga. 538, 246 S.E.2d 660 (1978).

Remedy for failure to plead fraud with particularity, as required by subsection (b) of Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 6 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9), is not a motion to dismiss but a motion for a more definite statement under Ga. L. 1972, p. 689, §§ 4 and 5 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12). Tucker v. Chung Studio of Karate, Inc., 142 Ga. App. 818, 237 S.E.2d 223 (1977).

Although fraud is required to be pled with particularity, failure to do so renders a complaint vulnerable to a motion for a more definite statement, but not, as an initial matter, to a motion to dismiss. Signal Knitting Mills, Inc. v. Roozen, 150 Ga. App. 552, 258 S.E.2d 261 (1979).

When there is a failure to plead fraud with particularity, the correct remedy is not a motion to dismiss or strike but a motion for more definite statement under Ga. L. 1972, p. 689, §§ 4 and 5 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(e)). White v. Johnson, 151 Ga. App. 345, 259 S.E.2d 731 (1979).

Failure to assert a fraud claim with particularity, as required by subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9, does not authorize an automatic dismissal, rather, the defendant's initial remedy in such a situation is to move for a more definite statement. Irvin v. Lowe's of Gainesville, Inc., 165 Ga. App. 828, 302 S.E.2d 734 (1983).

Proper remedy for seeking more particularity is by a motion for more definite statement (O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(e)) at the pleading stage or by the rules of discovery thereafter. Skelton v. Skelton, 251 Ga. 631, 308 S.E.2d 838 (1983).

Although O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9 requires that averments of fraud be pled with particularity, failure to do so does not authorize automatic dismissal. International Indem. Co. v. Terrell, 178 Ga. App. 570, 344 S.E.2d 239 (1986).

Appellants' alleged failure to plead fraud with specificity did not warrant a grant of summary judgment when the appellees had not filed a motion for a more definite statement in the trial court. Falanga v. Kirschner & Venker, P.C., 286 Ga. App. 92, 648 S.E.2d 690 (2007).

Pro se borrower's claims that a loan servicing company, rather than the claimed assignee, was the actual successor in interest to the lender, that it fraudulently transferred the property for the purpose of foreclosing on the property, and that the promissory note misrepresented the amount of the loan, were insufficient to satisfy the requirement that fraud be pled with particularity; the trial court should have granted the borrower a chance to replead. Babalola v. HSBC Bank, USA, N.A., 324 Ga. App. 750, 751 S.E.2d 545 (2013).

When claim of fraud dismissed. — With respect to an initial motion to dismiss or motion to strike, a claim of fraud should not be dismissed unless it appears beyond doubt that the pleader can prove no set of facts in support of the claim which would entitle the pleader to relief.

Tucker v. Chung Studio of Karate, Inc., 142 Ga. App. 818, 237 S.E.2d 223 (1977).

In cases involving fraud, conspiracy to defraud, and conversion of personal property, the complaint is not subject to be dismissed upon a motion unless averments therein disclose with certainty that the plaintiff would not be entitled to relief under any set of facts that could be proved in support of the claim. Vickery v. General Fin. Corp., 126 Ga. App. 403, 190 S.E.2d 833 (1972).

Allegations made by wife that she was brainwashed by husband, that he assured her he had dropped a divorce action, and that she was suffering from severe emotional difficulties when agreements pertinent to the divorce were made, were sufficient allegations of fraud and duress to require an evidentiary hearing. Thompson v. Thompson, 237 Ga. 509, 228 S.E.2d 886 (1976).

Conveyance of tract by executor in defiance of will. — Allegation of devise that executor of estate attempted to convey entire tract without authority and in complete defiance of terms of will, without giving heirs an opportunity to purchase, was a sufficient allegation of fraud. Cook v. Cook, 225 Ga. 779, 171 S.E.2d 568 (1969).

Failure to read instrument. — Evidence of defendants that the defendants did not read the instrument and relied on information given the defendants by the plaintiff and the plaintiff's attorney was insufficient to show fraud on the plaintiff's part when there was no fiduciary relationship between the plaintiff and the defendants and they dealt with each other at arm's length. Venable v. Payne, 138 Ga. App. 237, 225 S.E.2d 716 (1976).

Liability of independent contractor to third person. — Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) does not require specific allegations when liability is attempted to be established by third person to independent contractor on theory that construction was so defective as to be imminently dangerous to third persons. Welding Prods. v. S.D. Mullins Co., 127 Ga. App. 474, 193 S.E.2d 881 (1972).

Evidence of unpleaded affirmative defenses in summary judgment proceedings. — When defendants do not specially plead affirmative defenses of failure of consideration and mistake, as required by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1047, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-8) and subsection (b) of Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 9 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9), but on motion for summary judgment offer evidence in support of such defenses, thus creating issues of fact on motion for summary judgment, the moving party is not entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Bailey v. Polote, 152 Ga. App. 255, 262 S.E.2d 551 (1979).

Will propounder's claim in a motion for a directed verdict that caveators failed to plead fraud with particularity was procedurally improper as the proper remedy to seek more particularity was by a motion for a more definite statement or by the rules of discovery. Odom v. Hughes, 293 Ga. 447, 748 S.E.2d 839 (2013).

Motion to dismiss fraud claim properly denied. — In a medical negligence, wrongful death, and fraud action, a trial court properly denied a hospital's motion to dismiss the fraud claim against the hospital and allowed the suing spouse to amend the complaint to include the specificity for a fraud claim required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9 as sufficient allegations were made that the hospital concealed certain events leading to the death of the decedent/patient and that hospital employees intentionally made false statements about the decedent's condition with the intention of inducing the spouse to rely on the statements or that the spouse justifiably relied on the alleged false statements, which involved the improper placement of a feeding tube into the lung of the decedent/patient. Roberts v. Nessim, 297 Ga. App. 278, 676 S.E.2d 734 (2009).

Conditions Precedent

Requirements inapplicable to contractual claims. — Pleading and proof requirements relating to conditions precedent, O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-9 and 13-3-4, are inapplicable to contractual claims. Cowen v. Snellgrove, 169 Ga. App. 271, 312 S.E.2d 623 (1983).

Claim for breach of contract without allegation of occurrence of conditions precedent. — Under the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9), a complainant can plead a claim for breach of contract without alleging performance or occurrence of conditions precedent; however, in order to prevail at trial the complainant would be required to prove performance or occurrence of conditions precedent. McDonough Constr. Co. v. McLendon Elec. Co., 242 Ga. 510, 250 S.E.2d 424 (1978).

Under the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) it is no longer necessary for a plaintiff in a contract action to allege performance or occurrence of a condition precedent in the plaintiff's complaint. Olympic Constr., Inc. v. Drywall Interiors, Inc., 180 Ga. App. 142, 348 S.E.2d 688 (1986).

General denial that conditions precedent performed. — When complainant alleges generally that all conditions precedent have been performed or have occurred, and the defendant denies that allegation generally, but the complainant fails to insist upon the right to specific and particular denial, general allegation stands denied by general denial and requirement of proof of performance of conditions precedent remains in effect just as it would if there had been no allegation in the complaint as to the conditions precedent. McDonough Constr. Co. v. McLendon Elec. Co., 242 Ga. 510, 250 S.E.2d 424 (1978).

Mere general denial of allegation that all conditions precedent have been performed does not constitute admission of performance of those conditions precedent. McLendon Elec. Co. v. McDonough Constr. Co., 149 Ga. App. 115, 253 S.E.2d 772 (1979).

Denial of performance or occurrence after filing of answer. — While bringing in affirmative defense of denial of performance or occurrence of conditions precedent 15 months after original answer was filed is not beneficial to orderly disposition of case, it is, nevertheless, permitted under the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9). Sasser & Co. v.

Griffin, 133 Ga. App. 83, 210 S.E.2d 34 (1974).

Special Damages

Special damages to be pled with particularity. — Subsection (g) of this section requires that items of special damage shall be pled with particularity. Signal Oil & Gas Co. v. Conway, 126 Ga. App. 711, 191 S.E.2d 624, rev'd on other grounds, 229 Ga. 849, 194 S.E.2d 909 (1972).

Since the appellee did not include in an amended complaint a plea for special damages under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9(g), the defamation count of the amended complaint was limited to a claim alleging slander per se; employment of the Milkovich factors determined only that the alleged opinion was actionable as slander, but the Milkovich factors had no bearing on whether the words used constituted slander per se; statements which could have been interpreted as having the purpose of injuring the appellee's business by stating or implying that the appellee was going out of the real estate development business in which the appellee was still engaged and leaving the area were not recognizable as injurious on their face, and the appellant was entitled to summary judgment on the appellee's slander per se claim. Bellemeade, LLC v. Stoker, 280 Ga. 635, 631 S.E.2d 693 (2006).

Special damages not recovered. — Special damages could not be recovered since the complaint did not specifically state what special damages were sought. Tri-County Inv. Group v. Southern States, Inc., 231 Ga. App. 632, 500 S.E.2d 22 (1998).

By failing to plead special damages with particularity as required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9(g), the scoutmaster did not state a claim for defamation. McGee v. Gast, 257 Ga. App. 882, 572 S.E.2d 398 (2002).

Amendment of complaint. — When the plaintiffs amended the plaintiff's complaint to plead special damages by dollar amount pursuant to a court order which gave no deadline for compliance, the amendment, filed prior to the entry of a pretrial order, was proper, timely, and should have been considered by the trial court. Torok v. Yost, 194 Ga. App. 94, 389 S.E.2d 793 (1989).

9-11-9.1. Affidavit to accompany charge of professional malpractice.

(a) In any action for damages alleging professional malpractice against:

(1) A professional licensed by the State of Georgia and listed in subsection (g) of this Code section;

(2) A domestic or foreign partnership, corporation, professional corporation, business trust, general partnership, limited partnership, limited liability company, limited liability partnership, association, or any other legal entity alleged to be liable based upon the action or inaction of a professional licensed by the State of Georgia and listed in subsection (g) of this Code section; or

(3) Any licensed health care facility alleged to be liable based upon the action or inaction of a health care professional licensed by the State of Georgia and listed in subsection (g) of this Code section, the plaintiff shall be required to file with the complaint an affidavit of an expert competent to testify, which affidavit shall set forth specifically at least one negligent act or omission claimed to exist and the factual basis for each such claim.

(b) The contemporaneous affidavit filing requirement pursuant to subsection (a) of this Code section shall not apply to any case in which the period of limitation will expire or there is a good faith basis to believe it will expire on any claim stated in the complaint within ten days of the date of filing the complaint and, because of time constraints, the plaintiff has alleged that an affidavit of an expert could not be prepared. In such cases, if the attorney for the plaintiff files with the complaint an affidavit in which the attorney swears or affirms that his or her law firm was not retained by the plaintiff more than 90 days prior to the expiration of the period of limitation on the plaintiff's claim or claims, the plaintiff shall have 45 days after the filing of the complaint to supplement the pleadings with the affidavit. The trial court shall not extend such time for any reason without consent of all parties. If either affidavit is not filed within the periods specified in this Code section, or it is determined that the law firm of the attorney who filed the affidavit permitted in lieu of the contemporaneous filing of an expert affidavit or any attorney who appears on the pleadings was retained by the plaintiff more than 90 days prior to the expiration of the period of limitation, the complaint shall be dismissed for failure to state a claim.

(c) This Code section shall not be construed to extend any applicable period of limitation, except that if the affidavits are filed within the periods specified in this Code section, the filing of the affidavit of an expert after the expiration of the period of limitations shall be considered timely and shall provide no basis for a statute of limitations defense.

(d) If a complaint alleging professional malpractice is filed without the contemporaneous filing of an affidavit as permitted by subsection (b) of this Code section, the defendant shall not be required to file an answer to the complaint until 30 days after the filing of the affidavit of an expert, and no discovery shall take place until after the filing of the answer.

(e) If a plaintiff files an affidavit which is allegedly defective, and the defendant to whom it pertains alleges, with specificity, by motion to dismiss filed on or before the close of discovery, that said affidavit is defective, the plaintiff's complaint shall be subject to dismissal for failure to state a claim, except that the plaintiff may cure the alleged defect by amendment pursuant to Code Section 9-11-15 within 30 days of service of the motion alleging that the affidavit is defective. The trial court may, in the exercise of its discretion, extend the time for filing said amendment or response to the motion, or both, as it shall determine justice requires.

(f) If a plaintiff fails to file an affidavit as required by this Code section and the defendant raises the failure to file such an affidavit by motion to dismiss filed contemporaneously with its initial responsive pleading, such complaint shall not be subject to the renewal provisions of Code Section 9-2-61 after the expiration of the applicable period of limitation, unless a court determines that the plaintiff had the requisite affidavit within the time required by this Code section and the failure to file the affidavit was the result of a mistake.

(g) The professions to which this Code section shall apply are:

- (1) Architects;
- (2) Attorneys at law;

- (3) Audiologists;
- (4) Certified public accountants;
- (5) Chiropractors;
- (6) Clinical social workers;
- (7) Dentists;
- (8) Dietitians;
- (9) Land surveyors;
- (10) Marriage and family therapists;
- (11) Medical doctors;
- (12) Nurses;
- (13) Occupational therapists;
- (14) Optometrists;
- (15) Osteopathic physicians;
- (16) Pharmacists;
- (17) Physical therapists;
- (18) Physicians' assistants;
- (19) Podiatrists;
- (20) Professional counselors;
- (21) Professional engineers;
- (22) Psychologists;
- (23) Radiological technicians;
- (24) Respiratory therapists;
- (25) Speech-language pathologists; or

(26) Veterinarians. (Code 1981, § 9-11-9.1, enacted by Ga. L. 1987, p. 887, § 3; Ga. L. 1989, p. 419, § 3; Ga. L. 1997, p. 916, § 1; Ga. L. 2005, p. 1, § 3/SB 3; Ga. L. 2006, p. 72, § 9/SB 465; Ga. L. 2007, p. 216, § 1/HB 221.)

Code Commission notes. — Pursuant to Code Section 28-9-5, in 2002, “Dietitians” was substituted for “Dieticians” in paragraph (f)(7) (now paragraph (g)(8)).

Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 1997, p. 916, § 2, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that the amendment to this Code section applies to actions filed on or after July 1, 1997.

Ga. L. 2005, p. 1, § 1/SB 3, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: “The General Assembly finds that there presently exists a crisis affecting the provision and quality of health care services in this state. Hospitals and other health care providers in this state are having increasing difficulty in locating liability insurance and, when such hospitals and providers are able to locate such insurance, the insurance is extremely costly. The result of this crisis is the potential for a diminution of the availability of access to health care services and a resulting adverse impact on the health and well-being of the citizens of this state. The General Assembly further finds that certain civil justice and health care regulatory reforms as provided in this Act will promote predictability and improvement in the provision of quality health care services and the resolution of health care liability claims and will thereby assist in promoting the provision of health care liability insurance by insurance providers. The General Assembly further finds that certain needed reforms affect not only health care liability claims but also other civil actions and accordingly provides such general reforms in this Act."

Ga. L. 2007, p. 216, § 3/HB 221, not codified by the General Assembly, provides: "This Act shall become effective on July 1, 2007, and shall apply to any action filed on or after July 1, 2007."

General Consideration

Constitutionality. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 does not violate the constitutional prohibition of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para III against the inclusion of more than one subject matter in a bill or in a law or a matter in the body different from the title since the caption of the overall act gives the public adequate notice that the act contains matter relating to malpractice actions against professionals generally. Lutz v. Foran, 262 Ga. 819, 427 S.E.2d 248 (1993).

Because nothing in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 imposed a cost or fee for filing or obtaining an expert affidavit, and because the law applied uniformly to any person or entity bringing a lawsuit for professional negligence, the trial court did not err when the court ruled that the statute withstood the constitutional challenges raised by the clients. Walker v. Cromartie, 287 Ga. 511, 696 S.E.2d 654 (2010).

No equal protection violation. — Trial court did not treat similarly situated individuals differently, based on the statute's application of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1(b) (now (e)), because whether it was a plaintiff filing a legal malpractice claim or, as here, a defendant filing a counterclaim more than 10 days before the expiration of the statute of limitations, the party would have been required to file an expert's affidavit contemporaneously with the claim and would not be entitled to the 45-day extension period of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1(b) (now (e)); accordingly, there was no equal protection violation under U.S. Const., amend. 14 in the dismissal of the defendant's counterclaim for failure to file the affidavit in a timely manner. Landau v. Davis Law Group, P.C., 269 Ga. App. 904, 605 S.E.2d 461 (2004).

Purpose of section. — Purpose of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 is to reduce the number of frivolous malpractice suits being filed, not to require a plaintiff to prove a prima facie case entitling the plaintiff to recover and capable of withstanding a motion for summary judgment before the defendant files an answer. Bowen v. Adams, 203 Ga. App. 123, 416 S.E.2d 102, cert. denied, 202 Ga. App. 905, 416 S.E.2d 102 (1992).

Consideration of affidavits validity limited to the four corners of the document. — Requirements of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 were satisfied when the plaintiff attached an affidavit from a competent expert even though six months later the expert was not able to confirm the negligent acts alleged. Sawyer v. DeKalb Medical Ctr., Inc., 234 Ga. App. 54, 506 S.E.2d 197 (1998).

Section applies to actions in tort or contract. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 applies to any action for professional malpractice by negligent act or omission, sounding in tort or by breach of contract for failure to perform professional services in accordance with the professional obligation of care. Richmond Leasing Co. v. Cooper, Cooper, Maioriello & Stalnaker, 207 Ga. App. 623, 428 S.E.2d 603 (1993).

Section applied retroactively. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 is procedural in nature and may be applied retroactively.

Precision Planning, Inc. v. Wall, 193 Ga. App. 331, 387 S.E.2d 610 (1989); Blackmon v. Thompson, 195 Ga. App. 589, 394 S.E.2d 795 (1990).

In a wrongful death action, because the 45-day grace period under former O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1(b) (now (e)) was constitutionally required, an administratrix was entitled to the benefit of the statute's provisions and retroactive application. Rockdale Health Sys. v. Holder, 280 Ga. App. 298, 640 S.E.2d 52 (2006).

The 1997 amendments to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 applied prospectively, not retroactively to an action filed prior to July 1, 1997. Mug A Bug Pest Control v. Vester, 270 Ga. 407, 509 S.E.2d 925 (1999), overruling Vester v. Mug A Bug Pest Control, Inc., 231 Ga. App. 644, 500 S.E.2d 406 (1998).

Since legislative intent controls and the legislature expressly stated that the 1997 amendments to the statute should be applied only to actions filed after the effective date, July 1, 1997, the court could not apply the amendments retroactively. Mug A Bug Pest Control v. Vester, 270 Ga. 407, 509 S.E.2d 925 (1999).

Collateral estoppel barred professional negligence action. — Trial court properly granted a defending corporation summary judgment in a professional negligence suit because the identical issue of the corporation's negligent performance was addressed in a federal lawsuit; thus, collateral estoppel barred the action. Coffee Iron Works v. QORE, Inc., 322 Ga. App. 137, 744 S.E.2d 114 (2013).

Applicable to counterclaims. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 applies to the assertion of a counterclaim by a defendant. Hardman v. Knight, 203 Ga. App. 519, 417 S.E.2d 338, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 906, 417 S.E.2d 338 (1992).

Counterclaim was subject to requirement that expert's affidavit be filed. Jordan v. Lamberth, Bonapfel, Cifelli, Willson & Stokes, 206 Ga. App. 178, 424 S.E.2d 859 (1992).

Amendments to pleadings to assert counterclaims with respect to the filing of the expert affidavit should be subject to the limitations of subsection (e) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1. Hardman v. Knight, 203 Ga. App. 519, 417 S.E.2d 338, cert.

denied, 203 Ga. App. 906, 417 S.E.2d 338 (1992).

Amendment of affidavit allowed. — When an affidavit has been filed with the complaint, the affidavit can be amended to respond to challenges to the affidavit's sufficiency. Washington v. Georgia Baptist Medical Ctr., 223 Ga. App. 762, 478 S.E.2d 892 (1996), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, Porquez v. Washington, 268 Ga. 649, 492 S.E.2d 665 (1997).

Trial court did not err in denying dismissal of a patient's medical malpractice complaint against physicians and their employers, based on the physicians' claim that the patient failed to file a timely expert affidavit which raised the claim of lack of informed consent, as required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1, as the patient's initial complaint had an expert affidavit timely filed, and thereafter, an amended affidavit asserting the lack of informed consent was filed pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15; dismissal was not warranted unless an expert affidavit was never initially filed in a timely manner. Bhansali v. Moncada, 275 Ga. App. 221, 620 S.E.2d 404 (2005).

Amendment remedied affidavit deficiency. — Because the patient filed an amended medical malpractice complaint with the affidavit of the second affiant-physician, who was a board-certified neurosurgeon and had been regularly engaged in the active practice of neurosurgery for at least three of the preceding five years, the patient used the cure provision in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9, and the trial court erred in dismissing the patient's action based upon a competency determination concerning only the original affiant-physician. Fisher v. Gala, 325 Ga. App. 800, 754 S.E.2d 160 (2014).

Prohibition against cure by amendments did not pertain when plaintiff filed purported affidavit, albeit a defective one, and thus the exception to that prohibition was not considered by the court as an avenue for the plaintiff to escape dismissal of the plaintiff's suit. Phoebe Putney Mem. Hosp. v. Skipper, 235 Ga. App. 534, 510 S.E.2d 101 (1998).

Amendment of complaint to cure defective affidavit allowed. — In a professional malpractice action, when a plaintiff files a complaint accompanied by an affidavit from a person not competent to testify as an expert in the action, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1(e) permits the plaintiff to cure that defect by filing an amended complaint with the affidavit of a second, competent expert. Gala v. Fisher, 770 S.E.2d 879, No. S14G0919, 2015 Ga. LEXIS 198 (2015).

Section not restricted to medical malpractice. — Applicability of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 is not restricted to medical malpractice actions. Housing Auth. v. Greene, 259 Ga. 435, 383 S.E.2d 867 (1989).

Section applies to professional malpractice action. — While O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 was enacted as section 3 of the Medical Malpractice Act of 1987, which applies to medical-malpractice actions or health-care providers, section 3 of the Act applies to “any action for damages alleging professional malpractice.” Housing Auth. v. Greene, 259 Ga. 435, 383 S.E.2d 867 (1989).

While the trial court erred in granting summary judgment against a patient in a medical malpractice action based on a failure to attach an expert affidavit pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 because the complaint could be construed as alleging claims of ordinary negligence, to the extent the complaint could be read to allege professional malpractice claims, summary judgment was proper; moreover, there were instances in which actions performed by a professional were nevertheless not professional acts constituting professional malpractice, but, rather, were acts of simple negligence which would not require proof by expert evidence. Brown v. Tift County Hosp. Auth., 280 Ga. App. 847, 635 S.E.2d 184 (2006).

State court properly denied a clinic’s motion to dismiss a negligence complaint which arose out of injuries a patient allegedly sustained by and through the negligence of one of the clinic’s employees as the patient was not suing for medical malpractice, the employee was not a licensed health care provider, and thus the patient was not required to file the necessary affidavit required under O.C.G.A.

§ 9-11-9.1. Mt. Orthopedics & Sports Med., P.C. v. Williams, 284 Ga. App. 885, 644 S.E.2d 868 (2007).

Former federal inmate’s argument, alleging that the Bivens decision should be extended to the inmate’s Eighth Amendment claim against private prison employees because the affidavit requirement of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1(a) made recovery only theoretical under state law, failed; not only did the complaint not allege a claim for medical malpractice as defined by O.C.G.A. § 9-3-70, but even if the complaint did the inmate stood in the same shoes as anyone else in Georgia filing a professional malpractice claim and was subject to no stricter rules than the rest of Georgia’s residents. Alba v. Montford, 517 F.3d 1249 (11th Cir. 2008), cert. denied, 129 S. Ct. 632, 172 L.Ed.2d 619 (2008).

Trial court did not err in denying a psychiatrist’s motion for summary judgment in a patient’s medical malpractice action because whether the psychiatrist breached duties arising from the psychiatrist-patient relationship was an issue of fact; pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1, the patient presented expert testimony that the psychiatrist’s breaches of the duty of care directly resulted in the foreseeable harm of the patient’s attempting suicide. Peterson v. Reeves, 315 Ga. App. 370, 727 S.E.2d 171 (2012).

In a medical malpractice action, a certified nurse midwife (CNM) should be considered a member of the same profession as a registered professional nurse (RN) and can offer an opinion on the standard of care exercised by a RN because the Georgia Registered Professional Nurse Practice Act, O.C.G.A. § 43-26-1 et seq., requires a CNM to be licensed as a RN, and both RNs and CNMs are regulated by the Georgia Board of Nursing; under the regulatory scheme, a CNM was a RN who had advanced training in a specialized area; and the expert affidavit statute lists only nurses, and the statute does not have a separate listing for CNMs. Dempsey v. Gwinnett Hosp. Sys., 330 Ga. App. 469, 765 S.E.2d 525 (2014).

Professional malpractice or ordinary negligence. — Trial court must decide as a matter of law if the negligence alleged by a plaintiff is, in fact, ordinary negligence or professional malpractice, requiring an expert's affidavit. Drawdy v. DOT, 228 Ga. App. 338, 491 S.E.2d 521 (1997).

Dismissal of an action filed by children against a health care center that operated a nursing home alleging that their parent's injuries in a fall resulted from the nursing home's failure to follow emergency room instructions to take fall precautions was proper because the children did not file an expert affidavit contemporaneously with the complaint as required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1(a); their claim sounded in professional negligence, not ordinary negligence, because the nursing home was not given a list of specific precautions to be implemented, and the decision as to what specific precautions to take was left to the medical judgment of its staff. Gaddis v. Chatsworth Health Care Ctr., Inc., 282 Ga. App. 615, 639 S.E.2d 399 (2006).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in vacating the court's initial order dismissing an administratrix's wrongful death complaint for failure to timely file an expert's affidavit as the record revealed that the original complaint, although not styled as a wrongful death action, nonetheless pled that a hospital's negligence caused the decedent's death and sought a judgment against the hospital in an amount in excess of $10,000 for all damages recoverable by law. Rockdale Health Sys. v. Holder, 280 Ga. App. 298, 640 S.E.2d 52 (2006).

Because a patient's complaint was so general and unspecific that the complaint could be construed to allege that a medical center was vicariously liable for the professional negligence of a licensed health care professional, as opposed to ordinary negligence, the patient was required to file an expert affidavit under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1. Health Mgmt. Assocs. v. Bazemore, 286 Ga. App. 285, 648 S.E.2d 749 (2007).

Patient's complaint that a hospital nurse had administered the wrong medication sounded in professional negligence, not ordinary negligence; thus, an affidavit was required under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1(a). Wellstar Health Sys. v. Painter, 288 Ga. App. 659, 655 S.E.2d 251 (2007).

Trial court did not err in granting summary judgment in favor of a hospital and the hospital's employees in a surviving spouse's wrongful death action on the ground that the spouse's claims sounded in professional negligence, not ordinary negligence, which required an affidavit under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 because whether or not the treatments ordered by the husband's treating physician and carried out by the employees were timely was a question of medical judgment, and the duties involved in the administration of medications and treatments constituted a professional service; the spouse pointed to no admissible medical testimony to support the spouse's claim that the failure of the lab technician to call the intensive care unit (ICU) when the blood arrived caused the decedent's death, and the question of whether or not the lab technician's failure to call the ICU, resulting in the failure of the ICU to administer a blood transfusion, caused the decedent's death required expert testimony, which was excluded from the case. Pattman v. Mann, 307 Ga. App. 413, 701 S.E.2d 232 (2010).

Because a patient's complaint did not allege any negligence in the administration of a vaccination, but rather that a medical assistant was negligent in attempting to prevent the patient's fall from an examination table, there was no need for an expert affidavit under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1(a); therefore, the trial court erred in dismissing the action. Kerr v. OB/GYN Assocs., 314 Ga. App. 40, 723 S.E.2d 302 (2012).

Trial court did not err by finding that a slip and fall case was one of ordinary negligence as opposed to medical malpractice because under the circumstances of the nurses knowing that the patient had been determined a fall risk, the jury could, without the help of expert testimony, find that the nurses and the nursing assistant failed to exercise ordinary care by leaving the patient unattended in the bathroom while they cleaned the room. Emory Healthcare, Inc. v. Pardue, 328 Ga. App. 664, 760 S.E.2d 674 (2014).

Affidavit filed with inconsistent third-party complaint. — In a breach of warranty action involving a survey commissioned by the defendants, the defenplaintiff's third-party complaint against the surveyor and filing of an expert's affidavit stating that the survey was incorrect did not estop the defendant from relying on the survey in defense of the action. Ewers v. Cooper, 217 Ga. App. 434, 457 S.E.2d 705 (1995).

Contribution and indemnity from third-party defendant. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 is applicable when a third-party defendant has been brought into an action based on assertions by a third-party plaintiff that, under allegations in the plaintiff's complaint, the third-party defendant is an unidentified joint tortfeasor with the third-party plaintiff, and, therefore, if the plaintiffs are entitled to an award of damages against the third-party plaintiff, the third-party plaintiff is entitled to contribution and indemnity from the third-party defendant. Housing Auth. v. Greene, 259 Ga. 435, 383 S.E.2d 867 (1989).

Affidavit requirement inapplicable to claim for breach of fiduciary duty. — Action by husband and wife against attorney arising from an adulterous relationship between the attorney and wife during the period the attorney was representing her did not provide the basis for a malpractice claim, requiring an expert affidavit, but the plaintiffs did have a claim for breach of fiduciary duty based on the attorney-client relationship. Tante v. Herring, 264 Ga. 694, 453 S.E.2d 686 (1994).

Affidavit requirement inapplicable to claim for wrongful death. — Trial court properly refused to dismiss a plaintiff's claim asserting tortious termination of life support based on the defendant's argument that it was really a medical malpractice claim and, therefore, required an expert medical affidavit under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1; because such a claim is a suit for wrongful death, not medical malpractice, no expert medical affidavit was necessary. DeKalb Med. Ctr., Inc. v. Hawkins, 288 Ga. App. 840, 655 S.E.2d 823 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 477 (Ga. 2008).

Affidavit requirement inapplicable to intentional tort claim. — Trial court erroneously dismissed a couple's complaint upon grounds that the complaint failed to state a claim upon which relief could be granted because the complaint alleged intentional torts against an attorney and that attorney's law firm, and not claims of professional malpractice or negligence; therefore, the complaint was not required to be accompanied by an expert's affidavit pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1. Walker v. Wallis, 289 Ga. App. 676, 658 S.E.2d 217 (2008).

Affidavit requirement inapplicable in bankruptcy court. — Chapter 13 debtors' adversary proceeding for legal malpractice, filed in a bankruptcy court, did not require an affidavit concerning the standard of care under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 because the federal rules of pleading applied to the proceeding. Pullen v. Cornelison (In re Pullen), No. 07-65415-MHM, 2009 Bankr. LEXIS 817 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. Mar. 31, 2009).

Section inapplicable in federal cases. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 applies exclusively to actions brought in state court and is inapplicable in federal cases. Boone v. Knight, 131 F.R.D. 609 (S.D. Ga. 1990).

Federal diversity action. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 is in direct conflict with Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 8(a) which requires only notice pleading and does not apply in a federal diversity action. Baird v. Celis, 41 F. Supp. 2d 1358 (N.D. Ga. 1999).

Defendants' motion to dismiss for failure to file an expert affidavit with the complaint, or within 45 days of the filing thereof as set forth in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1, failed because that statute was inapplicable in diversity actions; the sufficiency of the heirs' complaint was judged by the standard set out in Fed. R. Civ. P. 8, which did not require the affidavit of an expert. Roberts v. Jones, 390 F. Supp. 2d 1333 (M.D. Ga. May 9, 2005).

Federal application unclear. — When it was not clear at the time the plaintiff filed the plaintiff's medical malpractice complaint that O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 would apply in a diversity action in federal court, the district court erred in dismissing the plaintiff's claims with prejudice. Instead, the court should have granted the plaintiff leave to amend the complaint. Brown v. Nichols, 8 F.3d 770 (11th Cir. 1993).

Affidavit requirement applies only to professionals defined in Code. — Affidavit requirements of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 apply only to those professions recognized under Georgia law in O.C.G.A. §§ 14-7-2(2), 14-10-2(2), and 43-1-24. Gillis v. Goodgame, 262 Ga. 117, 414 S.E.2d 197 (1992).

Trial court erred in dismissing real estate developers' professional negligence claims against a civil engineering contractor based on the developers' failure to file an expert affidavit with their third party complaint because the civil engineering contractor was neither a professional licensed by the State of Georgia and listed in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 nor a licensed health care facility, and, consequently, the developers were not required to file an expert affidavit with their third party complaint. Sembler Atlanta Dev. I, LLC v. URS/Dames & Moore, Inc., 268 Ga. App. 7, 601 S.E.2d 397 (2004).

When affidavit required. — Although the law strictly requires an expert affidavit to be filed pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 in the appropriate case, this is only when the negligent doing of a thing must be proved by reliance upon a general standard of care or by rules of procedure used by others competently performing the same service. Roebuck v. Smith, 204 Ga. App. 20, 418 S.E.2d 165 (1992).

Plaintiff's claim for injuries based on the failure of hospital agents and employees to raise bed rails required an expert affidavit since whether the side rails should have been in an "up" or "down" position was a question requiring the exercise of professional skill and judgment. Robinson v. Medical Ctr., 217 Ga. App. 8, 456 S.E.2d 254 (1995).

When allegations by an inmate against the medical director of a correctional institution sounded in malpractice, a supporting affidavit was required. Brooks v. Barry, 223 Ga. App. 648, 478 S.E.2d 616 (1996), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 899, 118 S. Ct. 246, 139 L. Ed. 2d 176 (1997).

Since the count clearly alleged that the plaintiff's spouse did not receive adequate medical care, which meant the plaintiff had to rely on the knowledge of experts with regard to what the applicable standard of care was and whether that standard was breached, the plaintiff was required to file an expert affidavit with the plaintiff's complaint. Epps v. Gwinnett County, 231 Ga. App. 664, 499 S.E.2d 657 (1998).

Since no affidavit was filed pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1, an administrator of an estate was allowed to maintain claims against a nursing care facility only with regard to actions or omissions in executing nonprofessional work duties relating to the decedent's fall at the facility, and was not allowed to maintain claims based on medical questions concerning specialized expert knowledge; the alleged failure to adequately monitor for injuries and assure proper medical care fell within the realm of professional medical decision making, but the allegation that the fall was not properly documented encompassed an administrative task not involving professional medical judgment. Brown v. Tift Health Care, Inc., 279 Ga. App. 164, 630 S.E.2d 788 (2006).

Trial court erred in dismissing a client's amended legal malpractice complaint, which included fraud and breach of fiduciary duty, as the client's failure to file an expert affidavit pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 did not result in an automatic adjudication on the merits or preclude an amendment after the expiration of the relevant statute of limitation; further, the appeals court disagreed that the client's fraud and breach of fiduciary duty claims were barred because the claims arose from the same factual allegations as the original claim for professional negligence, and because the fraud claim was grounded in intentional conduct, the claim did not need to be accompanied by an expert affidavit. Shuler v. Hicks, Massey & Gardner, LLP, 280 Ga. App. 738, 634 S.E.2d 786 (2006).

Trial court properly dismissed a wrongful death claim by a deceased nursing home resident's children, alleging that the nursing home staff failed to properly administer the resident's medications, as such task involved the professional skill and judgment of a nurse, and nurses were licensed professionals with specialized knowledge pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 43-26-3(6) to which O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 explicitly applied; as the children failed to comply with the expert affidavit requirement, dismissal of that aspect of the claim was proper. Williams v. Alvista Healthcare Ctr., Inc., 283 Ga. App. 613, 642 S.E.2d 232 (2007).

Hospital's admission that a nurse had given a patient the wrong medication did not relieve the patient of the obligation to file an affidavit under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1. Wellstar Health Sys. v. Painter, 288 Ga. App. 659, 655 S.E.2d 251 (2007).

Denial of practice groups' motion to dismiss parents' medical malpractice action based on the parents' failure to comply with the expert affidavit requirement of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 was error because a prior appellate decision concluded that, at the time the litigation was brought, the question of whether a plaintiff was subject to the expert affidavit requirement depended not on the identity of the defendant, but on the cause of action, and explicitly held that, without an expert affidavit, the parents could have sustained only an ordinary negligence claim; the trial court's ruling, which held that because the practice groups were not licensed professionals or licensed health care facilities, no expert affidavit was needed, violated the law of the case. The parents could not have successfully argued on the appeal that the parents malpractice claims were exempt from the expert affidavit requirement. Atlanta Women's Health Group, P.C. v. Clemons, 299 Ga. App. 102, 681 S.E.2d 754 (2009).

Trial court properly dismissed a title company's complaint against an attorney for failure to comply with the expert affidavit requirement of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 because the complaint set forth a legal malpractice action by asserting that the attorney breached a legal services agreement to provide an accurate title commitment on certain real property, therefore, the complaint required compliance with the expert affidavit requirement of § 9-11-9.1. Old Republic Nat'l Title Ins. Co. v. Atty. Title Servs., 299 Ga. App. 6, 682 S.E.2d 134 (2009), cert. denied, No. S09C1913, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 798 (Ga. 2009).

Trial court correctly determined that a plaintiff's failure-to-warn claim against the state, arising out of the prescription of medicine for the plaintiff while the plaintiff was in a state-run hospital, alleged professional negligence and that the plaintiff's failure to comply with the affidavit requirements of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1(a) warranted dismissal of the complaint. Nail v. State, 301 Ga. App. 7, 686 S.E.2d 483 (2009).

To the extent the "inverse condemnation" action sought compensation for damages to the property based on allegations of professional engineering negligence, the owner was required to file an expert affidavit with the complaint and dismissal was proper given the owner's failure to file an affidavit. Bray v. DOT, 324 Ga. App. 315, 750 S.E.2d 391 (2013).

When affidavit not required. — Plaintiffs were not required to attach a supporting expert affidavit to the plaintiff's complaint against the hospital authority based inter alia on medical malpractice claims stemming from alleged acts of negligence by the authority's agents and employees. Dozier v. Clayton County Hosp. Auth., 206 Ga. App. 62, 424 S.E.2d 632 (1992).

Affidavit requirement applies against a hospital not merely when liability is based upon the doctrine of respondeat superior but when liability is further grounded upon the averment of acts or omissions requiring the exercise of professional skill and judgment by agents or employees who themselves are recognized as "professionals" under O.C.G.A. §§ 14-7-2(2), 14-10-2(2), and 43-1-24. Dozier v. Clayton County Hosp. Auth., 206 Ga. App. 62, 424 S.E.2d 632 (1992).

When the plaintiff can prove negligence or breach without proof of a customary procedure and violation of the procedure, the case is not a professional malpractice case and O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 does not apply to require an "expert's affidavit". Razete v. Preferred Research, Inc., 197 Ga. App. 69, 397 S.E.2d 489 (1990); Flowers v. Memorial Medical Center, Inc., 198 Ga. App. 651, 402 S.E.2d 541 (1991).

After the plaintiff's foot was burned by a lamp from which the heat shield had been removed during surgery — the alleged decision being to obtain more light by removing the heat shield or other protective device from the lamp, as opposed to bringing in another lamp or increasing the volume of overhead lights — the claim was not necessarily one of medical malpractice. If that particular act, coupled with leaving the lamp near the foot for an extended period, was the heart of the claim, then simple negligence, not medical malpractice, was involved, and medical testimony was not essential to establish liability. Jones v. Bates, 261 Ga. 240, 403 S.E.2d 804 (1991).

Affidavit was not required in an action by the estate of a deceased inmate against a city, county, sheriff, and medical personnel alleging claims arising from failure to respond to the inmate's request for treatment of the inmate's diabetic condition. Howard v. City of Columbus, 219 Ga. App. 569, 466 S.E.2d 51 (1995).

Portion of a complaint alleging that advance warning signs gave plaintiff inaccurate and confusing information as the plaintiff approached a construction site charged the violation of a mandatory Manual On Uniform Traffic Control Devices standard and did not need an expert affidavit. DOT v. Cushway, 240 Ga. App. 464, 523 S.E.2d 340 (1999).

When the plaintiff claimed the defendant breached a duty of privacy and tortiously interfered with the employment contract, the claims were based on the defendant's intentional act of telling the plaintiff's employer about the plaintiff's medical condition, and because the plaintiff made no claim against the defendant based on professional negligence, the plaintiff did not have to attach an expert affidavit to the complaint. Johnson v. Rodier, 242 Ga. App. 496, 529 S.E.2d 442 (2000).

O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 did not require clients who filed an action against a law firm and several attorneys to file an expert's affidavit when the clients asserted claims for intentional breach of contract, intentional breach of a fiduciary duty, and fraud, and although the trial court properly dismissed the clients' claim for legal malpractice because the legal malpractice claim was not supported by an expert's affidavit, the trial court erred by dismissing the client's other claims. Smith v. Morris, Manning & Martin, LLP, 264 Ga. App. 24, 589 S.E.2d 840 (2003).

Trial court properly dismissed a patient's complaint against a hospital authority, a hospital, and a doctor based on the patient's failure to timely file an expert affidavit in support of claims of professional malpractice, as required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1(a), as the allegations were based on a misdiagnosis of the patient's medical condition, and not due to a simple clerical or administrative error and, thus, sounded in malpractice. James v. Hosp. Auth., 278 Ga. App. 657, 629 S.E.2d 472 (2006).

O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 did not require a patient to file an expert affidavit with a complaint for fraud, misrepresentation, and deceit against a physician because the patient's allegations that the physician knowingly and intentionally misrepresented the nature and quality of a local hospital's equipment in order to induce the patient to have heart surgery at the local hospital rather than at another hospital preferred by the patient involved no question of professional judgment; the application of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 was limited to actions for professional negligence, and assertions of intentional misconduct against a professional fell outside of the statute's scope. Murrah v. Fender, 282 Ga. App. 634, 639 S.E.2d 595 (2006).

Trial court erred in dismissing a wrongful death claim by children of a deceased nursing home resident, based on their allegation that the nursing home violated O.C.G.A. § 31-8-108(a)(2) of the Bill of Rights for Residents of Long-Term Care Facilities by not documenting the resident's complaints of chest pain, as the claim was based on the nonprofessional, administrative aspects of running the facility and, accordingly, it was not subject to the pleading requirement of an expert affidavit pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1. Williams v. Alvista Healthcare Ctr., Inc., 283 Ga. App. 613, 642 S.E.2d 232 (2007).

Couple who alleged that an engineer exceeded the authority granted in a stipulation for the engineer to remove pieces of a car for testing were not alleging professional malpractice and thus were not required to file an affidavit under

O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1; resolution of the couple's claims required determination of whether the engineer complied with the language of the stipulation, not determination of whether the engineer acted in compliance with the standard of conduct applicable to professional engineers. Burke v. Paul, 289 Ga. App. 826, 658 S.E.2d 430 (2008).

Allegations of the complaint were so general that the allegations could have been liberally construed to claim damages based on ordinary or other negligence not controlled by the expert affidavit requirements. Bray v. DOT, 324 Ga. App. 315, 750 S.E.2d 391 (2013).

Affidavit requirement met. — Parents properly invoked O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1(b) (now (e)) because the parents could not obtain additional affidavits before filing suit, and although the parents had obtained one affidavit stating that a first group of health care providers deviated from the standard of care when the suit was filed, the parents sought an affidavit to support the parents' claims against a second group of health care providers; both affidavits were filed within the 45-day period. Bell v. Phoebe Putney Health Sys., 272 Ga. App. 856, 614 S.E.2d 115 (2005).

Pre-complaint deposition not authorized. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-27 does not authorize the grant of a petition to take a pre-complaint deposition to acquire information for preparation of an affidavit to accompany a charge of medical malpractice which affidavit is required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1. St. Joseph Hosp. v. Black, 225 Ga. App. 139, 483 S.E.2d 290 (1997).

Failure to file expert affidavit. — When the plaintiff failed to file an expert affidavit with the complaint for legal malpractice, the plaintiff's complaint was subject to dismissal for failure to state a claim. Since such a dismissal was a dismissal on the merits, the trial court properly dismissed the complaint with prejudice. ABE Eng'g, Inc. v. Griffin, Cochran & Marshall, 212 Ga. App. 586, 443 S.E.2d 1 (1994); Stamps v. Johnson, 244 Ga. App. 238, 535 S.E.2d 1 (2000).

Failure of medical malpractice plaintiff to file an affidavit with the plaintiff's complaint of an expert competent to testify, that specifically stated at least one negligent act or omission claimed to exist and the factual basis for each such claim, warranted dismissal with prejudice of the complaint. Merck v. St. Joseph's Hosp. of Atlanta, Inc., 251 Ga. App. 631, 555 S.E.2d 11 (2001).

After medical malpractice plaintiff failed to file an expert affidavit with the plaintiff's complaint, the defect was not cured by filing an amended complaint which included the expert affidavit but did not allege that time constraints prevented the filing of an affidavit with the original complaint as required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1(b) (now (e)). Sullivan v. Fredericks, 251 Ga. App. 790, 554 S.E.2d 809 (2001).

In a medical malpractice and wrongful death action, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the appellant's motion for an extension of time to file an expert affidavit; the appellant failed to allege in the appellant's complaint that the limitation period would expire within ten days of filing the complaint or that because of the time constraints the appellant was unable to obtain an expert affidavit. Cabey v. DeKalb Med. Ctr., 252 Ga. App. 313, 555 S.E.2d 742 (2001).

Pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1, the renewal provision in O.C.G.A. § 9-2-61(a) did not save a second medical malpractice suit that was filed by the plaintiffs, patient and wife, after the statute of limitation but within six months of their voluntary dismissal of a timely first malpractice suit because: (1) the plaintiffs failed to attach an O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 expert affidavit to the first complaint and dismissed the first action without giving the defendants, doctor and employer, a chance to seek dismissal on that ground; (2) the required affidavit was not executed until after the time for filing such an affidavit in the first action had expired; and (3) the defendants raised the affidavit issue in a motion to dismiss contemporaneous with the defendants' initial responsive pleadings in the second action. Griffin v. Carson, 255 Ga. App. 373, 566 S.E.2d 36 (2002).

When the doctors' alleged actions required the exercise of professional judgment and skill, a patient's allegations were for professional negligence requiring an expert's affidavit pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1(a); as a result, the trial court erred by denying the doctors' and medical facilities' motions to dismiss. MCG Health, Inc. v. Casey, 269 Ga. App. 125, 603 S.E.2d 438 (2004).

Since all parties agreed that a patient's expert affidavit was available when the patient's first medical malpractice complaint was filed but was mistakenly omitted, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 applied and permitted renewal; the trial court erred in granting summary judgment in favor of a doctor and an institute in the patient's malpractice case. Rector v. O'Day, 268 Ga. App. 864, 603 S.E.2d 337 (2004).

Trial court properly dismissed, pursuant to Ga. Unif. Super. Ct. R. 14, a medical malpractice action against a doctor and a hospital; the patient failed to attach a legally sufficient expert affidavit to the complaint as required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1(a) as the affidavit submitted was not taken under oath. Harris v. Emory Healthcare, Inc., 269 Ga. App. 274, 603 S.E.2d 778 (2004).

Because a patient essentially alleged in a false imprisonment claim that a doctor provided inadequate medical care, the patient's failure to file an expert affidavit warranted dismissal. Goodin v. Gwinnett Health Sys., 273 Ga. App. 461, 615 S.E.2d 129 (2005).

Although a patient and a husband had an expert affidavit, they failed to file the affidavit with their complaint against a doctor and the professional corporation, alleging ordinary and professional negligence, and the trial court's grant of the motion to dismiss for failure to comply with O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 was with prejudice as it was on the merits; as the patient and the husband conceded that they could not seek to amend the complaint by adding the affidavit, and they had failed to voluntarily dismiss their action prior to the trial court having ruled on the motion, the patient and the husband could not seek to renew under O.C.G.A. § 9-2-61. Bardo v. Liss, 273 Ga. App. 103, 614 S.E.2d 101 (2005).

Husband's pro se wrongful death action against a doctor and health service providers was dismissed for failure to attach an expert affidavit under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 since the husband alleged negligence due to the doctor's issuance of a do not resuscitate order with respect to the husband's wife; such an action involved professional negligence and medical questions and, thus, required an expert affidavit. Hardwick v. Atkins, 278 Ga. App. 79, 628 S.E.2d 173 (2006).

In a parent's wrongful death suit against a doctor, the trial court erred by partially denying the doctor's motion to dismiss all the claims as the allegations in the complaint alleged professional negligence by asserting inappropriate multiple pain medication prescriptions, which were claims that required the filing of an expert affidavit under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1(a). Since the parent failed to file such an affidavit, the doctor's motion to dismiss should have been granted in the motion's entirety. Liu v. Boyd, 294 Ga. App. 224, 668 S.E.2d 843 (2008).

Plaintiff failed to file an expert affidavit to support the plaintiff's claim for professional malpractice; accordingly, the trial court did not err in granting the defendant's motion to dismiss the plaintiff's professional malpractice claim. Fortson v. Hotard, 299 Ga. App. 800, 684 S.E.2d 18 (2009).

Trial court did not err in dismissing with prejudice a plaintiff's medical malpractice action on the ground that the plaintiff failed to attach the required affidavits under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1, and, although the plaintiff argued that the trial court should have allowed the plaintiff to amend the complaint to attach the affidavits or at least should have only dismissed the complaint as without prejudice so that the plaintiff could refile under the renewal statute, O.C.G.A. §§ 9-2-61(a) and 9-11-9.1 did not allow such amendments; dismissals for failure to attach such affidavits were dismissals for failure to state a claim and were, therefore, on the merits and with prejudice. Roberson v. Northrup, 302 Ga. App. 405, 691 S.E.2d 547 (2010).

Because the un rebutted evidence showed that an officer's claims sounded in professional negligence, rather than ordinary negligence, and the officer failed to file contemporaneously with the complaint the expert affidavit required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1(a), there was no error in the trial court's grant of a corporation's motion to dismiss. Odion v. Varon, 312 Ga. App. 242, 718 S.E.2d 23 (2011), cert. denied, No. S12C0399, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 561 (Ga. 2012).

Trial court did not err in dismissing a client's action against a former attorney and a law firm for the client's failure to file an expert affidavit pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1(a) because the client's claims asserted legal malpractice, and the client was required to comply with the provisions of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1; although the client's complaint purported to state various causes of action, the substance of the allegations raised only claims of professional negligence against the attorney and law firm since all of the allegations in the complaint concerned the attorney's legal advice and actions taken as the client's legal representative in the underlying lawsuit. Fortson v. Freeman, 313 Ga. App. 326, 721 S.E.2d 607 (2011).

Failure to file expert affidavit may not be fatal. — Cases that hold that the failure to file an expert affidavit with the complaint renders the complaint void and not subject to renewal should be overruled on that point, namely, Foskey v. Foster, 199 Ga. App. 205 (404 SE2d 303) (1991); Lyberger v. Robinson, 207 Ga. App. 845 (429 SE2d 324) (1993); Trucano v. Rosenberg, 215 Ga. App. 153 (450 SE2d 216) (1994); Grier-Baxter v. Sibley, 247 Ga. App. 560 (545 SE2d 5) (2001); Witherspoon v. Aranas, 254 Ga. App. 609 (562 SE2d 853) (2002); Shirley v. Hospital Auth. of Valdosta/Lowndes County, 263 Ga. App. 408 (587 SE2d 873) (2003); and Winfrey v. Total Health Clinic Corp., 255 Ga. App. 617 (566 SE2d 372) (2002). Chandler v. Opensided MRI of Atlanta, LLC, 299 Ga. App. 145, 682 S.E.2d 165 (2009), aff'd, 287 Ga. 406, 696 S.E.2d 640 (2010).

New complaint, read in the son and the administrator's favor, adequately pled fraud, battery, conspiracy, and wrongful death against the doctors, the nurses, and the hospital as the complaint asserted that the doctor knowingly and falsely represented to the family that the deceased's comatose condition was the result of metastasized cancer rather than aspiration, and that the doctor's intention in doing so was to deceive the family as to its actual cause. The complaint also asserted that the second doctor and the nurses were complicit in the doctor's misrepresentations and assisted the doctor in the deception of the family; that the family relied on the misrepresentations when the family agreed to admit the deceased to hospice care; and that as a proximate result of being admitted to hospice, the deceased was denied food and water and suffered renal failure. Therefore, because the son and the administrator were not required to support their adequately pled claims for fraud, battery, and conspiracy with a O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 affidavit, the trial court erred when the court granted the motion to dismiss the claims. Estate of Shannon v. Ahmed, 304 Ga. App. 380, 696 S.E.2d 408 (2010).

Section supersedes rule as to affidavit in cases of clear malfeasance. — Mandatory direction of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 that the plaintiff "shall be required to file with the complaint" a specific expert affidavit necessarily preempts and supersedes the judicially-created rule that no plaintiff's expert affidavit might be required in cases of malfeasance so "clear and palpable" as to be reasonably ascertained by the jury without expert evidence. Barr v. Johnson, 189 Ga. App. 136, 375 S.E.2d 51, cert. denied, 189 Ga. App. 911, 375 S.E.2d 51 (1988); Collins v. Newman, 237 Ga. App. 861, 517 S.E.2d 100 (1999).

Expert affidavit not required when question was just whether acts occurred. — In a case alleging that the plaintiff was subjected to perverted mental health counseling, the court did not err in finding that no expert affidavit was required since the jury did not have to be told by an expert what is acceptable professional conduct in the circumstances. The question was whether the acts occurred, and this is purely a jury question. Roebuck v. Smith, 204 Ga. App. 20, 418 S.E.2d 165 (1992).

Determinative factor as to whether suit is malpractice action. — Determinative factor as to whether a suit in negligence is or is not a malpractice action within the ambit of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 is the existence or absence of allegations that the defendant-professional has rendered negligent professional services. Jordan, Jones & Goulding, Inc. v. Wilson, 197 Ga. App. 354, 398 S.E.2d 385 (1990).

Compliance requirement not affected by lack of privity. — Lack of privity may ultimately defeat a plaintiff's professional malpractice claim. A lack of privity does not, however, dispense with a plaintiff's compliance with the initial pleading requirement of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 when a plaintiff sues a professional and alleges a breach of the applicable standard of professional conduct. Jordan, Jones & Goulding, Inc. v. Wilson, 197 Ga. App. 354, 398 S.E.2d 385 (1990).

Any plaintiff, regardless of privity, who brings suit against a professional and seeks to recover for the alleged negligent performance of professional services is required to file an expert's affidavit setting forth at least one specific negligent act or omission and the factual basis for such a claim. Jordan, Jones & Goulding, Inc. v. Wilson, 197 Ga. App. 354, 398 S.E.2d 385 (1990).

Compliance requirement not affected by parties' knowledge of matter before court. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 applies even though the parties are professionals with expertise in the matter before the court; the parties' knowledge of the subject matter would do nothing to evaluate the merits of an action the parties were determined to bring. Jordan v. Lamberth, Bonapfel, Cifelli, Willson & Stokes, 206 Ga. App. 178, 424 S.E.2d 859 (1992).

Admission of negligence no excuse for missing affidavit. — Physician's admission of negligence in medical records attached to the complaint in a medical malpractice action did not excuse the plaintiff's failure to comply with the requirement for contemporaneous filing of an expert affidavit. Johnson v. Brueckner, 216 Ga. App. 52, 453 S.E.2d 76 (1994).

O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 imposes an initial pleading requirement on the plaintiff and mandates the filing of an expert's affidavit with the complaint. Robinson v. Starr, 197 Ga. App. 440, 398 S.E.2d 714 (1990).

O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 merely imposes an initial pleading requirement on the plaintiff in a malpractice action. Bowen v. Adams, 203 Ga. App. 123, 416 S.E.2d 102, cert. denied, 202 Ga. App. 905, 416 S.E.2d 102 (1992).

Compliance with statute not addressed in reversal of summary judgment order. — In a medical malpractice action, because the record on appeal contained evidence creating a genuine issue of material fact as to the proximate cause of a patient's injuries, the trial court erred in granting a hospital summary judgment; moreover, the appeals court declined to hear the hospital's claim that the patient failed to comply with O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1. Renz v. Northside Hosp., Inc., 285 Ga. App. 882, 648 S.E.2d 186 (2007).

Amendment of pleading tacitly allowed. — Trial court erred in granting summary judgment to a medical group in a medical malpractice case since the court tacitly allowed the spouse to "amend" pleadings because the court considered the entire record, in particular conflicting evidence as to the date of the decedent's death as relevant to the viability of the spouse's cause of action as complying with the exception to the contemporaneous filing requirement under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 (b) (now (e)), and no admission in judicio remained in bar of the spouse's claim, and a jury question existed as to the date of death of the decedent regarding the contemporaneous filing of an expert's affidavit requirement. Knutsen v. Atlanta Women's Specialists Obstetrics & Gynecology, 264 Ga. App. 87, 589 S.E.2d 588 (2003).

Expert affidavit may be sufficient to satisfy standards of this section. — Expert affidavit may be sufficient to satisfy the pleading standards of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1. The sufficiency of the expert affidavit determines whether the complaint for malpractice is subject to dismissal for failure to state a claim. Bowen v. Adams, 203 Ga. App. 123, 416 S.E.2d 102, cert. denied, 202 Ga. App. 905, 416 S.E.2d 102 (1992).

Affidavit should note recent experience. — In a professional malpractice case brought by a married couple, an expert's original affidavit was insufficient under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 and former O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67.1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-7-702), which applied retroactively. Although the expert avowed therein that the expert had been licensed to practice medicine since 1974, the affidavit contained nothing concerning the expert's recent or continuing experience as an orthopedist. Cogland v. Hosp. Auth., 290 Ga. App. 73, 658 S.E.2d 769 (2008).

Expert's testimony was properly excluded in a medical malpractice suit for corrective bladder surgery for perforations following a hysterectomy because the expert's affidavit demonstrated that the expert was board certified in geriatrics, and the expert had not been engaged in the active practice of gynecology or urology for three of the five years before the patient's operation. Hope v. Kranc, 304 Ga. App. 367, 696 S.E.2d 128 (2010).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in determining that the parent's expert was not actively engaged in the subject specialty for three of the five years prior to the alleged negligence. The expert acknowledged that the expert had done no intubations at all since the expert started working at the urgent care clinic and that the clinic did not possess intubation equipment. Aguilar v. Children's Healthcare of Atlanta, Inc., 320 Ga. App. 663, 739 S.E.2d 392 (2013).

Expert affidavit which unequivocally demonstrates merits not required. — Patient cannot be required to submit an expert affidavit which unequivocally demonstrates the evidentiary merits of the patient's claim unless and until the defendant moves for summary judgment and submits evidence demonstrating that the patient's claim lacks merit. Bowen v. Adams, 203 Ga. App. 123, 416 S.E.2d 102, cert. denied, 202 Ga. App. 905, 416 S.E.2d 102 (1992).

Expert's affidavits need only set forth factual allegations which, if true, support at least one negligent act or omission; it need not state admissible facts or facts sufficient to withstand a motion for summary judgment. Crook v. Funk, 214 Ga. App. 213, 447 S.E.2d 60 (1994); Howard v. City of Columbus, 219 Ga. App. 569, 466 S.E.2d 51 (1995).

In a legal malpractice action, an affidavit stating that, as a result of the defendant lawyer's failure to consult with the client or review witnesses prior to the trial, the defendant failed to introduce documents which were available and were necessary to prove the plaintiff's case was sufficient, even though the affidavit was poorly drafted and hard to follow. Fidelity Enters., Inc. v. Beltran, 214 Ga. App. 205, 447 S.E.2d 150 (1994).

Conflict in experts' opinions in affidavit. — In a wrongful death and medical negligence suit, a conflict between the testimony of experts in the plaintiff's expert affidavit, filed pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1, merely raised an issue of fact; it could not be used to eliminate self-contradictory testimony for purposes of summary judgment. Rooks v. Tenet Health Sys. GB, Inc., 292 Ga. App. 477, 664 S.E.2d 861 (2008).

Requirement that at least one negligent act be set forth. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 has been interpreted as requiring that an affidavit be filed by a competent expert witness setting forth a single negligent act allegedly committed by the defendant. However, since that section establishes an exception to the general liberality of pleading permitted under the Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9, the statute should be construed in a manner consistent with the liberality of the Civil Practice Act when such construction does not detract from the purpose of the section. Gadd v. Wilson & Co., 262 Ga. 234, 416 S.E.2d 285 (1992).

Affidavit which does not state specifically at least one negligent act or omission is fatally defective. Edwards v. Vanstrom, 206 Ga. App. 21, 424 S.E.2d 326 (1992).

Specific statement of negligent act or omission. — Expert's affidavit that defendant engineers "might" have used another specified design in construction at a post office site and that failure to use such a design or another appropriate alternative constituted malpractice was sufficient to set forth a negligent act or omission as required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1. Samuelson v. Lord, Aeck & Sergeant, Inc., 205 Ga. App. 568, 423 S.E.2d 268, cert. denied, 205 Ga. App. 901, 423 S.E.2d 268 (1992).

Affidavit must specify negligent act or omission by each defendant. — Affidavit must set forth specifically at least one negligent act or omission claimed to exist as to each professional defendant (jointly, if appropriate; otherwise, severally) and the factual basis for the claim against each defendant. HCA Health Servs., of Ga., Inc. v. Hampshire, 206 Ga. App. 108, 424 S.E.2d 293 (1992).

Expert's affidavit was invalid since the notary administered the oath over the telephone to the expert, who was in another state. Schmidt v. Feldman, 230 Ga. App. 500, 497 S.E.2d 23 (1998); Sambor v. Kelley, 271 Ga. 133, 518 S.E.2d 120 (1999).

Affidavit was given under oath when the affidavit was signed by the defendant in front of a notary public and they both understood that what the defendant had done was sufficient to complete the act of swearing. Harris v. Murray, 233 Ga. App. 661, 504 S.E.2d 736 (1998).

Effect of noncompliance with pleading requirements. — Failure to comply with the pleading requirements of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 would not authorize the grant of summary judgment. Druckman v. Ethridge, 198 Ga. App. 321, 401 S.E.2d 336 (1991).

Original document filed as an affidavit under the grace period of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1, but without the affiant's having signed the document in the presence of a notary, was valid on its face and, thus, was not void but rather voidable. Phoebe Putney Mem. Hosp. v. Skipper, 235 Ga. App. 534, 510 S.E.2d 101 (1998).

Complaint and affidavit timely filed. — When nothing on the face of the record implied that the patient's O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1(b) (now (e)) pleading was not made in good faith, nothing contradicted their assertion that they were unable to prepare the expert's affidavit so as to file it in conjunction with their complaint, and considering a holiday, they timely filed their complaint within the 10-day computation period provided in the statute, the trial court properly denied the doctor's motion to dismiss on grounds that the patients failed to comply with the pleading requirements of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1. Waters v. Stewart, 263 Ga. App. 195, 587 S.E.2d 307 (2003).

Negligence held linked to defendant although not expressly ascribed.

— Although the affidavit in question did not expressly ascribe the alleged negligence to the defendant, the requirement that the alleged negligence had to be linked to the defendant was substantially met since the defendant was the only defendant and, therefore, was implicitly the party to whom the plaintiff was attributing the alleged negligence. Gadd v. Wilson & Co., 262 Ga. 234, 416 S.E.2d 285 (1992).

Affidavit construed most favorably to plaintiff. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 should be construed most favorably to the plaintiff and all doubts should be resolved in the plaintiff's favor, even if an unfavorable construction of the affidavit may be possible. Gadd v. Wilson & Co., 262 Ga. 234, 416 S.E.2d 285 (1992).

Res judicata defense in subsequent action. — When a prior summary judgment for an attorney in a legal malpractice action was based on a recognition that, regardless of the applicability of any pleading requirements imposed by the subsequently enacted provisions of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1, the client's failure to have complied with the evidentiary requirements of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 nevertheless mandated the grant of summary judgment on the merits, the attorney's res judicata defense in a subsequent action was viable and the trial court erred in failing to grant the attorney's motion for summary judgment based upon the viable defense. Robinson v. Starr, 197 Ga. App. 440, 398 S.E.2d 714 (1990).

Dismissal required when complaint refiled with affidavit. — When no professional affidavit was filed with the original complaint and, when the complaint was refiled, an affidavit of the same date was attached, dismissal of the malpractice count was required. Jones v. Bates, 261 Ga. 240, 403 S.E.2d 804 (1991).

Failure to attach affidavit as amendable defect. — Failure to attach a supporting affidavit to the complaint in a professional malpractice action was an amendable defect under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15(a) since the plaintiffs had obtained the affidavit before filing suit and had simply neglected to file the affidavit with the plaintiff's complaint. St. Joseph's Hosp. v. Nease, 259 Ga. 153, 377 S.E.2d 847 (1989).

Failure to file an expert's affidavit with a complaint for professional malpractice, as required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1, is an amendable defect, at least when the plaintiff has obtained the affidavit prior to filing the complaint and the failure to file the affidavit was the result of a mistake. Reid v. Brazil, 193 Ga. App. 1, 387 S.E.2d 1 (1989).

Plaintiff's failure to file an expert affidavit with the original complaint barred the plaintiff's claim for professional malpractice, filed three years after the statute of limitations expired, because O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 mandates that the plaintiff's failure to file an affidavit with the original complaint could not be cured through the filing of an amended complaint which included an affidavit. Upton County Hosp., Inc. v. Head, 246 Ga. App. 386, 540 S.E.2d 626 (2000).

Amendment did not remedy affidavit deficiency. — Malpractice plaintiffs' purported amendment did not remedy the deficiency in the plaintiffs' complaint concerning the plaintiffs' failure to file the expert affidavit required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1. Anderson v. Navarro, 227 Ga. App. 184, 489 S.E.2d 40 (1997).

Evidence at hearing under § 9-11-12(d). — Subsection (e) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 is only designed to preclude amendment under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15 when the plaintiff completely fails to file an affidavit; subsection (e) thus does not preclude a plaintiff from presenting evidence of his or her expert's competency at a O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(d) hearing when that expert's affidavit was initially filed with the complaint. Hewett v. Kalish, 264 Ga. 183, 442 S.E.2d 233 (1994).

Facsimile of affidavit. — Although O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 contemplates that the original affidavit of the expert should be filed, trial courts are not prohibited, when justice so requires, from considering facsimiles of affidavits that are available during the statutory period. Waldroup v. Greene County Hosp. Auth., 204 Ga. App. 256, 419 S.E.2d 36 (1992).

Filing a facsimile copy and not the original affidavit of an expert was not an amendable defect for purposes of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1. Brown v. Middle Ga. Hosp., Inc., 211 Ga. App. 884, 440 S.E.2d 687 (1994).

Facsimile copy of expert affidavit satisfies the pleading standards of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 and the original may then be filed as a supplemental pleading without requiring the action to be renewed. Sisk v. Patel, 217 Ga. App. 156, 456 S.E.2d 718 (1995).

Facsimiles of affidavits that are available during the statutory grace period of subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 may be considered and, further, the original affidavit does not have to be in the plaintiff's possession, nor is the plaintiff required to demonstrate that failure to file the original during the grace period resulted from some mistake. Roberts v. Faust, 217 Ga. App. 787, 459 S.E.2d 448 (1995).

While a facsimile affidavit can satisfy the requirements of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1, in the absence of an attached valid jurat, a writing in the form of an affidavit has no force or validity especially when the facsimile is a near but not exact copy of the original. Allen v. Caldwell, 221 Ga. App. 54, 470 S.E.2d 696 (1996).

Failure of plaintiff to file an expert affidavit did not warrant dismissal of a professional malpractice case since the defendant did not assert this defense in the defendant's initial responsive pleading. Colston v. Fred's Pest Control, Inc., 210 Ga. App. 362, 436 S.E.2d 23 (1993).

Trial court erred by dismissing a couple's renewed negligence complaint for failing to file an expert affidavit with the couple's original complaint as required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1(a) because the record failed to contain sufficient findings showing whether any professional negligence was involved with regard to the wife falling from a testing table as it was merely speculative whether the technician had to assess the wife's medical condition in order to decide whether she could get down from a raised table since it could have been that no professional judgment was required. The trial court additionally erred by dismissing the couple's renewed complaint because the defending medical entities waived their objection to the renewal by failing to file a separate motion to dismiss contemporaneously with their answer to the couple's original action. Chandler v. Opensided MRI of Atlanta, LLC, 299 Ga. App. 145, 682 S.E.2d 165 (2009), aff'd, 287 Ga. 406, 696 S.E.2d 640 (2010).

Dismissal of action for failure to file an affidavit under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 was an adjudication on the merits for purposes of res judicata. Hodo v. Basa, 214 Ga. App. 895, 449 S.E.2d 523 (1994).

Defense of failure to file affidavit waived. — Judgment for the defendant was reversed when the defense of failure to attach an affidavit required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 was not presented, by way of amendment to the answer, until three months after the filing of responsive pleadings, and until the statute of limitations on the underlying claim had run. Glaser v. Meck, 258 Ga. 468, 369 S.E.2d 912 (1988).

Renewed complaint specifically incorporating deposition of plaintiff's expert. — When a medical malpractice case was filed originally in March 1985, and dismissed in June 1988 without prejudice for failure of counsel for plaintiffs to appear at a peremptory calendar call, since the plaintiffs refiled the action within the six-month period allowed by O.C.G.A. § 9-2-61 with a renewed complaint which specifically incorporated the discovery taken in the previously dismissed action, including the deposition of the plaintiffs' expert, but failed to attach the required affidavit to the renewed complaint, and since the defendant/appellant moved to dismiss the renewed complaint for failure to file the required affidavit, the plaintiffs complied with the spirit, if not the letter, of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1, and the trial court properly allowed the amendment. Hospital Auth. v. McDaniel, 192 Ga. App. 398, 385 S.E.2d 8 (1989).

Failure to attach expert affidavit is affirmative defense that must be asserted to be effective. — In a patient's medical malpractice suit against a hospital and a doctor, the trial court erred in dismissing the complaint as against the hospital based on the patient's failure to attach an expert affidavit to the patient's complaint as required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 as such failure was an affirmative defense which had to be raised to be effective; since the hospital did not assert that defense, the patient's failure to attach the expert affidavit did not warrant dismissal of the complaint as against the hospital. Frieson v. S. Fulton Med. Ctr., 255 Ga. App. 217, 564 S.E.2d 821 (2002).

Amendment of complaint to include statement regarding failure to attach affidavit. — When a medical malpractice complaint, filed within ten days of the expiration of the statute of limitations, stated that an affidavit would be filed within the extended filing time, and the affidavit was filed within that time, the plaintiff could amend the complaint to include the required language that the affidavit could not be prepared because of time constraints. Glisson v. Hospital Auth., 224 Ga. App. 649, 481 S.E.2d 612 (1997).

Intent of section prior to 1989 amendment. — Intent of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1, as the statute existed prior to the 1989 amendment adding subsections (e) and (f), was the same as the legislature has provided in those subsections, which is (except as provided in paragraph (b)) to cause the dismissal of a malpractice suit when an expert affidavit was not filed, unless such an affidavit had been obtained and the plaintiff by mistake or neglect merely failed "to file it." Auston v. Greenberg Farrow Architects, 201 Ga. App. 448, 411 S.E.2d 346 (1991).

Failure of pro se plaintiff to file affidavit. — Pro se plaintiff was allowed to amend the complaint to invoke the protections of subsection (b) (now (e)) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1, although the plaintiff failed to allege that the plaintiff was relying on that subsection when the plaintiff originally filed the complaint since the plaintiff had filed the cause of action within ten days of the expiration of the applicable statute of limitation for the plaintiff's claim. Thompson v. Long, 201

Challenge to sufficiency of affidavit.

— As a motion to dismiss for an insufficient affidavit under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 is a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(b)(6), and as O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 does not provide that § 9-11-12 is inapplicable, such a hearing is a permissible method by which to challenge the sufficiency of an affidavit. Hewett v. Kalish, 264 Ga. 183, 442 S.E.2d 233 (1994).

Plaintiffs were not required to respond with contrary evidence to the defendant's challenge to the defendant's expert's affidavit; thus, since the affidavit of the plaintiff's expert sufficiently established that the expert's expertise overlapped that of the defendant, the plaintiffs were not required to present any further evidence at that point, and summary judgment based on the sufficiency of the affidavit was improperly granted. Stubbs v. Ray, 218 Ga. App. 420, 461 S.E.2d 906 (1995).

Trial court erred in granting a hospital's motion to dismiss a survivor's wrongful death action based on O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1(e) because of a nurse's affidavit that allegedly failed to comply with former O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67.1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-7-702) and because the trial court did not consider the survivor's other affidavit submitted, an unchallenged affidavit from a medical doctor. An affidavit should be construed most favorably to the plaintiff and all doubts should be resolved in the plaintiff's favor, even if an unfavorable construction of the affidavit may be possible, so long as such construction does not detract from the purpose of § 9-11-9.1 of reducing the number of frivolous malpractice suits. Piscitelli v. Hosp. Auth. of Valdosta & Lowndes County, 302 Ga. App. 746, 691 S.E.2d 615 (2010).

Dismissal of the patient's medical malpractice action was erroneous because the doctors failed to allege "with specificity" in the doctors' motion to dismiss, as required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1(e), the ground upon which the trial court dismissed the action, that the affidavits filed with the patient's complaint were inadequate because the affidavits said nothing of gross negligence. Ndlovu v. Pham, 314 Ga. App. 337, 723 S.E.2d 729 (2012).

Insufficient affidavit. — Action for legal malpractice was properly dismissed, since the affidavit submitted by the plaintiff neither stated the qualifications of the affiant nor provided the affiant's opinion as to the reasonableness or skill of the defendant attorney's conduct. Padgett v. Crawford, 189 Ga. App. 568, 376 S.E.2d 724 (1988).

Physician's affidavit was insufficient since the affidavit failed to show that the affiant was "an expert competent to testify" in the field of nursing and did not indicate that the defendant hospital's nursing staff breached the requisite degree of care and skill required of the nursing profession generally by deviating from the treating physician's post operative instructions. Piedmont Hosp. v. Milton, 189 Ga. App. 563, 377 S.E.2d 198 (1988).

Affidavit required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 to be filed with a malpractice complaint is insufficient if the affidavit fails to show the affiant is competent to testify as an expert in the case. Milligan v. Manno, 197 Ga. App. 171, 397 S.E.2d 713 (1990).

Two "affidavits" of dentists accompanying a complaint for dental malpractice did not meet the requirements of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 since a jurat was not affixed to either "affidavit." In the absence of valid jurats, the documents could not be deemed affidavits. Hill-Everett v. Jones, 197 Ga. App. 872, 399 S.E.2d 739 (1990).

Trial court did not err in striking affidavits which, in fact, were not originals but were photocopies, since no original, signed affidavits were filed. Gooden v. Georgia Baptist Hosp. & Medical Center, 198 Ga. App. 407, 401 S.E.2d 602 (1991).

Affidavits establishing that the doctor did not contact the affiant for or request from the affiant any x-rays, patient chiropractic data, treatment plan, or chiropractic findings before deciding that the plaintiffs had reached maximum medical treatment failed to set forth specifically that the doctor had failed to obtain such information or that the doctor was in fact negligent merely by failing to contact the affiant or in failing to request from the affiant the information at issue. The affidavits neither individually nor collectively set forth specifically at least one negligent act or omission claimed to exist. Rogers v. Coronet Ins. Co., 206 Ga. App. 46, 424 S.E.2d 338 (1992).

When the expert affidavit of a registered nurse lacking executed jurat was received by mail by the plaintiff's attorney and was not notarized by the attorney's secretary, even though the affiant was not present and neither the attorney nor the secretary/notary had witnessed the affiant's signing, the affidavit was invalid. Harvey v. Kidney Ctr. of Cent. Ga., Inc., 213 Ga. App. 319, 444 S.E.2d 590 (1994).

Affidavit containing a partial transcript of an expert's testimony in a separate criminal action pertaining to the subject of the plaintiff's medical malpractice suit did not satisfy the requirement of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1. Raskin v. Wallace, 215 Ga. App. 603, 451 S.E.2d 485 (1994).

In a malpractice action against a physicians and hospital, dismissal of the hospital as a defendant was proper because the plaintiff's affidavit did not attribute any negligent act to the nursing staff of the hospital. Goins v. Tucker, 227 Ga. App. 524, 489 S.E.2d 857 (1997).

Affidavits were not sufficient because the affidavits did not specify any negligent act or omission by agents or employees of the defendant hospital, nor did the affidavits specify any facts upon which the malpractice claim against the hospital was based. Candler Hosp. v. Carter, 224 Ga. App. 425, 480 S.E.2d 876 (1997).

Consideration of evidentiary matters not included in affidavit is improper in acting on a motion to dismiss based on insufficiency of the affidavit. HCA Health Servs., of Ga., Inc. v. Hampshire, 206 Ga. App. 108, 424 S.E.2d 293 (1992).

Affidavits from earlier action functioned as amendments in later action against same defendants. — Expert affidavits, which the plaintiffs had filed in an earlier action against the defendants for medical malpractice, functioned as an amendment to the plaintiffs' complaint in a subsequent action against the same defendants since the affidavits were attached to the defendants' motion to dismiss, and the plaintiff thereby complied with O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1. Bell v. Figueredo, 259 Ga. 321, 381 S.E.2d 29 (1989).

Affiant not "active participant" in litigation for purposes of "abusive litigation claim." — Attorney, who provided an expert affidavit in support of a legal malpractice claim, was not an "active participant" in the malpractice litigation and, accordingly, was not liable to the attorney charged with professional malpractice on an abusive litigation theory. Kirsch v. Meredith, 211 Ga. App. 823, 440 S.E.2d 702 (1994).

Procedure for challenging noncompliance. — Noncompliance with the requirement for an affidavit in a malpractice action is properly challenged in a defensive pleading seeking dismissal of the complaint for failure to state a claim, not by a summary judgment proceeding. Williams v. Hajosy, 210 Ga. App. 637, 436 S.E.2d 716 (1993).

Defect in an expert's affidavit attached to the complaint in a legal malpractice action should be attacked via motion to dismiss and summary judgment on the basis of such defect was inappropriate. Freeman v. Pittman, 220 Ga. App. 672, 469 S.E.2d 543 (1996).

Defense of noncompliance with affidavit requirement was not waived because, even though the defendant did not raise the defense in the defendant's initial responsive pleading, the defendant acted diligently in raising the defense in the first pleading the defendant filed after discovering evidence causing the defendant to challenge the validity of the affidavit. Harris v. Murray, 233 Ga. App. 661, 504 S.E.2d 736 (1998).

Affidavit not subject to evidentiary standards for summary judgment. — When the plaintiff brought a medical malpractice suit, did not file an expert's affidavit with the complaint, but amended the complaint within 45 days to file an expert's affidavit, the trial court erred by dismissing the plaintiff's complaint for failure of the expert's affidavit to set forth the appropriate standard of care, the expert's familiarity with that standard of care, and the specific details of how the defendants deviated from that standard, since the evidentiary standards applicable to evidence supporting a motion for summary judgment pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(e) are not incorporated in subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1. O-1 Doctors Mem. Holding Co. v. Moore, 190 Ga. App. 286, 378 S.E.2d 708 (1989); Ulbrich v. Batts, 206 Ga. App. 74, 424 S.E.2d 288 (1992).

Nothing in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 suggests that the “factual basis” requirement must be verified by attaching documentary evidence to the affidavit. HCA Health Servs., of Ga., Inc. v. Hampshire, 206 Ga. App. 108, 424 S.E.2d 293 (1992); Howard v. City of Columbus, 219 Ga. App. 569, 466 S.E.2d 51 (1995).

Conclusory opinion insufficient to withstand summary judgment. — Malpractice plaintiff, as a respondent on summary judgment, cannot prevail on the motion, when the defendant by the content of the defendant’s expert affidavit has carried the defendant’s burden of proof, merely by presenting a conclusory opinion that the defendant was negligent or failed to adhere to professional standards of conduct, without stating the parameters of such conduct and the particulars of the defendant’s deviation therefrom. Turner v. Kitchings, 199 Ga. App. 860, 406 S.E.2d 280 (1991).

Affidavit requirement inapplicable to fraud claim. — Plaintiff’s fraud claim did not appear to call into question professional standards of care applicable to attorneys but instead the claim appeared to be predicated on misrepresentations which would not be misunderstood by even the most uneducated layman and would be actionable against any person; therefore, the fraud claim did not require an affidavit under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 and dismissal of the claim was error. Hopkinson v. Labovitz, 231 Ga. App. 557, 499 S.E.2d 338 (1998).

Motion under sections considered as failure to state claim. — Motion to dismiss for failure to file an expert affidavit under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 had to be considered as a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim under O.C.G.A.

§ 9-11-12(b)(6). Burke v. Paul, 289 Ga. App. 826, 658 S.E.2d 430 (2008).

Notary Requirement

De facto notary doctrine. — Pursuant to the de facto notary doctrine, an expert’s affidavit satisfied the requirements of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1, despite the fact that the commission of the notary who attested the affidavit had expired. Thomas v. Gastroenterology Assocs. of Gainesville, P.C., 280 Ga. 698, 632 S.E.2d 118 (2006).

Expert's affidavit was invalid when oath was administered by notary public over telephone. Redmond v. Shook, 218 Ga. App. 477, 462 S.E.2d 172 (1995).

Expert Qualification

Expert despite financial interest. — Lawyer was “an expert competent to testify” despite the lawyer’s previous representation of the plaintiff in this matter and the fact that the lawyer had a financial interest in the outcome of this suit at the time the lawyer submitted the lawyer’s affidavit. Findley v. Davis, 202 Ga. App. 332, 414 S.E.2d 317 (1991).

Expert in one’s own behalf. — Attorney, as well as a physician, may make an affidavit as an expert in their own behalf. Findley v. Davis, 202 Ga. App. 332, 414 S.E.2d 317 (1991).

Correct standard for legal malpractice claim. — In a legal malpractice claim, whether the expert resides in Georgia or is a licensed member of the bar at the time of the alleged negligence is not indicative of competency. The correct standard is whether at the time of testifying the expert has knowledge of the applicable standard of care on at least one matter on which the claim is based. Morris v. Atlanta Legal Aid Soc’y, Inc., 222 Ga. App. 62, 473 S.E.2d 501 (1996).

Section applicable to claims requiring expert witness. — Affidavit was required since it was alleged that the dentist gave inappropriate medication, did not properly monitor the patient’s condition, and did not use proper technique to resuscitate the patient after the patient was in distress; these claims would require an expert witness and were not allegations of simple negligence. Edwards v. Vanstrom, 206 Ga. App. 21, 424 S.E.2d 326 (1992).

Self-contradictory testimony rule of Prophesy Corp. v. Charles Rossignol, Inc., 256 Ga. 27, 343 S.E.2d 680 (1986) does not apply to the testimony of a non-party expert witness who submits an affidavit in support of a claim of professional malpractice. Thompson v. Ezor, 272 Ga. 849, 536 S.E.2d 749 (2000), affirming Ezor v. Thompson, 241 Ga. App. 275, 526 S.E.2d 609 (1999).

Competence of affiant. — Resolution of the issue of whether the affiant physician was competent to give testimony with respect to the defendant’s area of specialty was ill-suited to disposition on a motion to strike. Cahela v. Bernard, 155 F.R.D. 221 (N.D. Ga. 1994).

Trial court properly denied dismissal of a patient’s widow’s medical malpractice action against assorted medical personnel and entities, based on claims that the widow’s expert affidavit pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 was insufficient as the fact that the doctor who acted as the expert was no longer licensed to practice medicine due to revocation for substance abuse issues did not impact the validity of the affidavit, which had no licensure requirement to it; the licensure issue was irrelevant to the validity of the affidavit, although licensure could be relevant for purposes of credibility. Tenet Healthcare Corp. v. Gilbert, 277 Ga. App. 895, 627 S.E.2d 821 (2006).

In a medical malpractice action, given the relevant past experience of the patient’s expert as a nurse, and the expert’s familiarity with the degree and skills required of nurses and other medical staff in giving intramuscular injections, the expert was sufficiently qualified to render an expert opinion in the case. Allen v. Family Med. Ctr., P.C., 287 Ga. App. 522, 652 S.E.2d 173 (2007).

Trial court did not abuse the court’s discretion by dismissing the parents’ medical malpractice action because the court correctly found that the purported expert offered by the parents failed to make even one diagnosis of a vascular ring within five years of the date at issue, and had not taught others for at least three of the last five years to diagnose a vascular ring. Spacht v. Troyer, 288 Ga. App. 898, 655 S.E.2d 656 (2007), cert. denied, 129 S. Ct. 726, 172 L.Ed.2d 726 (2008).

Qualification of affiant. — For an affiant to constitute “an expert competent to testify” under subsection (a) of O.C.G.A.

§ 9-11-9.1, the affiant's expertise must include knowledge of the standard of care applicable to the defendant-physician as to at least one of the matters on which the plaintiff's malpractice claim is based. Chandler v. Koenig, 203 Ga. App. 684, 417 S.E.2d 715 (1992).

Toxicologist and pharmacologist, who was not a medical doctor, was competent to give an opinion in a medical malpractice action that a drug prescribed by the defendants caused the plaintiff's miscarriage since the affiant's testimony was not offered to address the applicable standard of care, but to show causation. Sinkfield v. Shi-Han Oh, 229 Ga. App. 883, 495 S.E.2d 94 (1998).

When a couple who filed a medical malpractice case did not show that their experts had actual professional knowledge and experience through active practice or by teaching during at least three of the last five years, the trial court properly held under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 and former O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67.1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-7-702) that the experts were not qualified to give an opinion and dismissed the case. Akers v. Elsey, 294 Ga. App. 359, 670 S.E.2d 142 (2008).

Trial court did not err in dismissing a medical malpractice action on the ground that an anesthesiologist's affidavit in support of the complaint was insufficient under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 because the anesthesiologist did not meet the licensing requirement for expert witnesses, former O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67.1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-7-702); although the anesthesiologist's amended affidavit in support of a medical malpractice complaint indicated that the anesthesiologist held a medical license from Pennsylvania on the date of the alleged negligent act, there was no evidence that the anesthesiologist was practicing in that state. Craig v. Azizi, 301 Ga. App. 181, 687 S.E.2d 198 (2009).

In a deceased patient's family's action against a hospital arising out of an alleged failure to properly treat decubitus ulcers (pressure sores), the expert affidavit failed to comply with O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-9.1(a) and 24-7-702(c)(2); the expert was a coroner with a specialty in forensic pathology and not engaged in the treatment of decubitus ulcers. Hendrix v. Fulton DeKalb Hosp. Auth., 330 Ga. App. 833, 769 S.E.2d 575 (2015).

Affiant prima facie qualified as expert. — When the affiant was a licensed, registered nurse with specialized training in enterostomal therapy and was employed by Visiting Nurse Services, Inc. as an employee health nurse when according to the affiant, the affiant's graduate course qualified the affiant as a specialist in wound treatments, and when the affiant's opinion concerned the standard of care administered to the decedent by the defendant nursing home through the home's nursing staff, the affiant was prima facie qualified according to the affiant's training and experience to give the affiant's opinion as an expert. Thurman v. Pruitt Corp., 212 Ga. App. 766, 442 S.E.2d 849 (1994).

Affidavit need not be based on affiant's actual personal knowledge. — Expert affidavit filed with a complaint pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 need not be based upon the affiant's actual personal knowledge. To the contrary, the affiant may base the affiant's expert opinion upon an assumption that the factual allegations of the complaint are true, just as the affiant could base the affiant's expert opinion at trial upon an assumption of the truth of the evidence adduced to support those allegations. Druckman v. Ethridge, 198 Ga. App. 321, 401 S.E.2d 336 (1991); Ulbrich v. Batts, 206 Ga. App. 74, 424 S.E.2d 288 (1992).

Competency of expert providing affidavit. — Rule governing the competence of a member of one school of medical practice to testify against a member of another school applies not only to testimony presented at trial but also to the affidavit required to be filed with the complaint. Milligan v. Manno, 197 Ga. App. 171, 397 S.E.2d 713 (1990).

Affidavit indicating that witness in an action against an allopathic physician was a licensed osteopathic physician was insufficient since the affidavit contained no evidence that the methods of treatment of the plaintiff's condition were the same so as to bring the witness within the exception to the general rule that rendered the witness incompetent to testify. Milligan v. Manno, 197 Ga. App. 171, 397 S.E.2d 713 (1990).

Mere fact an affiant is an expert in his or her school of knowledge does not necessarily mean the expert is "competent to testify" under subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1. Chandler v. Koenig, 203 Ga. App. 684, 417 S.E.2d 715 (1992).

Exception to the general rule is when there is proof by competent evidence that the methods of treatment are the same despite the difference in the nomenclature of the schools involved, the witness is competent to testify. Chandler v. Koenig, 203 Ga. App. 684, 417 S.E.2d 715 (1992).

In order for an affiant to be "an expert competent to testify," the expert either must be a member of the same professional school as the defendant or, if from a different professional school, must state the particulars how the methods of treatment are the same for the different schools in order to establish that the affiant possesses the expertise to be able to give an opinion regarding the applicable standard of care to which the defendant is held. HCA Health Servs., of Ga., Inc. v. Hampshire, 206 Ga. App. 108, 424 S.E.2d 293 (1992).

Court of Appeals erred by holding that O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 establishes an evidentiary standard regarding the affiant's competency that must be proven at the pleading stage. Hewett v. Kalish, 264 Ga. 183, 442 S.E.2d 233 (1994).

Extension of Time

Meaning of "good cause" for extending time for filing. — "Good cause", within the meaning of subsection (b) (now (e)) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1, is closer in effect to "proper case" or "meritorious cause" than it is to "excusable neglect." Brake v. Mintz, 193 Ga. App. 662, 388 S.E.2d 715 (1989).

Language of subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 refers to requests for extensions prior to expiration of the initial 45-day period. Statements in Brake v. Mintz, 193 Ga. App. 662, 288 S.E.2d 715 (1989) and Emory Clinic v. Wyatt, 200 Ga. App. 184, 407 S.E.2d 135 (1991), indicating that a motion to extend the initial 45-day period may be considered under the "good cause" standard when filed after the 45-day period has expired are dicta and will not be followed. Dixon v. Barnes, 214 Ga. App. 7, 446 S.E.2d 774 (1994).

Discretion of court in finding absence of "good cause." — Court of Appeals will not interfere with the discretion of the trial court in finding the absence of "good cause" within the meaning of subsection (b) (now (e)) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 and denying a motion to extend the time for filing an expert's affidavit absent manifest abuse. Brake v. Mintz, 193 Ga. App. 662, 388 S.E.2d 715 (1989).

Broad discretion is vested in the trial court to determine whether "good cause" exists and what constitutes "good cause" within the meaning of subsection (b) (now (e)) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1. Emory Clinic v. Wyatt, 200 Ga. App. 184, 407 S.E.2d 135 (1991).

"Misinterpretation" of law not "good cause." — Trial court erred in denying the defendant's motion for summary judgment since the plaintiffs contemporaneously filed affidavit failed to specify any negligent act or omission, and the defendants' responsive pleading adequately raised the insufficiency issue. Cure by amendment, on the grounds that the affidavit was statutorily insufficient due to a "misinterpretation" of the law was prohibited. Cheeley v. Henderson, 261 Ga. 498, 405 S.E.2d 865 (1991); Wright v. Crawford Long Hosp., 205 Ga. App. 653, 423 S.E.2d 12 (1992), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 1118, 114 S. Ct. 1069, 127 L. Ed. 2d 388 (1994); Edwards v. Vanstrom, 206 Ga. App. 21, 424 S.E.2d 326 (1992).

"Good cause" not shown. — Plaintiff who, subsequent to the plaintiff's treatment by the defendants, had undergone surgery in Germany, failed to show "good cause" for an extension of time to file an affidavit since the record showed that the plaintiff had approximately two years within which to collect and translate the medical records from Germany. Archie v. Scott, 190 Ga. App. 145, 378 S.E.2d 182 (1989).

Plaintiffs failed to demonstrate "good cause" for an extension of time since the plaintiffs' motions asserting inadequate funds and the plaintiffs' expert's departure for the Thanksgiving holiday did not provide a detailed showing of the efforts the plaintiffs had made to obtain the expert's affidavit and the unavoidable reasons for the delay. Brake v. Mintz, 193 Ga. App. 662, 388 S.E.2d 715 (1989).

“Good cause” extension allowed. — Plaintiff properly invoked the provisions of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15 to amend the complaint to include the language of subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1, despite amending the complaint 75 days after the complaint was filed, the plaintiff triggered subsection (b) and the automatic 45-day extended filing period; however, even though the plaintiff could not and did not file the affidavit within the 45-day period, as the automatic extended filing period had already expired, yet, since the plaintiff fell within the provisions of subsection (b), the plaintiff was not precluded from seeking a “good cause” extension of time to file the affidavit after the statutory 45-day period had expired, but before the defendants' motions to dismiss had been granted. Peterson v. Columbus Med. Ctr. Found., Inc., 243 Ga. App. 749, 533 S.E.2d 749 (2000).

In order to invoke the protections of subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1, the plaintiff must allege in the complaint that because of time constraints, the expert affidavit could not be prepared. Anderson v. Navarro, 227 Ga. App. 184, 489 S.E.2d 40 (1997).

The 45-day delay provisions of subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 were not invoked since the applicable statute of limitation would not have expired within ten days of the date of filing of a complaint. Legum v. Crouch, 208 Ga. App. 185, 430 S.E.2d 360 (1993).

While plaintiff, spouse of deceased patient, was allowed to recommence a medical malpractice action under O.C.G.A. § 9-2-61 since the action was filed within six months of dismissal of the spouse's earlier timely filed suit, the applicable statutes of limitation had clearly run when the renewal action was filed and, therefore, the extension provided by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1(b) (now (e)), which applied only when the complaint was filed within 10 days of the expiration of the limitations period, was not available; the trial court properly found that the surviving spouse could not invoke the 45-day extension of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1(b) (now (e)) and properly dismissed the renewal action on the basis of a failure to file an expert affidavit. Fisher v. Coffee Reg'l Med. Ctr., Inc., 268 Ga. App. 657, 602 S.E.2d 135 (2004).

In an action in which a client filed a counterclaim, alleging legal malpractice against a law firm, the client's reliance on O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1(b) (now (e)) to extend the time within which the client had to file an expert's affidavit was misplaced as the statute of limitation on the client's counterclaim would not have expired within ten days of the filing of the counterclaim and the client was therefore not entitled to invoke the 45-day extension for filing the affidavit; the phrase “period of limitation” contained in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1(b) (now (e)) plainly refers only to the statute of limitation applicable to a particular action, and does not refer to the 30 days within which responsive pleadings to a complaint must be filed. Landau v. Davis Law Group, P.C., 269 Ga. App. 904, 605 S.E.2d 461 (2004).

Statute of limitations not expired. — Exception in subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 was not applicable as the statute of limitations did not run until much more than ten days after the filing of the original complaint. Epps v. Gwinnett County, 231 Ga. App. 664, 499 S.E.2d 657 (1998).

Applicability of 30-day time extension. — Applicability of the extension of time provided by subsection (c) (now (e)) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 is not dependent upon an ultimate judicial determination of whether the complaint alleges an action sounding in simple negligence or whether, in truth, the viable theory of liability is professional malpractice. Nor does it require a defendant to file a skeletal answer which must be amended to address the specifications of negligence as averred in any subsequently filed expert's affidavit. DOT v. Gilmore, 209 Ga. App. 656, 434 S.E.2d 114 (1993).

In an action involving multiple defendants alleging professional malpractice against some, but not all, the 30-day extension for filing an answer applies only to the malpractice defendants. Inasmuch as the requisite affidavit for malpractice claims has no bearing on purely simple negligence claims, a plaintiff's invocation of subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 would not extend the deadline for answering the complaint for the defendants against whom only simple negligence is alleged. DOT v. Gilmore, 209 Ga. App. 656, 434 S.E.2d 114 (1993).

In a personal injury action, since the plaintiff did not distinguish between professional and nonprofessional defendants in making general allegations of negligence, by invoking the 45-day extension of time to file an expert's affidavit, the plaintiff automatically caused the time period for all the defendants to file an answer to be extended for 30 days from the filing of the affidavit. McGarr v. Gilmore, 220 Ga. App. 286, 469 S.E.2d 720 (1996).

Application of 45-day extension. — If the two conditions of subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 — that the period of limitation will expire within ten days of the date of filing and plaintiff has alleged that an affidavit could not be prepared because of time constraints — are met, it does not matter whether the trial court believes or disbelieves the plaintiff's allegation that time constraints prevented compliance with the contemporaneous filing requirement; the plaintiff is automatically given 45 extra days to come up with the necessary affidavit. Works v. Aupont, 219 Ga. App. 577, 465 S.E.2d 717 (1995).

Affidavit filed with complaint in renewal action. — In a professional malpractice action against an extermination company, since the plaintiffs voluntarily dismissed the plaintiffs' initial complaint which did not contain an expert's affidavit, filing of an amended complaint with an affidavit was permissible since the renewal action was filed within the limitations period. Moritz v. Orkin Exterminating Co., 215 Ga. App. 255, 450 S.E.2d 233 (1994); Orkin Exterminating Co. v. Carder, 215 Ga. App. 257, 450 S.E.2d 217 (1994).

Because a health care provider simply raised a patient's failure to comply with O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1(a) as a defense in the provider's answer rather than in a contemporaneous motion to dismiss, as required by § 9-11-9.1(c), the patient was not precluded from renewing a negligence action pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-2-61. Opensided MRI of Atlanta, LLC v. Chandler, 287 Ga. 406, 696 S.E.2d 640 (2010).

Grace period eliminated. — Current version of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 eliminated the 45-day grace period for filing an expert affidavit as well as the possibility of additional extensions for "good cause" shown; a patient was not entitled to obtain additional time to file an expert affidavit in a malpractice case filed after the effective date of the current version of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1. Scott v. Martin, 280 Ga. App. 311, 633 S.E.2d 665 (2006).

Failure to obtain extension. — Dismissal of a patient's medical malpractice case was affirmed since, on the 45th day after filing the patient's complaint, the patient moved the trial court to extend the 45-day period to file an expert affidavit, and on the 59th day after filing, the patient filed an expert affidavit without obtaining any ruling on the patient's motion to extend the filing period. It was the patient's duty to obtain a ruling on the patient's motion to extend the period, and the failure to do so before the motion to dismiss was granted was a waiver of the motion. Lowery v. Atlanta Heart Assocs., P.C., 266 Ga. App. 402, 597 S.E.2d 494 (2004).

Trial court's discretion to extend time for filing amended affidavits. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1(e) expressly allowed the trial court, in the court's discretion, to extend the time for filing amendments to defective affidavits and granted the court the authority to consider an untimely filed amended or supplemental affidavit. Thus, in a medical malpractice case, the trial court erred by finding that in the absence of a showing of excusable neglect under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-6(b), the court had no discretion to allow a patient to file a late-filed amended affidavit. Schofill v. Phoebe Putney Health Sys., Inc., 315 Ga. App. 817, 728 S.E.2d 331 (2012).

"Professional." — Legislature intended for the term "professional" as used in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 to be defined by O.C.G.A. §§ 14-7-2(2), 14-10-2(2), and 43-1-24. Gillis v. Goodgame, 262 Ga. 117, 414 S.E.2d 197 (1992).

O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 applies only to those licensed professions regulated by state examining boards when licensure is predicated upon the successful completion of the specialized schooling or training necessary to obtain the expertise to practice that profession. Harrell v. Lusk, 263 Ga. 895, 439 S.E.2d 896 (1994).

Affidavit requirement of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 did not apply to any acts committed by a lab technician because the technician was not recognized as a "professional" under Georgia law, O.C.G.A. § 14-7-2. Pattman v. Mann, 307 Ga. App. 413, 701 S.E.2d 232 (2010).

2. Engineering ProfessionA. In General

Third-party complaint against an architectural firm, which was being sued in a wrongful death action for alleged faulty design and construction of a heating system, was subject to the affidavit filing requirement of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1. Housing Auth. v. Gilpin & Bazemore/Architects & Planners, Inc., 191 Ga. App. 400, 381 S.E.2d 550, appeal dismissed, 259 Ga. 435, 383 S.E.2d 867 (1989).

Engineers. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 applies to professional engineers that are licensed by the State of Georgia. Goolsby v. Gain Techs., Inc., No. 08-16587, 2010 U.S. App. LEXIS 1380 (11th Cir. Jan. 21, 2010) (Unpublished).

Engineering profession. — Requirements of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1(a) apply to the engineering profession. Kneip v. Southern Eng'g Co., 260 Ga. 409, 395 S.E.2d 809 (1990).

Dismissal of a claim for engineering malpractice for failure to file the required affidavit would have been unfair since cases applying O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 to non-medical malpractice actions had not been decided until after the complaint was filed. Kneip v. Southern Eng'g Co., 260 Ga. 409, 395 S.E.2d 809 (1990).

While the design of a bridge or guard-rail must necessarily involve professional (engineering) services, the installation, repair, and maintenance of those structures would not necessarily require the exercise of professional skill and judgment. Adams v. Coweta County, 208 Ga. App. 334, 430 S.E.2d 599 (1993).

In a wrongful death action against the Department of Transportation (DOT), the trial court erred in dismissing as insufficient DOT's defense based on plaintiff's failure to file an expert affidavit in support of a claim involving a question of professional negligence by highway engineers. DOT v. Taunton, 217 Ga. App. 232, 457 S.E.2d 570 (1995).

Trial court erred in dismissing the plaintiff's complaint on the ground that the plaintiff's expert's affidavit was insufficient to meet the requirements of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 since the expert supplemented the affidavit with testimony adequate to aver that DOT failed to comply substantially with engineering standards applicable at the time an intersection was planned and designed as required by O.C.G.A. § 50-21-24(10). Lennen v. DOT, 239 Ga. App. 729, 521 S.E.2d 885 (1999).

In an action against engineers for professional malpractice, the plaintiff was required to file an expert's affidavit with the plaintiff's complaint, and the proper consequence for the plaintiff's failure to do so was dismissal of the complaint with prejudice. Jordan, Jones & Goulding, Inc. v. Balfour Beatty Constr., Inc., 246 Ga. App. 93, 539 S.E.2d 828 (2000).

Trial court properly granted summary judgment to a defendant engineer on a plaintiff's professional negligence claim pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 since the plaintiff's complaint showed on the complaint's face that the complaint involved an allegation of professional negligence that required an expert affidavit under § 9-11-9.1(a) and (d)(21), and the plaintiff failed to file such an affidavit with the complaint; the plaintiff's pro se status did not exempt the plaintiff from complying with the affidavit requirement of § 9-11-9.1. Dockens v. Runkle Consulting, Inc., 285 Ga. App. 896, 648 S.E.2d 80 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 668 (2007).

O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 can be invoked by an engineering firm named as a party defendant. Southern Eng'g Co. v. Central Ga. Elec. Membership Corp., 193 Ga. App. 878, 389 S.E.2d 380 (1989), rev'd on other grounds, 260 Ga. 409, 395 S.E.2d 809 (1990).

B. Roads

Claim against county as to bridge guardrail. — Although a county is not a professional and the affidavit requirement of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 does not automatically apply to any claim asserted against the county, a complaint against the county for negligent design, installation, repair, and maintenance of the guardrails on a road bridge was the performance of professional services and required an affidavit. Adams v. Coweta County, 208 Ga. App. 334, 430 S.E.2d 599 (1993).

Designing of roads. — Since designing roads requires “engineering services” which have been described as the performance of professional services within the purview of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 by the Supreme Court, failure to contemporaneously file an expert affidavit with the complaint in an action for negligent repair, maintenance, and design of the road was fatal. Jackson v. DOT, 201 Ga. App. 863, 412 S.E.2d 847 (1991), cert. denied, 201 Ga. App. 904, 412 S.E.2d 847 (1992); DOT v. Mikell, 229 Ga. App. 54, 493 S.E.2d 219 (1997).

Subsection (a) does not apply to DOT. — Intent of subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 as amended in 1997 is that the expert affidavit requirement in a professional malpractice case applies only to an employer that is a licensed health care facility in a suit when that employer's liability is premised on the action or inaction of a licensed health care professional listed in former subsection (f); because the DOT is not a licensed health care facility, it is not an employer to which subsection (a) applies. Minnix v. DOT, 272 Ga. 566, 533 S.E.2d 75 (2000), reversing Minnix v. DOT, 240 Ga. App. 524, 525 S.E.2d 704 (1999).

Repair and maintenance of roads. — Claims against the Georgia Department of Transportation for ordinary negligence in the repair and maintenance of a roadway did not require the affidavit of an expert pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1. Drawdy v. DOT, 228 Ga. App. 338, 491 S.E.2d 521 (1997).

Portions of a complaint alleging various negligent failures to comply with the standards of the Manual On Uniform Traffic Control Devices (MUTCD) in the placement of the traffic control devices by the DOT's contractor required an expert affidavit since those allegations fell within the advisory or permissive categories of the MUTCD. DOT v. Cushway, 240 Ga. App. 464, 523 S.E.2d 340 (1999).

3. Legal Profession

Professional malpractice pre-requisite to affidavit requirement. — Since the complaint did not call into question professional standards of care applicable to attorneys, but rather raised questions concerning the existence of a legal services contract, whether any such contract was breached, and whether the defendant duped the plaintiff into purchasing advice for a false promise, the affidavit requirements of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 were not triggered. Peacock v. Beall, 223 Ga. App. 465, 477 S.E.2d 883 (1996).

Legal malpractice action supported by expert's affidavit. — In an action by a spouse against a divorce attorney for legal malpractice, an expert's affidavit setting forth the attorney's negligent omission from the settlement agreement of the spouse's right to military pension benefits was sufficient to demonstrate that the spouse's claim was not frivolous. Hutchinson v. Divorce & Custody Law Ctr. of Arline Kerman & Assocs., 215 Ga. App. 25, 449 S.E.2d 866 (1994).

Application to professional negligence claims only and not attorney retainer agreement. — In a former client's suit for fraud, breach of contract, and other claims against a former attorney for the attorney's failure to refund a retainer after being fired, the trial court only partially erred by denying the attorney's motion to dismiss the complaint for failure to comply with the expert affidavit requirement of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 with regard to the former client's breach of contract claims as § 9-11-9.1 applies to professional negligence claims only and, on the face of the complaint, the appellate court was unable to determine whether the former client's breach of contract claim against the attorney involved the use of the attorney's professional judgment and skill. The appellate court noted that any breach of contract claim not involving the attorney's professional judgment and skill remained pending in the trial court. Nash v. Studdard, 294 Ga. App. 845, 670 S.E.2d 508 (2008).

Affidavit not required for fraud. — In action against an attorney for breach of contract, breach of fiduciary duty, fraud, and professional malpractice, the trial court properly denied the defendant's motion to dismiss the fraud count for failure to file an affidavit, but properly granted the motion as to the other counts since an affidavit was required to the extent that the counts sounded in malpractice. Hodge v. Jennings Mill, Ltd., 215 Ga. App. 507, 451 S.E.2d 66 (1994).

In a client's fraud claim against an attorney, neither appellate opinions that the client could pursue that claim without filing the expert affidavit required under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1(b) (now (e)) in professional malpractice claims, nor the trial court's subsequent denial of the attorney's summary judgment motion, asserting a failure to show a false representation or detrimental reliance, established the law of the case precluding the trial court from subsequently granting the attorney's summary judgment motion based on the client's failure to prove damages. Hopkinson v. Labovitz, 263 Ga. App. 702, 589 S.E.2d 255 (2003).

Negligent exercise of legal judgment is not simple negligence. — Compliance with O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 was required since the various acts and omissions averred in the complaint attempting to establish negligence on the part of an attorney each involved a situation requiring the exercise of legal judgment. Therefore, the complaint alleged professional, rather than simple, negligence. Richmond Leasing Co. v. Cooper, Cooper, Maioriello & Stalnaker, 207 Ga.

App. 623, 428 S.E.2d 603 (1993).

Legal malpractice action properly dismissed for failure to file affidavit.

— When the plaintiff, acting pro se, sued the defendant attorney for alleged legal malpractice arising from the defendant's representation of the plaintiff on certain criminal charges, and contemporaneously with the filing of the defendant's answer, the defendant moved to dismiss the complaint on the ground that it was not accompanied by the supporting affidavit of an expert as required by subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1, the trial court did not err in granting the defendant's motion to dismiss. Frazier v. Merritt, 190 Ga. App. 832, 380 S.E.2d 495 (1989).

Plaintiff's claims against attorneys for premature settlement of a medical malpractice case were properly dismissed for failure to comply with subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1. Coleman v. Hicks, 209 Ga. App. 467, 433 S.E.2d 621 (1993).

To the extent an executor's cross-claim for contribution and indemnity against an attorney was based upon acts and omissions by the attorney, in the attorney's capacity as the executor's legal representative in a legal proceeding, the claim was properly dismissed for failure to file an expert affidavit. Crawford v. Johnson, 227 Ga. App. 548, 489 S.E.2d 552 (1997).

Attorney representing a corporation in a bankruptcy proceeding was necessarily exercising professional or legal judgment and a suit against the attorney for actions or omissions in that proceeding is an action for professional malpractice requiring an expert affidavit. Mendoza v. Pennington, 239 Ga. App. 300, 519 S.E.2d 715 (1999), cert. denied, 529 U.S. 1042, 120 S. Ct. 1541, 146 L. Ed. 2d 354 (2000).

Plaintiff's claim of professional malpractice was properly dismissed because the plaintiff failed to file an expert affidavit with the complaint and since the defendant raised this defense in the defendant's answer dismissal of the claim was mandated. Denson v. Maloy, 239 Ga. App. 778, 521 S.E.2d 666 (1999).

Expert affidavit required on title search issue. — Action against law firm involving deficiency in a title search assigned by the firm to a nonlawyer required an expert affidavit. Centrust Mtg. Corp. v.

Smith & Jenkins, 220 Ga. App. 394, 469 S.E.2d 466 (1996).

4. Medical Profession

Impact rule does not apply to medical malpractice actions. — Policy concerns traditionally given for the impact rule and denying recovery for emotional distress unrelated to physical injuries are not present in medical malpractice cases because such cases require a physician-patient relationship between the defendant and the plaintiff; consequently, there is no question regarding the emotional impact of the defendant's alleged negligence on third parties or bystanders, nor is there concern about a "flood of litigation" arising from such negligence, and the concern about avoiding fraudulent or frivolous lawsuits is already addressed by the strict pleading requirements of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1, the purpose of which is to reduce the number of frivolous malpractice suits filed. Bruscato v. O'Brien, 307 Ga. App. 452, 705 S.E.2d 275 (2010).

Claim of abandonment brought by the plaintiff against a podiatrist required the filing of an expert affidavit. Bradford v. Rossi, 249 Ga. App. 325, 548 S.E.2d 70 (2001).

Pharmacy. — Although a pharmacy is defined as a profession in O.C.G.A. § 26-4-2(16)(A), the State Board of Pharmacy, which is charged with regulating and licensing pharmacists, was created pursuant to O.C.G.A. Art. 2, Ch. 4, T. 26. Pharmacy is not a profession to which the affidavit requirements of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 apply. Harrell v. Lusk, 208 Ga. App. 358, 430 S.E.2d 653 (1993), aff'd, 263 Ga. 895, 439 S.E.2d 896 (1994).

Licensed pharmacist. — When a vendor of drugs or medicines is a licensed pharmacist and is sued on the basis of allegations that the pharmacist negligently dispensed the wrong drug in filling a medical prescription, the claim against the pharmacist clearly is for professional malpractice, and an affidavit is required to accompany the complaint. Sparks v. Kroger Co., 200 Ga. App. 135, 407 S.E.2d 105 (1991).

Professional negligence action against a pharmacist was subject to the requirements of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1. Harrell v. Lusk, 263 Ga. 895, 439 S.E.2d 896 (1994).

Drug distributor. — In a professional negligence action against a distributor of an anti-psychotic drug, failure to attach an expert affidavit required dismissal of the claims. Presto v. Sandoz Pharmaceuticals Corp., 226 Ga. App. 547, 487 S.E.2d 70 (1997).

Physical therapists are "professionals" within the intent of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1. Hodo v. General Hosps., 211 Ga. App. 6, 438 S.E.2d 378 (1993).

Affidavit was required in an action against a physical therapy company based on the company's negligent hiring, supervision, and training of a physical trainer in the company's employ. Georgia Physical Therapy, Inc. v. McCullough, 219 Ga. App. 744, 466 S.E.2d 635 (1995).

Affidavit of chiropractor cannot be used against physical therapist. — Trial court erred by finding that the opinion of the patient's expert satisfied O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 and former O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67.1(c) (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-7-702) because despite the expert testimony that, as allowed by the expert's chiropractic license, the expert had practiced physical therapy for a number of years, chiropractic medicine and physical therapy were not the same professions. Bacon County Hosp. & Health Sys. v. Whitley, 319 Ga. App. 545, 737 S.E.2d 328 (2013).

Psychologists. — Expert's affidavit stating that the defendant's disclosure of confidential information was a deviation from the standard of care of a psychologist was adequate; it was not insufficient on the basis that the affidavit stated a violation of an ethical standard which, standing alone, cannot serve as a legal basis for a malpractice action. Bala v. Powers Ferry Psychological Assocs., 225 Ga. App. 843, 491 S.E.2d 380 (1997).

Failure to replace disposable parts in medical instrument, as required for the instrument's safe performance, created an issue of simple negligence by hospital employees for which the hospital could be liable. Because professional skill and judgment were not involved, an affidavit under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 was not necessary. Lamb v. Candler Gen. Hosp.,

Application to Professions (Cont'd)

Radiological physicist. — When the defendant's job as a radiological physicist involved calibrating the cobalt machine which is used to deliver radiation to the patient, and performing quality control services on any machines used in this therapy, and that the treating physician determines how much radiation the patient needs, and the defendant then calibrates the machine to deliver this amount, the defendant was not practicing medicine within the meaning of O.C.G.A. § 43-34-20(3) and, therefore the affidavit requirements of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 did not apply to radiological physicists. Gillis v. Goodgame, 262 Ga. 117, 414 S.E.2d 197 (1992).

University professor not expert in medical case. — In an action against a physician involving a procedure in which a "ken nail" biomechanical device was implanted in the plaintiff's hip, a tenured professor of applied biomechanics who was not a licensed medical doctor was not competent to testify as an expert in the case since the professor's credentials did not include the ability, education, training, or experience to perform the necessary surgery or prescribe any care to a patient with a biomechanical device. Riggins v. Wyatt, 215 Ga. App. 854, 452 S.E.2d 577 (1994).

In action for injuries against hospital and doctor, since the plaintiff's affidavit setting forth negligence of the doctor did not allege any negligence on the part of the hospital, the hospital was not entitled to dismissal of ordinary negligence claims; the claim of negligence in the complaint against the hospital's "staff" was not one against a "professional" or involving "professional malpractice." Greene County Hosp. Auth. v. Turner, 205 Ga. App. 213, 421 S.E.2d 715, cert. denied, 205 Ga. App. 900, 421 S.E.2d 715 (1992).

Respondeat superior liability of hospital. — To the extent that a complaint avers claims of hospital liability, based on the doctrine of respondeat superior, arising from acts or omissions constituting malpractice by doctors, registered professional nurses, or other "professionals," as recognized by the appropriate statutes, an affidavit is required. To the extent that a complaint avers claims based on the acts or omissions of agents or staff employees who are not "established" by the hospital as qualifying as professionals, no supporting affidavit would be required and those claims would not be dismissed or summary judgment granted for want of an affidavit. Legum v. Crouch, 208 Ga. App. 185, 430 S.E.2d 360 (1993).

Medical malpractice complaint, which included an expert affidavit pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1, was not subject to dismissal against various nurses although the expert did not assert any expertise in the area of nursing care as the nurses failed to raise an objection to that aspect of the affidavit's sufficiency; further, the fact that there was no negligence asserted against medical entities was not fatal and did not require dismissal as negligence was opined against the employees, and the employers were sued under a respondeat superior theory. Tenet Healthcare Corp. v. Gilbert, 277 Ga. App. 895, 627 S.E.2d 821 (2006).

Affidavit requirement inapplicable to ordinary negligence claim. — Requirement for an expert affidavit was inapplicable to a claim that the hospital provided inferior services and facilities; the hospital may be liable in ordinary negligence for furnishing defective equipment. HCA Health Servs., of Ga., Inc. v. Hampshire, 206 Ga. App. 108, 424 S.E.2d 293 (1992).

Court was without authority to say O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 did not apply and the plaintiff should not be required to file an expert affidavit if negligence was shown to be clear and palpable. Hopkinson v. Labovitz, 231 Ga. App. 557, 499 S.E.2d 338 (1998).

Action based on an attorney's negligent filing of an erroneous deed did not contain allegations of negligence which would require an expert affidavit. Bailey v. Joyner, 229 Ga. App. 832, 495 S.E.2d 45 (1998).

Doctor and medical practice's failure to object, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1, with specificity to a nurse's affidavit that a plaintiff submitted in support of the plaintiff's medical malpractice claim did not waive the issue of the nurse's competency as an expert in support of the patient's ordinary negligence claim. Tucker v. Thomas C. Talley, M.D., P.C., 267 Ga. App. 820, 600 S.E.2d 778 (2004).

Trial judge did not err in denying a motion to dismiss a damages complaint filed against two medical clinics on grounds that the suing party failed to attach an expert affidavit as required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1(a) as the appeals court agreed that it was unclear from the face of the complaint whether the suing party was alleging either professional or simple negligence; hence, the suing party was entitled to pursue a simple negligence claim without an expert affidavit. Atlanta Women's Health Group, P.C. v. Clemons, 287 Ga. App. 426, 651 S.E.2d 762 (2007).

To the extent a patient's medical malpractice complaint could be construed to state a claim based on ordinary negligence, the trial court erred in granting a healthcare provider's motion to dismiss due to the patient's failure to file a malpractice affidavit pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 because, at least in part, the provider's alleged liability did not turn on a medical question but rather on a technician ignoring the patient's warning that the patient was going to fall off a treadmill. OKelley v. Atlanta Heart Assocs., P.C., 316 Ga. App. 218, 728 S.E.2d 313 (2012).

Trial court did not err in denying a doctor's motion to dismiss an administrator's professional negligence claim based on being barred due to the failure to file an expert affidavit with the original complaint because the original complaint raised only a claim of ordinary negligence; thus, the O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 affidavit requirement was not implicated at the time that the original complaint was filed. Jensen v. Engler, 317 Ga. App. 879, 733 S.E.2d 52 (2012).

Defective equipment supplied by hospital. — Because the patient's complaint alleged negligence against the hospital for supplying defective equipment for use in treating the hospital's patients, the case was not one against a professional or one involving professional malpractice, no expert affidavit was required, and the hospital's motion to dismiss was improperly granted. Ambrose v. St. Joseph's Hospital of Atlanta, Inc., 325 Ga. App. 557, 754 S.E.2d 135 (2014).

Because the patient's complaint alleged that the hospital breached the hospital's duty of ordinary care by providing unsafe equipment for use in treating the patient, the patient's complaint alleged simple negligence, and the hospital's motion to dismiss was improperly granted. Ambrose v. St. Joseph's Hospital of Atlanta, Inc., 325 Ga. App. 557, 754 S.E.2d 135 (2014).

No specific application yet expert testimony required in medical fraud complaint. — Although O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 does not apply and a plaintiff is not required to attach an expert affidavit to a medical fraud complaint, that does not mean that expert testimony will not be necessary for a jury to find in the plaintiff's favor as expert evidence is required when a medical question involving truly specialized medical knowledge, rather than the sort of medical knowledge that is within common understanding and experience, is needed. Johnson v. Johnson, 323 Ga. App. 836, 747 S.E.2d 518 (2013).

Battery claim does not require affidavit despite medical setting. — Patient alleging battery based on claim that surgeon punctured her duodenum during tubal ligation procedure was not required to file an expert's affidavit. Newton v. Porter, 206 Ga. App. 19, 424 S.E.2d 323 (1992).

Claim for battery is not an allegation of professional negligence and does not require an expert affidavit. Upson County Hosp., Inc. v. Head, 246 Ga. App. 386, 540 S.E.2d 626 (2000).

Doctor's alleged installation of a prosthetic patella in a backward position contrary to the instruction and design of the device constituted, if proven, an unconsented battery on the patient by the doctor and, thus, the patient was not required to file an expert's affidavit with the patient's complaint since a battery by a doctor did not come under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 and did not require an expert's affidavit. Sood v. Smeigh, 259 Ga. App. 490, 578 S.E.2d 158 (2003).

Affidavit not required absent "medical question." — In a negligence action against a physician and the physician's office staff, the affidavit of a medical expert was not required since the defendants' alleged liability did not turn on a "medical question," and a jury would be capable of determining without the help of expert evidence whether the physician's medical assistant exercised due care. Brown v. Durden, 195 Ga. App. 340, 393 S.E.2d 450 (1990).

Failure to attach medical records.

— In a medical malpractice action, because it was undisputed that the record on appeal failed to include the medical records on which the parents' expert's conclusions were based, the parents failed to comply with O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(e), hence, the trial court did not err when the court granted summary judgment against the parents on this basis. Conley v. Children's Healthcare of Atlanta, Inc., 279 Ga. App. 792, 632 S.E.2d 409 (2006).

Physician's affidavit must be signed in notary's presence. — Affidavit that was not signed by the physician in the presence of a notary was not valid. Phoebe Putney Mem. Hosp. v. Skipper, 226 Ga. App. 585, 487 S.E.2d 1 (1997).

O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 was intended to eliminate frivolous actions; however, since the patient had clear evidence of simple negligence and demonstrated the patient's ability to prove such simple negligence, that statutory provision would not serve its purpose if it were applied to the patient's claim. Although O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 requires an expert's affidavit be submitted in a case involving alleged professional malpractice, the trial court did not err in denying the doctor's motion to dismiss the patient's action for attaching an expert's affidavit that was arguably invalid because the affidavit was unsworn and unnotarized as the patient's complaint alleging that the doctor committed simple negligence in performing the mechanical act of reassembly of a prosthetic patella did not involve professional skill and judgment and, thus, did not require the submission of an expert's affidavit. Sood v. Smeigh, 259 Ga. App. 490, 578 S.E.2d 158 (2003).

Extension of time to file physician's affidavit. — When plaintiffs' treating physician would not execute an expert witness affidavit, and this was not found out until two days before the filing deadline, the trial court's grant of an extension of time to file an affidavit was not an abuse of discretion. Mem'l Hosp. of Adel, Inc. v. Dunn, 251 Ga. App. 399, 554 S.E.2d 548 (2001).

Medical malpractice expert's affidavit. — In a medical malpractice action, the trial court properly denied a neurosurgeon's motion to dismiss the action on grounds that the affidavit required under former O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67.1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-7-702) was from an orthopedist and not a fellow neurosurgeon, and was thus insufficient as a matter of law to support the husband and wife's medical malpractice complaint as the statutory area of practice or specialty in which the opinion was to be given was dictated not by the apparent expertise of the treating physician, but rather by the allegations of the complaint concerning the plaintiff's injury. Abramson v. Williams, 281 Ga. App. 617, 636 S.E.2d 765 (2006), cert. denied, No. S07C0226, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 91 (2007).

Medical expert affidavit insufficient to create jury questions. — Opinion in a O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 expert affidavit that an emergency room physician's failure to treat a patient's leg fracture was below the standard of care and grossly negligent was insufficient to create a jury question. In view of the physician's affidavit, stating that the physician sought no orthopedic consult because a radiologist opined that the x-rays showed no serious fracture, the patient could not prove by clear and convincing evidence that the physician acted with gross negligence as required under O.C.G.A. § 51-1-29.5(c). Pottinger v. Smith, 293 Ga. App. 626, 667 S.E.2d 659 (2008).

Jury to determine doctor's credibility. — In a medical malpractice action, the trial court erred in granting summary judgment to a doctor and a pacemaker clinic because it was for a jury, not the trial court, to resolve a conflict created by an expert's contradictory testimony in an initial affidavit pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 and a subsequent deposition, and to determine the expert's credibility.

Patterson v. Bates, 295 Ga. App. 141, 671 S.E.2d 195 (2008), cert. denied, No. S09C0628, No. S09C0658, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 224, 227 (Ga. 2009).

Affidavit of physician against physical therapist. — Affidavit of an orthopedic surgeon showing the surgeon's knowledge of the professional standards of physical therapists from the surgeon's practice of medicine with their assistance was sufficient to support a medical malpractice complaint against a physical therapist. Lee v. Visiting Nurse Health Sys., 223 Ga. App. 305, 477 S.E.2d 445 (1996).

Affidavit of doctor proper against nurse. — Affidavit of plaintiff's expert, a doctor, was competent regarding a nurse because the expert was familiar with the standard of care acceptable to the medical profession generally. Tye v. Wilson, 208 Ga. App. 253, 430 S.E.2d 129 (1993).

Nurse's affidavit. — Expert affidavit of a nurse is necessary to support a claim for professional negligence by a nurse only when the alleged act or omission by the nurse requires the exercise of professional nursing skill and judgment. To assess whether or not a co-worker had a propensity to commit the alleged sexual assault was not a matter within the professional nursing skill and judgment of the nurse, the defendant. Bunn-Penn v. Southern Regional Medical Corp., 227 Ga. App. 291, 488 S.E.2d 747 (1997).

Because a doctor and the doctor's practice did not object with specificity to a nurse's affidavit that a patient submitted in support of the patient's medical malpractice complaint, they were not entitled to dismissal for failure to state a claim on account of the patient's alleged failure to comply with O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1. Tucker v. Thomas C. Talley, M.D., P.C., 267 Ga. App. 820, 600 S.E.2d 778 (2004).

Nurses. — Plaintiff's complaint that hospital nurses who were assisting the plaintiff knew or should have known that the plaintiff was subject to falling and failed to exercise proper care to prevent the plaintiff falling sounded in professional negligence; thus, the plaintiff's action was subject to the expert affidavit requirement. Holloway v. Northside Hosp., 230 Ga. App. 371, 496 S.E.2d 510 (1998).

Trial court erred in denying a hospital's motion to dismiss a medical malpractice complaint in a simple negligence action after the complainant failed to attach an expert witness affidavit pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1, as a nurse's administration of medication to a patient, which was the subject matter of the suit, involved professional skill and judgment to comply with a standard within the professional's area of expertise. Grady Gen. Hosp. v. King, 288 Ga. App. 101, 653 S.E.2d 367 (2007).

Even if a patient clearly revoked the patient's consent to an intravenous antibiotic, the patient failed to show that it was medically feasible for a nurse to desist in the treatment without the cessation being detrimental; consequently, without an O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 expert affidavit, the trial court properly dismissed the patient's complaint. King v. Dodge County Hosp. Auth., 274 Ga. App. 44, 616 S.E.2d 835 (2005).

Complaint alleged that a nurse committed malpractice by not accurately triaging a patient. As the patient's expert nurse had ongoing practical experience in patient triage, and years of practical and teaching experience in supervising patient care, the expert's affidavit filed under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 was legally sufficient even though the expert had not performed emergency room triage. Houston v. Phoebe Putney Mem. Hosp., Inc., 295 Ga. App. 674, 673 S.E.2d 54 (2009).

In a medical malpractice case dealing with a child's permanent disabilities, the hospital's motion for a new trial was improperly granted on the ground that a certified nurse midwife (CNM) could not testify as to the standard of care exercised by the registered professional nurses (RN) because the CNM was a member of the same profession as the hospitals RNs because the Georgia Registered Professional Nurse Practice Act, O.C.G.A. § 43-26-1 et seq., required a CNM to be licensed as a RN, and both RNs and CNMs were regulated by the Georgia Board of Nursing; a review of the regulatory scheme revealed that a CNM was a RN who had advanced training in a specialized area; and the expert affidavit statute listed only nurses and the statute did not have a separate listing for CNMs. Dempsey v. Gwinnett Hosp. Sys., 330 Ga. App. 469, 765 S.E.2d 525 (2014).

Nurse's affidavit sufficient. — Nurse's affidavit was sufficient proof that the methods of treatment for the giving of phenergan injections by nurses and doctors are the same and, that as one familiar with the standard of care regarding the giving of these injections in both the nursing profession and in the medical profession generally, the doctor's performance fell beneath the standard of care in the medical profession. Nowak v. High, 209 Ga. App. 536, 433 S.E.2d 602 (1993).

Nurse's affidavit insufficient. — Trial court erred in ruling that a registered nurse could provide an expert affidavit regarding a physical therapist's care, given that O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1(g) categorized nurses and physical therapists as practicing separate professions, and because an expert was required to meet the conditions of former O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67.1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-7-702) in order to provide a § 9-11-9.1 affidavit. Ball v. Jones, 301 Ga. App. 340, 687 S.E.2d 625 (2009).

Attachment of medical records to affidavit not required. — As long as the affidavit itself adequately sets forth the factual basis for at least one negligent act or omission of the defendant alleged in the complaint, it is not necessary that the medical records from which the stated facts were taken be attached to the affidavit. Ulbrich v. Batts, 206 Ga. App. 74, 424 S.E.2d 288 (1992); Williams v. Hajosy, 210 Ga. App. 637, 436 S.E.2d 716 (1993).

Affidavit is not statutorily insufficient when the affidavit satisfies all the express requirements of subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 but fails to attach the medical documents therein referred to and relied upon by the expert when reciting in the affidavit the factual basis supporting each claim. Dozier v. Clayton County Hosp. Auth., 206 Ga. App. 62, 424 S.E.2d 632 (1992).

Sufficiency of affidavit. — In an action against the hospital, physicians and nurses, the plaintiffs complied with the requirements of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 by filing with the plaintiffs' complaint affidavits which set forth the negligence of professionals (physicians and nurses) whose acts form the basis for the claim against the hospital; amendment to the complaint merely clarified the specific basis of the hospital's liability under a theory of respondeat superior. Thornton v. Ware County Hosp. Auth., 205 Ga. App. 202, 421 S.E.2d 713 (1992), cert. denied, 205 Ga. App. 901, 421 S.E.2d 713 (1992).

Affidavit of dentist was sufficient since the affidavit stated that the defendant failed to exercise the minimum degree of care and skill by failing to provide the plaintiff with notice of the serious health risks and known problems associated with interpositional implants. Allen v. Belinfante, 217 Ga. App. 754, 458 S.E.2d 867 (1995).

Because a statement in an expert affidavit attached to a patient's complaint did not bear a jurat, the trial court did not err in ruling that the affidavit was invalid under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1. Goodin v. Gwinnett Health Sys., 273 Ga. App. 461, 615 S.E.2d 129 (2005).

Because a dental patient's expert affidavit pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 was not based on certified or sworn records, nor was the affidavit based on the personal knowledge of the expert, the trial court erred in denying the dentist's motion for summary judgment in the patient's dental malpractice action; although the records custodian had failed to properly provide certified copies of the records upon the patient's discovery request, the patient waived the right to present such evidence pursuant to Ga. Unif. Super. Ct. R. 6.2 since the patient did not file a timely response to the dentist's summary judgment with an O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(f) affidavit, and the patient did not show excusable neglect for purposes of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(b). Rudd v. Paden, 279 Ga. App. 141, 630 S.E.2d 648 (2006).

Affidavit on abortion sufficient. — Expert affidavit was sufficient when the affidavit stated that the physician performed two suction abortions on the plaintiff, that the physician failed to follow generally accepted medical practice, that the physician failed to exercise the degree of care generally employed by medical professionals in the physician's field, and that the physician's failure to complete the two abortions constituted negligence. Vitner v. Miller, 223 Ga. App. 692, 479 S.E.2d 1 (1996).

Hospital could assert the insufficiency of affidavit as a defense to the hospital's liability for the alleged malpractice of individual physician-defendants who were established as professionals by the pleadings. HCA Health Servs., of Ga., Inc. v. Hampshire, 206 Ga. App. 108, 424 S.E.2d 293 (1992).

Witness who is member of different school of medicine than defendant. —

When the affidavit establishes that the witness is a member of a different school of medicine than that practiced by the defendant but contains no evidence that the methods of treatment of the plaintiff's condition are the same so as to bring the witness within the exception to the general rule that the witness is incompetent to testify, then the affidavit is legally insufficient. Chandler v. Koenig, 203 Ga. App. 684, 417 S.E.2d 715 (1992).

Allopathic physician was competent to testify as to osteopathic physician's performance when the osteopathic physician examined and treated a pediatric meningitis patient in the physician's capacity as an emergency room physician and when it was in the allopathic physician's capacity as an emergency room physician that the allopathic physician testified in an affidavit that the osteopathic physician had failed to meet the standard of care and skill required of an emergency room physician. Handson v. HCA Health Servs. of Ga., Inc., 264 Ga. 293, 443 S.E.2d 831 (1994).

Testimony of pharmacologist as to physician's standard of care. — Although pharmacologist's affidavit establishes that the pharmacologist is an internationally recognized pharmacologist and possesses expertise in that area which probably far exceeds that of the average medical doctor, bare assertion that the pharmacologist is familiar with the applicable standard of care is not enough when nothing in the affidavit explains how the pharmacological education or the professional duties has provided the pharmacol-ogist with expert knowledge of the standard of care in the prescribing of drugs ordinarily employed throughout the general medical profession by physicians who are years removed from the intensive pharmacological training the physicians received in medical school and for whom the prescribing of drugs is but one facet of their practice. Chandler v. Koenig, 203 Ga. App. 684, 417 S.E.2d 715 (1992).

"Period of limitation." — Doctor's motion to dismiss a widow's suit was properly denied as the "period of limitation" in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1(b) (now (e)) referred to the statute of limitations in O.C.G.A. § 9-3-71(a) and the statute of repose in § 9-3-71(b); the appellate court would not delve into the factual basis for the widow's statement that the widow believed that the period of limitations was about to end as the doctor might have claimed that the statute of limitations period ran from the doctor's misdiagnosis of the patient. Cochran v. Bowers, 274 Ga. App. 449, 617 S.E.2d 563 (2005).

In a wrongful death suit, a medical center was properly granted partial summary judgment as to an administrator's claims of nursing malpractice since the amended complaint alleged the claims were not filed within the two-year statute of limitation period set forth in O.C.G.A. § 9-3-33. Thomas v. Medical Ctr., 286 Ga. App. 147, 648 S.E.2d 409 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 699 (Ga. 2007).

5. Other Professions

Plumbing services. — Since plumbing services could only be performed pursuant to a license issued by the Division of Master Plumbers and Journeyman Plumbers of the State Construction Industry Licensing Board, and such Board was a "state examining board" pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 43-1-1, third party complaints against the owners of such plumbing services were professional negligence actions within the meaning of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1, and the plaintiffs were required to contemporaneously file expert affidavits. Seely v. Loyd H. Johnson Constr. Co., 220 Ga. App. 719, 470 S.E.2d 283 (1996).

Pest control company. — Based upon the statutory definition of professional service, a pest control company's control and treatment of wood destroying organisms is a profession for purposes of filing a professional malpractice action. Colston v. Fred's Pest Control, Inc., 210 Ga. App. 362, 436 S.E.2d 23 (1993).

Homeowner's complaint, calling into question exterminator's conduct as a professional in its area of expertise rather than alleging negligence in the performance of administrative, clerical, or routine acts which require no expertise, alleged negligence and breach of contract in the performance of professional services requiring the filing of an expert affidavit. Raley v. Terminix Int'l Co., 215 Ga. App. 324, 450 S.E.2d 343 (1994).

Application of the expert affidavit requirement to pest control services was clearly foreshadowed by Gillis v. Goodgame, 262 Ga. 117, 414 S.E.2d 197 (1992); thus, it was not unfair to dismiss an action for failure to file an affidavit, even though the complaint was filed before a decision that specifically applied the requirement to exterminators. Fender v. Adams Exterminators, Inc., 218 Ga. App. 62, 460 S.E.2d 528 (1995).

Real estate brokers and salespersons must be licensed and, thus, are "professionals" within the intent of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1. Allen v. Remax N. Atlanta, Inc., 213 Ga. App. 644, 445 S.E.2d 774 (1994).

Accountants. — By alleging that the accountant failed to provide the necessary and proper tax advice normally required by a certified public accountant, the plaintiffs raised an issue as to whether the accountant performed services in accordance with the professional obligation of care for certified public accountants; accordingly, an expert affidavit should have been filed with this count of the complaint. Hilton v. Callaghan, 216 Ga. App. 145, 453 S.E.2d 509 (1995).

Expert affidavit was not required under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 to support the plaintiff's claim of fraud against the plaintiff's accountant. Hilton v. Callaghan, 216 Ga. App. 145, 453 S.E.2d 509 (1995).

Unlicensed bookkeeper and tax preparer was not a professional subject to an action for professional malpractice. Hewitt v. Walker, 226 Ga. App. 764, 487 S.E.2d 603 (1997).

Annuity planner. — Client's allegation that an annuity planner was negligent in transmitting information regarding the regularity of payments was not one of professional malpractice but one of simple negligence; therefore, an affidavit was not required and an affidavit was unnecessary to determine whether the planner was a "professional" within the meaning of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1. Creel v. Cotton States Mut. Ins. Co., 260 Ga. 499, 397 S.E.2d 294 (1990).

Manufacturers. — Requirement for an expert affidavit did not apply to a strict products liability action against a manufacturer. SK Hand Tool Corp. v. Lowman, 223 Ga. App. 712, 479 S.E.2d 103 (1996).

Architects. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 applies to professional malpractice suits against architects. McLendon & Cox v. Roberts, 197 Ga. App. 478, 398 S.E.2d 579 (1990).

Construction program manager. — Specifically, with regard to a professional negligence claim, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1(a), which requires a plaintiff asserting a professional negligence claim to submit an expert affidavit along with the complaint to set forth specifically at least one negligent act or omission claimed to exist and the factual basis for each such claim applies to professional malpractice claims alleging professional negligence; as the plaintiff, a surety, failed to provide the court with any evidence that the defendant, a construction program manager (CPM), hired to oversee school construction projects, was a professional as defined by any code sections, the school board could not have maintained an action against the CPM for professional malpractice, and neither could the surety as subrogee. Carolina Cas. Ins. Co. v. R.L. Brown & Assocs., No. 1:04-cv-3537-GET, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 71056 (N.D. Ga. Sept. 29, 2006).

Harbor pilots. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 applies to professional malpractice suits against harbor pilots. Lutz v. Foran, 262 Ga. 819, 427 S.E.2d 248 (1993).

9-11-9.2. Medical authorization forms; review of protected health information.

(a) In any action for damages alleging medical malpractice against a professional licensed by the State of Georgia and listed in subsection (g) of Code Section 9-11-9.1, against a professional corporation or other legal entity that provides health care services through a professional licensed by the State of Georgia and listed in subsection (g) of Code Section 9-11-9.1, or against any licensed health care facility alleged to be liable based upon the action or inaction of a health care professional licensed by the State of Georgia and listed in subsection (g) of Code Section 9-11-9.1, contemporaneously with the filing of the complaint, the plaintiff shall be required to file a medical authorization form. Failure to provide this authorization shall subject the complaint to dismissal.

(b) The authorization shall provide that the attorney representing the defendant is authorized to obtain and disclose protected health information contained in medical records to facilitate the investigation, evaluation, and defense of the claims and allegations set forth in the complaint which pertain to the plaintiff or, where applicable, the plaintiff's decedent whose treatment is at issue in the complaint. This authorization includes the defendant's attorney's right to discuss the care and treatment of the plaintiff or, where applicable, the plaintiff's decedent with all of the plaintiff's or decedent's treating physicians.

(c) The authorization shall provide for the release of all protected health information except information that is considered privileged and shall authorize the release of such information by any physician or health care facility by which health care records of the plaintiff or the plaintiff's decedent would be maintained. (Code 1981, § 9-11-9.2, enacted by Ga. L. 2005, p. 1, § 4/SB 3; Ga. L. 2007, p. 216, § 2/HB 221.)

Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 2005, p. 1, § 1/SB 3, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: "The General Assembly finds that there presently exists a crisis affecting the provision and quality of health care services in this state. Hospitals and other health care providers in this state are having increasing difficulty in locating liability insurance and, when such hospitals and providers are able to locate such insurance, the insurance is extremely costly. The result of this crisis is the potential for a diminution of the availability of access to health care services and a resulting adverse impact on the health and well-being of the citizens of this state. The General Assembly further finds that certain civil justice and health care regulatory reforms as provided in this Act will promote predictability and improvement in the provision of quality health care services and the resolution of health care liability claims and will thereby assist in promoting the provision of health care liability insurance by insurance providers. The General Assembly further finds that certain needed reforms affect not only health care liability claims but also other civil actions and accordingly provides such general reforms in this Act.”

Ga. L. 2007, p. 216, § 3/HB 221, not codified by the General Assembly, provides: “This Act shall become effective on July 1, 2007, and shall apply to any action filed on or after July 1, 2007.”

Preemption by federal HIPAA law.

— Hospital’s motion to dismiss a medical malpractice action filed against the hospital based on an individual’s failure to comply with the medical record release requirement of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.2 was upheld on appeal as the court concluded that: (1) O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.2 was preempted by the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act of 1996 (HIPAA), Pub. L. No. 104-191; (2) the authorization set forth in § 9-11-9.2 did not satisfy the requirements for a valid HIPAA authorization; (3) the Georgia statute did not require a description of the information to be used or disclosed that specifically identified the information in a meaningful fashion; (4) the statute did not provide for an expiration date or event that related to the individual or the purpose of the use or disclosure; and (5) the statute did not contain notice of a right to revoke the authorization. Northlake Med. Ctr., LLC v. Queen, 280 Ga. App. 510, 634 S.E.2d 486 (2006).

Because the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act of 1996, Pub. L. No. 104-191, 42 U.S.C. § 1320d et seq. (HIPAA), preempted O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.2, a patient did not have to comply with the filing requirements of the state law prior to filing a medical malpractice action against two hospitals; hence, the trial court properly granted the patient a protective order from having to contemporaneously comply with the filing requirements of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.2. Crisp Reg’l Hosp., Inc. v. Sanders, 281 Ga. App. 393, 636 S.E.2d 123 (2006).

Administratrix in a medical malpractice action authorized a release of the decedent’s medical records, and the medical practice moved to dismiss the complaint on the ground that the authorization did not comply with O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.2; the motion was properly denied as O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.2 was preempted by the Federal Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act of 1996, 42 U.S.C. § 1320d et seq. Griffin v. Burden, 281 Ga. App. 496, 636 S.E.2d 686 (2006).

O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.2 is preempted by the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act of 1996 (HIPAA) since § 9-11-9.2 is less stringent and does not comply with the requirements of HIPAA as to notice of the right to revoke. Allen v. Wright, 282 Ga. 9, 644 S.E.2d 814 (2007).

9-11-10. Form of pleadings.

(a) Caption; names of parties. Every pleading shall contain a caption setting forth the name of the court and county, the title of the action, the file number, and a designation as in subsection (a) of Code Section 9-11-7. In the complaint the title of the action shall include the names of all the parties, but in other pleadings it is sufficient to state the name of the first party on each side with an appropriate indication of other parties. A party whose name is not known may be designated by any name; and, when his true name is discovered, the pleading may be amended accordingly.

(b) Paragraphs; separate statements. All averments of claim or defense shall be made in numbered paragraphs, the contents of each of which shall be limited as far as practicable to a statement of a single set of circumstances; and a paragraph may be referred to by number in all succeeding pleadings. Each claim founded upon a separate transaction or occurrence and each defense other than denials shall be stated in a separate count or defense whenever a separation facilitates the clear presentation of the matters set forth.

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code 1933, §§ 81-105 and 81-1206, are included in the annotations for this Code section.

It was not necessary to attach copy of will to claim affidavit. Smith v. Francis, 221 Ga. 260, 144 S.E.2d 439 (1965) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-105).

In common-law form of ejectment, it is not necessary to set out chain of title under which plaintiffs claim. Jackson v. Sanders, 199 Ga. 222, 33 S.E.2d 711 (1945) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-105).

Letters relied on to establish acknowledgement of indebtedness sued on constituted part of cause of action, and were properly attached to petition. Martin v. Mayer, 63 Ga. App. 387, 11 S.E.2d 218

(1940) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-105).

In action to recover for premiums on insurance policies, it is not necessary to attach policies or copies thereof as exhibits to petition. Hames v. Georgia Ins. Serv., Inc., 110 Ga. App. 376, 138 S.E.2d 607 (1964) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-105).

Answer required from all parties named in complaint. — When an answer was filed in the name of only one of four separate entities named as defendants in the action, the other three defendants could not benefit from the answer and, having filed no answer of their own, were in default. McCombs v. Southern Regional Medical Ctr., Inc., 233 Ga. App. 676, 504 S.E.2d 747 (1998).

Failure to name party. — Appellate court could not address complaints about a county since the county was not a named party to the case and the plaintiff did not seek to join the county in the proceedings below. Strykr v. Long County Bd. of Comm'rs, 277 Ga. 624, 593 S.E.2d 348 (2004).

Proper remedy for seeking more particularity. — Trial court erred in granting the defendants' motions to dismiss the plaintiffs' complaint for failure to state a claim upon which relief could be granted and for judgment on the pleadings because the trial court should have required the plaintiffs to amend the plaintiffs' complaint and provide a more definite statement of the plaintiffs' claims before passing upon the motions; the amended complaint was a "shotgun pleading" because the complaint was not a short and plain statement of the claims that the plaintiffs asserted as required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-8(a)(2)(A) of the Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9, the complaint did not give the defendants fair notice of the nature of the claims, and the complaint did not conform to several of the specific pleading requirements of the Act, specifically O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-8, 9-11-9, and 9-11-10. Bush v. Bank of N.Y. Mellon, 313 Ga. App. 84, 720 S.E.2d 370 (2011).

More definitive statement. — Requiring the plaintiff to make a more definite statement of his or her claim saves judicial resources and permits the trial court, when a sufficiently more definite statement has been pled, to determine whether the complaint states a claim by applying the usual standards for the legal adequacy of a complaint; although the Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9, does not expressly authorize a court to order a more definite statement in the absence of a motion, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(e), there is no reason that a court cannot do so as an exercise of the court's inherent powers to manage the court's docket and to compel compliance with the rules and requirements of civil procedure. Bush v. Bank of N.Y. Mellon, 313 Ga. App. 84, 720 S.E.2d 370 (2011).

When a trial court orders a plaintiff to make a more definite statement of his or her claims, the court should identify the ways in which the complaint fails to conform to the pleading requirements of the Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9, and the court also should warn the plaintiff about the potential consequences of a failure to replead in a way that conforms to these requirements; if the court still cannot ascertain the nature of the claims that the plaintiff seeks to assert, the court may enter another order to replead again, but the trial court and the defendants need not become caught in an endless cycle of attempts to replead, and if it appears that a plaintiff is unable or unwilling to plead in conformance to the Civil Practice Act and the directions of the court, the court may be authorized in some cases to dismiss the complaint, not for a failure to state a claim, but for disregard of the rules and orders of the court. Bush v. Bank of N.Y. Mellon, 313 Ga. App. 84, 720 S.E.2d 370 (2011).

Name of Court

Failure to address a petition to a specific court is an amendable defect. Mincey v. Stamper, 253 Ga. 301, 319 S.E.2d 857 (1984).

Failure to specify court not fatal defect when defendant answered in correct court. — Even though the original petition was never formally amended to cure a failure to specify a court, the defect was not a ground for dismissal since the defendant admitted service of the petition and answered the petition in the correct court. Mincey v. Stamper, 253 Ga. 301, 319 S.E.2d 857 (1984).

Names of Parties

Persons, not their names, are sued. Atlanta Veterans Transp., Inc. v. Westmoreland, 123 Ga. App. 466, 181 S.E.2d 504 (1971).

Name of plaintiff must import a person, firm, or corporation; if this is not done, there is no plaintiff and no action, but a mere nullity which is subject to dismissal. Russell v. O'Donnell, 132 Ga. App. 294, 208 S.E.2d 107 (1974).

Action cannot be maintained in name of the plaintiff which is neither that of natural person, partnership, or such artificial person as is recognized by law as capable of suing. Russell v. O'Donnell, 132 Ga. App. 294, 208 S.E.2d 107 (1974).

Plaintiff's name must import person recognized by law. — Action cannot be maintained in a name as plaintiff which is neither that of a natural person, a partnership, nor of such artificial person as is recognized by the law as capable of suing, and a proceeding commenced in such a name, there being no plaintiff, is not an action, but a mere nullity, and may be dismissed at any time on motion. Board of Educ. v. Hall, 189 Ga. 615, 7 S.E.2d 183

Amendment declaring status of party. — Action brought in name which is neither that of natural person, nor corporation, nor partnership, is a mere nullity; but if the name imports a corporation or partnership, amendment declaring status of the party may be allowed. Johnson & Johnson Constr. Co. v. Pioneer Neon Supply Co., 96 Ga. App. 867, 101 S.E.2d 918 (1958) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-1206).

Right to correct misnomer. — If the real defendant has been properly served, the plaintiff has the right to amend in order to correct a misnomer in the description of the defendant contained in the complaint. Atlanta Veterans Transp., Inc. v. Westmoreland, 123 Ga. App. 466, 181 S.E.2d 504 (1971); Russell v. O'Donnell, 132 Ga. App. 294, 208 S.E.2d 107 (1974).

Leave of court required to correct capacity of party. — Failing to name a county board member in the board member's individual capacity is not a mere misnomer that can be corrected without leave of court under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-10(a). Bd. of Comm'rs v. Johnson, 311 Ga. App. 867, 717 S.E.2d 272 (2011).

Correction of misnomer involves no substitution of parties, nor adds new and distinct parties. Atlanta Veterans Transp., Inc. v. Westmoreland, 123 Ga. App. 466, 181 S.E.2d 504 (1971).

Name of either plaintiff or defendant may be corrected by amendment prior to judgment, so long as name by which originally designated party is described imports a person, firm, or corporation, even though it is in fact not so. Russell v. O'Donnell, 132 Ga. App. 294, 208 S.E.2d 107 (1974).

Amendment alleging corporate character. — If name in complaint does not import a legal entity, but the defendant is in fact a corporation, such defect may be cured by amendment alleging corporate character. Russell v. O'Donnell, 132 Ga. App. 294, 208 S.E.2d 107 (1974).

Trade name. — Petition brought in trade name may be amended by stating real or true name of the person who purports to carry on business to which petition relates; and such amendment does not state new cause of action or introduce new party. Johnson & Johnson Constr. Co. v. Pioneer Neon Supply Co., 96 Ga. App. 867, 101 S.E.2d 918 (1958) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-1206).

If complaint is brought in defendant's trade name, complaint is amendable by stating real name of person doing business under that name, and the amendment does not introduce a new party. Thomas v. Home Credit Co., 125 Ga. App. 876, 189 S.E.2d 470 (1972).

If unidentified party is sued as John Doe and served within limitation period, later amendment adding the party's name after the party has been identified will relate back, but if no service has been effected on a "John Doe" this proceeding does not apply. Sims v. American Cas. Co., 131 Ga. App. 461, 206 S.E.2d 121, aff'd sub nom., Providence Wash. Ins. Co. v. Sims, 232 Ga. 787, 209 S.E.2d 61 (1974).

Fact that individual partners were not named in caption of case did not authorize setting aside judgment as this was an amendable defect. Bolton Rd. Medical Ctr. v. Strother & Co., 140 Ga. App. 724, 231 S.E.2d 533 (1976).

Substitution of entirely different parties disallowed. — Proposed amendment to motion for new trial which attempts to strike name of party or parties thereto and to substitute name of entirely different parties not revealed by contents of the motion to have been intended as parties of reference in the first instance must be disallowed. Goodman v. Kenney, 124 Ga. App. 709, 185 S.E.2d 632 (1971).

Trial court's denial of summary judgment to a hotel limited liability corporation (LLC) in a personal injury action by an injured patron was error as the action was originally brought against a different entity, the patron attempted to add the LLC and then dismissed that action and brought a new action after expiration of the limitations period under O.C.G.A. § 9-3-33 against the LLC based on the renewal statute pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-2-61, but the patron never sought or obtained court permission to add the LLC as a party, as required by O.C.G.A.

§§ 9-11-15(a) and 9-11-21; as the amendment to add the LLC was more than a correction of a misnomer because the two named defendants were separate entities, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-10(a) was inapplicable and leave of court was required in order to add the LLC. Valdosta Hotel Props., LLC v. White, 278 Ga. App. 206, 628 S.E.2d 642 (2006).

"Interested party." — Party whose interest in property derived from an unrecorded deed received from a party who was the holder of a deed to secure debt from the record owner of the property was not an "interested party" under paragraph (1) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-10 and had no right under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-24(a) to intervene in an in rem judicial tax foreclosure proceeding. Burruss v. Ferdinand, 245 Ga. App. 203, 536 S.E.2d 555 (2000).

Use of name of deceased party. — In a foreclosure proceeding, the trial court did not err in continuing to exercise jurisdiction after having been informed of the death of a party since the affidavit of dispossession and summons listed the tenant as "name of deceased or persons in possession" of the premises. Robinson v. Georgia Hous. & Fin. Auth., 244 Ga. App. 653, 536 S.E.2d 548 (2000).

Exhibits

Application to forfeiture proceedings. — Under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-81 (applicability of chapter), the incorporation by reference provision of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-10, including incorporation of exhibits attached to pleadings, applies to forfeiture proceedings, unless specific, expressly prescribed rules of the forfeiture statute conflict with the incorporation of exhibits provisions. Bell v. State, 234 Ga. App. 693, 507 S.E.2d 535 (1998).

Properly considered in motion to dismiss. — In city's suit against a landowner for specific performance of the parties' agreement, the city's complaint attached the parties' agreement along with several other exhibits, which under O.C.G.A. 9-11-10(c) were properly considered by the trial court in ruling upon the landowner's motion to dismiss under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(b)(6). Gold Creek SL, LLC v. City of Dawsonville, 290 Ga. App. 807, 660 S.E.2d 858 (2008).

Documents attached to motion to dismiss could not be considered. — Trial court erred in dismissing a pro se borrower's complaint for wrongful foreclosure and breach of contract against the borrower's lender's alleged assignee; the trial court could not consider documents attached to the motion to dismiss, and the complaint adequately alleged failure to give the borrower notice and improper advertising, contrary to O.C.G.A. §§ 44-14-162(a) and 44-14-162.2. Babalola v. HSBC Bank, USA, N.A., 324 Ga. App. 750, 751 S.E.2d 545 (2013).

Consideration of city's ordinance during motion for judgment on pleadings. — In a dispute between a city and a nude dancing establishment over the city's sexually-oriented business ordinance, copies of the ordinance and other materials attached to the complaint were part of the pleadings and were properly considered on a motion for judgment on the pleadings pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-10(c). Trop, Inc. v. City of Brookhaven, 296 Ga. 85, 764 S.E.2d 398 (2014).

Written instrument attached as exhibit to a pleading will prevail over allegations of the pleading. H & R Block, Inc. v. Asher, 231 Ga. 780, 204 S.E.2d 99 (1974).

9-11-11. Signing of pleadings; when verification required; rule abolished.

(a) Every pleading of a party represented by an attorney shall be signed by at least one attorney of record in his individual name, whose address shall be stated. A party who is not represented by an attorney shall sign his pleading and state his address. The signature of an attorney constitutes a certificate by him that he has read the pleading and that it is not interposed for delay.

(b) Except when otherwise specifically provided by rule or statute, pleadings need not be verified or accompanied by affidavit.

(c) The rule in equity that the averments of an answer under oath must be overcome by the testimony of two witnesses or of one witness sustained by corroborating circumstances is abolished. (Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 11.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Honesty and good faith required. — Statute's purpose and intent are requirements of honesty and good faith in pleading. Stuckey's Carriage Inn v. Phillips, 122 Ga. App. 681, 178 S.E.2d 543 (1970).

Failure to sign may be amended. — Failure of party or counsel to sign petition may be supplied by amendment. Edwards v. Edwards, 227 Ga. 307, 180 S.E.2d 358 (1971).

Absence of a signature by an attorney in compliance with Rule 1-203, Rules of the State Bar of Georgia and subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-11 was a defect which a party may timely cure by amending the complaint to add the name and signature of a Georgia attorney. Bandy v. Hospital Auth., 174 Ga. App. 556, 332 S.E.2d 46 (1985).

Trial court properly found that a client's failure to sign the original answer to a law firm's complaint on an open account was an amendable defect which was cured by subsequently-filed signed and verified amended answers under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15(a) because the amended answers were filed before the entry of any pretrial order and the firm did not show that the firm's case was prejudiced; the original answer was not a nullity under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-1(a) because the client's name on the signature line, placed there at the client's request by an attorney who represented the client in a divorce, evinced the client's intent to answer the complaint. Edenfield & Cox, P.C. v. Mack, 282 Ga. App. 816, 640 S.E.2d 343 (2006).

Court should grant leave to comply with requirement as to signature, rather than strike the pleading; entry of judgment by default against the plaintiff for noncompliance is the ultimate sanction, which should be invoked rarely and certainly not for minor infractions. Lee v. Precision Balancing & Mach., Inc., 134 Ga. App. 762, 216 S.E.2d 640 (1975).

Default after failure to sign. — Party who was not represented by an attorney had to sign the party's own pleading because the party failed to sign the answer or have an attorney file an answer on the party's behalf within 30 days of service, the party was in default as a matter of law. Associated Doctors of Warner Robins, Inc. v. U.S. Foodservice of Atlanta, Inc., 250 Ga. App. 878, 553 S.E.2d 310 (2001).

Because a corporate president did not sign an original answer on the president's own behalf or submit a valid answer within 30 days, and an answer submitted for the president by a non-attorney corporate principal was not sufficient pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-11(a), a default judgment was properly entered against the president under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55. Rainier Holdings, Inc. v. Tatum, 275 Ga. App. 878, 622 S.E.2d 86 (2005).

Verification of answer. — Unless otherwise provided by law, an answer need not be verified by oath. Harrison v. Harrison, 228 Ga. 126, 184 S.E.2d 147 (1971).

Divorce complaint not void for lack of verification. — Fact that original complaint for divorce was not verified by the plaintiff did not render the action null and void, but was an amendable defect. Edwards v. Edwards, 227 Ga. 307, 180 S.E.2d 358 (1971).

Answer to garnishment petition. — Garnishee's answer to a verified post-judgment garnishment petition need not be verified. First Nat'l Bank v. Sinkler, 170 Ga. App. 668, 317 S.E.2d 897 (1984).

Attachment of deed to correct deficiencies in answer. — Claimants in a forfeiture action corrected any deficiencies in the claimants' answer when the claimants' filed an amended answer that incorporated by reference a recorded warranty deed, which provided necessary information and corrected the lack of verification by one of the claimants. Bell v. State, 234 Ga. App. 693, 507 S.E.2d 535 (1998).

Section applied retroactively. — When at the time the defendant's answer was filed, the verification of a non est factum defense was required by statute, but at the time that the plaintiff moved to strike that defense, former Code 1933, § 20-801 had been repealed and there was no longer any statutory requirement of verification, the existing rather than the former law controls, and it was error to grant the plaintiff's motion to strike. Ballard v. Frey, 179 Ga. App. 455, 346 S.E.2d 893 (1986).

Matters in abatement and in bar. — As a determination whether compliance with the ante litem notice requirement of O.C.G.A. § 36-33-5 was met by property owners who asserted claims against a municipality was properly considered a matter in abatement, which should have been raised in a motion to dismiss under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12, flexibility by the court was required; accordingly, consideration of the matter within the summary judgment context, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56, was proper because matters outside of the pleadings, including the owners' depositions, were considered. Davis v. City of Forsyth, 275 Ga. App. 747, 621 S.E.2d 495 (2005).

9-11-11.1. Exercise of rights of freedom of speech and to petition government for redress of grievances; legislative findings; verification of claims; definitions; procedure on motions; exception; fees and expenses.

(a) The General Assembly of Georgia finds and declares that it is in the public interest to encourage participation by the citizens of Georgia in matters of public significance through the exercise of their constitutional rights of freedom of speech and the right to petition government for redress of grievances. The General Assembly of Georgia further finds and declares that the valid exercise of the constitutional rights of freedom of speech and the right to petition government for a redress of grievances should not be chilled through abuse of the judicial process.

(b) For any claim asserted against a person or entity arising from an act by that person or entity which could reasonably be construed as an act in furtherance of the right of free speech or the right to petition government for a redress of grievances under the Constitution of the United States or the Constitution of the State of Georgia in connection with an issue of public interest or concern, both the party asserting the claim and the party's attorney of record, if any, shall be required to file, contemporaneously with the pleading containing the claim, a written verification under oath as set forth in Code Section 9-10-113. Such written verification shall certify that the party and his or her attorney of record, if any, have read the claim; that to the best of their knowledge, information, and belief formed after reasonable inquiry it is well grounded in fact and is warranted by existing law or a good faith argument for the extension, modification, or reversal of existing law; that the act forming the basis for the claim is not a privileged communication under paragraph (4) of Code Section 51-5-7; and that the claim is not interposed for any improper purpose such as to suppress a person's or entity's right of free speech or right to petition government, or to harass, or to cause unnecessary delay or needless increase in the cost of litigation. If the claim is not verified as required by this subsection, it shall be stricken unless it is verified within ten days after the omission is called to the attention of the party asserting the claim. If a claim is verified in violation of this Code section, the court, upon motion or upon its own initiative, shall impose upon the persons who signed the verification, a represented party, or both an appropriate sanction which may include dismissal of the claim and an order to pay to the other party or parties the amount of the reasonable expenses incurred because of the filing of the pleading, including a reasonable attorney's fee.

(c) As used in this Code section, "act in furtherance of the right of free speech or the right to petition government for a redress of grievances under the Constitution of the United States or the Constitution of the State of Georgia in connection with an issue of public interest or concern” includes any written or oral statement, writing, or petition made before or to a legislative, executive, or judicial proceeding, or any other official proceeding authorized by law, or any written or oral statement, writing, or petition made in connection with an issue under consideration or review by a legislative, executive, or judicial body, or any other official proceeding authorized by law.

(d) All discovery and any pending hearings or motions in the action shall be stayed upon the filing of a motion to dismiss or a motion to strike made pursuant to subsection (b) of this Code section. The motion shall be heard not more than 30 days after service unless the emergency matters before the court require a later hearing. The court, on noticed motion and for good cause shown, may order that specified discovery or other hearings or motions be conducted notwithstanding this subsection.

(e) Nothing in this Code section shall affect or preclude the right of any party to any recovery otherwise authorized by common law, statute, law, or rule.

(f) Attorney’s fees and expenses under this Code section may be requested by motion at any time during the course of the action but not later than 45 days after the final disposition, including but not limited to dismissal by the plaintiff, of the action. (Code 1981, § 9-11-11.1, enacted by Ga. L. 1996, p. 260, § 1; Ga. L. 1998, p. 862, § 2.)

General Consideration

Legislative intent. — In enacting the anti-SLAPP statute, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-11.1, the legislature declared, “it is in the public interest to encourage participation by the citizens of Georgia in matters of public significance through the exercise of their constitutional rights of freedom of speech and the right to petition government for redress of grievances. The General Assembly of Georgia further finds and declares that the valid exercise of [these] constitutional rights ... should not be chilled through abuse of the judicial process.” Providence Constr. Co. v. Bauer, 229 Ga. App. 679, 494 S.E.2d 527 (1997), cert. denied, 525 U.S. 1069, 119 S. Ct. 799, 142 L. Ed. 2d 660 (1999).

Legislative intent behind Georgia’s anti-SLAPP statute, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-11.1, is to protect the public’s right to petition the government for the redress of grievances on matters of public concern, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-11.1(a), and excluding the petition itself that initiates a “proceeding” to address matters of public concern from the reach of the anti-SLAPP statute would defeat a central purpose of the statute — to protect the right to petition the government. Hawks v. Hinely, 252 Ga. App. 510, 556 S.E.2d 547 (2001).

Intent of the anti-Strategic Lawsuits Against Public Participation statute is to encourage the exercise of free speech and afford procedural protection to acts of communication on public issues; in connection with this procedural protection, the appellate court has held that the mere procedural filing of a verification does not end the matter as to whether a claim could go forward under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-11.1(b) and (d). Harkins v. Atlanta Humane Soc’y, 264 Ga. App. 356, 590 S.E.2d 737 (2003).

Construction with other law. —

Upon a proper appeal from a final order, while neither former O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67.1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-7-702) nor O.C.G.A. § 9-11-16 required that a complaint be dismissed or stricken for failing to comply with the terms of those statutes, unlike the Anti-SLAPP statute, codified at O.C.G.A. § 9-11-11.1, because the trial court did not enter a final judgment within the meaning of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-68(b)(1), attorney fees were properly denied; moreover, as to the claim that dismissing and refile in another court constitutes “improper judge shopping,” obtaining a different judge was simply the result of the action, not necessarily the reason for doing so. McKesson Corp. v. Green, 286 Ga. App. 110, 648 S.E.2d 457

(2007), cert. denied, No. S07C1602, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 656 (Ga. 2007).

There is no requirement that a party first seek to invoke O.C.G.A. § 9-15-14 or O.C.G.A. § 51-7-80 before seeking the protections of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-11.1. Hagemann v. City of Marietta, 287 Ga. App. 1, 650 S.E.2d 363 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 128 (Ga. 2008).

Voluntary dismissal of a lawsuit by a plaintiff does not preclude the imposition of a sanction under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-11.1(f). Hagemann v. Berkman Wynhaven Assoc., L.P., 290 Ga. App. 677, 660 S.E.2d 449 (2008).

Inapplicable to parody on trademark suit. — Anti-SLAPP statute, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-11.1, did not apply in a trademark infringement/dilution by tarnishment countersuit filed by a national discount store chain in response to the plaintiff’s declaratory judgment action because the plaintiff’s unflattering parodies of the store’s trademarks were not made in an official proceeding but were printed on t-shirts and other items that were sold on-line. Smith v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 475 F. Supp. 2d 1318 (N.D. Ga. 2007).

Inapplicable in federal cases arising under diversity jurisdiction. —

District court’s denial of the company owner’s motion to dismiss was proper because Georgia’s verification requirement conflicted with Fed. R. Civ. P. 11 and therefore did not apply in federal cases arising under the district court’s diversity jurisdiction. Royalty Network, Inc. v. Harris, 756 F.3d 1351 (11th Cir. 2014).

Attorney’s duty to advise. — While an attorney was shielded from liability as to the issue of whether a breach occurred as to the duty of care owed to the clients by failing to verify the complaint pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-11.1(b), opting instead to dismiss the complaint and refile the complaint as a renewal action, summary judgment as to the issues of harm to the clients and a breach of the duty of ordinary care as a result of the attorney’s failure to advise was reversed. Chatham Orthopaedic Surgery Ctr., LLC v. White, 283 Ga. App. 10, 640 S.E.2d 633 (2006).

Cited in Great W. Bank v. Southeastern Bank, 234 Ga. App. 420, 507 S.E.2d 191

Procedure

When discovery was stayed upon motions to dismiss and the plaintiff claimed harm by the stay provisions, because the plaintiff could have sought the aid of the trial court to lift the stay for the limited purpose of conducting necessary discovery, which the plaintiff failed to do, the plaintiff could not raise the issue on appeal. Davis v. Emmis Publ'g Corp., 244 Ga. App. 795, 536 S.E.2d 809 (2000).

Stay of proceedings. — Trial court did not err in holding a hearing on bond validation issues after denying a motion to strike brought by intervenors in the action based on the anti-SLAPP statute, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-11.1, because subsection (d) allowed the trial court to hold a hearing in spite of the stay provisions, and the motion to strike was meritless. Citizens for Ethics in Gov't, LLC v. Atlanta Dev. Auth., 303 Ga. App. 724, 694 S.E.2d 680 (2010), cert. denied, No. S10C1350, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 722 (Ga. 2010).

False verification. — City's counterclaims to a landowner's declaratory judgment action challenging a rezoning decision were falsely verified and thus should have been dismissed; the counterclaims did not establish abusive litigation under O.C.G.A. § 51-7-84(b) because the declaratory judgment action had not terminated. Hagemann v. City of Marietta, 287 Ga. App. 1, 650 S.E.2d 363 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 128 (Ga. 2008).

Founder's verifications as to complaint for malicious prosecution and intentional infliction of emotional distress were false to the extent that the complaint was neither filed for a proper purpose or well-grounded in fact. The record showed that the defendants were merely reporting alleged criminal activity to the police and were not overly zealous or malicious. Annamalai v. Capital One Fin. Corp., 319 Ga. App. 831, 738 S.E.2d 664 (2013).

Failure to verify complaint. — Trial court erred in holding that the plaintiff's failure to verify the complaint as required by law was an amendable defect since the plaintiff filed the verifications with an amended complaint more than ten days (approximately two months) after the failure to file was first brought to the plaintiff's attention. Davis v. Emmis Publ'g Corp., 244 Ga. App. 795, 536 S.E.2d 809 (2000).

Trial court did not err in dismissing a defamation action for failure to verify the complaint since the action arose out of the defendants' petition in opposition to the plaintiff's application for rezoning that involved alleged issues of county-wide soil and water environmental protection and alleged violations of environmental laws, which were matters of general public concern and interest. Browns Mill Dev. Co. v. Denton, 247 Ga. App. 232, 543 S.E.2d 65 (2000), aff'd, 275 Ga. 2, 561 S.E.2d 431 (2002).

Whether the verification required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-11.1(b), in a claim against an individual exercising his or her free speech or right to petition for redress of grievances, is completely omitted or merely deficient upon filing, the claimant must remedy the situation within the statutory 10-day period or the complaint shall be stricken. Hawks v. Hinely, 252 Ga. App. 510, 556 S.E.2d 547 (2001).

Mandate of the anti-SLAPP statute, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-11.1(b), that an improperly verified complaint challenging the exercise of the right to free speech and to petition for redress of grievances shall be stricken necessarily means that the claims in any such complaint must be dismissed with prejudice as the appellate court is bound to follow the express language of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-11.1(b) and the statute explicitly mandates that the claim "shall be stricken" if the verification is not filed timely. Hawks v. Hinely, 252 Ga. App. 510, 556 S.E.2d 547 (2001).

Once the anti-Strategic Lawsuits Against Public Participation statute applies, a claimant must verify the complaint pursuant to the requirements of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-11.1(b), or the claim may be properly dismissed. Harkins v. Atlanta Humane Soc'y, 264 Ga. App. 356, 590 S.E.2d 737 (2003).

Trial court did not err in dismissing a former employee's action alleging that the consultants slandered the former employee and interfered with the former employee's business relations with a county school district because the court properly found that verification under the Georgia anti-SLAPP (Strategic Lawsuits Against Public Participation) statute, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-11.1(a) and (b), was required when the speech at issue could reasonably be construed as constitutionally protected free speech to which the anti-SLAPP statute applied; the county school board's consideration or review of the issue of how to implement a computer program in the county schools was an "official proceeding authorized by law" within the meaning of the anti-SLAPP statute, the consultants made written or oral statements to the board in connection with the issue under consideration or review, and nothing in the anti-SLAPP statute rendered the verification requirement inapplicable just because the consultants acted while engaged in a commercial transaction. Lovett v. Capital Principles, LLC, 300 Ga. App. 799, 686 S.E.2d 411 (2009).

O.C.G.A. § 9-11-11.1(a), Georgia's anti-SLAPP statute, encompassed a press conference held outside the territorial limits of Georgia by New York defendants. Because the press conference was held to address an issue under consideration by a judicial body, i.e., a nuisance lawsuit filed by the New York defendants against gun dealers, a Georgia gun dealer's slander suit was dismissed for failure to file a verification as required by § 9-11-11.1(b). Adventure Outdoors, Inc. v. Bloomberg, 307 Ga. App. 356, 705 S.E.2d 241 (2010), cert. denied, No. S11C0648, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 402; cert. denied, 132 S. Ct. 763, 181 L. Ed. 2d 485 (2011).

Verification of counterclaims required. — Landowner's declaratory judgment action challenging a city's rezoning decision constituted a petition to the judiciary for a redress of grievances in connection with an issue of public interest or concern, and the city's counterclaims were filed in response to the declaratory judgment action; thus, verification of the counterclaims was required. Hagemann v. City of Marietta, 287 Ga. App. 1, 650 S.E.2d 363 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 128 (Ga. 2008).

Counterclaims do not fall outside of the verification requirements of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-11.1, which mandates verification for any claim asserted against a person or entity arising from an act by that person or entity which could reasonably be construed as an act in furtherance of the right to free speech or the right to petition the government for a redress of grievances. Hagemann v. City of Marietta, 287 Ga. App. 1, 650 S.E.2d 363 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 128 (Ga. 2008).

Trial court, not the party, must determine if there is a bona fide action for defamation brought in good faith and not as abusive litigation to chill constitutional rights of freedom of speech and right of expression as defined by the statute. Browns Mill Dev. Co. v. Denton, 247 Ga. App. 232, 543 S.E.2d 65 (2000), aff'd, 275 Ga. 2, 561 S.E.2d 431 (2002).

Neither party has the burden of proof on a motion to dismiss or strike under subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-11.1 because this issue is a matter of law for the trial court's determination based upon the pleadings rather than upon evidence presented by either party. Browns Mill Dev. Co. v. Denton, 247 Ga. App. 232, 543 S.E.2d 65 (2000), aff'd, 275 Ga. 2, 561 S.E.2d 431 (2002).

Motion to dismiss. — In O.C.G.A. § 9-11-11.1, the Georgia General Assembly has established a mechanism by which the threshold question of compliance with the anti-SLAPP statute is decided on motion to dismiss or motion to strike, and this is analogous to the statutory mechanism of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(b), which provides that only motions under Ga. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6) for failure to state a claim are converted to summary judgment. Other motions under Ga. R. Civ. P. 12(b), such as to dismiss for lack of jurisdiction or for insufficiency of process, are not subject to this statutory rule, and such a motion, even when tried on affidavits pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-43(b) does not become a motion for summary judgment. Land v. Boone, 265 Ga. App. 551, 594 S.E.2d 741 (2004).

Conditional privilege entitled speaker to summary judgment. — Because a property owner made statements concerning valuation by a county appraiser in good faith which were limited in scope and made during a proper meeting, and such statements were based on the owner's interest in a property, the owner was entitled to a conditional privilege under O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-11.1 and 51-5-7(4) from the appraiser's defamation claims; as the appraiser failed in the burden of showing malice by the owner, the trial court should have granted summary judgment to the owner on defamation claims as well as all tort claims based on communications, including invasion of privacy, negligence, and emotional distress. Smith v. Henry, 276 Ga. App. 831, 625 S.E.2d 93 (2005).

Application

Statements in furtherance of free speech or promoting public good. — Statements made in good faith as part of an act in furtherance of the right of free speech or the right to petition government for a redress of grievances under the Constitution of the United States or the Constitution of the State of Georgia in connection with an issue of public interest or concern are defined in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-11.1(c) to include written and oral statements and petitions made to legislative or executive bodies regarding an issue being reviewed by the body. Thus, opposing a rezoning application by collecting signatures for a petition, writing letters to government officials, and speaking out at an official hearing clearly fall within the category of privileged activities. Providence Constr. Co. v. Bauer, 229 Ga. App. 679, 494 S.E.2d 527 (1997), cert. denied, 525 U.S. 1069, 119 S. Ct. 799, 142 L. Ed. 2d 660 (1999).

In a libel action arising from a newspaper article based on reports of a Federal Aviation Administration inspection of plaintiff airlines, because the defendant did not present evidence establishing that the defendant's reporting was privileged as a matter of law, the defendant was not entitled to sanctions and dismissal of the complaint on the grounds that the plaintiff allegedly verified the complaint in violation of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-11.1. Airtran Airlines v. Plain Dealer Publishing Co., 66 F. Supp. 2d 1355 (N.D. Ga. 1999).

Complaint for trespass arising from defendants' activities in gathering information for a petition in opposition to an application for rezoning did not come within O.C.G.A. § 9-11-11.1 because it did not involve free speech as part of a petition to the government. Browns Mill Dev. Co. v. Denton, 247 Ga. App. 232, 543 S.E.2d 65 (2000), aff'd, 275 Ga. 2, 561 S.E.2d 431 (2002).

Procedural requirements of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-11.1 did not extend to a cause of action for trespass brought by real estate developers against an environmental organization and one of its members after the organization circulated a report on the developers' failure to use proper soil erosion and sedimentation controls and opposed the developers' rezoning and land disturbance permit applications. Denton v. Browns Mill Dev. Co., 275 Ga. 2, 561 S.E.2d 431 (2002).

Application for recall of elected officials. — Filing an application for the recall of elected officials in accordance with state law is an act in furtherance of the right to petition the government to redress grievances within the meaning of Georgia's anti-SLAPP statute, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-11.1(b). Hawks v. Hinely, 252 Ga. App. 510, 556 S.E.2d 547 (2001).

Dispute pertaining to development of property. — Action commenced by a property owner against two local residents and a neighborhood group alleging tortious interference with a sales option contract, tortious interference with business relations, trespass, and interference with the property owner's right of quiet enjoyment of the property was properly dismissed as a SLAPP suit since the action was commenced after the defendants wrote to the plaintiff and demanded that the plaintiff cease development work on the plaintiff's property conducted without a permit which disturbed wetlands on the site and a state-mandated 25 foot stream buffer zone. Metzler v. Rowell, 248 Ga. App. 596, 547 S.E.2d 311 (2001).

Because O.C.G.A. § 9-11-11.1, the anti-SLAPP statute, was not intended to immunize from the consequences of abusive litigation a party who asserted a claim with respect to which there existed such a complete absence of any justiciable issue of law or fact that it could not be reasonably believed that a court would accept the asserted claim, the statute did not apply to a county's claim for attorney's fees under O.C.G.A. § 9-15-14, after the county was granted summary judgment on a property buyer's complaint that the buyer was entitled to a written verification of zoning compliance; hence, the trial court did not err in denying the county's motion to dismiss the county's request. EarthResources, LLC v. Morgan County, 281 Ga. 396, 638 S.E.2d 325 (2006).

Trespass and defacing property not protected by statute. — While the placing of signs or speech under certain circumstances might fall within the purview of the statute, trespass by pulling up land markers, defacing property, or blocking ingress and egress (without more) is not covered by the statute as none of these actions constitutes a "written or oral statement." Metzler v. Rowell, 248 Ga. App. 596, 547 S.E.2d 311 (2001).

Application to tortious interference with business and contract claims. — Trial court did not err in finding that the anti-SLAPP (Strategic Lawsuits Against Public Participation) statute, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-11.1, applied to the property owner's tortious interference with business and contractual relations claims because nothing in the confidentiality agreement between the chamber of commerce and the chamber's vice president indicated the statute was intended for the benefit of the property owner and the subject matter had already been communicated to the city. Settles Bridge Farm, LLC v. Masino, 318 Ga. App. 576, 734 S.E.2d 456 (2012).

Application to claims for malicious arrest and emotional distress. — Trial court did not err in finding that the anti-SLAPP (Strategic Lawsuit Against Public Participation) statute, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-11.1, applied to the founder's claims for malicious arrest and intentional infliction of emotional distress because the claims were predicated solely and exclusively upon the individuals' statements to police or statements made in furtherance of an ongoing investigation and, thus, were protected by the anti-SLAPP statute. Annamalai v. Capital One Fin. Corp., 319 Ga. App. 831, 738 S.E.2d 664 (2013).

Demand letter by television satellite company, which was sent to thousands of individuals informing the individuals of the satellite company's intent to pursue legal action for allegedly engaging in signal piracy, was protected by Georgia's anti-SLAPP law, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-11.1. Buckley v. Directv, Inc., 276 F. Supp. 2d 1271 (N.D. Ga. 2003).

Defamation action should have been dismissed. — Trial court erred in denying an individual's motion to dismiss a defamation lawsuit filed against the individual by a humane society and the society's executive director as the individual's statements were protected under the anti-SLAPP statute, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-11.1, as the statements were made in furtherance of the individual's right of free speech in connection with an issue of public concern as: (1) the statements were made on television and resulted in an investigation of the humane society by the county commission; and (2) the humane society was accountable to the public for ineffective animal control or inefficient use of taxpayer funds. Harkins v. Atlanta Humane Soc'y, 264 Ga. App. 356, 590 S.E.2d 737 (2003).

Dismissal authorized. — Plain language of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-11.1(b) authorizes dismissal of a claim that is not well grounded in fact, not warranted by a good faith argument or existing law, or if the statements are privileged; determining whether any of these aforementioned grounds applies requires more than a simple determination as to whether an affidavit was filed within a specified time. Harkins v. Atlanta Humane Soc'y, 264 Ga. App. 356, 590 S.E.2d 737 (2003).

Dismissal not authorized. — Because there was no evidence that any official proceeding was involved when a mother made libelous statements about a nonprofit organization, the trial court erred in concluding that the Strategic Lawsuits Against Public Participation (anti-SLAPP) statute, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-11.1, applied. Ga. Cmty. Support & Solutions, Inc. v. Berryhill, 275 Ga. App.

Upon certiorari review, because a parent did not perform any act which could reasonably be construed as a statement or petition within the anti-SLAPP statute, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-11.1, the Court of Appeals of Georgia correctly reversed dismissal of a personal care provider's tortious interference with business relationship and libel per se action filed against the parent; moreover, the Court of Appeals correctly refused to expand the scope of the anti-SLAPP statute so as to encompass a wide range of speech and conduct which was arguably connected with any issue of public interest or concern, but instead, restrict the statute's application to those statements which came within the definition within O.C.G.A. § 9-11-11.1(c). Berryhill v. Ga. Cmty. Support & Solutions, Inc., 281 Ga. 439, 638 S.E.2d 278 (2006).

For the procedural protections of the anti-SLAPP statute to apply, there had to be a threshold showing that the claims could reasonably be construed as a statement or petition made in relation to or in connection with an actual official proceeding. In this case, the actions and statements that formed the basis of the claims were not specified in the complaint. Emory Univ. v. Metro Atlanta Task Force for the Homeless, Inc., 320 Ga. App. 442, 740 S.E.2d 219 (2013).

Animal activist's statements were privileged as matters of public concern. — Animal rights activist's statements to a television station were privileged under O.C.G.A. § 51-5-7(4) and the Anti-Strategic Lawsuits Against Public Participation statute, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-11.1, as the statements were related to the policies and procedures of a humane society and involved issues of public concern; the activist made the statements in good faith, believing that the efforts could influence or persuade government officials and the public at large to help change the problems at the humane society. Harkins v. Atlanta Humane Soc'y, 273 Ga. App. 489, 618 S.E.2d 16 (2005).

Statements to law enforcement in furtherance of criminal investigation. — Hindu temple's serial filing of civil complaints against individuals lawfully reporting alleged unlawful credit card fraud activity by the temple was a clear example of the type of abuse of judicial process that O.C.G.A. § 9-11-11.1 aimed to deter, and the individuals' statements to law enforcement in furtherance of a criminal investigation were privileged. Therefore, dismissal of the temple's defamation and malicious prosecution claims, along with an award of attorney's fees, was proper. Hindu Temple & Cmty. Ctr. of the High Desert, Inc. v. Raghunathan, 311 Ga. App. 109, 714 S.E.2d 628 (2011), cert. dismissed, No. S11C1887, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 49 (Ga. 2012).

Application to State Bar proceedings. — Anti-Strategic Lawsuits Against Public Participation (Anti-SLAPP) statute, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-11.1, applied to complaints against an attorney before the State Bar of Georgia because State Bar proceedings were "official proceedings authorized by law" under § 9-11-11.1(c). However, a hearing was required before the defense could be allowed. Jefferson v. Stripling, 316 Ga. App. 197, 728 S.E.2d 826 (2012).

Fees and Expenses

Attorney fees. — When the trial court should have dismissed a city's counterclaims against a landowner as improperly verified, remand was required to determine the issue of the landowner's entitlement to attorney fees under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-11.1. Hagemann v. City of Marietta, 287 Ga. App. 1, 650 S.E.2d 363 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 128 (Ga. 2008).

When landowners sought judicial review of the zoning decisions of a board of county commissioners (board), it was error for a trial court to hold that wherefore clauses seeking attorney fees in the board's answers were claims that were falsely verified, under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-11.1(b), because: (1) the board's prayers for relief seeking attorney fees were not claims as a case brought by a plaintiff could not be turned into a damage suit by a defendant for bringing the suit while the suit was still pending; (2) O.C.G.A. § 9-11-11.1 did not require

§ 9-11-11.1(b) verifications of defensive motions so the board did not have to verify the wherefore clauses in the board's answers; and (3) O.C.G.A. § 9-11-11.1 did not bar a party defending a suit from preserving the party's right to seek attorney fees if the suit were later found to lack substantial justification so the wherefore clauses seeking attorney fees were not improper. Paulding County Bd. of Comm'rs v. Morrison, 316 Ga. App. 806, 728 S.E.2d 921 (2012).

Trial court abused the court's discretion by not awarding attorney's fees or other sanction. — In a suit brought by a developer against a landowner asserting tortuous interference with business relations and other claims, a trial court abused the court's discretion by denying the landowner's motion for attorney fees under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-11.1 since the developer's lawsuit was voluntarily dismissed as the verification in the complaint was proven false and the voluntary dismissal of the suit did not replace the mandate upon the trial court to fashion an appropriate sanction in the court's discretion in favor of the landowner. Hagemann v. Berkman Wynhaven Assoc., L.P., 290 Ga. App. 677, 660 S.E.2d 449 (2008).

9-11-12. Answer, defenses, and objections; when and how presented and heard; when defenses waived; stay of discovery.

(a) When answer presented. A defendant shall serve his answer within 30 days after the service of the summons and complaint upon him, unless otherwise provided by statute. A cross-claim or counterclaim shall not require an answer, unless one is required by order of the court, and shall automatically stand denied.

(b) How defenses and objections presented. Every defense, in law or fact, to a claim for relief in any pleading, whether a claim, counterclaim, cross-claim, or third-party claim, shall be asserted in the responsive pleading thereto if one is required, except that the following defenses may, at the option of the pleader, be made by motion in writing:

- (1) Lack of jurisdiction over the subject matter;
- (2) Lack of jurisdiction over the person;
- (3) Improper venue;
- (4) Insufficiency of process;
- (5) Insufficiency of service of process;
- (6) Failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted;
- (7) Failure to join a party under Code Section 9-11-19.

A motion making any of these defenses shall be made before or at the time of pleading if a further pleading is permitted. No defense or objection is waived by being joined with one or more other defenses or objections in a responsive pleading or motion. If a pleading sets forth a claim for relief to which the adverse party is not required to serve a responsive pleading, he may assert at the trial any defense in law or fact to that claim for relief. If, on a motion to dismiss for failure of the pleading to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, matters outside the pleading are presented to and not excluded by the court, the motion shall be treated as one for summary judgment and disposed of as provided in Code Section 9-11-56, and all parties shall be given reasonable opportunity to present all material made pertinent to such a motion by Code Section 9-11-56.

(c) Motion for judgment on the pleadings. After the pleadings are closed but within such time as not to delay the trial, any party may move for judgment on the pleadings. If, on a motion for judgment on the pleadings, matters outside the pleadings are presented to and not excluded by the court, the motion shall be treated as one for summary judgment and disposed of as provided in Code Section 9-11-56, and all parties shall be given reasonable opportunity to present all material made pertinent to such a motion by Code Section 9-11-56.

(d) Preliminary hearings. The defenses specifically enumerated in paragraphs (1) through (7) of subsection (b) of this Code section, whether made in a pleading or by motion, and the motion for judgment mentioned in subsection (c) of this Code section shall be heard and determined before trial on application of any party unless the court orders that the hearing and determination thereof be deferred until the trial.

(e) Motion for more definite statement. If a pleading to which a responsive pleading is permitted is so vague or ambiguous that a party cannot reasonably be required to frame a proper responsive pleading, he shall nevertheless answer or respond to the best of his ability, and he may move for a more definite statement. The motion shall point out the defects complained of and the details desired. If the motion is granted and the order of the court is not obeyed within 15 days after notice of the order, or within such other time as the court may fix, the court may strike the pleading to which the motion was directed or make such order as it deems just.

(f) Motion to strike. Upon motion made by a party within 30 days after the service of the pleading upon him, or upon the court's own initiative at any time, the court may order stricken from any pleading any insufficient defense or any redundant, immaterial, impertinent, or scandalous matter.

(g) Consolidation of defenses in motion. A party who makes a motion under this Code section may join with it any other motions provided for in this Code section and then available to him. If a party makes a motion under this Code section but omits therefrom any defense or objection then available to him which this Code section permits to be raised by motion, he shall not thereafter make a motion based on the defense or objection so omitted, except a motion as provided in paragraph (2) of subsection (h) of this Code section on any of the grounds there stated.

(h) Waiver or preservation of certain defenses.

(1) A defense of lack of jurisdiction over the person, improper venue, insufficiency of process, or insufficiency of service of process is waived:

(A) If omitted from a motion in the circumstances described in subsection (g) of this Code section; or

(B) If it is neither made by motion under this Code section nor included in a responsive pleading, as originally filed.

(2) A defense of failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, a defense of failure to join a party indispensable under Code Section 9-11-19, and an objection of failure to state a legal defense to a claim may be made in any pleading permitted or ordered under subsection (a) of Code Section 9-11-7, or by motion for judgment on the pleadings, or at the trial on the merits.

(3) Whenever it appears, by suggestion of the parties or otherwise, that the court lacks jurisdiction of the subject matter, the court shall dismiss the action.

(i) Officer's defense of service. The officer making service of process and the principal officer in charge of service made by a deputy need not be made a party to any action or motion where the defense or defenses under paragraph (2), (4), or (5) of subsection (b) of this Code section are asserted by motion or by answer. Any party to the action may give notice of the objection to the service, made pursuant to such paragraphs, to the officer making the service and to the principal officer in case of service made by a deputy, and the court shall afford the officer or officers opportunity to defend the service, in which case the decision on the question of service shall be conclusive on the officer and on his principal in case of service by a deputy.

(j) Stay of discovery.

(1) If a party files a motion to dismiss before or at the time of filing an answer and pursuant to the provisions of this Code section, discovery shall be stayed for 90 days after the filing of such motion or until the ruling of the court on such motion, whichever is sooner. The court shall decide the motion to dismiss within the 90 days provided in this paragraph.

(2) The discovery period and all discovery deadlines shall be extended for a period equal to the duration of the stay imposed by this subsection.

(3) The court may upon its own motion or upon motion of a party terminate or modify the stay imposed by this subsection but shall not extend such stay.

(4) If a motion to dismiss raises defenses set forth in paragraph (2), (3), (5), or (7) of subsection (b) of this Code section or if any party needs discovery in order to identify persons who may be joined as parties, limited discovery needed to respond to such defenses or identify such persons shall be permitted until the court rules on such motion.

(5) The provisions of this subsection shall not modify or affect the provisions of paragraph (2) of subsection (f) of Code Section 9-11-23 or any other power of the court to stay discovery. (Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 12; Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 9; Ga. L. 1968, p. 1104, § 3; Ga. L. 1972, p. 689, §§ 4, 5; Ga. L. 1993, p. 91, § 9; Ga. L. 2009, p. 73, § 4/HB 29.)

Editor's note. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code 1933, §§ 81-209, 81-211, 81-301 through 81-304, 81-501, and 81-503 are included in the annotations for this Code section.

Procedure identical to Uniform Superior Court Rules. — Subsection (c) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12 refers to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 as giving only “reasonable opportunity to present all material” on a motion for summary judgment and subsection (d) does not include the right to oral argument except “on application.” Under this interpretation, § 9-11-12 establishes a procedure identical to that of Rule 6.3 of the Uniform Superior Court Rules. Dallas Blue Haven Pools, Inc. v. Taslimi, 180 Ga. App. 734, 350 S.E.2d 265 (1986), aff'd, 256 Ga. 739, 354 S.E.2d 160 (1987).

Subject matter jurisdiction cannot be conferred by agreement or waived. — Georgia Supreme Court disapproves language suggesting that parties can confer subject matter jurisdiction on a court by agreement or waive the defense by failing to raise the defense in the trial court. Abushmais v. Erby, 282 Ga. 619, 652 S.E.2d 549 (2007).

County enjoyed immunity from negligence and nuisance claims. — Because a county enjoyed sovereign immunity from a pedestrian's negligence and nuisance claims asserted in a personal injury action against the county for the county's alleged failure to maintain a water meter cover, the trial court properly dismissed the claims. Rutherford v. DeKalb County, 287 Ga. App. 366, 651 S.E.2d 771 (2007).

Prevention of gambling on verdict intended. — One of the intentions of the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) was to prevent a party from going to trial and gambling on the verdict when a known defense to the action is available. O'Neil v. Moore, 118 Ga. App. 424, 164 S.E.2d 328 (1968).

Statute is applicable to custody cases as well as divorce cases. Hopkins v. Hopkins, 237 Ga. 845, 229 S.E.2d 751 (1976).

Applicability to negligence complaint in malpractice action. — State court properly denied a clinic's motion to dismiss a negligence complaint which arose out of injuries a patient allegedly sustained by and through the negligence of one of the clinic's employees, as the patient was not suing for medical malpractice, the employee was not a licensed health care provider, and thus the patient was not required to file the necessary affidavit required under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1. Mt. Orthopedics & Sports Med., P.C. v. Williams, 284 Ga. App. 885, 644 S.E.2d 868 (2007).

Liberal construction of pleading does not encompass imputation or engrafting to a claim of a meaning not reasonably deducible or inferable from the pleading's explicit language. Rossville Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Insurance Co. of N. Am., 121 Ga. App. 435, 174 S.E.2d 204 (1970).

Wholesale objection insufficient. — Wholesale objection attacking as a group several paragraphs or exhibits of a complaint is insufficient if any of the paragraphs or exhibits are not subject to the criticism made. Robinson v. Reward Ceramic Color Mfg., Inc., 120 Ga. App. 380, 170 S.E.2d 724 (1969).

Jurisdiction and venue distinguished. — Jurisdiction means power of court to render binding judgment in a case, and venue means place of trial. Williams v. Fuller, 244 Ga. 846, 262 S.E.2d 135 (1979).

"Subject matter jurisdiction" defined. — Jurisdiction of the subject matter is the power to deal with the general abstract question, to hear the particular facts in any case relating to this question, and to determine whether or not the facts are sufficient to invoke the exercise of that power. Williams v. Fuller, 244 Ga. 846, 262 S.E.2d 135 (1979).

"Jurisdiction of the person" defined. — Jurisdiction of the person is the power of a court to render a personal judgment, or to subject the parties in a particular case to the decisions and rulings made by it in such case, and is obtained by appearance or by serving the proper process in the manner required by law on persons or parties subject to be sued in a particular action. Williams v. Fuller, 244 Ga. 846, 262 S.E.2d 135 (1979).

Improper venue covered by jurisdiction of the person. — Term "jurisdiction of the person" is broad enough to cover lack of jurisdiction of the person resulting from improper venue. Williams v. Fuller, 244 Ga. 846, 262 S.E.2d 135 (1979).

Disposition of affirmative defenses. — Generally, defenses such as statute of limitation or laches must be affirmatively raised by written answer, but when facts as to such an issue are uncontradicted, it may be disposed of by summary judgment, motion to dismiss, or motion for judgment on the pleadings. Beazley v. Williams, 231 Ga. 137, 200 S.E.2d 751 (1973).

Pleading of conclusions. — While conclusions may not generally be used in affidavits to support or oppose summary judgment motions, conclusions may generally be pled. Guthrie v. Monumental Properties, Inc., 141 Ga. App. 21, 232 S.E.2d 369 (1977); Holloway v. Dougherty County Sch. Sys., 157 Ga. App. 251, 277 S.E.2d 251 (1981).

Findings of fact and conclusions of law. — Client's claim of a procedural defect in the trial court's handling of the client's complaint seeking to vacate an arbitration award was rejected as the trial court did not have to make findings of fact and conclusions of law pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52(a) when ruling on an O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(b)(6) claim; even if § 9-11-52(a) applied, the client did not request such findings of fact and conclusions of law. Durden v. Suggs, 271 Ga. App. 688, 610 S.E.2d 640 (2005).

Notice pleading requirements. — Under "notice" theory of pleading, it is immaterial whether pleading states "conclusion" or "facts" as long as fair notice is given, and the statement of claim is short and plain. Holloway v. Dougherty County Sch. Sys., 157 Ga. App. 251, 277 S.E.2d 251 (1981).

to filing a medical malpractice action against two hospitals; hence, the trial court properly granted the patient a protective order from having to contemporaneously comply with the filing requirements of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.2. Crisp Reg'l Hosp., Inc. v. Sanders, 281 Ga. App. 393, 636 S.E.2d 123 (2006).

Equivalence of general demurrer and motion to dismiss. — General demurrer and a motion to dismiss for failure to state a cause of action, orally or in writing, are equivalent pleadings, and the latter may be made at any time before the verdict. Willis v. Byrd, 116 Ga. App. 555, 158 S.E.2d 458 (1967) (decided under former Code 1933, §§ 81-301 and 81-302).

Effect of answer creating genuine issue of material fact. — After the plaintiff filed a dispossessory warrant, the defendants answered and denied that a landlord-tenant relationship existed between the parties, and there was no evidence or admission that the plaintiff was the owner of the premises or that the defendants were on the premises without the landlord's consent, genuine issues of material fact remained as to the plaintiff's allegations that the plaintiff was the owner of the premises and that the defendants were tenants at sufferance. The trial court, therefor, erred in striking the defendants' answer, granting a judgment on the pleadings, and entering an immediate writ of possession. Thomas v. Wells Fargo Credit Corp., 200 Ga. App. 592, 409 S.E.2d 71, cert. denied, 200 Ga. App. 897, 409 S.E.2d 71 (1991).

Failure to state claim. — If the complaint fails to state a claim, dismissal is the only remedy. Gould v. Gould, 240 Ga. App. 481, 523 S.E.2d 106 (1999).

Heightened federal requirements for stating a claim inapplicable. — When it was alleged defendant insurance agency held itself out as an expert and that the plaintiff insured had a special relationship with the agency and relied on the agency to procure the proper insurance, under Georgia law, it was possible a state court would find a claim was stated and it was error to find the agency was fraudulently joined in the suit involving the codefendant insurer and to deny remand; under Georgia's notice pleading standard, the heightened pleading requirements imposed on federal plaintiffs in Iqbal and Twombly had not been adopted and the true test was whether the pleading gave fair notice and stated the elements of the claim plainly and succinctly, and not whether as an abstract matter the pleading stated conclusions or facts. Stillwell v. Allstate Ins. Co., 663 F.3d 1329 (11th Cir. 2011).

Dismissal of action as non-justiciable upheld. — Because city had yet to file a condemnation action against a landowner, the landowner's suit seeking a public use determination under O.C.G.A. § 22-1-11 was properly dismissed as the suit failed to present a justiciable controversy, and the city's mere inchoate intention to do so, if at all, did not give rise to a justiciable cause of action; moreover, if the appeals court construed that section to be applicable before the initiation of a condemnation action, the court would render meaningless the phrase "before the vesting of title in the condemnor," because that clarification would be redundant. Fox v. City of Cumming, 289 Ga. App. 803, 658 S.E.2d 408 (2008).

Because a provision in an agreement between a minority shareholder and a corporate officer to provide the minority shareholder with management opportunities in the corporation was invalid and unenforceable, the corporation was not a party to that agreement, and the officer entered into the contract in that officer's personal capacity, a breach of contract claim related to the agreement was properly dismissed. Levy v. Reiner, 290 Ga. App. 471, 659 S.E.2d 848 (2008).

Because the Georgia Workers' Compensation Board, and not the Health Records Act, O.C.G.A. § 31-33-3, regulated the medical photocopying charges in workers' compensation proceedings, the trial court properly dismissed a declaratory judgment complaint filed by a photocopier, which sought guidance regarding the appropriate fee structure for medical photocopying services in workers' compensation proceedings, for failure to state a claim upon which relief could be granted. Smart

Dismissal of claims held not treated as adjudication of the merits. — Having ruled that dismissal of claims against an employee was appropriate based on insufficient service, the trial court was then without jurisdiction to rule on whether the complaint against the employee should be dismissed based on the expiration of the statute of limitations under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(b)(6). Thus, the dismissal could not be treated as an adjudication of the merits, and res judicata did not bar a respondeat superior claim against the employee's employer. Montague v. Godfrey, 289 Ga. App. 552, 657 S.E.2d 630 (2008).

Error in granting motion deemed waived. — In a dispute over the use of an easement, because a landowner made no argument and cited no legal authority in support of a claim that the trial court's failure to specifically note its oral denial of a motion to dismiss in its final written order constituted an abuse of discretion, the claim was deemed abandoned under Ga. Ct. App. R. 25(c). Woodyard v. Jones, 285 Ga. App. 323, 646 S.E.2d 306 (2007).

Trial court did not err in dismissing an inmate's tort claim alleging false imprisonment and a claim under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 against the department of corrections on sovereign immunity grounds as: (1) the state was shielded from liability against a false imprisonment claim, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 50-21-24(7); and (2) neither the state nor the department of corrections was a "person," as that term was defined under 42 U.S.C. § 1983. Watson v. Ga. Dep't of Corr., 285 Ga. App. 143, 645 S.E.2d 629 (2007).

Failure to file defensive pleadings in appeal from property evaluation. — Appeal procedure outlined in O.C.G.A. § 48-5-311(f) does not contemplate the filing of a "complaint" or "answer," and a default judgment will not lie for failure to file defensive pleadings in a de novo hearing on appeal in the superior court from a property evaluation. Rogers v. DeKalb County Bd. of Tax Assessors, 247 Ga. 726, 279 S.E.2d 223 (1981).

Petition for certiorari from conviction for violation of municipal ordinance should contain provisions of ordinance. — Because a city's petition for certiorari plainly and distinctly asserted the errors complained of, the superior court did not err in denying its motion to dismiss; moreover, the record reflected that the bar managers cited for violation of Atlanta, Ga., Code of Ordinances § 10-46 (1995) preserved the issue as to the constitutionality of the ordinance and the ordinance's enforcement. City of Atlanta v. Jones, 283 Ga. App. 125, 640 S.E.2d 698 (2006).

Payment of costs in dismissed action jurisdictional. — Pursuant to the plain language of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41, payment of costs in a dismissed action is not an affirmative defense but a jurisdictional matter which may never be waived. Little v. Walker, 250 Ga. 854, 301 S.E.2d 639 (1983), (overruling McLanahan v. Keith, 239 Ga. 94, 236 S.E.2d 52 (1977)); Tucker v. Mitchell, 252 Ga. 545, 314 S.E.2d 896 (1984).

Dismissal erroneously granted because: (1) an amendment to a county sign ordinance did not moot the claims for damages asserted by the contestants that arose from the county's enforcement of the ordinance; and (2) the trial court erroneously relied on a federal decision in support of granting the motion. Coffey v. Fayette County, 289 Ga. App. 153, 656 S.E.2d 262 (2008).

Answers and Time Therefor

Responsive pleadings in quo warranto proceeding. — Because the special statutory proceeding known as quo warranto does not prescribe special rules of practice or procedure with relation to the time of filing defensive pleadings, the question of whether responsive pleadings must be filed is controlled by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12. Anderson v. Flake, 270 Ga. 141, 508 S.E.2d 650 (1998).

Purpose of an answer is to formulate issues by means of defenses addressed to allegations of the complaint. Knickerbocker Tax Sys. v. Texaco, Inc., 130 Ga. App. 383, 203 S.E.2d 290 (1973).

Answer primarily a vehicle for denial. — Answer, under both present and former law, is primarily vehicle for denial. Knickerbocker Tax Sys. v. Texaco, Inc., 130 Ga. App. 383, 203 S.E.2d 290 (1973).

Defenses as well as denials permitted in answer. — Chief change made by the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) with regard to the answer is that an answer may now incorporate defenses other than mere denial of allegations. Knickerbocker Tax Sys. v. Texaco, Inc., 130 Ga. App. 383, 203 S.E.2d 290 (1973).

Meaning of “unless otherwise provided by statute”. — Language “unless otherwise provided by statute” in subsection (a) of this section refers to other laws or statutes of this state relating to a particular type of proceeding or action which might specify a different appearance day or time for filing a responsive pleading, and not to local practice rules provided in various statutes creating county civil courts. Crosby v. Dixie Metal Co., 124 Ga. App. 169, 183 S.E.2d 59 (1971).

Phrase “otherwise provided by statute” in subsection (a) of this section relates to such special statutory proceedings (quo warranto, mandamus, etc.) as may prescribe specific rules of practice and procedure with relation to time of filing defensive pleadings which are different from the 30 days permitted under the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9), and not to local practice rules provided in various statutes creating such courts as the Civil and Criminal Court of DeKalb County. Gresham v. Symmers, 227 Ga. 616, 182 S.E.2d 764 (1971).

Phrase “unless otherwise provided by statute” in subsection (a) of this section does not refer to local practice rules provided in various statutes creating civil and criminal county courts. Auerback v. Maslia, 142 Ga. App. 184, 235 S.E.2d 594 (1977).

Answer to amendment of complaint not required. — Statute requires an answer only to complaint or third-party complaint, not to amendment of a complaint. Diaz v. First Nat'l Bank, 144 Ga. App. 582, 241 S.E.2d 467 (1978).

No default for failure to answer counterclaim. — Since no answer is required to a counterclaim, case cannot go into default as a consequence of a party's failure to respond thereto, and no default judgment can be authorized. Wolski v. Hayes, 144 Ga. App. 180, 240 S.E.2d 720 (1977).

Though all summonses issued by a clerk to defendants in a counterclaim required an answer within 30 days of service or defendants would be held in default, failure to answer did not constitute default since the order adding additional defendants in a counterclaim directed the clerk to issue civil process to be served. Adams v. First Nat'l Bank, 170 Ga. App. 490, 317 S.E.2d 301 (1984).

Answer required from all parties named in complaint. — When an answer was filed in the name of only one of four separate entities named as defendants in the action, the other three defendants could not benefit from the answer and, having filed no answer of their own, were in default. McCombs v. Southern Regional Medical Ctr., Inc., 233 Ga. App. 676, 504 S.E.2d 747 (1998).

Answer must be sufficiently definite to inform plaintiffs of defense. — Although there is no need for the defendant to set forth any evidence, or to expose the defendant's defense in detail, it is required that the answer contain a statement of facts sufficiently definite so that the plaintiffs will be informed of the defense the plaintiffs must be prepared to meet. Knickerbocker Tax Sys. v. Texaco, Inc., 130 Ga. App. 383, 203 S.E.2d 290 (1973).

When a nonlawyer manager of a sales lot responded to a complaint by writing a two page letter to the plaintiff's attorney, which responded to each of the grievances listed in the complaint, and filed the letter with the court, such response was sufficient to constitute an answer. M & M Mobile Homes of Ga., Inc. v. Haralson, 233 Ga. App. 749, 505 S.E.2d 249 (1998).

Special appearance for purpose of contesting service is not an answer or "responsive" pleading. BX Corp. v. Fulton Plumbing Co., 140 Ga. App. 131, 230 S.E.2d 331 (1976).

Dismissal motion obviates need for answer. — Granting of a motion to dismiss raising subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12 obviates the requirement for a timely filed answer. Mock v. Copeland, 160 Ga. App. 876, 288 S.E.2d 591 (1982).

Answer not treated as motion to dismiss. — In an action by attorney to collect legal fees, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in failing to treat the defendant client's answer, alleging that the plaintiff's attorney was ineligible to practice law, as a motion to dismiss or in failing to dismiss, sua sponte, the complaint. Howell v. Styles, 221 Ga. App. 781, 472 S.E.2d 548 (1996).

Response to amended complaint. — Response to an amended pleading may be made, but one is not required. Adams v. Wright, 162 Ga. App. 550, 293 S.E.2d 446 (1982).

Construing the pertinent provisions of O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-7, 9-11-8, 9-11-12, 9-11-15, and 9-11-21 in pari materia, it is clear that the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) authorizes the addition of parties, by order of the court, and that an "amended complaint" effecting such an addition does not require a responsive pleading, unless the trial court orders a reply thereto. Chan v. W-East Trading Corp., 199 Ga. App. 76, 403 S.E.2d 840, cert. denied, 199 Ga. App. 905, 403 S.E.2d 840 (1991).

Untimely response insufficient despite timely response to amended complaint. — Defendants' untimely filed answers to the original complaint were in violation of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12 despite a timely response to the plaintiff's amended complaint, in light of their automatic default status, which neither defendant sought to open pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55(a). Day v. Norman, 207 Ga. App. 37, 427 S.E.2d 31 (1993).

Appeal to superior court from county tax assessment brought under former Code 1933, § 92-6912 (see now O.C.G.A. § 48-5-311) was a "complaint" as contemplated by the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9), which was required to be answered by a responsive pleading. Hall County Bd. of Tax Assessors v. Reed, 142 Ga. App. 556, 236 S.E.2d 532 (1977).

Time for filing answer runs from date of service. — The 30 days within which a defendant has to file an answer begins to run from the date of service and not from the filing of the return. Ewing v. Johnston, 175 Ga. App. 760, 334 S.E.2d 703 (1985).

Time for filing answer in court of record may not be varied. — When the legislature declares a particular county court to be a court of record, thus bringing the court under the provisions of the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9), it cannot constitutionally thereafter, either in the same Act or in a subsequently enacted law, vary the rules of practice and procedure provided for in that Act by adding provisions requiring defendants to file defensive pleadings sooner than 30 days after service of the complaint on the defendants. Gresham v. Symmers, 227 Ga. 616, 182 S.E.2d 764 (1971).

Entry of a rule nisi which does not expressly extend the time for answering a complaint does not suspend requirement that complaint be answered within 30 days after service. Cheeks v. Barnes, 241 Ga. 22, 243 S.E.2d 242 (1978).

Absent consent, no trial prior to expiration of 30-day period. — No ordinary action may be tried in the Civil Court of Bibb County prior to expiration of the 30-day period given in subsection (a) of this section for filing an answer to a complaint, even though an answer has already been filed prior thereto, unless it be done by consent of the parties. Crosby v. Dixie Metal Co., 124 Ga. App. 169, 183 S.E.2d 59 (1971).

Late answer filed by uninsured motorist carrier. — Trial court erred in denying an insured's motion for a default judgment and granting the uninsured motorist carrier's motion for summary judgment because the court relied upon a typographical error in case law in determining that the carrier's answer was not filed late and thereby finding that the carrier was not in default. Kelly v. Harris, 329 Ga. App. 752, 766 S.E.2d 146 (2014).

Answer not required. — Named defendant, who was listed in the summons that was issued but was never served with process, was not required to answer the complaint. Hamm v. Willis, 201 Ga. App. 723, 411 S.E.2d 771 (1991).

Time for filing answer after waiving service. — Defendant has 30 days to file an answer after the defendant waives service by making an appearance in a case because time in which jurisdiction is waived is equivalent of time service of process is made in a normal case. Bigley v. Lawrence, 149 Ga. App. 249, 253 S.E.2d 870 (1979).

No default if summary judgment motion pending. — If the defendants were never served, and filed a motion for summary judgment within the time for filing defensive pleadings (although the defendants never filed an answer to the complaint), it was error for the trial court to enter default judgment while such motion was pending. Bigley v. Lawrence, 149 Ga. App. 249, 253 S.E.2d 870 (1979).

Mere filing of a default summary judgment motion did not result in the entry of a default judgment. — Nothing showed a final or conclusive judgment on the merits in plaintiff home buyer's state court case against defendant companies, and the buyer's mere filing of a default summary judgment motion did not result in the entry of a default judgment; thus, the Rooker-Feldman doctrine did not preclude federal jurisdiction upon removal. Jones v. Commonwealth Land Title Ins. Co., No. 11-13469, 2012 U.S. App. LEXIS 1487 (11th Cir. Jan. 25, 2012), cert. dismissed, mot. denied, U.S. , 133 S. Ct. 35, 183 L. Ed. 2d 671 (2012) (Unpublished).

Default judgment should have been entered after failure to answer. — Denial of a plaintiff's motion for default judgment against a defendant was error because the defendant did not file an answer, the time for filing an answer was not extended, and under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55(a), the defendant's case was automatically in default 30 days after being served; further, the defendant did not move to open the default. The trial court's earlier findings on cross-motions for summary judgment regarding the codefendant's lack of contractual liability were irrelevant to the issue of whether the plaintiff was entitled to default judgment. H.N. Real Estate Group, LLC v. Dixon, 298 Ga. App. 124, 679 S.E.2d 130 (2009).

Default judgment properly entered due to untimely answer. — Trial court did not err in granting a creditor's motion for default judgment on the ground that a debtor failed to answer the complaint within thirty days pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(a) because the trial court was authorized to conclude that the debtor's counsel executed an acknowledgment and waiver pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-10-73, that, therefore, the debtor's answer was due within thirty days after the acknowledgment and waiver, and that because it failed to serve an answer within that thirty-day period, its answer was untimely. O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4 did not apply because the acknowledgment of service the creditor drafted and submitted to the debtor did not make reference to § 9-11-4, and the creditor also did not inform the debtor by means of the text prescribed in § 9-11-4(1). Satnam Waheguru Corp. v. Buckhead Cmty. Bank, 304 Ga. App. 438, 696 S.E.2d 430 (2010).

Default judgment properly set aside when answer timely filed. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in setting aside a default judgment entered in favor of former police officers under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(d) because the default judgment was entered despite the fact that the record disclosed that a pension fund board of trustees timely answered the complaint and, thus, there was no basis upon which to claim a default judgment; the board's answer was filed 31 days after service, but because that day was a Monday and the 30th day after service fell on a Sunday, under O.C.G.A. § 1-3-1(d)(3), the answer was timely. Stamey v. Policemen's Pension Fund Bd. of Trs., 289 Ga. 503, 712 S.E.2d 825 (2011).

Answer timely filed. — City council members filed the members' answer to a photographer's complaint well within the 30-day filing requirement under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(a) because one of the members was served with the complaint on December 20, 2007, the other was served on December 26, 2007, the case was removed to federal court on January 11, 2008, and both members filed a joint answer in federal court on January 17, 2008. Davis v. Wallace, 310 Ga. App. 340, 713 S.E.2d 446 (2011).

Trial court had jurisdiction over a home inspector, and the inspector was required under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(a) of the Georgia Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9, to file an answer to the purchaser's complaint within 30 days, but because the inspector failed to do so, the inspector was in default. Strickland v. Leake, 311 Ga. App. 298, 715 S.E.2d 676 (2011).

How Defenses, etc., Presented

1. In General

Option to raise defenses by motion or in pleading. — Pleader may choose, at the pleader's option, to forgo opportunity to raise defenses by motion and to include the defenses in a responsive pleading. Hayes v. Superior Leasing Corp., 136 Ga. App. 98, 220 S.E.2d 86 (1975).

Affirmative defenses. — Since the defendant did not assert any affirmative defenses in the defendant's responsive pleadings, any defense that the defendant may have had are deemed waived. Burks v. Community Nat'l Bank, 216 Ga. App. 155, 454 S.E.2d 144 (1995).

Sovereign immunity. — Community service board was a state agency, and the limited sovereign immunity waiver for state agencies in the Georgia Tort Claims Act, O.C.G.A. § 50-21-20 et seq., was subject to a specific exception for assault or battery. The community service board was immune from a claim arising from the stabbing death of a resident at a community home ran by the board, and a trial court's denial of a motion to dismiss filed by the board was reversed. Oconee Cmty. Serv. Bd. v. Holsey, 266 Ga. App. 385, 597 S.E.2d 489 (2004).

Party does not make motion to dismiss simply by confessing facts that establish lack of jurisdiction, even if the party suggests that the court might dismiss the case. McLanahan v. Keith, 140 Ga. App. 171, 230 S.E.2d 57 (1976), aff'd, 239 Ga. 94, 236 S.E.2d 52 (1977). But see Couch v. Wallace, 249 Ga. 568, 292 S.E.2d 405 (1982); Little v. Walker, 250 Ga. 854, 301 S.E.2d 639 (1983).

Reason for plea or written motion. — Rationale for requirement that defense of insufficiency of service or process must be made by plea or written motion is to provide notice to the opposite party. Petroleum Carrier Corp. v. Jones, 127 Ga. App. 676, 194 S.E.2d 670 (1972).

"Appearance card" not a pleading. — "Appearance card," containing no admissions, denials, or statements of inability to answer for any reason, does not meet standards for a pleading as set forth in subsection (b) of Ga. L. 1972, p. 689, §§ 4 and 5 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12) and Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 8 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-8(b)). Glenco-Belvedere Animal Hosp. v. Winters, 129 Ga. App. 621, 200 S.E.2d 506 (1973).

Motions to dismiss as part of responsive pleadings. — Motions to dismiss for failure to set forth a cause of action and for failure to set forth a claim can properly be part of the defendant's responsive pleadings. Henderson v. Fulton County Bd. of Registration & Elections, 231 Ga. 173, 200 S.E.2d 739 (1973).

When motion to dismiss is addressed to entire pleading, such motion is properly overruled if a portion of the matter thus attacked is not subject to objections urged. Dillingham v. Doctors Clinic, 138 Ga. App. 41, 225 S.E.2d 500 (1976); Goolsby v. Regents of Univ. Sys.,

Ruling granting a motion to dismiss is an adjudication on the merits of the plaintiffs' claim, and is not equivalent to a voluntary dismissal under Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 41 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41(a)). State v. Golia, 235 Ga. 791, 222 S.E.2d 27 (1976).

Motion to dismiss based on forum selection clause. — Trial court erred in denying an employer's motion to dismiss based on a forum selection clause as the employee failed to show that a forum selection clause in a merger agreement was unreasonable since: (1) the employee's affidavit failed to address the parties' relative bargaining positions, so the employee's claim that the clause was unreasonable as the employee was only one of six partners, with a 14 percent share, failed; (2) the employee's signature on the agreement was not the result of fraud or overreaching; (3) the employee could have refused to sign the agreement; (4) the employee's claim that the employer waived any objection to venue was not raised in the trial court, and venue was not at issue; and (5) the executive employment agreement and the merger agreement were properly construed together. SR Bus. Servs., Inc. v. Bryant, 267 Ga. App. 591, 600 S.E.2d 610 (2004).

Dismissal because of lack of jurisdiction constitutes final termination for purposes of appeal. McLanahan v. Keith, 140 Ga. App. 171, 230 S.E.2d 57 (1976), aff'd, 239 Ga. 94, 236 S.E.2d 52 (1977). But see Couch v. Wallace, 249 Ga. 568, 292 S.E.2d 405 (1982); Little v. Walker, 250 Ga. 854, 301 S.E.2d 639 (1983).

Defense of privilege is not a defense that must be affirmatively pled under Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 8 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-8(c)), nor specifically pleaded under Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 9 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9), and is sufficiently raised by motion to dismiss under subsection (b) of Ga. L. 1972, p. 689, §§ 4 and 5 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12). Europa Hair, Inc. v. Browning, 133 Ga. App. 753, 212 S.E.2d 862 (1975).

Failure of foreign corporation to obtain certificate of authority to transact business in this state is properly the subject of a dilatory plea. Safwat v. United States Leasing Corp., 154 Ga. App. 341, 268 S.E.2d 395 (1980).

Plea in abatement is a dilatory plea. Theo v. National Union Fire Ins. Co., 99 Ga. App. 342, 109 S.E.2d 53 (1959) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-303).

"Dilatory pleas" are such as tend merely to defeat plaintiff's remedy or to delay or put off the suit by questioning the propriety of the remedy rather than by denying the injury; dilatory pleas may be tried separately from the main case. Theo v. National Union Fire Ins. Co., 99 Ga. App. 342, 109 S.E.2d 53 (1959) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-303).

Matters in abatement are raised and resolved under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12, and are not proper subjects for a motion for summary judgment. Hight v. Blankenship, 199 Ga. App. 744, 406 S.E.2d 241 (1991).

Defenses in subsection (b), except for paragraph (6), are matters in abatement that are not within the scope of summary judgment procedure as a motion for summary judgment applies to the merits of the claim, or to matters in bar, but not to matters in abatement. Knight v. United States Fid. & Guar. Co., 123 Ga. App. 833, 182 S.E.2d 693 (1971); Boyd Motors, Inc. v. Radcliff, 128 Ga. App. 15, 195 S.E.2d 291 (1973); Kirkpatrick v. Mackey, 162 Ga. App. 876, 293 S.E.2d 461 (1982).

Generally, defenses enumerated in paragraphs (b)(1) through (b)(5) and (b)(7) of this section are not proper subjects for motions for summary judgment. Ogden Equip. Co. v. Talmadge Farms, Inc., 232 Ga. 614, 208 S.E.2d 459 (1974).

Defendant's motion to dismiss or for summary judgment treated as one for summary judgment. — When matters outside the pleadings were presented and not excluded by the trial court, the defendant's motion to dismiss the plaintiff's refiled action or, in the alternative, for summary judgment would be treated as one for summary judgment and the grant of that motion would be a grant of summary judgment in favor of the defendant and against the plaintiff. Williams v. Coca-Cola Co., 158 Ga. App. 139, 279 S.E.2d 261 (1981).

Motion to dismiss not converted to summary judgment. — Defendant's motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction, insufficiency of process, and insufficiency of service of process was not converted to a summary judgment motion upon consideration of matters outside the pleadings and, thus, dismissal was not directly appealable under the summary judgment statute. Church v. Bell, 213 Ga. App. 44, 443 S.E.2d 677 (1994).

Motion for summary judgment cannot be granted on matters in abatement, such matters being properly disposed of pursuant to a motion to dismiss. C.W. Matthews Contracting Co. v. Capital Ford Truck Sales, Inc., 149 Ga. App. 354, 254 S.E.2d 426 (1979); Primas v. Saulsberry, 152 Ga. App. 88, 262 S.E.2d 251 (1979).

Matters in abatement. — Motion for summary judgment under Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 25 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56) or a motion under subsection (b) of Ga. L. 1972, p. 689, §§ 4 and 5 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12) which is treated as one for summary judgment cannot be granted on matters in abatement. Ogden Equip. Co. v. Talmadge Farms, Inc., 232 Ga. 614, 208 S.E.2d 459 (1974).

Although a motion is made and treated as one for summary judgment, a motion for summary judgment cannot be used to raise a matter of abatement, such as lack of venue or jurisdiction, which must be brought under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12. Big Canoe Corp. v. Williamson, 168 Ga. App. 179, 308 S.E.2d 440 (1983).

Jurisdictional type motion is not within the scope of summary judgment procedure. Hemphill v. Con-Chem, Inc., 128 Ga. App. 590, 197 S.E.2d 457 (1973).

When summons and process erroneously bore the caption "State Court of Walker [County]" rather than the "Superior Court" thereof, but when other aspects of the summons and process made clear that the action was in the superior court, and when the defendant in fact filed an answer and motion to dismiss in the superior court rather than the state court, there were no grounds to dismiss for lack of proper return of service or insufficiency of process. Gant v. Gant, 254 Ga. 239, 327 S.E.2d 723 (1985).

Motion in abatement properly denied. — Trial court properly denied the Department of Transportation's motion in abatement, as plaintiffs, with the plaintiffs' affidavit and deposition of the plaintiffs' expert witness, carried the plaintiffs' burden of proof by showing the Department's design and engineering malpractice, and proof of malpractice was also proof of the waiver of sovereign immunity under O.C.G.A. § 50-21-24(10). DOT v. Dupree, 256 Ga. App. 668, 570 S.E.2d 1 (2002).

Contractual right to file. — Founder's action against a small company, the small company's majority owner, and the owner's managing member was dismissed because the company and owner had the right to file first under the parties' ambiguous but effective standstill agreement and to give effect to a provision of the agreement that made the agreement null and void on a certain date would have meant not giving effect to another provision that afforded the company the right to file first in contravention of the parties' intent. Thomas v. B & I Lending, L.L.C., 261 Ga. App. 39, 581 S.E.2d 631 (2003).

No waiver of one year policy provisions. — In an insurer's declaratory judgment action involving the insurer's obligations under a parent's property insurance policy, the insurer was properly granted summary judgment as to a child's claim since that claim was filed past the one year time limit set forth in the policy, which was a policy renewed in 2004. The child's counterclaim was filed 18 months after the declaratory judgment suit was filed and no waiver of the one year time limit was established. Morrill v. Cotton States Mut. Ins. Co., 293 Ga. App. 259, 666 S.E.2d 582 (2008).

2. Subject Matter Jurisdiction

Scope of jurisdiction. — Jurisdiction of the subject matter does not mean simply jurisdiction of the particular case then occupying the attention of the court but jurisdiction of the class of cases to which that particular case belongs. Hill v.

How Defenses, etc.,Presented (Cont'd)*2. Subject Matter*Jurisdiction (Cont'd)

Kaminsky, 160 Ga. App. 630, 287 S.E.2d 639 (1981).

Jurisdiction should be decided at outset. — Jurisdiction of court to afford relief sought is a matter which should be decided preliminarily at the outset; jurisdiction either exists or does not exist without regard to the merits of the case. Whitlock v. Barrett, 158 Ga. App. 100, 279 S.E.2d 244 (1981).

Dismissal proper based on no waiver of sovereign immunity. — Trial court properly dismissed a wrongful death suit against a State of Georgia mental health agency for lack of subject matter jurisdiction because the act causing the underlying loss in the case, namely a discharged psychiatric patient setting the patient's mother on fire, constituted an assault or battery; thus, the exception in O.C.G.A. § 50-21-24(7) to the waiver of sovereign immunity applied. Pak v. Ga. Dept of Behavioral Health & Developmental Disabilities, 317 Ga. App. 486, 731 S.E.2d 384 (2012).

Failure to raise defense. — Trial court did not lack subject matter jurisdiction to rule on the enforcement of the judgment creditor's underlying judgment as the judgment debtor never raised the affirmative defense of subject matter jurisdiction in an answer or in a separate motion as was required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(b)(1). Wilson v. 72 Riverside Invs., LLC, 277 Ga. App. 312, 626 S.E.2d 521 (2006).

In a transferred action between a lessee and its lessors, the superior court properly exercised subject matter jurisdiction over the action as no action was taken upon the lessee's notice of appeal, but pursuant to the magistrate's transfer order, which was authorized by Ga. Unif. Magis. Ct. R. 36; moreover, the lessors never raised the affirmative defense of lack of subject matter jurisdiction by way of an answer or in a separate motion, as was required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(b)(1), or even in a motion for judgment on the pleadings. Abushmais v. Erby, 282 Ga. App. 86, 637

Failure to comply with notice provisions under the Georgia Tort Claims Act. — Because: (1) a patron's personal injury claim filed with the claims advisory board (CAB) in no way complied with the ante litem requirements of the Georgia Tort Claims Act, O.C.G.A. § 50-21-20 et seq.; (2) the patron's claim to the CAB was made under a separate statutory scheme set up under Article 4 of Title 28 dealing with the financial affairs of the general assembly, covered under O.C.G.A. § 28-5-60 et seq.; and (3) prior to filing suit, no notice was given to the Risk Management Division of the Department of Administrative Services or the Department of Motor Vehicle Safety, to the extent that the trial court denied the motion of the state to dismiss the patron's claim of $5,000 or less, the court erred, but the order denying the patron's claim of $5,000 or more was upheld. State of Ga. v. Haynes, 285 Ga. App. 637, 647 S.E.2d 331 (2007).

Erroneous reliance on statute. — Lack of subject matter jurisdiction is not necessarily established by the fact that the parties are erroneously asserting jurisdiction based on an inapplicable statute. Since all pleadings must be so construed as to do substantial justice, a court must determine whether a viable claim is presented notwithstanding erroneous reliance on the statute. Brown v. Rock, 184 Ga. App. 699, 362 S.E.2d 480 (1987).

Matter in abatement. — Motion to dismiss that was based on a lack of subject matter jurisdiction was a matter in abatement. Sea Tow/Sea Spill of Savannah v. Phillips, 253 Ga. App. 842, 561 S.E.2d 827 (2002), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 276 Ga. 352, 578 S.E.2d 846 (2003).

Because subject matter jurisdiction is a matter in abatement, jurisdiction had to be resolved on a motion pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(b), and not by a motion for summary judgment. First Christ Holiness Church, Inc. v. Owens Temple First Christ Holiness Church, Inc., 282 Ga. 883, 655 S.E.2d 605 (2008).

Unable to render decision on merits. — Trial court lacked subject matter jurisdiction to hear the claims of the nursery owners against the state university professor related to plant cuttings the owners provided to the professor for tests and the professor's resulting conclusion that the plants grown from the cuttings had vast commercial potential; the trial court's lack of subject matter jurisdiction meant the trial court was unable to render a decision on the merits. Feist v. Dirr, 271 Ga. App. 169, 609 S.E.2d 111 (2004).

Collateral attack on valid default judgment unauthorized. — Trial court properly dismissed a business' contribution action filed pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 51-12-32, on subject matter jurisdiction grounds as: (1) the court's finding that the business was the sole tortfeasor barred the action; (2) that finding was not void; (3) no appeal was taken from that finding; and (4) the suit amounted to an improper collateral attack on the default judgment entered against the business. State Auto Mut. Ins. Co. v. Relocation & Corporate Hous. Servs., 287 Ga. App. 575, 651 S.E.2d 829 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 163 (Ga. 2008).

Collateral order exception. — In a wrongful death case, an appellate court had jurisdiction to consider an appeal of a denial of the Georgia Department of Transportation's motion to dismiss under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(b)(1) based on the collateral order exception to the final judgment rule. Ga. DOT v. Crooms, 316 Ga. App. 536, 729 S.E.2d 660 (2012).

When the plaintiff did not give notice of claim to Risk Management Division of the state Department of Administrative Services, as specifically set forth in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12, the plaintiff did not conform to the strict compliance requirements of the statute, and the plaintiff's claim was properly dismissed under subsection (b)(1), on the basis that the trial court did not have subject matter jurisdiction over the action. Kim v. DOT, 235 Ga. App. 480, 510 S.E.2d 50 (1998).

Notice required prior to abusive litigation claim. — When a construction company's counterclaims alleging abusive litigation under O.C.G.A. §§ 9-15-14 and 51-7-80 et seq. alleged in the pleading that the claims constituted "notice" to assert such claims under O.C.G.A. § 51-7-81, the trial court properly determined that the claims were not counterclaims and, accordingly, dismissed the claims for want of subject matter jurisdiction under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(h)(3); it was also found that the required notice provided in O.C.G.A. § 51-7-84(b) was not provided prior to the filing of a claim, nor was the prior litigation ended in the defendants' favor, both of which were requirements in order to bring such a claim, and disposing of the claim under a summary judgment analysis, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56, was proper. Langley v. Nat'l Labor Group, Inc., 262 Ga. App. 749, 586 S.E.2d 418 (2003).

Failure to pay costs of court is a defense which is waivable if not timely raised, and does not constitute grounds for dismissal due to the lack of subject matter jurisdiction. McLanahan v. Keith, 239 Ga. 94, 236 S.E.2d 52 (1977). But see Couch v. Wallace, 249 Ga. 568, 292 S.E.2d 405 (1982); Little v. Walker, 250 Ga. 854, 301 S.E.2d 639 (1983).

When wife's complaint for divorce did not affirmatively allege residence so as to show on the pleadings legal jurisdiction of court over the subject matter, such issue could be raised by the evidence, and if so raised would be tantamount to an amendment of the pleadings to that effect. Tanis v. Tanis, 240 Ga. 718, 242 S.E.2d 71 (1978).

3. Personal Jurisdiction

Lack of jurisdiction over the person may be raised by motion to dismiss. O'Steen v. Boone, 117 Ga. App. 174, 160 S.E.2d 229 (1968).

Motions to dismiss for lack of jurisdiction over the person, when tried on affidavits pursuant to Ga. L. 1968, p. 1104, § 10 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-43(b)), do not become motions for summary judgment. McPherson v. McPherson, 238 Ga. 271, 232 S.E.2d 552 (1977).

Waiver of jurisdiction over person. — Defense of lack of jurisdiction over the person may be waived by the party entitled to assert the defense under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12. Cale v. Eastern Air Lines, 159 Ga. App. 630, 284 S.E.2d 647 (1981).

Trial court's ruling that the defendant did not timely assert the defendant's defense of lack of personal jurisdiction due to the plaintiff's laches in perfecting service was properly deemed waived since the defense was not raised by the defendant in the defendant's initial responsive pleading, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(b). Adams v. Adams, 260 Ga. App. 597, 580 S.E.2d 261 (2003).

Defense may be raised by responsive pleading or motion. — When a default has already been entered, the defendant can raise a defense of lack of jurisdiction over the defendant's person by motion to set aside judgment and submit it to the trial court for disposition under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(d), but if this defense is made prior to trial, it can be asserted in a responsive pleading, or asserted by motion under paragraph (b)(2) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12, and resolved in the usual manner. Wolfe v. Rhodes, 166 Ga. App. 845, 305 S.E.2d 606 (1983).

Under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60, a person may bring a motion to set aside a judgment void for lack of jurisdiction at any time, and O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12 could not be constitutionally applied to preclude a non-resident from bringing such a motion after a default judgment was entered against the nonresident. Hoesch Am., Inc. v. Dai Yang Metal Co., 217 Ga. App. 845, 459 S.E.2d 187 (1995); B & D Fabricators v. D.H. Blair Investment Banking Corp., 220 Ga. App. 373, 469 S.E.2d 683 (1996).

Motion to dismiss on jurisdictional grounds is not converted into a motion for summary judgment by the introduction of evidence pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(b). Nonetheless, the rule in Georgia is that the testimony of a party who offers oneself as a witness in one's own behalf at trial is to be construed most strongly against the party when it is self-contradictory, vague, or equivocal. Thus, in a divorce action, the court properly dismissed the case as under the persuasive evidence, which included the spouse's own testimony, the spouse simply had no residence in DeKalb County that the spouse could claim as a domicile. Conrad v. Conrad, 278 Ga. 107, 597 S.E.2d 369 (2004).

Long-arm jurisdiction. — Because a foreign corporation did not independently perform any acts in Georgia that would subject the corporation to the state's long-arm jurisdiction under O.C.G.A. § 9-10-91, the trial court properly dismissed a domestic corporation's contract and tort claims. Catholic Stewardship Consultants, Inc. v. Ruotolo Assocs., Inc., 270 Ga. App. 751, 608 S.E.2d 1 (2004).

Internet car seller purposefully transacted business in the State of Georgia when the seller's agent conducted business negotiations with a buyer who lived in Georgia and when the seller delivered the vehicle in the state, so as to have established sufficient minimum contacts with the State of Georgia to authorize Georgia's exercise of personal jurisdiction over the seller under the Georgia Long Arm Statute, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-91; moreover, the state court correctly resolved the factual conflict created by the seller's affidavits and supporting documentation in favor of the buyer so as to find, for purposes of the motion to dismiss, that the buyer had not been provided with, nor agreed to, that part of the agreement containing the forum selection clause. Aero Toy Store, LLC v. Grieves, 279 Ga. App. 515, 631 S.E.2d 734 (2006).

Trial court lacked subject matter jurisdiction. — Trial court erred by entering a default judgment against a police officer for failing to timely answer because the officer was immune from suit on the claim brought under state law; thus, the default judgment entered on that claim was a nullity and the trial court lacked subject matter jurisdiction and should have dismissed the state law cause of action for lack of subject matter jurisdiction. Ferrell v. Young, 323 Ga. App. 338, 746 S.E.2d 167 (2013).

4. Venue

Motion based on facts dehors the pleading. — When motion to dismiss for lack of venue is based upon facts dehors the pleading, motion becomes a "speaking" motion and proof must be presented on the hearing as to the facts alleged. Williamson v. Perret's Farms, Inc., 128 Ga. App. 687, 197 S.E.2d 754 (1973).

Forum selection clause upheld.

— Trial court erred in dismissing an action for breach of an equipment rental agreement on grounds that the forum selection clause contained therein was overbroad and unconscionable, and thus unenforceable, as: (1) the clause did not grant unfettered discretion to the plaintiff as to where suit could be brought; (2) the lessee under the agreement clearly had notice that suit could be filed anywhere the plaintiff maintained the plaintiff's principal place of business, but the clause aptly did not allow a suit to be filed in a forum where neither party had a nexus or relationship with the forum state; and (3) there was no evidence that the agreement was procured by fraud. OFC Capital v. Colonial Distribs., 285 Ga. App. 815, 648 S.E.2d 140 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 681 (Ga. 2007).

Movant supported motion by evidence of agreed upon forum selection clause. — In a breach of contract action between an Internet-based business and an Internet advertiser, because the latter presented sufficient evidence to support its motion to dismiss a suit filed in the State of Georgia on personal jurisdiction grounds, given the forum selection clause in the contract designating the agreed-upon forum as the state and federal courts in the State of California, specifically, Los Angeles, and given the business's assent to venue, the advertiser met the advertiser's burden of proving a lack of personal jurisdiction, the trial court properly dismissed the Georgia action. Alcatraz Media, LLC v. Yahoo! Inc., 290 Ga. App. 882, 660 S.E.2d 797 (2008).

Responsive pleading must refer to venue. — While it is not necessary to set forth in a responsive pleading reasons why venue is improper, in order to assert the defense, a defendant must make reference to venue. A general denial is not an assertion. Orkin Exterminating Co. v. Morrison, 187 Ga. App. 780, 371 S.E.2d 407, cert. denied, 187 Ga. App. 908, 371 S.E.2d 407 (1988).

Waiver of venue. — One who, being properly served, wishes to rely on a defense of lack of venue must bring the defense to the attention of the court at a proper time or the defense is waived; allowing a case to go to default judgment is no better than allowing a case to be tried on the merits before coming in with a technical defense. Cotton v. Ruck, 157 Ga. App. 824, 278 S.E.2d 693 (1981).

When the plaintiff filed a lawsuit, never dismissed the lawsuit or moved for a transfer, and never raised the issue of venue until the second appeal from the trial court, the plaintiff waived any claim of improper venue. Hixson v. Hickson, 236 Ga. App. 894, 512 S.E.2d 648 (1999).

Claimant in a civil forfeiture proceeding could not assert on appeal that an order striking the claimant's answer and a final judgment of condemnation were void due to improper venue because the claimant did not raise that defense in the answer, thus waiving the defense under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(h). Gravley v. State of Ga., 285 Ga. App. 691, 647 S.E.2d 372 (2007).

Personal guarantor waived any venue defense, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(b), because the guarantor never raised the issue before a hearing, and as was noted at the hearing, did not file a motion to transfer venue. Brooks v. Multibank 2009-1 RES-ADC Venture, LLC, 317 Ga. App. 264, 730 S.E.2d 509 (2012).

Properly raised defense of improper venue is not waived implicitly by allowing the litigation to proceed over a lengthy period of time, nor is the defense waived implicitly by entering into consent orders extending discovery. Williams v. Willis, 204 Ga. App. 328, 419 S.E.2d 139 (1992).

Failure to transfer. — State court erred by dismissing a personal injury lawsuit filed against the Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Authority and one of its bus drivers as joint tortfeasors since the matter should have been transferred to superior court pursuant to the Uniform Transfer Rules. McDonald v. MARTA, 251 Ga. App. 2306, 554 S.E.2d 226 (2001).

5. Process

Motion to dismiss proper to raise insufficiency of process. — When the defendant contends that there was insufficiency of service of process, a motion to dismiss is the proper method to raise such issue. Boyer v. King, 129 Ga. App. 690, 200 S.E.2d 906 (1973).

Defense of “insufficiency of process” must be raised specifically. — When summons and affidavit under former Code 1933, §§ 61-402 and 61-403 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 44-7-71 and 44-7-72), relating to distress warrants, were defective, the trial court was not authorized to dismiss the summons and affidavit on the basis of a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted; deficiency in the summons and affidavit was in the nature of defense of “insufficiency of process,” as described in paragraph (b)(4) of Ga. L. 1972, p. 689, §§ 4 and 5 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12), and failure to raise this defense specifically in defensive pleadings waived the defense. White v. Johnson, 151 Ga. App. 345, 259 S.E.2d 731 (1979).

Dismissal for lack of proper and timely service. — Even though the trial court found that the plaintiff did not exercise reasonable diligence in perfecting service until after the running of the statute of limitations, it was error to dismiss the claims with prejudice upon a motion to dismiss for lack of proper and timely service because there had been no adjudication on the merits. Wilson v. Ortiz, 232 Ga. App. 191, 501 S.E.2d 247 (1998).

Judgment of dismissal without prejudice under paragraphs (b)(2), (b)(4), and (b)(5) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12 was required because the plaintiff’s substituted service on the defendant’s insurer was not proper service under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4 (d), (e)(2), or O.C.G.A. § 9-10-90 et seq. South v. Montoya, 244 Ga. App. 52, 537 S.E.2d 367 (2000).

Defendant’s motion to dismiss a plaintiff’s personal injury complaint should have been granted because service occurred after the two-year statute of limitations under O.C.G.A. § 9-3-33 expired, and the limitation period was not tolled because the record was devoid of evidence that the plaintiff made any attempt to personally serve the defendant for more than two years after the trial court’s order granting a motion for service by publication. Dunn v. Kirsten, 273 Ga. App. 27, 614 S.E.2d 156 (2005), but see Cohen v. Allstate Ins. Co., 277 Ga. App. 437, 626 S.E.2d 628 (2006).

Trial court properly dismissed a plaintiff’s personal injury action filed against the defendant on insufficient service of process grounds as: (1) plaintiff did little to pursue service; (2) plaintiff inappropriately shifted the burden of search on the court; and (3) the fact that the defendant served interrogatories and a request for production did not amount to a waiver of an insufficient service of process defense. Kelley v. Lymon, 279 Ga. App. 849, 632 S.E.2d 734 (2006).

Trial court erred in finding that the State Election Board was not properly served with process of an election candidate’s challenge to an election contest; but, the candidate’s failure to effect timely service of appropriate process of the contest against the mayor-elect required dismissal of the suit. Swain v. Thompson, 281 Ga. 30, 635 S.E.2d 779 (2006).

In a personal injury lawsuit, because, as a matter of law, an injured individual failed to carry the burden of showing reasonable diligence in attempting to serve the complaint, the trial court abused the court’s discretion in denying a motion to dismiss the complaint; moreover, despite the individual’s attempt to argue to the contrary, the applicable test was whether the plaintiff exercised due diligence, not whether the defendant had suffered harm from the delay in service of process. Duffy v. Lyles, 281 Ga. App. 377, 636 S.E.2d 91 (2006).

In a personal injury action arising from an auto accident filed two days before the expiration of the applicable statute of limitation, because the record failed to show that the plaintiff acted with the greatest possible diligence to personally serve the defendant, the trial court did not abuse the court’s discretion in dismissing the plaintiff’s complaint based on insufficient service of process. Moody v. Gilliam, 281 Ga. App. 819, 637 S.E.2d 759 (2006).

Because a personal representative failed to effectuate proper service of a personal injury suit on a passenger of a vehicle involved in an accident in which the decedent was killed, especially after having been placed on notice that service had not been perfected, the passenger's motion to dismiss the suit was properly granted. Ballenger v. Floyd, 282 Ga. App. 574, 639 S.E.2d 554 (2006).

Based on sufficient evidence that a resident stood idle for six months after learning of the difficulties in serving a non-resident, the resident's personal injury complaint was properly dismissed on grounds that the resident failed to exercise due diligence in effectuating service of process; hence, the statute of limitations under O.C.G.A. § 9-3-33 was not tolled. Livingston v. Taylor, 284 Ga. App. 638, 644 S.E.2d 483 (2007).

Because the affidavits submitted by the defendant were sufficient to overcome the evidence of the process server's return of process, and the record supported the trial court's finding that the plaintiff did not effect service on the defendant, specifically showing that there was no signature of receipt, no log of event, no notes of service, no detailed description of the defendant, and no request for identification, dismissal of the action was proper. Bohorquez v. Strother, 287 Ga. App. 98, 650 S.E.2d 765 (2007).

Late-filed defense waived. — Judgment for the defendant was reversed since the defense of failure to attach an affidavit required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 was not presented, by way of amendment to the answer, until three months after the filing of responsive pleadings, and until the statute of limitations on the underlying claim had ran. Glaser v. Meck, 258 Ga. 468, 369 S.E.2d 912 (1988).

Service of process waived. — No reversible error was found because a contestant in a quiet title action waived service of process, neglected to file any pleadings, and failed to file a record to support the claims of error on appeal, and given that the special master found three independent bases, which on their face supported the judgment entered. Brown v. Fokes Props. 2002, Inc., 283 Ga. 231, 657 S.E.2d 820 (2008).

Service of process held sufficient. — Because a corporation failed in the corporation's burden of showing that the person who actually received service of process was not authorized to accept service on behalf of the corporation's registered agent, the service was properly found to be sufficient. Thus, the trial court was not required to dismiss the action based on a lack of sufficient service of process. Holmes & Co. v. Carlisle, 289 Ga. App. 619, 658 S.E.2d 185 (2008).

Because service of process to a person at least 15 years old who resided at the residence listed on the return of service was sufficient, such could not serve as a basis to dismiss the action; moreover, adequate and proper service of process was presumed given that the party charged with service timely filed an answer. Holmes & Co. v. Carlisle, 289 Ga. App. 619, 658 S.E.2d 185 (2008).

6. Service

Evidence required to show failure of service. — When a signed entry of service was presented to the court, the defendant's submission of a one-page affidavit that stated the defendant did not receive service was not sufficient to support the defendant's claim of failure of service. Oden v. Legacy Ford-Mercury, Inc., 222 Ga. App. 666, 476 S.E.2d 43 (1996).

Return as evidence of service. — Return of service indicates that service was made at the most notorious place of abode and is prima facie evidence of service. Meier v. Bennett, 208 Ga. App. 688, 431 S.E.2d 462 (1993).

Objection to service not grounds for summary judgment. — Court is not authorized to grant motion for summary judgment on ground of objection to service of process. Knight v. United States Fid. & Guar. Co., 123 Ga. App. 833, 182 S.E.2d 693 (1971).

Sufficiency of service of process is outside the scope of summary judgment. Concert Promotions, Inc. v. Haas & Dodd, Inc., 167 Ga. App. 883, 307 S.E.2d 763 (1983).

Issue raised in summary judgment motion. — Although the defendant's motion for summary judgment raised the issue of insufficiency of service of process, that defense is a plea in abatement and, as such, it is not properly a basis of a motion for summary judgment; but if the defense is raised for resolution in the trial court and it has not otherwise been waived by the defendant, the nomenclature of the pleading which raises that issue should not be a material consideration. Under these circumstances, the proper disposition of the case is to vacate the order of the trial court on the cross-motions for summary judgment and to remand the case with direction that the plaintiff's complaint be dismissed for insufficiency of service of process. Cheshire Bridge Enters., Inc. v. Lexington Ins. Co., 183 Ga. App. 672, 359 S.E.2d 702, cert. denied, 183 Ga. App. 905, 359 S.E.2d 702 (1987).

Dismissal based on statute of limitations not waived. — It is immaterial that, in the defendant's original answer, the defendant did not raise the paragraph (b)(5) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12 defense of insufficiency of service of process, since, regardless of its timeliness, personal service was eventually perfected on the defendant. Thus, no ground existed for any objection to the method of service. The motion to dismiss was brought on the ground that the action was barred by the statute of limitations and the defendant's right to dismissal on this ground was not waived. Bennett v. Nelson, 202 Ga. App. 346, 414 S.E.2d 291 (1991), cert. denied, 202 Ga. App. 905, 414 S.E.2d 291 (1992).

Dismissal for insufficiency of service not a ruling on statute of limitations. — Defense of insufficiency of service of process is a matter in abatement; a dismissal for insufficiency of service of process is a finding by the trial court that service was not perfected in a reasonable and diligent manner within the prescribed statute of limitation and is not a ruling that the plaintiff's action is, in fact, barred by the running of the statute of limitation. Such an issue is a factual issue and must eliminate the factual issue of tolling. Mangram v. City of Brunswick, 324 Ga. App. 725, 751 S.E.2d 523 (2013).

No right to confrontation or public trial in civil cases. — When a buyer claiming that the buyer was fraudulently sold real estate argued, on appeal, that the trial court's summary dismissal of the buyer's complaint under O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-12(b)(6) and 9-11-56 deprived the buyer of the right to confront witnesses and the right to a public trial, this claim had no merit because the right to confront witnesses and the right to a public trial only applied to criminal proceedings. Crane v. Samples, 267 Ga. App. 895, 600 S.E.2d 624 (2004), cert. denied, 544 U.S. 927, 125 S. Ct. 1650, 161 L. Ed. 2d 488 (2005).

Adoption of party's proposed order not clearly erroneous. — In a dispute over the use of an easement, because a landowner abandoned error regarding the denial of a motion to dismiss on service of process grounds, and the trial court properly adopted a neighbor's proposed order as the court's final order, as the landowner failed to support a claim that the findings of fact or conclusions of law were incorrect, the order denying dismissal of the action was upheld on appeal. Woodyard v. Jones, 285 Ga. App. 323, 646 S.E.2d 306 (2007).

No right to jury trial. — On appeal, a real estate buyer, claiming a fraudulent sell, argued that the trial court's summary dismissal of the buyer's complaint under O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-12(b)(6) and 9-11-56 deprived the buyer of the right to a jury trial, such claim had no merit because, when the opposing parties filed an affidavit with their motion for summary judgment claiming that the misrepresentation alleged in the buyer's complaint did not occur, and the buyer did not respond to that motion, the evidence in the record was undisputed that the misrepresentation, which was the crux of the buyer's claims, did not happen, so there was no fact-finding role for a jury to perform. Crane v. Samples, 267 Ga. App. 895, 600 S.E.2d 624 (2004), cert. denied, 544 U.S. 927, 125 S. Ct. 1650, 161 L. Ed. 2d 488 (2005).

No right to hearing on motion. — Notwithstanding the motion's caption, a defendant's motion did not seek summary judgment but was in essence a motion to dismiss for insufficiency of service of process under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(b)(5); further, the ruling thereupon was not a summary judgment. Therefore, the plaintiff was not entitled to a hearing on the motion under Ga. Unif. Super. Ct. R. 6.3. McCullers v. Harrell, 298 Ga. App. 798, 681 S.E.2d 237 (2009), cert. denied, No. S09C1914, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 55 (Ga. 2010).

Issue not waived. — When a spouse in an action under the Family Violence Act, O.C.G.A. § 19-13-1 et seq., raised the issue of insufficiency of service at hearings and proceeded with the merits only after the spouse's motions to dismiss were denied, the spouse's appearances were made subject to the motions, and the spouse could not be deemed to have waived the service issue for appeal. Loiten v. Loiten, 288 Ga. App. 638, 655 S.E.2d 265 (2007).

Service by publication. — Trial court erred by granting the defendant's motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction because the court granted the plaintiff's motion for service by publication and since the defendant was so served, the court was required to determine whether service by publication was sufficient to confer personal jurisdiction over the defendant. Ragan v. Mallow, 319 Ga. App. 443, 744 S.E.2d 337 (2012).

Trial court had to determine whether attorney was authorized to accept service. — Trial court abused the court's discretion by dismissing a landlord's suit against a tenant under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60 for lack of personal jurisdiction because a determination was necessary as to whether a law firm who accepted service was authorized to represent the tenant before the trial court determined that the court lacked personal jurisdiction over the tenant. Endover Palisades, LLC v. Stuart, 324 Ga. App. 90, 749 S.E.2d 381 (2013).

7. Failure to State Claim

Two-part test for dismissal of pleading. — Motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief may be granted should not be sustained unless: (1) the allegations of the complaint disclose with certainty that the claimant would not be entitled to relief under any state of provable facts asserted in support thereof; and (2) the movant establishes that the claimant could not possibly introduce evidence within the framework of the complaint sufficient to warrant a grant of the relief sought. Mooney v. Mooney, 235 Ga. App. 117, 508 S.E.2d 766 (1998).

Complaint may be dismissed on motion if clearly without any merit, and this want of merit may consist in an absence of law to support a claim of the sort made, or of facts sufficient to make a good claim, or in the disclosure of some fact which will necessarily defeat the claim. Poole v. City of Atlanta, 117 Ga. App. 432, 160 S.E.2d 874 (1968); Rossville Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Insurance Co. of N. Am., 121 Ga. App. 435, 174 S.E.2d 204 (1970).

Motion to dismiss performs functions of general demurrer. — Motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted under paragraph (b)(6) of this section performs substantially the same function as former common-law general demurrer. Western Contracting Corp. v. State Hwy. Dep't, 123 Ga. App. 331, 181 S.E.2d 89 (1971), later appeal, 125 Ga. App. 376, 187 S.E.2d 690 (1972); International Indem. Co. v. Blakey, 161 Ga. App. 99, 289 S.E.2d 303 (1982).

Dismissal proper under O.C.G.A. § 9-2-5 if identical case filed in another county. — Appellate court properly dismissed a second fraud and breach of contract action filed in a separate county, which was identical to one previously filed by the same plaintiff against the same defendants, under the prior pending litigation doctrine pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-2-5, and not under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(b)(6), which acted as a defense to the later filed action. Kirkland v. Tamplin, 283 Ga. App. 596, 642 S.E.2d 125, cert. denied, No. S07C0915, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 508 (Ga. 2007); cert. denied, 552 U.S. 1010, 128 S. Ct. 545, 169 L. Ed. 2d 373 (2007).

Motion to dismiss applies only to merits of case. — While motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim performs substantially same functions as former general demurrer, it does so only as to merits of claim, and raises no question of absence of venue appearing on the face of the complaint as was formerly raised by demurrer. Williamson v. Perret's Farms, Inc., 128 Ga. App. 687, 197 S.E.2d 754 (1973).

Motion to dismiss under paragraph

(b)(6) of this section goes solely to the merits. Goolsby v. Regents of Univ. Sys., 141 Ga. App. 605, 234 S.E.2d 165 (1977).

Motion to dismiss does not raise dilatory matter or matter in abatement. — Motion to dismiss under paragraph (b)(6) of this section for failure to state a claim for which relief may be granted does not raise dilatory matter or matter in abatement as such motion goes solely to the merits. Chatham v. Royal-Globe Ins. Cos., 135 Ga. App. 59, 217 S.E.2d 308 (1975).

Motion to dismiss under paragraph (b)(6) of this section for failure to state a claim for which relief may be granted does not raise questions of venue or process or service thereof, as such motion goes solely to the merits; this is the reason that consideration of evidence on such motion converts the motion into a motion for summary judgment. Williamson v. Perret's Farms, Inc., 128 Ga. App. 687, 197 S.E.2d 754 (1973).

General demurrer is treated on appeal as motion to dismiss under paragraph (b)(6) of Ga. L. 1968, p. 1104, § 3 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12) for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, and the ruling of the trial judge is considered as if it were based on the requirements of Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 8 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-8(a)). Nipper v. Crisp County, 120 Ga. App. 583, 171 S.E.2d 652 (1969).

Treatment of demurrer on appeal.

— On appeal, court must view petition attacked by general demurrer with regard to whether the petition states a claim for which relief may be granted; this is the test of the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9), which the court must apply on review regardless of when the judgment was entered below. Hill v. Lariscy, 118 Ga. App. 699, 165 S.E.2d 315 (1968).

Appellate court may regard general demurrer for failure to state a cause of action as a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim for which relief may be granted. Ghitter v. Edge, 118 Ga. App.

Motion not made in writing before trial. — Motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim can be considered although the motion is not made in writing before trial, since paragraph (h)(2) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12 specifically provides that: "A defense of failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted . . . may be made . . . at the trial on the merits," and a motion made during the trial need not be reduced to writing. Irvin v. Lowe's of Gainesville, Inc., 165 Ga. App. 828, 302 S.E.2d 734 (1983).

Action involving trust and minority shareholders. — Because the trial court properly found that a Delaware appraisal proceeding was the exclusive remedy for a trust, and since the trust was no longer a shareholder in the wake of a corporate merger, the trust no longer had standing to assert such claims on the corporation's behalf, the trial court properly dismissed the trust's amended complaint for failure to state a claim upon which relief could be granted. Paul & Suzie Schutt Irrevocable Family Trust v. NAC Holding, Inc., 283 Ga. App. 834, 642 S.E.2d 872 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 644 (Ga. 2007).

Construction of pleadings in light most favorable to plaintiff. — Since under the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) issues are no longer formed by the pleadings, and pleadings serve only the purpose of giving notice to the opposite party of the general nature of the contentions of the pleader, it is no longer appropriate to construe the pleadings against the pleader, but the pleadings should be construed in the light most favorable to the pleader, with all doubts resolved in the pleader's favor, even though unfavorable constructions are possible. DeKalb County v. Georgia Paperstock Co., 226 Ga. 369, 174 S.E.2d 884 (1970).

Under the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9), on motion to dismiss, pleading attacked is construed in the pleading's most favorable light. Gosser v. Diplomat Restaurant, Inc., 125 Ga. App. 620, 188 S.E.2d 412 (1972).

Under the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9), when the sufficiency of a complaint is questioned, the pleadings must be construed in the light most favorable to the plaintiff. Massey v. Perkerson, 129 Ga. App. 895, 201 S.E.2d 830 (1973).

When the sufficiency of the complaint is questioned by a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim for which relief may be granted, the new rules require that the complaint be construed in the light most favorable to the plaintiff with all doubts resolved in the plaintiff's favor even though unfavorable constructions are possible; not unless the allegations of the complaint disclose with certainty that the plaintiff would not be entitled to relief under any state of provable facts should the complaint be dismissed. Storm Sys. v. Kidd, 157 Ga. App. 527, 278 S.E.2d 109 (1981); Morgan v. Georgia Vitrified Brick & Clay Co., 196 Ga. App. 779, 397 S.E.2d 49 (1990).

All doubts resolved in plaintiff's favor. — On motion to dismiss, the complaint should be construed in the light most favorable to the plaintiff with all doubts resolved in the plaintiff's favor. Harper v. DeFreitas, 117 Ga. App. 236, 160 S.E.2d 260 (1968); Western Contracting Corp. v. State Hwy. Dep't, 125 Ga. App. 376, 187 S.E.2d 690 (1972); Goolsby v. Regents of Univ. Sys., 141 Ga. App. 605, 234 S.E.2d 165 (1977); Quetgles v. City of Columbus, 264 Ga. 708, 450 S.E.2d 677 (1994), cert. denied, 514 U.S. 1083, 115 S. Ct. 1794, 131 L. Ed. 2d 722 (1995).

Effect of possibility of contrary inferences. — Plaintiff is entitled to the most favorable inferences that can reasonably be drawn from the complaint, even if contrary inferences are also possible. Harper v. DeFreitas, 117 Ga. App. 236, 160 S.E.2d 260 (1968); Western Contracting Corp. v. State Hwy. Dep't, 125 Ga. App. 376, 187 S.E.2d 690 (1972).

When the sufficiency of a complaint is questioned by a motion to dismiss, the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) requires that the complaint be construed in the light most favorable to the plaintiff, with all doubts resolved in the plaintiff's favor, even though unfavorable constructions are possible. Ghitter v. Edge, 118 Ga. App. 750, 165 S.E.2d 598 (1968).

It is immaterial whether an allegation is one of fact or conclusion if the complaint effectively states a claim for relief. Guthrie v. Monumental Properties, Inc., 141 Ga. App. 21, 232 S.E.2d 369 (1977); Ledford v. Meyer, 249 Ga. 407, 290 S.E.2d 908 (1982).

True test is whether the pleading gives fair notice and states elements of claim plainly and succinctly, and not whether as an abstract matter the pleading states "conclusions" or "facts." Guthrie v. Monumental Properties, Inc., 141 Ga. App. 21, 232 S.E.2d 369 (1977).

Fair notice of claim is standard. — Under the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9), a petition or complaint is sufficient against a motion to dismiss if the petition or complaint gives a defendant fair notice of the nature and basis of the claim against the defendant. Hill v. Lariscy, 118 Ga. App. 699, 165 S.E.2d 315 (1968).

Reasonable notice not given. — Because a couple's complaint premised on an erroneous listing in a telephone directory failed to allege any of the claims the couple sought to pursue, specifically, interfering with the couple's right of quiet enjoyment of their property and nuisance, and even after giving the couple the benefit of all reasonable inferences that could be drawn from the couple's complaint, the fact remained that the directory's publisher was not placed on reasonable notice of whether the couple was asserting a claim in equity, contract, or tort, much less whether the couple were pleading a particular tort such as negligence or libel, the complaint was properly dismissed as failing to state a claim upon which relief could be granted. Patrick v. Verizon Directories Corp., 284 Ga. App. 123, 643 S.E.2d 251 (2007).

Complaint is not required to set forth cause of action, but need only set forth a claim for relief. Christner v. Eason, 146 Ga. App. 139, 245 S.E.2d 489 (1978).

Pleading not dismissed unless no facts support claim. — Pleading should not be dismissed for failure to state a claim unless it appears beyond doubt that the plaintiff can prove no set of facts in support of the plaintiff's claim which would entitle the plaintiff to relief. Bray v. Central Chevrolet, Inc., 118 Ga. App. 493, 164 S.E.2d 286 (1968); Hill v. Lariscy, 118

Unless it appears to a certainty that the plaintiff would not be entitled to relief under any state of facts which could be proved in support of the plaintiff's claim, a motion under paragraph (b)(6) of this section to dismiss a complaint for failure to state a claim should not be granted. Harper v. DeFreitas, 117 Ga. App. 236, 160 S.E.2d 260 (1968); Poole v. City of Atlanta, 117 Ga. App. 432, 160 S.E.2d 874 (1968); Ghitter v. Edge, 118 Ga. App. 750, 165 S.E.2d 598 (1968); Robinson v. Unless it can be said that under no conceivable state of facts which the plaintiff might prove under allegations of the complaint would the plaintiff be entitled to any relief, a motion to dismiss on the ground that the complaint fails to state a claim upon which relief can be granted ought not to be sustained. Sixth St. Corp. v. City Stores Co., 229 Ga. 99, 189 S.E.2d 407 (1972); Herndon v. Aultman-Beasley, Inc., 127 Ga. App. 743, 195 S.E.2d 250 (1972).

Basic premise of the new civil procedure is that it does away with issue pleadings and substitutes notice pleadings; hence, a petition should not be dismissed for failure to state a claim unless it appears that the plaintiff can prove no set of facts in support of the plaintiff's claim thereunder which would entitle the plaintiff to relief. Satcher v. James H. Drew Shows, Inc., 122 Ga. App. 548, 177 S.E.2d 846 (1970).

Motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim is not to be granted unless under the pleadings, construed in a light most favorable to the plaintiff, the plaintiff can establish no set of facts that would entitle the plaintiff to relief against the defendant. Wehunt v. ITT Bus. Communications Corp., 183 Ga. App. 560, 359 S.E.2d 383 (1987).

In a medical malpractice action, the trial court properly denied a neurosurgeon's motion to dismiss the action, on grounds that the affidavit required under former O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67.1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-7-702) was from an orthopedist and not a fellow neurosurgeon, and was thus insufficient as a matter of law to support the husband and wife's medical malpractice complaint as the statutory area of practice or specialty in which the opinion was to be given was dictated not by the apparent expertise of the treating physician, but rather by the allegations of the complaint concerning the plaintiff's injury. Abramson v. Williams, 281 Ga. App. 617, 636 S.E.2d 765 (2006), cert. denied, No. S07C0226, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 91 (2007).

Complaint failed to state a claim upon which relief could be granted because the defendants could not be said to have tortiously interfered with the defendant's own contract. Professional Carpet Sys. v. Saefkow, 212 Ga. App. 131, 441 S.E.2d 98 (1994).

Dismissal of a husband's legal malpractice claim against an attorney arising out of the attorney's representation of the husband's wife and child in three appeals was proper under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(b)(6) and did not violate the husband's Sixth and Seventh Amendment rights as there was no attorney-client relationship between the husband and the attorney. Crane v. Albertelli, 264 Ga. App. 910, 592 S.E.2d 684 (2003), cert. denied, 543 U.S. 819, 125 S. Ct. 481, 160 L. Ed. 2d 359 (2004).

Trial court did not err in granting judgment on the pleadings to the state revenue department on the two associations' challenges to regulations governing distribution of malt beverages in Georgia as the undisputed facts that appeared from the pleadings showed that the state revenue department's regulations were permitted under the plain language of statutory law and were consistent with legislative intent. Ga. Oilmen's Ass'n v. Ga. Dep't of Revenue, 261 Ga. App. 393, 582 S.E.2d 549 (2003).

Trial court erred when the court refused to dismiss a corporation's claim that shareholders who received the corporation's stock in a merger were unjustly enriched because the corporation did not allege that the shareholders abused or disregarded the corporate form of a company it acquired to enrich themselves. McKesson Corp. v. Green, 266 Ga. App. 157, 597 S.E.2d 447 (2004).

In an action filed by a buyer seeking specific performance of a land sales contract, the trial court properly dismissed the buyer's complaint as specific performance was not an available remedy given evidence that one of the sellers, who was one of three siblings that owned the property sought by the buyer, did not authorize a second sibling to sell the property. Viola E. Buford Family Ltd. P'ship v. Britt, 283 Ga. App. 676, 642 S.E.2d 383 (2007).

Motion to dismiss properly denied.

— Motion to dismiss a case brought by an insurance company against a corporation seeking indemnification for a payment made to settle a claim against an insured of the insurance company was properly denied when, while the corporation was an additional insured under the policy at issue, the policy provided an exclusion for claims based on the sole negligence of an additional insured as a lessor; whether any of the policy exceptions applied to the exclusion was an issue to be resolved as the case proceeded. AEW #2 Corp. v. Fed. Ins. Co., 268 Ga. App. 740, 603 S.E.2d 22 (2004).

Motion to dismiss improperly denied. — Trial court erroneously denied a motion to dismiss a personal injury action filed by two parents against two social hosts, arising out of the death of the parents' 20-year-old daughter, which alleged that the social hosts served the daughter alcohol, and the daughter died when the daughter drunkenly drove into a tree after leaving the social hosts' home as the action was barred due to the fact that the daughter had already reached the age of majority at the time of the accident. Penny v. McBride, 282 Ga. App. 590, 639 S.E.2d 561 (2006), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 223 (Ga. 2007).

Motion to dismiss improperly granted. — In a student's action against a college alleging ordinary and gross negligence, premises liability, and intentional infliction of emotional distress, because the student was not required to present evidence of foreseeability, but instead had to only allege facts that, if proven, could create a factual question for the jury as to whether the violent attack that was the subject of the suit, was foreseeable, the trial court erroneously dismissed the suit at such an early stage of the proceedings for failure to state a claim upon which relief could be granted. Love v. Morehouse College, Inc., 287 Ga. App. 743, 652 S.E.2d 624 (2007).

Because it was possible that a former employee could introduce evidence within the framework of the complaint establishing that the alleged oral defamatory statements were disseminated to other co-workers who had no duty or authority giving them reason to receive the information, the Court of Appeals of Georgia erred in holding otherwise and agreeing with the trial court that the employee failed to state a claim upon which relief could be granted. Scouten v. Amerisave Mortg. Corp., 283 Ga. 72, 656 S.E.2d 820 (2008).

Trial court erroneously dismissed a couple's complaint upon grounds that the complaint failed to state a claim upon which relief could be granted because the complaint alleged intentional torts against an attorney and that attorney's law firm, and not claims of professional malpractice or negligence; therefore, the complaint was not required to be accompanied by an expert's affidavit pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1. Walker v. Wallis, 289 Ga. App. 676, 658 S.E.2d 217 (2008).

Petition for mandamus properly dismissed. — Trial court properly dismissed a landowners' petition for mandamus filed against a judge as premature and for failing to state a claim as the landowner opted to file the petition, but could have requested a hearing to allow the judge an opportunity to rule on the previously filed motions because the 90-day ruling period applicable to those motions pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 15-6-21(b) had not yet expired at the time the petition had been filed. Voyles v. McKinney, 283 Ga. 169, 657 S.E.2d 193 (2008).

If, within framework of complaint, evidence may be introduced which will sustain a grant of relief to the plaintiff, the complaint is sufficient. Peacock Constr. Co. v. Erickson's, Inc., 121 Ga. App. 544, 174 S.E.2d 276 (1970); Koehler

v. Massell, 229 Ga. 359, 191 S.E.2d 830 (1972); Dean v. Dean, 229 Ga. 612, 193 S.E.2d 838 (1972); Christner v. Eason, 146 Ga. App. 139, 245 S.E.2d 489 (1978).

Counterclaims. — Just as with an original claim, a motion to dismiss a counterclaim for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted should not be granted unless it appears to a certainty that the defendant would be entitled to no relief under any state of facts which could be proved in support of the counterclaim, and if within the framework of the complaint evidence may be introduced which will sustain the grant of relief to the defendant, the counterclaim is sufficient. Grant v. Fourth Nat'l Bank, 229 Ga. 855, 194 S.E.2d 913 (1972).

When one count sets forth a claim, complaint not overruled. — Motion under paragraph (b)(6) of this section to dismiss a complaint composed of several counts, when one of the counts sets forth a claim, should not be overruled. Western Contracting Corp. v. State Hwy. Dep't, 123 Ga. App. 331, 181 S.E.2d 89 (1971), later appeal, 125 Ga. App. 376, 187 S.E.2d 690 (1972).

Res judicata. — Sustaining of a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim is res judicata on the merits of the claim. Dillingham v. Doctors Clinic, 236 Ga. 302, 223 S.E.2d 625 (1976).

Pro se complaint is not held to stringent standards of formal pleadings and the complaint should not be dismissed for failure to state a claim unless it appears beyond doubt that the plaintiff can prove no set of facts in support of the plaintiff's claim which would entitle the plaintiff to relief. Johnson v. Jones, 178 Ga. App. 346, 343 S.E.2d 403 (1986).

Noncompliance with the requirement for an affidavit in a malpractice action is properly challenged in a defensive pleading seeking dismissal of the complaint for failure to state a claim, not by a summary judgment proceeding. Williams v. Hajosy, 210 Ga. App. 637, 436 S.E.2d 716 (1993).

Distinction between ordinary negligence and professional malpractice under § 9-11-9.1. — Trial court must decide as a matter of law if the negligence alleged by a plaintiff is, in fact, ordinary negligence or professional malpractice, requiring an expert's affidavit under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1. Drawdy v. DOT, 228 Ga. App. 338, 491 S.E.2d 521 (1997).

Failure to comply with a mediation provision before filing a petition for modification of a divorce decree made the petition subject to a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim and, although the defendant failed to raise this defense in the initial answer, the defense was not waived. Gould v. Gould, 240 Ga. App. 481, 523 S.E.2d 106 (1999).

Prosecution by one not proper party plaintiff. — When a motion to dismiss pursuant to paragraph (b)(6) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12 is made based on the prosecution of a suit by one not the proper party plaintiff, such a motion is to be treated like a matter in abatement, in that the erring party, rather than having judgment entered against the party, is now simply precluded from proceeding with the suit until the error has been corrected by the substitution of the proper party plaintiff. Amica Mut. Ins. Co. v. Fleet Multi Fuel Corp., 178 Ga. App. 859, 344 S.E.2d 742 (1986).

Conversion to summary judgment motion. — Motion to dismiss, as considered by the trial judge after hearing evidence, must be treated as a motion for summary judgment. Daylight Indus., Inc. v. Allen, 123 Ga. App. 69, 179 S.E.2d 542 (1970).

Consideration of evidence on motion under paragraph (b)(6) of this section converts the motion into a summary judgment motion as summary judgment goes to the merits. Chatham v. Royal-Globe Ins. Cos., 135 Ga. App. 59, 217 S.E.2d 308 (1975).

When on a hearing on a motion to dismiss a complaint because of failure to state a claim, evidence is introduced and admitted by the court, a motion to dismiss is converted to one for summary judgment. Jaynes v. Douglas, 147 Ga. App. 678, 250 S.E.2d 14 (1978).

When a motion to dismiss is supplemented by argument of counsel and matters outside of the pleadings, it is treated as a motion for summary judgment. Blasingame v. Blasingame, 249 Ga. 791, 294 S.E.2d 519 (1982).

Motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim was converted into one for summary judgment when the letter upon which the disputed claim was founded, not made part of the pleadings, was yet clearly considered by the trial court and the plaintiffs did not object to the court's consideration of this extrinsic evidence, nor did the plaintiffs raise any issue concerning the procedural limitations applicable to hearings on motions for summary judgment. Davidson v. American Fitness Ctrs., Inc., 171 Ga. App. 691, 320 S.E.2d 824 (1984).

When the court considered evidence and granted summary judgment, a motion to dismiss was subsumed and left nothing independent of it to review. Evans v. Richardson, 189 Ga. App. 751, 377 S.E.2d 521 (1989).

Despite the trial court's statement that the court was considering a motion to dismiss, when the motion was supplemented by affidavits of the parties and matters outside the pleadings, the motion was therefore converted into a motion for summary judgment. White House, Inc. v. Winkler, 202 Ga. App. 603, 415 S.E.2d 185 (1992).

Reversible error occurred when the trial court granted the defendant's motion to dismiss, after converting the motion into one for summary judgment on the ground that matters outside the pleadings were considered, without providing the plaintiff with notice and an opportunity to present evidence. Sumner v. Department of Human Resources, 225 Ga. App. 91, 483 S.E.2d 602 (1997).

Trial court erred when the court converted the defendant mother's motion to dismiss to a motion for summary judgment and then granted the motion without providing notice to the plaintiff father of the conversion and an opportunity to submit evidence and be heard within 30 days. Simmons v. Brady, 251 Ga. App. 717, 555 S.E.2d 94 (2001).

When matters outside the pleadings are considered by the trial court on a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, the motion is converted to a motion for summary judgment pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56, and the trial court has the burden of informing the party opposing the motion that the court will consider matters outside the pleadings and that, if the opposing party so desires, the party has no less than 30 days to submit evidence in response to the motion for summary judgment. Morrell v. Wellstar Health Sys., Inc., 280 Ga. App. 1, 633 S.E.2d 68 (2006).

Trial court properly dismissed a class action suit arising out of a breach of a lease agreement and filed by a group of uninsured patients against a hospital for failure to state a claim upon which relief could be granted, which the court converted to a motion for summary judgment, as the class members: (1) failed to timely object to the merits of the oral motion; (2) acquiesced to the evidence in support of the motion; and (3) failed to show they were third-party beneficiaries of the agreement with sufficient standing to sue upon a breach of its terms. Davis v. Phoebe Putney Health Sys., 280 Ga. App. 505, 634 S.E.2d 452 (2006).

When a party did not object in the trial court to the conversion of a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim into one for summary judgment, and the party did not challenge or address the conversion on appeal, any objection to the conversion was waived. Action Concrete v. Portrait Homes - Little Suwanee Point, LLC, 285 Ga. App. 650, 647 S.E.2d 353 (2007).

When a trial court's order granting a motion to dismiss under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(b)(6) was based on the parties' agreement, which was attached to and incorporated in the pleadings, the trial court's consideration of the motion did not convert the motion to dismiss to a motion for summary judgment. Brown v. Gadson, 288 Ga. App. 323, 654 S.E.2d 179 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 236 (Ga. 2008).

Not converted into summary judgment motion when no evidence introduced. — Motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted is not converted into a motion for summary judgment when there is absolutely no evidence introduced. Holloway v.

Dougherty County Sch. Sys., 157 Ga. App. 251, 277 S.E.2d 251 (1981).

When matter outside the pleadings was presented to and not excluded by the court in disposition of motions for dismissal for failure to state a claim, such motions must be treated as motions for summary judgment. Mica-Top Fixture Co. v. Frank G. Shattuck Co., 124 Ga. App. 100, 183 S.E.2d 15 (1971); Bays v. River Oaks Constr., Inc., 244 Ga. App. 401, 535 S.E.2d 543 (2000).

Support of motion by affidavits or depositions. — When a motion to dismiss plaintiff's petition for failure to state a claim on which relief may be granted is supported by affidavits or depositions, the motion should be treated as a motion for summary judgment. Brackett v. H.R. Block & Co., 119 Ga. App. 144, 166 S.E.2d 369 (1969); McGill v. Allis-Chalmers Credit Corp., 133 Ga. App. 700, 212 S.E.2d 27 (1975).

Failure to file expert affidavit. — Husband's pro se wrongful death action against a doctor and health service providers was dismissed for failure to attach an expert affidavit under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1, which was the equivalent of a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(b)(6), when the husband alleged negligence due to the doctor's issuance of a do not resuscitate order with respect to the husband's wife; such an action involved professional negligence and medical questions and, thus, required an expert affidavit. Hardwick v. Atkins, 278 Ga. App. 79, 628 S.E.2d 173 (2006).

Motion to dismiss for failure to file an expert affidavit under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 had to be considered as a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(b)(6). Burke v. Paul, 289 Ga. App. 826, 658 S.E.2d 430 (2008).

Read in the son and the administrator's favor, the new complaint adequately pled fraud, battery, conspiracy, and wrongful death against the doctors, the nurses, and the hospital as the complaint asserted that the doctor knowingly and falsely represented to the family that the deceased's comatose condition was the result of metastasized cancer rather than aspiration, and that the doctor's intention in doing so was to deceive the family as to its actual cause. The complaint also asserted that the second doctor and the nurses were complicit in the doctor's misrepresentations and assisted the doctor in the deception of the family; that the family relied on the misrepresentations when the family agreed to admit the deceased to hospice care; and that as a proximate result of being admitted to hospice, the deceased was denied food and water and suffered renal failure. Therefore, because the son and the administrator were not required to support their adequately pled claims for fraud, battery, and conspiracy with an O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 affidavit, the trial court erred when the court granted the motion to dismiss the claims. Estate of Shannon v. Ahmed, 304 Ga. App. 380, 696 S.E.2d 408 (2010).

Affidavits made in support of motions under subsection (b) of Ga. L. 1972, p. 689, §§ 4 and 5 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12) must conform to the requirements of former Ga. L. 1975, p. 757, § 3 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(e)). McPherson v. McPherson, 238 Ga. 271, 232 S.E.2d 552 (1977).

Notice of conversion to summary judgment motion required. — When a motion to dismiss is converted to one for summary judgment, the opposing party must be given 30-days notice of the motion. Jaynes v. Douglas, 147 Ga. App. 678, 250 S.E.2d 14 (1978).

Plaintiffs are entitled to notice of conversion of a motion to dismiss into a motion for summary judgment and 30 days to respond to such motion. Williams v. Columbus, 151 Ga. App. 311, 259 S.E.2d 705 (1979); Odum v. Montgomery, 249 Ga. App. 211, 547 S.E.2d 770 (2001).

In an interpleader action involving a dispute over the payment of health insurance benefits, the trial court properly granted the hospital's motion for a judgment on the pleadings as there was no genuine issue of fact that the hospital was owed the amount for the medical expenses at issue and the trial court found that a purported settlement agreement between the employee's counsel and the hospital for less than the full amount was unenforceable as it lacked consideration. The employee agreed to waive oral argument on all motions pending before the trial court and, therefore, acquiesced in the trial court's procedure of treating the hospital's motion for judgment on the pleadings as one for summary judgment, therefore, the trial court did not err in treating the hospital's motion as such without providing formal notice or in failing to hold a hearing on that motion. Lamb v. Fulton-DeKalb Hosp. Auth., 297 Ga. App. 529, 677 S.E.2d 328 (2009).

Notice required unless waived by opposing party. — There must be proper notice of a motion for summary judgment, and if the motion is to be heard on oral testimony, proper notice must be given to the opposite party, unless notice is waived. Myers v. McLarty, 150 Ga. App. 432, 258 S.E.2d 56 (1979).

Absent waiver, trial court may not convert a motion to dismiss to a motion for summary judgment without affording the opposing party the required statutory notice. Sibley v. City of Atlanta, 152 Ga. App. 723, 263 S.E.2d 698 (1979).

Motion for summary judgment may be made orally at a hearing for temporary relief. Royston v. Royston, 236 Ga. 648, 225 S.E.2d 41 (1976).

It was harmless error for court to proceed, over the plaintiff's objection, to receive evidence and consider motion to dismiss as one for summary judgment, without allowing the plaintiff time to prepare the plaintiff's evidence since the plaintiff and an officer of the defendant company were both present at the initial hearing, testified, and were cross-examined, all relevant documentary evidence was identified and admitted, and the evidence showed that there was no material issue of fact to be determined but only two questions of law. Leach v. Midland-Guardian Co., 127 Ga. App. 562, 194 S.E.2d 260 (1972).

Evidence must demand finding. — In summary judgment hearings under subsection (b) of Ga. L. 1972, p. 689, § 4 and 5 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12) and under Ga. L. 1975, p. 757, § 3 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56), evidence must demand a finding that there is no genuine issue of any material fact and that the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Myers v. McLarty, 150 Ga.

Consideration of exhibits. — In city's suit against a landowner for specific performance of parties' agreement, city's complaint attached the parties' agreement along with several other exhibits, which under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-10(c) were properly considered by the trial court in ruling upon the landowner's motion to dismiss under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(b)(6). Gold Creek SL, LLC v. City of Dawsonville, 290 Ga. App. 807, 660 S.E.2d 858 (2008).

Ruling on motion to dismiss when matters outside pleadings presented.

— It is not necessary to rule on motion to dismiss when matters outside the pleadings are presented to the court and the motion is treated as one for summary judgment. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank v. Leaptrot, 225 Ga. 783, 171 S.E.2d 555 (1969).

Appellate court not to broaden base of trial court's ruling.

— When no motion for summary judgment is made, and it appears from the order of the trial court that judgment was entered on consideration of the petition only, without reference to the defendant's pleadings or the affidavit contained in the record, the appellate court cannot broaden the base of the trial court's ruling, but will look only to the petition to determine whether it should have been dismissed. Brckett v. H.R. Block & Co., 119 Ga. App. 144, 166 S.E.2d 369 (1969); McGill v. Allis-Chalmers Credit Corp., 133 Ga. App. 700, 212 S.E.2d 27 (1975).

Motion for summary judgment on basis of complaint equivalent to motion to dismiss.

— When motion for summary judgment is made by the defendant solely on the basis of the complaint, the motion is functionally equivalent to a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, and the complaint should be liberally construed in favor of the complainant, with the facts alleged in the complaint taken as true. Guthrie v. Monumental Properties, Inc., 141 Ga. App. 21, 232 S.E.2d 369 (1977).

Effect of pretrial order on filing motion.

— It was inappropriate for the court to entertain the defendants' oral motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim made at the call of the case for trial when the pretrial order required all further motions to be filed at least 30 days prior to trial. Irvin v. Lowe's of Gainesville, Inc., 165 Ga. App. 828, 302 S.E.2d 734 (1983).

Alleging conspiracy does not prevent dismissal of statutorily abolished cause of action.

— Inasmuch as the main cause of action for alienation of a minor son's affections alleged in the complaint has been abolished statutorily, the trial court was correct in dismissing the complaint, although the plaintiff ingeniously camouflaged the plaintiff's suit with an allegation of conspiracy. Hyman v. Moldovan, 166 Ga. App. 891, 305 S.E.2d 648 (1983).

When plaintiff, having received nothing for the plaintiff's claimed homestead exemption, commenced an action against the clerk of superior court for the amount of the plaintiff's homestead exemption, alleging that the loss thereof was because the defendant had failed to record the deeds, but the plaintiff had no aggregate interest in the property against which to assert the plaintiff's claimed homestead exemption, the plaintiff had no claim upon which relief could be granted, and the defendant was entitled to summary judgment as a matter of law. Wallis v. Clerk, Superior Court, 166 Ga. App. 775, 305 S.E.2d 639 (1983).

Legal malpractice action based on the attorneys' failure to file a workers' compensation claim on the plaintiff's behalf prior to the expiration of the applicable one-year statute of limitation was not subject to dismissal for failure to state a claim based on the contention that it was premature because the workers' compensation claim had not been adjudicated as barred by the statute of limitation. Sapp v. Coshatt, 245 Ga. App. 549, 538 S.E.2d 193 (2000).

Tortious interference with prospective business.

— Dismissal of a husband's claim for "unlawful interference with prospective economic advantage," which was apparently a claim of tortious interference with potential business relations, was properly dismissed under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(b)(6) and did not violate the husband's Sixth and Seventh Amendment constitutional rights when the husband alleged that an attorney's prosecution of three appeals on behalf of the husband's wife and child was ultimately unsuccessful, and the husband might have experienced some financial benefit had the appeals been successful. These allegations in no way asserted or demonstrated: (1) improper action or wrongful conduct by the attorney; (2) that the attorney acted with the intent to injure; (3) that the attorney caused a party to fail to enter into an anticipated business relationship with the husband; or (4) that the attorney's conduct damaged the husband. Crane v. Albertelli, 264 Ga. App. 910, 592 S.E.2d 684 (2003), cert. denied, 543 U.S. 819, 125 S. Ct. 481, 160 L. Ed. 2d 359 (2004).

Failure to state a claim by third party beneficiaries. — Trial court did not err in granting a clinic's motion under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(b)(6) to dismiss for failure to state a claim the patients' action alleging that the patients were entitled to damages for breach of contract after the clinic where the patients received free outpatient dialysis treatment notified the patients that the clinic was closing because the complaint failed to state a claim that the patients were entitled as third-party beneficiaries to sue for breach of the contract between the clinic and another medical provider to provide free dialysis treatment for one year after the clinic closed. The contract did not clearly show on the contract's face that the contract was intended for the benefit of the patients as required under O.C.G.A. § 9-2-20(b), and the contract plainly showed that there was no intent to confer third-party beneficiary status on existing clinic outpatients. Andrade v. Grady Mem'l Hosp. Corp., 308 Ga. App. 171, 707 S.E.2d 118 (2011).

8. Failure to Join Party

Failure to join an indispensable party is a defense which may be raised by motion. Guhl v. Tuggle, 242 Ga. 412, 249 S.E.2d 219 (1978).

Not grounds for dismissal for failure to state claim. — While failure to name an individual as a party might be the basis for corrective action as prescribed in Ga. L. 1972, p. 689, § 7 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-19), it is not cause for dismissal of the complaint under grounds of failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted. Empire Banking Co. v. Martin, 133 Ga. App. 115, 210 S.E.2d 237 (1974).

When not specifically raised, failure to name an indispensable party will not subject a claim to a motion to dismiss. Empire Banking Co. v. Martin, 133 Ga. App. 115, 210 S.E.2d 237 (1974).

Parties may be dropped or added by order of court on motion of any party or of the party's own initiative, at any stage of the action, including appeal, and on such terms as are just. Guhl v. Tuggle, 242 Ga. 412, 249 S.E.2d 219 (1978).

When there has been a nonjoinder of a necessary party, such party may be added on motion of any party or by the court on the court's own initiative. Guhl v. Tuggle, 242 Ga. 412, 249 S.E.2d 219 (1978).

When failure to join party amendable defect on appeal. — When question of an indispensable party is expressly passed upon by the trial court, it will be held that the plaintiff had necessary opportunity to seek addition of such party, but in absence of any disclosure by the record of an intent to raise or pass upon such question in the trial court, such defect will be deemed an amendable defect. King v. King, 228 Ga. 818, 188 S.E.2d 502 (1972).

When question of an indispensable party is expressly passed upon by the trial court, it will be held that the plaintiff had such notice as would have afforded the plaintiff an opportunity to seek the addition of such party, but when neither a motion to dismiss nor judgment of the trial court disclosed any intent to raise or pass upon such question, it will be deemed, for purpose of review of judgment overruling a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, as an amendable defect. Guhl v. Tuggle, 242 Ga. 412, 249 S.E.2d 219 (1978).

Summary judgment improper. — Since a real-party-in-interest objection is a matter in abatement and does not go to the merits of an action, such an objection cannot be disposed of by means of summary judgment but is properly disposed of pursuant to a motion to dismiss. Fleming v. Caras, 170 Ga. App. 579, 317 S.E.2d 600 (1984).

Judgments on the Pleadings1. In General*Related to summary judgment. —

Motion for judgment on the pleadings is closely related to a motion for summary judgment. Dukes v. Joyner, 234 Ga. 526, 216 S.E.2d 822 (1975).

Equivalence to motion to dismiss.

— When party moving for judgment on the pleadings does not introduce affidavits, depositions, or interrogatories in support of the party's motion, such motion is the equivalent of a motion to dismiss the complaint for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted. Seaboard Coast Line R.R. v. Dockery, 135 Ga. App. 540, 218 S.E.2d 263 (1975).

When the defendant filed a motion for judgment on the pleadings but did not submit any affidavits, depositions, or interrogatories in support of the motion, the motion was treated as a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief could be granted. Cox v. Turner, 268 Ga. App. 305, 601 S.E.2d 728 (2004).

Admissions of movant on motion for judgment on pleadings. — For purposes of the defendant's motion for judgment on the pleadings, all well-pleaded allegations of the plaintiff's complaint are taken as true and all allegations of defendant's affirmative defense are taken as false. Hancock v. Nashville Inv. Co., 128 Ga. App. 58, 195 S.E.2d 674 (1973).

For purposes of a motion for judgment on the pleadings, all well-pleaded material allegations of opposing party's pleading are taken as true, and all allegations of the moving party which have been denied are taken as false. Pressley v. Maxwell, 242 Ga. 360, 249 S.E.2d 49 (1978).

For the purposes of a subsection (c) motion, all well-pleaded material allegations of the opposing party's pleadings are taken as true, and all allegations of the moving party which have been denied are taken as false, but conclusions of law are not so admitted. Seaboard Coast Line R.R. v. Dockery, 135 Ga. App. 540, 218 S.E.2d 263 (1975); Christner v. Eason, 146 Ga. App. 139, 245 S.E.2d 489 (1978).

When a party makes a motion for judgment on the pleadings, the party admits, for the purposes of the motion, the truth of the party's adversary's allegations, and the party is also deemed to have admitted that those allegations which have been denied by the adversary are false. Allen v. Myers-Dickson Furn. Co., 122 Ga. App. 194, 176 S.E.2d 508 (1970).

After denial of motion, movant's admissions not binding. — After denial of a motion for judgment on the pleadings, admissions made by the moving party are not binding and conclusive so as to preclude the moving party from contending and proving at trial that denials in the moving party's answer of allegations of the moving party's opponent are true. Allen v. Myers-Dickson Furn. Co., 122 Ga. App. 194, 176 S.E.2d 508 (1970).

Concessions made by party on motion for judgment on pleadings do not continue over for separate consideration of adversary's motion for judgment on the pleadings. Allen v. Myers-Dickson Furn. Co., 122 Ga. App. 194, 176 S.E.2d 508 (1970).

Moving party must be clearly entitled to judgment. — Judgment on the pleadings may be granted only if, on the facts as so admitted, the moving party is clearly entitled to judgment. Seaboard Coast Line R.R. v. Dockery, 135 Ga. App. 540, 218 S.E.2d 263 (1975); Christner v. Eason, 146 Ga. App. 139, 245 S.E.2d 489 (1978).

Pleadings must affirmatively show that no claim in fact exists. — Since to justify a judgment on the pleadings the pleadings must affirmatively show that no claim in fact exists, the appellant's pleadings alleging the appellee's violation of a federal act were not sufficient to justify a judgment on the pleadings since the federal act did not at all address the appellant's allegations against the appellee. Bergen v. Martindale-Hubbell, Inc., 176 Ga. App. 745, 337 S.E.2d 770 (1985), appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 479 U.S.

When plaintiff may not move for judgment on pleadings. — Plaintiff may not move for judgment on the pleadings when the answer raises issues of fact which if proved would defeat recovery. Kramer v. Johnson, 121 Ga. App. 848, 176 S.E.2d 108 (1970).

Judgment granted when complaint time barred. — In a medical malpractice action, when the averments in the complaint clearly showed that the negligent or wrongful act or omission occurred in March 1984, and the complaint was not filed until June 1995, the complaint was barred by O.C.G.A. § 9-3-71(b) (five-year limitation period) and the court did not err by granting judgment on the pleadings to the defendants. Braden v. Bell, 222 Ga. App. 144, 473 S.E.2d 523 (1996).

When motion for judgment on pleadings is based on insufficiency of the complaint, the motion should not be granted unless the allegations of the complaint disclose with certainty that the plaintiff would not be entitled to relief under any state of provable facts. Frady v. Irvin, 245 Ga. 307, 264 S.E.2d 866 (1980).

Complete failure to state cause or defense. — Granting of a motion for judgment on the pleadings under subsection (c) of this section is proper only when there is a complete failure to state a cause of action or defense. Pressley v. Maxwell, 242 Ga. 360, 249 S.E.2d 49 (1978); Howard v. Bank S., 209 Ga. App. 407, 433 S.E.2d 625 (1993); Maxwell v. Cronan, 241 Ga. App. 491, 527 S.E.2d 1 (1999).

Under a final judgment on a separate maintenance action, the property divided between the parties became the separate estate of each party to whom it was awarded. Therefore, when the husband brought an action two years later, alleging the parties reconciled and cohabited prior to the wife's death, arguing the reconciliation rendered the agreement on the separate maintenance action void so that the property which the wife attempted to dispose of by will was not hers, there was a complete failure to state a cause of action and the trial court properly granted judgment on the pleadings. Gideon v. Farlow, 258 Ga. 633, 373 S.E.2d 362 (1988).

When the plaintiff sued the defendant for malicious prosecution, after the defendant's request for a criminal arrest warrant against the plaintiff was dismissed and no arrest warrant was issued, the trial court properly granted the defendant's motion for judgment on the pleadings because the undisputed lack of the issuance of a valid warrant, accusation, indictment, or summons was fatal to the plaintiff's malicious prosecution claim. Cox v. Turner, 268 Ga. App. 305, 601 S.E.2d 728 (2004).

Because the minority members of a limited liability company failed to show at least one of the four criteria required for the members to proceed directly instead of derivatively, and the complaint was replete with general allegations of injuries separate and apart from the other shareholders, but the allegations did not demonstrate how this was true, judgment on the pleadings was properly entered against the minority members. Southwest Health & Wellness, LLC v. Work, 282 Ga. App. 619, 639 S.E.2d 570 (2006).

Because O.C.G.A. § 33-4-7 applied only to an insurer's bad faith in responding to claims for property damage, an insurer was properly granted a judgment on the pleadings as a complaint asserting that the insurer acted in bad faith in responding to a claimant's claims for personal injury failed to state a claim upon which relief under the statute could be granted. Mills v. Allstate Ins. Co., 288 Ga. App. 257, 653 S.E.2d 850 (2007).

Lack of standing. — Employee's action to enjoin the enforcement of a non-compete clause in a contract between the employer and the employee's desired physician, which was treated as a judgment on the pleadings on appeal, was properly dismissed on standing grounds as the employee was neither a party to the contract nor an intended beneficiary of the contract. Haldi v. Piedmont Nephrology Assocs., P.C., 283 Ga. App. 321, 641 S.E.2d 298 (2007).

Judgment erroneously denied when court lacked jurisdiction over contempt petition. — Because a trial court lacked jurisdiction to entertain a petition to hold a spouse in contempt of a divorce decree entered in another county in the absence of a petition to modify the decree, the trial court erred in denying that spouse's motion for judgment on the pleadings, or in the alternative, for a change of venue to that county's court that rendered the original judgment of divorce. Jacob v. Koslow, 282 Ga. 51, 644 S.E.2d 857 (2007).

Judgment on pleadings on one of several counts. — In interest of saving time, it is practical for a trial judge to enter judgment on the pleadings as to one count of a complaint if such count is subject to the motion, even though the movant may not be entitled to such judgment as to all counts. First Nat'l Bank v. Osborne, 233 Ga. 602, 212 S.E.2d 785 (1975).

Time for appeal of partial judgment on pleadings. — Partial judgment on the pleadings, when no matter outside the pleadings was presented or considered by the court, was not a partial summary judgment, and the plaintiffs had the right to await entry of final judgment disposing of the entire case before the plaintiffs entered an appeal. Goolsby v. Allstate Ins. Co., 130 Ga. App. 881, 204 S.E.2d 789 (1974).

Treatment of averments. — In an action to recover under a payment bond filed by a supplier, because the pleadings did not show that the supplier was unable to establish a defect in the notice of commencement, and a general contractor averred in its first affirmative defense that it had filed a notice of commencement with the Clerk of the Superior Court of Fulton County and had posted the notice of commencement at the project site, such an averment had to be considered to be denied by the supplier for purposes of a motion for judgment on the pleadings. Consol. Pipe & Supply Co. v. Genoa Constr. Servs., Inc., 279 Ga. App. 894, 633 S.E.2d 59 (2006).

When facts show without dispute scheme to extract more than legal rate of interest for the use of money, such question need not be submitted to the jury, and it is not error for the trial court to grant the plaintiff's motion for a judgment on the pleadings under subsection (c) of this section. Cook v. Young, 225 Ga. 26, 165 S.E.2d 727 (1969).

Complaint sufficiently stated a promissory estoppel claim since the complaint alleged that a parent had repeatedly promised the parent's child that the parent would pay one-half of the costs of the child attending a private historically African-American college or university, that relying on this promise, the child applied to and was accepted into such a school, foregoing opportunities to apply to and enroll in other colleges or universities of significantly less cost, that the parent nevertheless refused to honor the parent's commitment, and that to avoid injustice, the parent should have been required to honor the parent's promise; thus, the trial court erred in granting the parent's motion to dismiss. Houston v. Houston, 267 Ga. App. 450, 600 S.E.2d 395 (2004).

Divorce granted on ground for irretrievable brokenness should be granted to both parties equally, and while such divorce may properly be granted on the pleadings, the divorce should be granted to both parties. Herring v. Herring, 237 Ga. 771, 229 S.E.2d 756 (1976).

Factual issues in restrictive covenant dispute. — In an agent's suit against an insurance company seeking to invalidate restrictive covenants in an agreement to sell insurance products, the court held that the trial court properly denied the agent's motion for judgment on the pleadings as to a confidential and proprietary information provision because it could not be said as a matter of law that the information defined as such did not constitute a trade secret or merely confidential information relating to the company's business. Holland Ins. Group, LLC v. Senior Life Ins. Co., 329 Ga. App. 834, 766 S.E.2d 187 (2014).

Judgment on the pleadings properly granted. — In a declaratory judgment action seeking a declaration as to the enforceability of non-compete clauses in an employment contract, the trial court properly granted the competitor judgment on the pleadings because it correctly found that the pleadings showed that the lack of any limit on the scope of the restricted work or the solicitation of former customers were void and unenforceable under the non-severability rule as a matter of law. Lapolla Indus. v. Hess, 325 Ga. App. 256, 750 S.E.2d 467 (2013).

Judgment on the pleadings proper under firemen's rule. — Trial court properly granted judgment on the pleadings pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12 to a chemical company in an injured party's claims arising from exposure to chemicals while working as an emergency medical technician (EMT), as EMTs were included under Georgia's firemen's rule, and the injured party thus could not recover for the underlying negligence which caused the chemical spill. Kapherr v. MFG Chem., Inc., 277 Ga. App. 112, 625 S.E.2d 513 (2005).

Judgment on the pleadings reversed. — Construing the pleadings in a light most favorable to showing a question of fact, in an action in which: (1) the pleadings did not disclose with certainty that a supplier would not be entitled to relief in the supplier's action against a general contractor and the contractor's surety; and (2) the appeals court did not consider the supplier's averments that its "Notice to Owner/Contractor" complied with O.C.G.A. §§ 10-7-31 and 44-14-361.5 or its admission that it received a copy of the notice of commencement to establish that the general contractor's notice of commencement was otherwise proper and timely filed as required by the statutes, the general contractor and the contractor's surety were not entitled to judgment on the pleadings. Consol. Pipe & Supply Co. v. Genoa Constr. Servs., Inc., 279 Ga. App. 894, 633 S.E.2d 59 (2006).

In a worker's suit alleging negligence on the part of a county with regard to the county allegedly failing to properly instruct and supervise the worker in the use of a portable tar kettle machine, the trial court erred by granting the county's motion for a judgment on the pleadings based on sovereign immunity as the worker sufficiently alleged that the machine was a vehicle as contemplated by O.C.G.A. § 33-24-51, which established a waiver of sovereign immunity if the county had purchased liability insurance to cover damages and injuries arising from the use of motor vehicles under the county's management. Hewell v. Walton County, 292 Ga. App. 510, 664 S.E.2d 875 (2008).

Trial court erred by granting judgment on the pleadings against the employee on the employee's claim that the manager tortiously interfered with the employee's employment contract with the employer. To the extent the complaint alleged that the manager took tortious actions as a stranger to the employment contract that contributed to the employee's termination, the complaint stated a cause of action; the employee alleged that the manager, while not employed by the employer, solicited and obtained an agreement with the chief financial officer to terminate the employee after the manager was re-hired. Brathwaite v. Fulton-DeKalb Hosp. Auth., 317 Ga. App. 111, 729 S.E.2d 625 (2012).

Trial court erred by granting an auto dealership judgment on the pleadings as to a buyer's consumer fraud suit because it could not be said, as a matter of law, that the buyer would not be unable to show that the reliance on representations that the minivan was undamaged and never had been in a wreck was reasonable. Raysoni v. Payless Auto Deals, LLC, 296 Ga. 156, 766 S.E.2d 24 (2014).

2. Treatment as Summary Judgment Motion

Scope of summary judgment procedure. — Defenses enumerated, except paragraph (b)(6) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12, failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, are matters in abatement that are not within the scope of the summary judgment procedure. International Indem. Co. v. Blakey, 161 Ga. App. 99, 289 S.E.2d 303 (1982).

Right to a hearing. — Trial court erred in failing to grant a client's request for a hearing on a former attorney's motion to dismiss claims for legal malpractice and intentional infliction of emotional distress because the trial court considered matters outside the pleadings. Under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(b), the motion was required to be treated as one for summary judgment and disposed of as provided in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56, and all parties were to be given a reasonable opportunity to present all material made pertinent to such a motion. Fitzpatrick v. Harrison, 300 Ga. App. 672, 686 S.E.2d 322 (2009).

2. Treatment as Summary Judgment Motion (Cont'd)

Hearing when no motion filed. — In a procedural context, the Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9, sanctions the hearing of a motion for a summary judgment even though no such motion is ever filed. Richmond Leasing Co. v. First Union Bank, 188 Ga. App. 843, 374 S.E.2d 746, cert. denied, 188 Ga. App. 912, 374 S.E.2d 746 (1988).

Procedural defects waived. — Although the trial court converted the defendant limited liability company's (LLC's) motion to dismiss the plaintiff sanitation company's action into a motion for summary judgment when the court considered matters outside the pleadings, the appellate court refused to reverse the trial court's judgment finding that an agreement which allowed the sanitation company to purchase the LLC for $500,000 less than any amount offered by a third party was an unreasonable restraint on alienation because the trial court allowed the sanitation company to introduce evidence in support of the company's claims. RTS Landfill, Inc. v. Appalachian Waste Sys., LLC, 267 Ga. App. 56, 598 S.E.2d 798 (2004).

O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(b)(6) motion may be treated as one for summary judgment. — So long as the parties are afforded sufficient time within which to file affidavits and other evidentiary materials, a trial court sua sponte can treat a paragraph (b)(6) motion under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12 as one for summary judgment even though neither party has introduced a matter outside of the pleadings. Zepp v. Mayor of Athens, 180 Ga. App. 72, 348 S.E.2d 673 (1986).

Authority of court to consider matter outside pleadings. — While a petition may amply meet the liberalized requirements of notice pleading under the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9), so as to preclude dismissal from consideration of the petition alone, the court has authority to consider matters outside the pleadings, if presented, and if the court does, the court must dispose of the matter under summary judgment procedures. Kiker v. Hefner, 119 Ga. App. 629, 168 S.E.2d 637 (1969); Gaddy v. Thomasson, 172 Ga. App. 876, 324 S.E.2d 817 (1984); Jim Altman Ins., Inc. v. Zorn & Son Ins. Agency, Inc., 184 Ga. App. 575, 362 S.E.2d 142 (1987).

Because the trial court, without objection, considered a contract between the parties and both parties relied heavily on the contract language before the trial court, the movant's motion to dismiss was converted to a motion for summary judgment under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(b). Cox v. Athens Reg'l Med. Ctr., Inc., 279 Ga. App. 586, 631 S.E.2d 792 (2006).

Order covering matters not pled. — When order granting judgment against the appellant mentions matters not raised by the pleadings, it might be assumed that a motion for judgment on the pleadings was converted to a motion for summary judgment by consideration of matters outside the pleadings. Williams v. Parnell, 162 Ga. App. 573, 292 S.E.2d 425 (1982).

When the trial court considered matters outside the pleadings in deciding the plaintiff's motion to dismiss a counterclaim, the court was obligated to treat the motion as a motion for summary judgment and, since the required hearing was not held pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56, the court's order was not amenable to appeal as a final judgment. American Car Rentals, Inc. v. Walden Leasing, Inc., 215 Ga. App. 621, 451 S.E.2d 537 (1994).

Notice of conversion of motion to motion for summary judgment. — In summary judgment hearings under subsection (c) of Ga. L. 1972, p. 689, §§ 4 and 5 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12) and under Ga. L. 1975, p. 757, § 3 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56), there must be proper notice; if it is to be heard on oral testimony, proper notice must be given to the opposite party, unless notice is waived. Myers v. McLarty, 150 Ga. App. 432, 258 S.E.2d 56 (1979).

When, under subsection (c) of Ga. L. 1972, p. 689, §§ 4 and 5 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12), a motion for judgment on the pleadings is converted to one for summary judgment, the nonmoving party is entitled to notice of the motion as required by Ga. L. 1975, p. 757, § 3 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(c)). Harkins v. Harkins, 153 Ga. App. 104, 264 S.E.2d 572 (1980).

Attachment of an affidavit to a motion to dismiss does not constitute notice that the motion will be converted to a motion for summary judgment. Until the trial court decides whether to consider or exclude matters outside the pleadings, the mere attachment of an affidavit to a motion to dismiss should not be construed to constitute notice of the conversion of that motion to dismiss into a summary judgment motion. Hart v. Sullivan, 197 Ga. App. 759, 399 S.E.2d 523 (1990).

In a case alleging unfair employment termination, the trial court's failure to notify the employee of the trial court's conversion of the employer's motion to dismiss to a summary judgment motion and the court's failure to give the employee at least 30 days to respond, although error, was not reversible when the employee failed to show that the employee was harmed by this deficiency in the notice; when the employee failed to provide the appellate court with a transcript of the summary judgment hearing, the trial court's summary judgment was presumed to have been correct on appeal and was affirmed. Bynum v. Horizon Staffing, 266 Ga. App. 337, 596 S.E.2d 648 (2004).

Trial court's failure to notify the plaintiffs that, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(b), the court was converting the defendants' motion to dismiss to a summary judgment motion was not reversible error as the plaintiffs were afforded a full evidentiary hearing and failed to demonstrate any harm resulting from the lack of notice. Smith v. Chemtura Corp., 297 Ga. App. 287, 676 S.E.2d 756 (2009).

Opposing party entitled to additional 30 days. — When a motion for judgment on the pleadings is converted into a motion for summary judgment, rules applicable to the latter come into play, including the length of time allowable after notice, and the opposing party is therefore entitled to an additional 30 days in which to present evidence in opposition thereto. Davis v. American Acceptance Corp., 119 Ga. App. 265, 167 S.E.2d 222 (1969).

Opportunity to be given to present pertinent material. — Under subsection (c) of Ga. L. 1972, p. 689, §§ 4 and 5 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12), introduction of evidence converts motion for judgment on the pleadings into a motion for summary judgment, and all parties shall be given reasonable opportunity to present all material made pertinent to such a motion by Ga. L. 1975, p. 757, § 3 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56). Harkins v. Harkins, 153 Ga. App. 104, 264 S.E.2d 572 (1980).

Personal guarantor did not show that the guarantor was harmed by a trial court's converting a bank's motion for judgment on the pleadings to a motion for summary judgment because the guarantor did not show that given additional time the guarantor would have filed additional affidavits or other supporting documentation in response to the motion for summary judgment. Brooks v. Multibank 2009-1 RES-ADC Venture, LLC, 317 Ga. App. 264, 730 S.E.2d 509 (2012).

Unless motions for summary judgment and judgment on pleadings combined. — When motion filed and heard contains a motion for summary judgment as well as a motion for judgment on the pleadings, and the motion for summary judgment was the only motion ruled upon, there is no requirement that the trial court offer to give the opposing party a reasonable opportunity to secure evidence or materials as the opposing party has already had notice that such would be required. Hanson v. Byers, 120 Ga. App. 298, 170 S.E.2d 315 (1969).

Evidence must demand finding. — In summary judgment hearings under subsection (c) of Ga. L. 1972, p. 689, §§ 4 and 5 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12) and under Ga. L. 1975, p. 757, § 3 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56), the evidence must demand a finding that there is no genuine issue of any material fact and that the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Myers v. McLarty, 150 Ga. App. 432, 258 S.E.2d 56 (1979).

No intention to render summary judgment shown. — When the trial court denied the motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim on the ground that the complaint provided adequate notice of the claims and the court said "that's all you have to do," it is manifestly clear that the trial court was not intending to render a summary judgment. Ledford v. Meyer, 249 Ga. 407, 290 S.E.2d 908 (1982).

2. Treatment as Summary Judgment Motion (Cont'd)

City's motion to dismiss on the ground of sovereign immunity should have been treated as a motion for summary judgment since the claim of immunity was based on the wording of the complaint and matters outside of the pleadings were considered by the court in reaching the court's decision. Peeples v. City of Atlanta, 189 Ga. App. 888, 377 S.E.2d 889 (1989).

When defendant's motion was styled as a motion to dismiss, but the record indicates that the trial court considered affidavits and discovery responses outside the original pleadings, the motion must be treated as a motion for summary judgment. Brooks v. Boykin, 194 Ga. App. 854, 392 S.E.2d 46 (1990).

Motion treated as one for summary judgment erroneously denied. — Trial court's order denying dismissal of a fraud claim in a medical malpractice action against a doctor, upon a motion which the trial court treated as one for summary judgment when the court considered material beyond the pleadings, was reversed as there was no evidence that the doctor knew or even suspected that the patient had a pancreatic tumor, or that the doctor withheld information regarding the tumor; thus, the doctrine of equitable estoppel did not apply and the fraud claim was barred by the statute of repose, O.C.G.A. § 9-3-71(b). Balotin v. Simpson, 286 Ga. App. 772, 650 S.E.2d 253 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 803 (Ga. 2007).

Derivative action. — Motion to dismiss a shareholder derivative action against a corporation, which was brought pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(b)(6) and which asserted that, under the business judgment rule and the decision of the committee to which the derivative action had been referred, the complaints had been resolved and the plaintiff therefore lacked standing to proceed against the corporation, was perhaps best considered as a hybrid summary judgment motion for dismissal because the stockholder plaintiff's standing to maintain the suit had been lost, but it did not fit neatly into a category described in subsection (b), nor did it correspond directly with O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56, since the question of genuine issues of fact on the merits of the stockholder's claim were not reached. Millsap v. American Family Corp., 208 Ga. App. 230, 430 S.E.2d 385 (1993).

Appeal from grant of motion to dismiss. — Grant of a motion to dismiss predicated upon the failure to follow a procedural requirement of the Georgia Business Corporation Code, O.C.G.A. Ch. 2, T. 14, was not convertible to a summary proceeding and, as such, the general appellate process was applicable. McGregor v. Stachel, 200 Ga. App. 324, 408 S.E.2d 118 (1991).

Losing party's right to direct appeal. — When motions to dismiss asserted, among other things, that the complaint failed to state a claim and the trial court considered material beyond the pleadings in ruling on the motions to dismiss, those motions were required to be treated as motions for summary judgment, and the losing party maintained the right to a direct appeal from an order granting partial summary judgment. City of Demorest v. Town of Mt. Airy, 282 Ga. 653, 653 S.E.2d 43 (2007).

Preliminary Hearings

Motion to dismiss must be determined in accordance with Ga. L. 1972, p. 689, §§ 4 and 5 and Ga. L. 1968, p. 1104, § 10 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-12(d) and 9-11-43(b)). Hart v. DeLowe Partners, Ltd., 147 Ga. App. 715, 250 S.E.2d 169 (1978); Hand v. Keller, 160 Ga. App. 884, 288 S.E.2d 597 (1982); Derbyshire v. United Bldrs. Supplies, Inc., 194 Ga. App. 840, 392 S.E.2d 37 (1990).

Proper procedure for disposing of matters in abatement before trial is found in Ga. L. 1972, p. 689, §§ 4 and 5 and Ga. L. 1968, p. 1104, § 10 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-12(d) and 9-11-43(b)). Ogden Equip. Co. v. Talmadge Farms, Inc., 232 Ga. 614, 208 S.E.2d 459 (1974); Dawson v. McCart, 169 Ga. App. 434, 313 S.E.2d 135 (1984) (expressly overruling McPeake v. Colley, 116 Ga. App. 320, 157 S.E.2d 562 (1967) which suggests summary judgment is the proper method for raising the issue of the pendency of a former action).

Preliminary hearing is not sole means of determining sufficiency of service; such an issue can be determined on a plaintiff's motion for summary judgment if the record demonstrates no issues of fact with regard to service. International Furn. Distribs., Inc. v. Lifshultz Fast Freight, Inc., 176 Ga. App. 102, 335 S.E.2d 628 (1985).

Although a preliminary hearing before trial on application of a party under subsection (d) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12 is one prescribed method of invoking the court's ruling on a subsection (b) defense such as insufficient service of process, such preliminary jurisdictional matters may also be decided at the pretrial conference without awaiting another hearing. Long v. Marion, 257 Ga. 431, 360 S.E.2d 255 (1987).

Preliminary hearing on matters in abatement. — Preliminary hearing on defenses of lack of jurisdiction over the person or subject matter and improper venue, whether made in a pleading or by motion, may be heard and determined before trial on the application of any party. Marvin L. Walker & Assocs. v. A.L. Buschman, Inc., 147 Ga. App. 851, 250 S.E.2d 532 (1978).

Generally, when a motion to dismiss involves a factual issue as to a question of abatement, that is, lack of jurisdiction, improper venue, insufficiency of process, insufficiency of service of process or failure to join a party, the trial court is authorized to hear and determine these defenses before trial without a jury, or application of a party, unless the court orders that the hearing and determination thereof be deferred until trial. Myers v. McLarty, 150 Ga. App. 432, 258 S.E.2d 56 (1979).

Preliminary hearing over defenses of lack of jurisdiction over the person or subject matter and improper venue, whether made in a pleading or by motion, may be heard and determined before trial on the application of any party, and at such hearing factual issues shall be determined by the trial court; moreover, there is no reason why the same type of factual determination should not be made by the trial court in a motion to set aside. Montgomery v. USS Agri-Chemical Div., 155 Ga. App. 189, 270 S.E.2d 362 (1980).

If motion to dismiss is to determine a jurisdictional issue, a question of abatement and not on the merits, prior to trial, a jurisdictional defense may be set down for hearing and determination made before trial based upon conflicting evidence. Williamson v. Williamson, 155 Ga. App. 271, 270 S.E.2d 692 (1980), aff'd, 247 Ga. 260, 275 S.E.2d 42, cert. denied, 454 U.S. 1097, 102 S. Ct. 669, 70 L. Ed. 2d 638 (1981).

Trial judge is authorized to determine all issues relating to a venue motion, including any conflict in the evidence. Daughtry v. Chaney-Bush Irrigation, Inc., 166 Ga. App. 708, 305 S.E.2d 439 (1983).

Presentation of evidence. — All parties may present evidence at a hearing on a motion challenging the sufficiency of service, and factual issues shall be determined by the trial court. Attwell v. Heritage Bank Mt. Pleasant, 161 Ga. App. 193, 291 S.E.2d 28 (1982).

Finding on question of venue. — When the plaintiff argued that venue was a question of fact for a jury, and therefore should not have been determined by the court as a matter of law, but the record revealed that at a preliminary hearing pursuant to subsection (d) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12 the trial court, in the court's capacity as trier of fact, found the defendant was a resident of another county at the time of service, and further showed no demand for jury trial was made, nor was there objection to the judge trying the issue without a jury, it was held that the trial judge was authorized to determine the question of jurisdiction without a jury. Clements v. Hendi, 182 Ga. App. 118, 354 S.E.2d 700 (1987).

Jurisdictional questions involving factual issues may be tried by the court before trial. Hardy v. Arcemont, 213 Ga. App. 243, 444 S.E.2d 327 (1994).

Procedure when defenses made by answer. — When the choice is made to make defenses enumerated by subsection (b) of this section by answer, a motion to dismiss on the same grounds cannot thereafter be brought, but the proper procedure is an application for a preliminary hearing under subsection (d). Hayes v. Superior Leasing Corp., 136 Ga. App. 98, 220 S.E.2d 86 (1975).

Challenge to sufficiency of affidavit.

— As a motion to dismiss for an insufficient affidavit under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 is a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(b)(6), and as § 9-11-9.1 does not provide that § 9-11-12 is inapplicable, such a hearing is a permissible method by which to challenge the sufficiency of an affidavit. Hewett v. Kalish, 264 Ga. 183, 442 S.E.2d 233 (1994).

Application for a preliminary hearing may be made by motion under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-7(b). Hayes v. Superior Leasing Corp., 136 Ga. App. 98, 220 S.E.2d 86 (1975).

Court has broad powers as to how court shall hold preliminary hearings. Sherwood Mem. Park v. Bryan, 142 Ga. App. 664, 236 S.E.2d 903 (1977).

Court may select method of presenting evidence, but may not refuse to hear evidence except to order that hearing and determination thereof be deferred until the trial. Sherwood Mem. Park v. Bryan, 142 Ga. App. 664, 236 S.E.2d 903 (1977).

All parties may present evidence at a hearing on a motion challenging the sufficiency of service, and factual issues shall be determined by the trial court. Attwell v. Heritage Bank Mt. Pleasant, 161 Ga. App. 193, 291 S.E.2d 28 (1982).

Evidence at hearing under subsection (d). — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 is only designed to preclude amendment under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15 when the plaintiff completely fails to file an affidavit; thus § 9-11-9.1 does not preclude a plaintiff from presenting evidence of his or her expert's competency at a O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(d) hearing when that expert's affidavit was initially filed with the complaint. Hewett v. Kalish, 264 Ga. 183, 442 S.E.2d 233 (1994).

Imputing to trial court intent to rule on merits. — When trial court does not indicate consideration of merits, reviewing court will not impute such a determination. When there is nothing in the record to suggest that the trial court notified parties prior to entry of judgment that the court would consider the merits of the claim or that the court's reasoning included consideration of merits on a de facto basis, the reviewing court will not impute such a determination to the trial court. Georgia Power Co. v. Harrison, 253 Ga. 212, 318 S.E.2d 306 (1984).

Questions of law. — When a question of law was presented to the court by motion in limine, it was not an abuse of discretion in failing to set matter down for hearing. Phillips v. Marcin, 162 Ga. App. 202, 290 S.E.2d 546 (1982).

Hearing on motion. — Subsection (d) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12 provides for hearing on motions raising defenses enumerated in subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12 affording both parties an opportunity to present evidence and responsive argument. Newport Timber Corp. v. Floyd, 247 Ga. 535, 277 S.E.2d 646 (1981).

Motion for More Definite Statement1. In General

Replaces special demurrer. — Motion for more definite statement is the modern replacement for a special demurrer. Moultrie v. Atlanta Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 148 Ga. App. 650, 252 S.E.2d 77 (1979).

Similar characteristics to demurrer. — Motion for a more definite statement has some of the characteristics of a special demurrer in that it is not favored, and being a critic, it must itself be perfect in that it must state the grounds therefor and must point out the defect complained of and the details desired. Moultrie v. Atlanta Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 148 Ga. App. 650, 252 S.E.2d 77 (1979).

Special demurrer and motion for more definite statement distinguished. — Test of a special demurrer and a motion for a more definite statement is vastly different: while a special demurrer lies to make the plaintiff set out facts more fully, so as to enable the defendant to prepare a defense, a motion for more definite statement lies only when the pleading is so indefinite that the defendant is unable to frame an answer thereto, and only with respect to a pleading to which another pleading must be filed. Moultrie v. Atlanta Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 148 Ga. App. 650, 252 S.E.2d 77 (1979).

Proper remedy for more particularity is motion for more definite statement or discovery. — Proper remedy for seeking more particularity is by motion for a more definite statement at the pleading stage or by the rules of discovery thereafter. Cochran v. McCollum, 233 Ga. 104, 210 S.E.2d 13 (1974); Moultrie v. Atlanta Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 148 Ga. App. 650, 252 S.E.2d 77 (1979); Frady v. Irvin, 245 Ga. 307, 264 S.E.2d 866 (1980); Skelton v. Skelton, 251 Ga. 631, 308 S.E.2d 838 (1983).

Motion to dismiss counterclaim for failure to plead fraud and deceit with sufficient specificity made immediately preceding trial of case was properly denied since the proper remedy for seeking more particularity is by motion for a more definite statement at the pleading stage or by rules of discovery thereafter. Glennville Hatchery, Inc. v. Thompson, 164 Ga. App. 819, 298 S.E.2d 512 (1982).

Remedy for failure to plead with particularity is a motion for more definite statement, not a motion to dismiss, until the pleader is unable and unwilling to amend the pleadings accordingly. Hall v. Churchwell's, Inc., 243 Ga. 852, 257 S.E.2d 272 (1979).

Motion to strike not remedy. — When there is a failure to plead fraud with particularity, the correct remedy is not a motion to dismiss or to strike but a motion for more definite statement. White v. Johnson, 151 Ga. App. 345, 259 S.E.2d 731 (1979).

Motions for more definite statement are not favored, inasmuch as discovery procedures should be used extensively to obtain such information. Moultrie v. Atlanta Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 148 Ga. App. 650, 252 S.E.2d 77 (1979).

No substitute for discovery. — Motions for more definite statement are not to be used merely as a substitute for discovery. Padgett v. Bryant, 121 Ga. App. 807, 175 S.E.2d 884 (1970).

Motion for more definite statement is not appropriate merely for compelling information which will possibly disclose a threshold defense for the purpose of positioning the movant to move for dismissal. DeWes Enters., Inc. v. Town & Country Carpets, Inc., 130 Ga. App. 610, 203 S.E.2d 867 (1974).

Ambiguous or vague pleadings. — Motion for more definite statement lies only when the pleading is so indefinite that the defendant is unable to frame an answer thereto, and only with respect to a pleading to which another responsive pleading must be filed. Emerson v. Fleming, 127 Ga. App. 296, 193 S.E.2d 249 (1972).

Motion for a more definite statement may only be used when the pleading is so vague or ambiguous that a party cannot reasonably be required to frame a responsive pleading, and a motion to dismiss is not a responsive pleading. DeWes Enters., Inc. v. Town & Country Carpets, Inc., 130 Ga. App. 610, 203 S.E.2d 867 (1974).

Unless pleadings are so vague and ambiguous that the defendant could not frame proper responsive pleadings thereto, a motion for a more definite statement should not be granted. Moultrie v. Atlanta Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 148 Ga. App. 650, 252 S.E.2d 77 (1979).

Enforcement of § 9-11-9 by motion for more definite statement. — Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 9 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9) itself contains no mechanism for enforcing the statute's terms, and the common practice has been to use subsection (e) of Ga. L. 1972, p. 689, §§ 4 and 5 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12) for that purpose. McDonough Constr. Co. v. McLendon Elec. Co., 242 Ga. 510, 250 S.E.2d 424 (1978); Moultrie v. Atlanta Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 148 Ga. App. 650, 252 S.E.2d 77 (1979).

Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 9 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9), relating to pleading special matters, is not immune from the command of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-8(f) that pleadings be construed so as to do substantial justice and, thus, one context in which a somewhat liberal approach to the granting of motions under subsection (e) of Ga. L. 1976, p. 1047, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12) is appropriate is when the request for a more definite statement is used to enforce special pleading requirements of Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 9 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9(c)). McDonough Constr. Co. v. McLendon Elec. Co., 242 Ga. 510, 250 S.E.2d 424 (1978).

Extreme action of dismissal of entire complaint should be taken only when the complaint had but one basis for recovery and motion for more definite statement was addressed to that sole basis. Moultrie v. Atlanta Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 148 Ga. App. 650, 252 S.E.2d 77 (1979).

When there is a two-count complaint, failure to meet requirements of motion for a more definite statement as to one count would have no effect on the remaining count. Moultrie v. Atlanta Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 148 Ga. App. 650, 252 S.E.2d 77 (1979).

Dismissal of allegations of fraud for lack of specificity. — When the plaintiff failed to allege fraud with necessary particularity and specificity following order of court to make a more definite statement of fraud, the proper remedy was to dismiss the allegations of the complaint relating to fraud. Moultrie v. Atlanta Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 148 Ga. App. 650, 252 S.E.2d 77 (1979).

Motion for more definite statement proper remedy in fraud case. — When a trust beneficiary alleged a bank's fraud in the administration of the trust, and the bank alleged that the beneficiary did not plead fraud with sufficient specificity, the bank's proper course of action was to move for a more definite statement, under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(e), rather than to dismiss, as a pleading of a special matter, such as fraud, was not to be dismissed for failure to state a claim unless it appeared beyond doubt that the beneficiary could prove no set of facts in support of the beneficiary's claim which would entitle the beneficiary to relief. Goldston v. Bank of Am. Corp., 259 Ga. App. 690, 577 S.E.2d 864 (2003).

2. Special Demurrers Under Prior Law

Special demurrer, being a critic, must itself be perfect. Reserve Life Ins.

Co. v. Gay, 96 Ga. App. 601, 101 S.E.2d 158 (1957) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-304).

Special demurrer, being a critic, must itself be free from imperfections; it must lay its finger, so to speak, on the very point. Atlanta & W. Point R.R. v. McDonald, 88 Ga. App. 515, 76 S.E.2d 825 (1953) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-304).

Special demurrer must specifically point out alleged imperfections in the pleadings. — Special demurrer, being a critic, must itself be perfect, pointing out clearly and specifically the alleged imperfection in the pleading attacked by it, and laying its finger, as it were, upon the very point. Shaef Chem. Co. v. Cook, 106 Ga. App. 223, 126 S.E.2d 806 (1962) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-304).

Special demurrers will be overruled when their grounds are confusing and uncertain since a demurrer must itself be free from defect. Smith v. Willoughby, 204 Ga. 570, 50 S.E.2d 364 (1948) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-304).

All that a special demurrer requires of a petition is reasonable definiteness and certainty, and it does not require that the pleader must indulge in needless particularities. Cuttino v. Mimms, 98 Ga. App. 198, 105 S.E.2d 343 (1958) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-304).

Information in defendant's knowledge. — When information called for by a special demurrer is within the defendant's knowledge, overruling of the demurrer is not harmful error since the defendant is not thereby hindered from preparing a defense. Steed v. Harris, 52 Ga. App. 581, 183 S.E. 847 (1936) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-304).

Proper judgment on a special demurrer going only to the meagerness of the allegations of a petition is not a judgment sustaining the demurrer and dismissing the petition, but a judgment requiring the pleader to amend and make a petition more certain in the particulars wherein the pleader has been delinquent. Lundy v. City Council, 51 Ga. App. 655, 181 S.E. 237 (1935) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-304).

Dismissal of part or all of petition for failure to amend. — When a special demurrer to a petition is sustained, with leave to amend, and there is a failure to do so, the petition should be dismissed if the delinquency relates to the entire cause of action; but if the demurrer goes only to some particular part of the petition, the proper judgment is to strike the defective portion, and not to dismiss the entire action. Lundy v. City Council, 51 Ga. App. 655, 181 S.E. 237 (1935); Sellers v. City of Summerville, 88 Ga. App. 109, 76 S.E.2d 99 (1953) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-304).

When a special demurrer to a petition is sustained with leave to amend, and there is a failure or refusal to amend, the petition should be dismissed if the defect to delinquency relates to the entire cause of action. McBurney v. Woodward, 84 Ga. App. 807, 67 S.E.2d 398 (1951) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-304).

When a special demurrer goes only to some particular part of a petition, without which a valid cause of action would still be set forth, the result of sustaining the special demurrer would be to strike the defective portion of the petition, not to dismiss the action. McBurney v. Woodward, 84 Ga. App. 807, 67 S.E.2d 398 (1951) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-304).

When a defect which is the subject of special demurrer and which goes to the petition as a whole is sustained, the court should give the plaintiff time in which to amend, and when such time is given and plaintiff fails or refuses to cure the defect by amendment, the petition should then be dismissed. Rogers v. Adams, 98 Ga. App. 155, 105 S.E.2d 364 (1958) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-304).

Minute particularity not required. — Petition is not subject to special demurrer because the petition lacks minute particularity in averments of negligence, especially as to facts within the knowledge of the defendant. Colonial Stores, Inc. v. Stanley, 102 Ga. App. 645, 117 S.E.2d 245 (1960) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-304).

Motion to Strike

Scope of subsection (f). — Subsection (f) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12 does not embrace striking the substance of an entire claim or counterclaim. Specialized Alarm Servs., Inc. v. Kauska, 189 Ga. App. 863, 377 S.E.2d 703, cert denied, 189 Ga. App. 913, 377 S.E.2d 703 (1989).

Purpose. — Purpose of a motion to strike is not to excise testimony allowed in without contemporaneous objection. The stated purpose is only to strike from pleadings any insufficient defense, redundant, immaterial, impertinent, or scandalous matter. Guthrie v. Bank S., 195 Ga. App. 123, 393 S.E.2d 60 (1990).

Four terms “redundant,” “immaterial,” “impertinent,” and “scandalous,” are not mutually exclusive; there is a certain amount of overlapping between the terms, particularly the first three. Northwestern Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. McGivern, 132 Ga. App. 297, 208 S.E.2d 258 (1974).

Meaning of “impertinence.” — “Impertinence” consists of any allegation not responsive or relevant to the issues involved in the action, and which could not be put in issue or be given in evidence between the parties. Northwestern Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. McGivern, 132 Ga. App. 297, 208 S.E.2d 258 (1974).

To determine whether a matter is impertinent, one must first determine the scope of the issues in controversy, and then determine whether the matter injected in the pleadings is relevant or material thereto. Northwestern Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. McGivern, 132 Ga. App. 297, 208 S.E.2d 258 (1974).

One test as to whether matter in a pleading is irrelevant, immaterial, or impertinent is whether evidence in support of it would be admissible. Schaefer v. Mayor of Athens, 120 Ga. App. 301, 170 S.E.2d 339 (1969).

Patently false and sham pleading.

— Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in striking a legal malpractice complaint in which client's counsel sought to justify the failure to include a required expert affidavit by saying that time constraints that were caused by the limitations period did not permit the inclusion of an affidavit; the statement was patently false and a sham as counsel had twice previously filed and voluntarily dismissed complaints without the required affidavit.

Motion to Strike (Cont'd)

Smith v. Morris, Manning & Martin, LLP, 254 Ga. App. 355, 562 S.E.2d 725 (2002).

Motion to strike is not analogous to a motion for summary judgment. Leggett v. Benton Bros. Drayage & Storage Co., 138 Ga. App. 761, 227 S.E.2d 397 (1976).

Only matters within pleadings to be considered. — Absence of explicit provision for consideration of matters outside the pleadings is intentional, and upon a motion to strike the court may consider only matters within the pleadings. Unigard Ins. Co. v. Kemp, 141 Ga. App. 698, 234 S.E.2d 539 (1977).

Motion to strike not favored. — Motions to strike, alleging redundant, immaterial, impertinent, or scandalous matter, are not favored. Northwestern Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. McGivern, 132 Ga. App. 297, 208 S.E.2d 258 (1974); Medlin v. Carpenter, 174 Ga. App. 50, 329 S.E.2d 159 (1985).

Unless it is clear that it can have no possible bearing upon the subject matter of the litigation, matter in pleadings will not be stricken; if there is any doubt as to whether under any contingency the matter may raise an issue, the motion should be denied. Northwestern Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. McGivern, 132 Ga. App. 297, 208 S.E.2d 258 (1974).

Motion to strike a defense should not be granted unless it appears to a certainty that the plaintiff would succeed despite any state of facts which could be proved in support of the defense. Wellbaum v. Murphy, 122 Ga. App. 654, 178 S.E.2d 690 (1970); Unigard Ins. Co. v. Kemp, 141 Ga. App. 698, 234 S.E.2d 539 (1977); West v. Griggs, 144 Ga. App. 285, 241 S.E.2d 26 (1977).

Motion to strike an answer should not be granted unless it appears to a certainty that the plaintiff would succeed despite any state of facts which could be proved in support of the defense. Potpourri of Merrick, Inc. v. Gay Gibson, Inc., 132 Ga. App. 565, 208 S.E.2d 579 (1974).

Motion to strike an allegation in a complaint is not to be granted unless, construing the pleadings in a light most favorable to the plaintiff, the plaintiff can establish no set of facts that would entitle the plaintiff to relief against the defendant. Watkins & Watkins, P.C. v. Williams, 238 Ga. App. 646, 518 S.E.2d 704 (1999).

When a motion to strike defenses is not made without 30 days of service upon the plaintiff, the court does not abuse the court's discretion in refusing the motion, even if such defenses are legally insufficient. Potpourri of Merrick, Inc. v. Gay Gibson, Inc., 132 Ga. App. 565, 208 S.E.2d 579 (1974).

When complaint showed on the complaint's face that the statute of limitations had run, and there was no further showing by amendment or affidavit that a tolling of the statute was possible, a motion to strike the barred claims was properly granted. Leggett v. Benton Bros. Drayage & Storage Co., 138 Ga. App. 761, 227 S.E.2d 397 (1976).

Defense not clearly insufficient. — In a wrongful death action against the Department of Transportation (DOT), the trial court erred in dismissing as insufficient DOT's defense based on the plaintiff's failure to file an expert affidavit in support of a claim involving a question of professional negligence by highway engineers. DOT v. Taunton, 217 Ga. App. 232, 457 S.E.2d 570 (1995).

In a wrongful death action against the Department of Transportation (DOT), a motion to strike was not the appropriate vehicle to dispose of DOT's "public duty" defense based on the doctrine established in City of Rome v. Jordan, 263 Ga. 26, 426 S.E.2d 861 (1993). DOT v. Taunton, 217 Ga. App. 232, 457 S.E.2d 570 (1995).

Failure to move to strike waived on appeal. — On appeal from an order granting summary judgment to a store in a customer's slip and fall action, the appeals court declined to consider a store's argument that a customer's affidavit was invalid based on discrepancies in its execution as the store failed to move to strike the affidavit below, resulting in a waiver of this claim on appeal. Durham v. Patel, 282 Ga. App. 437, 638 S.E.2d 851 (2006).

Waiver or Preservation of Defenses1. In General

Defense waived if not raised. — By not raising the defense of lack of jurisdiction over the person or improper venue by motion or responsive pleading, the defendant waives any objection the defendant may have had. Smith v. Smith, 248 Ga. 268, 282 S.E.2d 324 (1981), overruled on other grounds, Abushmais v. Erby, 282 Ga. 619, 652 S.E.2d 549 (2007).

Insurance company waived affirmative defense of insufficiency of service of process by failing to raise that defense in the answer to the amended complaint. McNeil v. McCollum, 276 Ga. App. 882, 625 S.E.2d 10 (2005).

Failure to raise defense to improper counterclaim did not act as waiver. — Because a change of custody could not be asserted as a counterclaim, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 19-9-23, the trial court erred in denying a father's motion to dismiss the counterclaim asserted by a mother, and the father's failure to raise the matter as a defense did not act as a waiver, as he filed no response to the counterclaim. Bailey v. Bailey, 283 Ga. App. 361, 641 S.E.2d 580 (2007).

Failure to state particular defense immaterial if action barred by statute of limitations. — It was immaterial that the defendant did not raise the defense of insufficiency of process or service of process in the defendant's answers since motions for summary judgment and to dismiss were brought on the ground that the action was barred by the statute of limitation, and the defendant's right to dismissal on this ground was not waived. Kannady v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 214 Ga. App. 492, 448 S.E.2d 374 (1994).

Waiver of venue. — Husband waived any objection to venue when the husband consented to venue in Cobb County in open court; therefore, the superior court did not err in denying the husband's motion to set aside the contempt judgment. Crutchfield v. Lawson, 294 Ga. 407, 754 S.E.2d 50 (2014).

Default of nonresident does not waive defenses for resident co-defendant. — Default of the nonresident defendant, which would otherwise constitute a waiver of various defenses, does not estop the nonresident defendant from asserting the fact of nonresidency in the event of judgment in favor of or dismissal of the resident defendant. Russell v. Hall, 165 Ga. App. 547, 301 S.E.2d 904 (1983).

No waiver of defenses. — Trial court erred by granting a parent's complaint for modification of child custody and support and changing custody, which was filed in that parent's county of residence, as that county was not the jurisdiction wherein the issue of custody and support was originally litigated and the opposing parent never waived the challenge to the jurisdiction of the trial court via a pro se letter, which merely acknowledged receipt of the complaint; as a result, the judgment granting the change of custody was reversed and the case was remanded to the trial court with directions for the trial court to transfer the case to the trial court of the proper county. Hatch v. Hatch, 287 Ga. App. 832, 652 S.E.2d 874 (2007).

Non-duplication of payments is not an affirmative defense; thus, an insurer that was served as the plaintiff's uninsured motorist carrier in an action arising from a motor vehicle collision was not required to raise this issue in its answer or counterclaim, but was entitled to set off the amount it had already paid the plaintiffs from the amount of the judgment. Yates v. Dean, 244 Ga. App. 333, 535 S.E.2d 335 (2000).

2. Personal Jurisdiction, Venue, Process and Service

Jurisdiction of the person may be waived. Harper v. Allen, 41 Ga. App. 736, 154 S.E. 651 (1930) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-503).

Waiver of jurisdiction cannot prejudice third persons. — Parties by consent, express or implied, cannot give jurisdiction to the court as to the person or the subject matter; jurisdiction may be waived, however, as to the person, so far as the rights of the parties themselves are concerned, but not so as to prejudice third persons. Gates v. Shaner, 208 Ga. 454, 67 S.E.2d 569 (1951) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-503).

Defense of improper venue in a child custody case may be waived. Holt v. Leiter, 232 Ga. App. 376, 501 S.E.2d 879 (1998).

Waiver or Preservation of Defenses (Cont'd)

2. Personal Jurisdiction, Venue, Process and Service (Cont'd)

Waiver of defenses inapplicable absent service or waiver thereof. — When there has been no service and no waiver of service, statutory provisions requiring such defense to be made or considered waived are not applicable. DeJarnette Supply Co. v. F.P. Plaza, Inc., 229 Ga. 625, 193 S.E.2d 852 (1972).

Amendment may not raise defenses under paragraph (h)(1). — Under paragraph (h)(1) of this section, defenses of lack of jurisdiction over the person, improper venue, insufficiency of process, and insufficiency of service of process may not be pled by amendment to an original pleading. Security Ins. Co. v. Gill, 141 Ga. App. 324, 233 S.E.2d 278 (1977).

Failure to raise issue. — Defense of lack of jurisdiction over the person or improper venue may be waived by a failure to raise these issues by a motion to dismiss or in a responsive pleading, as originally filed. Hornsby v. Hancock, 165 Ga. App. 543, 301 S.E.2d 900 (1983).

Defendant waives the defense of lack of personal jurisdiction due to improper venue when the defendant fails to raise the issue by motion or in the defendant's responsive pleadings. Bouldin v. Contran Corp., 167 Ga. App. 364, 306 S.E.2d 685 (1983).

Defenses preserved when filed in earlier pleading. — Even though the defendants waited a year to file the defendants' motion to dismiss, the defendants did not waive defenses of insufficient service and expiration of the statute of limitation because those defenses were raised in the defendants' first defensive pleading. Heis v. Young, 226 Ga. App. 739, 487 S.E.2d 403 (1997).

Defense of insufficient process preserved. — Although the record revealed that defendant was never served with process, the defendant preserved the defense of insufficiency of service of process by raising the defense in the defendant's objection to the plaintiff's petition. In re Ray, 248 Ga. App. 45, 545 S.E.2d 617 (2001).

Trial court did not err in granting the motion to dismiss for improper service as the towing company owner preserved the defense by specifically raising the defense in the owner's answer and did not waive the owner's procedural defenses by participating in substantial litigation on the merits, or by consenting to a pretrial order that did not list the procedural defense as a remaining issue; although the pretrial order stated that there were no motions or other matters pending for the trial court's consideration, the argument that "service of process upon defendant was not proper" was specifically listed as one of the owner's contentions and, thus, the defense was not waived. Carnes v. Reece, 271 Ga. App. 490, 610 S.E.2d 135 (2005).

In a family's lawsuit against a driver after a collision, the driver did not waive the driver's defense of failure of service by not raising the defense in a motion to dismiss the family's claim for attorney fees and costs. The defendant raised lack of service in the defendant's answer; thus, the defense of lack of service was properly before the trial court. Abimbola v. Pate, 291 Ga. App. 769, 662 S.E.2d 840 (2008).

When no question of jurisdiction is raised in the justice's court, it cannot be raised after verdict and appeal, either as to jurisdiction of the person or as to jurisdiction of amount, when lack of jurisdiction as to the amount does not affirmatively appear from the pleadings. Garrierson v. McGuire, 114 Ga. App. 665, 152 S.E.2d 624 (1966) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-503).

Waiver of personal jurisdiction in equity. — Principle as to waiver of jurisdiction of the person applies not only to actions at law, but also to equity cases, including actions for specific performance. Black v. Milner Hotels, Inc., 194 Ga. 828, 22 S.E.2d 780 (1942) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-503).

When a party filed objections to interrogatories and sought a ruling thereon, the party waived the matter of venue or jurisdiction of the person. Sorrells v. Cole, 111 Ga. App. 136, 141 S.E.2d 193 (1965) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-503).

By being in default for failure to file a timely answer under O.C.G.A.

§ 9-11-55, the appellant waives the right under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12 to contest the trial court's personal jurisdiction. Stout v. Signate Holding, Inc., 184 Ga. App. 154, 361 S.E.2d 36 (1987); Mine Chen v. Alexander Terry Assocs., 228 Ga. App. 345, 491 S.E.2d 834 (1997).

Failure to timely move for hearing.

— After a defendant pled insufficient service of process in the defendant's answer, but did not move for a hearing on the issue until after the appeal of the defendant's motion for summary judgment on the merits was ruled on adversely by the appellate court, neither the court nor the opponent was put on notice that this waivable preliminary jurisdictional defense would be insisted on. Nor did the appellate court have the issue before the court when the court labored over the case the first time. Thus, the defense was waived. Wheeler's, Inc. v. Wilson, 196 Ga. App. 622, 396 S.E.2d 790 (1990).

Appearance and pleading to merits.

— Objections to venue or jurisdiction of the person are waived by making a general appearance without specially reserving the matter in the answer or other defensive pleading. Gooch v. Appalachian Lumber Co., 123 Ga. App. 804, 182 S.E.2d 487 (1971).

When the defendant pleads to the merits without excepting to the jurisdiction of the court, the defendant waives any objection to the jurisdiction of the person. Moody v. Mendenhall, 238 Ga. 689, 234 S.E.2d 905 (1977).

Service under long arm statute.

— Foreign corporation did not waive the defense of lack of jurisdiction by not raising the defense in a responsive pleading or filing a motion to dismiss after being served under the long arm statute. Hoesch Am., Inc. v. Dai Yang Metal Co., 217 Ga. App. 845, 459 S.E.2d 187 (1995); B & D Fabricators v. D.H. Blair Investment Banking Corp., 220 Ga. App. 373, 469 S.E.2d 683 (1996).

Waiver from pre-trial order. — Defenses of lack of personal jurisdiction, insufficient service of process, and improper venue may all be waived if the defenses are omitted, without objection, from the pre-trial order. Rice v. Cropsey, 203 Ga. App. 272, 416 S.E.2d 786, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 907, 416 S.E.2d 786 (1992).

Defendant in a promissory note case, by pleading to the merits and not raising the defense of lack of jurisdiction of the person, defective process, or improper venue, waived any objection the defendant may have had, and the court had personal jurisdiction and authority to enter a default judgment against the defendant. Kiplinger v. Oliver, 244 Ga. 527, 260 S.E.2d 904 (1979).

Jurisdictional defects are waived by defendant's appearance and pleading to the merits and the defendant's failure to attack the court's jurisdiction by a timely plea. Shaef Chem. Co. v. Cook, 106 Ga. App. 223, 126 S.E.2d 806 (1962) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-503).

When the defendant appears and pleads to the merits of a case, without pleading to the jurisdiction of the court and without excepting thereto, a defendant thereby admits the jurisdiction of the court; and after verdict and judgment, the question of jurisdiction cannot be raised in a motion to arrest. Olshine v. Bryant, 55 Ga. App. 90, 189 S.E. 572 (1936) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-503).

When a defendant appears and pleads to the merits of a case, without pleading to the jurisdiction of the court, and without excepting thereto, a defendant thereby admits the jurisdiction of the court, and cannot thereafter urge the jurisdictional question. Olshine v. Bryant, 55 Ga. App. 91, 189 S.E. 576 (1936) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-503).

Trial court did not err when the court concluded that, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(h)(1), a contractor waived objection to the sufficiency of service by a North Carolina deputy sheriff because the contractor appeared in court and filed a responsive pleading and motion, and the contractor failed to raise the issue of service by a North Carolina deputy sheriff in the contractor's first pleading or motion. Merry v. Robinson, 313 Ga. App. 321, 721 S.E.2d 567 (2011).

When attorney for wife exchanged correspondence with husband who sought divorce, and sent husband a card requesting entry of appearance, but since the wife did not submit any motions of any kind, file any pleadings, nor by any overt act participate in the litigation, such facts did not constitute a general appearance by the wife so as to waive the defect in service previously ruled by the court to exist. Baker v. Baker, 216 Ga. 800, 120 S.E.2d 308 (1961) (decided under former Code 1933, §§ 81-209 and 81-503).

Letter written by attorney to the court clerk, enclosing an appearance card, did not constitute such appearance as would waive jurisdiction, service, or absence of process under the Code. Baker v. Baker, 215 Ga. 688, 113 S.E.2d 113 (1960) (decided under former Code 1933, §§ 81-209, 81-211 and 81-503).

Having failed to raise defense of lack of jurisdiction over the person in a responsive pleading or by a motion made at or before filing responsive pleadings, such defense was waived. Hodges v. Lane, 124 Ga. App. 830, 186 S.E.2d 322 (1971); Gustin v. Roberts Mtg. & Inv. Corp., 162 Ga. App. 397, 291 S.E.2d 455 (1982).

Failure to question jurisdiction in pleadings. — Filing of a demurrer and answer, without questioning the jurisdiction, is pleading to the merits within the rule that one pleading to the merits without excepting to the jurisdiction of the court waives any objection to jurisdiction of the person. Alexander v. Davis, 210 Ga. 292, 79 S.E.2d 810 (1954) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-503).

Failure to raise defenses of insufficient service, lack of personal jurisdiction, and improper venue had to be raised before or at the time of pleading, failure to do so either in the answer or by motion filed before or with the answer constituted a waiver of the defenses. Amaechi v. Am. Honda Fin. Corp., 251 Ga. App. 591, 554 S.E.2d 536 (2001).

Filing of plea to merits subject to plea to jurisdiction not a waiver. — Filing of a general demurrer or other plea to the merits, when filed subject to a plea to the jurisdiction or traverse of service, is not a waiver of the special plea. Home Fin. Co. v. Bank of La Fayette, 215 Ga. 533, 111 S.E.2d 359 (1959) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-503).

When jurisdiction has been expressly excepted to by filing a plea at the first opportunity, the filing of a plea to the merits thereafter without stating that it is filed subject to the earlier plea does not have the effect of waiving the plea previously filed. Milam v. Terrell, 214 Ga. 199, 104 S.E.2d 219 (1958) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-503).

Failure to challenge jurisdiction and venue. — When the defendants are served officially in a legal manner, defenses of lack of jurisdiction over the person and improper venue are waived if not presented to the trial court either by motion or responsive pleading prior to judgment. Padgett Masonry & Concrete Co. v. Peachtree Bank & Trust Co., 130 Ga. App. 886, 204 S.E.2d 807 (1974).

When the defendant had notice of an action and could have appeared to challenge personal jurisdiction and venue, but elected to do nothing, waiver resulted. Echols v. Dyches, 140 Ga. App. 191, 230 S.E.2d 315 (1976).

Defense of lack of venue must be made at earliest opportunity to plead or the defense is waived. Maalouf v. Knight, 237 Ga. App. 509, 515 S.E.2d 650 (1999).

One who, being properly served, wishes to rely on defense of lack of venue, must bring the defense to the attention of the court at a proper time, or the defense is waived. Goldstein v. Atlanta Coop. Credit Ass'n, 143 Ga. App. 890, 240 S.E.2d 155 (1977).

Defense based on forum selection clause waived. — Tenant waived the tenant's defenses of personal jurisdiction and venue based on a forum selection clause in a contract by failing to raise those defenses in the tenant's answer and counterclaim to a suit brought by the individual owner of its landlord under a separate lease contract, and the trial court erred in dismissing the owner's suit. AIM DMC One, LLC v. Frank Gates Serv. Co., 325 Ga. App. 440, 754 S.E.2d 82 (2013).

Pleading to and defending on the merits when it was legally required, and at a time when the court had jurisdiction, did not constitute a waiver on the question of improper venue. Charles S. Martin Distrib. Co. v. Roberts, 111 Ga.

App. 653, 143 S.E.2d 11 (1965) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-503).

Party who, having been properly served, wishes to rely on the defense of lack of venue must bring the defense to the attention of the court prior to allowing the case to go to default judgment or the defense is waived. McDonough Contractors v. Martin & DeLoach Paving & Contracting Co., 183 Ga. App. 428, 359 S.E.2d 200 (1987).

Failure to raise insufficiency of process at pretrial conference waives issue. — While the better practice in proceedings under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-16 (pretrial procedure) is to make specific reference as to the disposition of preliminary matters such as those raised pursuant to subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12, the trial court does not abuse the court's discretion in concluding that the defendant who knows that the service of process upon the defendant is insufficient from the time the defendant's answer is filed but, nevertheless, purposefully neglects to pursue this issue at the pretrial conference, waives the insufficiency of service of process defense and thus consents to the jurisdiction of the trial court. Georgia Power Co. v. O'Bryant, 169 Ga. App. 491, 313 S.E.2d 709 (1983).

Failure to raise defect in service. — Any defect in the service of process must be deemed waived when there is no indication in the record on appeal that the issue was raised in the trial court. Taylor v. Bentley, 166 Ga. App. 887, 305 S.E.2d 617 (1983).

Failure to give notice. — Purchaser's abuse of litigation claim against the lender was properly dismissed under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(b)(6) because the purchaser failed to give written notice to the lender as was required by O.C.G.A. § 51-7-84(a). LaSonde v. Chase Mortg. Co., 259 Ga. App. 772, 577 S.E.2d 822 (2003).

Failure of defendant to raise question of venue, either by motion or by defense in the defendant's answer, amounts to waiver of venue. Goldstein v. Atlanta Coop. Credit Ass'n, 143 Ga. App. 890, 240 S.E.2d 155 (1977).

Trial court was without authority to grant the ex-husband's motion to transfer consolidated actions for contempt and modification of custody because the ex-husband waived any defense of improper venue when the ex-husband failed to raise the defense of improper venue either in an answer or a motion to dismiss. Hamner v. Turpen, 319 Ga. App. 619, 737 S.E.2d 721 (2013).

Plea to the merits as waiver of venue defense. — All causes of action are ordinarily brought in the county of the residence of the defendant, but this provision of the law may be waived as by appearance and pleading to the merits without raising the point. Georgia Power Co. v. Woodall, 48 Ga. App. 85, 172 S.E. 76 (1933) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-503).

Defense of improper venue is waived when defendants appear in court and plead to the merits, without challenging the jurisdiction or asserting the defense of improper venue. Daniel v. Yow, 226 Ga. 544, 176 S.E.2d 67 (1970).

When the defendant properly raised defense of improper venue at the appropriate time, and filed a motion within 30 days of judgment contesting that determination, the defendant's defense of lack of venue was not waived by the fact that the case was allowed to go to default judgment. Morgan v. Berry, 152 Ga. App. 623, 263 S.E.2d 508 (1979).

Appearance in an action by filing an answer, raising defense of insufficiency of service of process, and answering interrogatories does not constitute a waiver of defective service. Glass v. Byrom, 146 Ga. App. 1, 245 S.E.2d 345 (1978).

Filing of answer and counterclaim on same day as motion to dismiss. — When written motion to dismiss for insufficiency of service of process was filed on the same day as an answer and counterclaim, the defendant did not waive alleged deficiency in service. Weems v. Weems, 225 Ga. 154, 166 S.E.2d 352 (1969).

Waiver of irregularities of service and process by plea to the merits. — If a defendant appears and pleads to the merits, without pleading to the jurisdiction and without any protestation as to process or service, the defendant thereby admits the jurisdiction of the court and

2. Personal Jurisdiction, Venue, Process and Service (Cont'd) waives all irregularities of the process, or of the absence of process and the service thereof. Harper v. Allen, 41 Ga. App. 736, 154 S.E. 651 (1930) (decided under former Code 1933, §§ 81-209 and 81-503).

Appearance and pleading to the merits are a waiver of the absence of process. Edison Provision Co. v. Armour & Co., 51 Ga. App. 213, 179 S.E. 829 (1935) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-209).

Appearance and pleading to the merits are a waiver of all irregularities of the process or of the absence of process and the service thereof. Olshine v. Bryant, 55 Ga. App. 90, 189 S.E. 572 (1936); Jones v. Jones, 209 Ga. 861, 76 S.E.2d 801 (1953) (decided under former Code 1933, §§ 81-209 and 81-503).

Appearance and pleading, without a reservation by the pleader of the pleader's right to object later, are a waiver of all irregularities in the process. Nichols v. Acree, 112 Ga. App. 287, 145 S.E.2d 92 (1965) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-209).

Defendant who appears and pleads to the merits of the action, without previous objection to the process, and without also objecting to the lack of jurisdiction of the court over the defendant's person, waives any objection which the defendant may have had to the issuance of the process, defects in the process, or the service, and even any objection based on the ground of total want of service. Cherry v. McCutchen, 68 Ga. App. 682, 23 S.E.2d 587 (1942) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-209).

General appearance by answering a petition waives all irregularities in the service of process. Hagins v. Howell, 219 Ga. 276, 133 S.E.2d 8 (1963); Franklin County v. Payne, 115 Ga. App. 52, 153 S.E.2d 732 (1967) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-209).

In filing a general demurrer without protesting omission of process, that defect is waived. Harrison v. Lovett, 198 Ga. 466, 31 S.E.2d 799 (1944) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-209).

Filing an answer is pleading to the merits, and when done without an express reservation of the defendant's right to insist upon irregularities in the process, it amounts to a waiver of the irregularities. Stone v. Strange, 115 Ga. App. 56, 153 S.E.2d 587 (1967) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-209).

Failure to raise defense of lack of service. — Contention that insufficiency of service of process is apparent on the face of the record has no merit when such defense is waived by the defendant's failure to raise the defense by motion or in the defendant's original responsive pleadings. Christopher v. McGehee, 124 Ga. App. 310, 183 S.E.2d 624, aff'd, 228 Ga. 466, 186 S.E.2d 97 (1971).

Fact that an answer was filed by the defendant prior to service on individual partners furnished no basis to set aside the judgment as the defense of lack of service was waived by failure to assert the defense in the answer. Bolton Rd. Medical Ctr. v. Strother & Co., 140 Ga. App. 724, 231 S.E.2d 533 (1976).

When the defendant failed to include the defendant's contention of improper service in the defendant's motion to open the default or in the defendant's answer, the defendant waived that defense. A.G. Spanos Dev., Inc. v. Caras, 170 Ga. App. 243, 316 S.E.2d 793 (1984).

Defendant who has not been served with process waives any defect in service when the defendant fails to raise the defenses of lack of personal jurisdiction or lack of sufficiency of process by either motion or an answer; a debtor's letter to the court, in which the debtor identified the number of a collection case filed against the debtor by a creditor, denied owing the debt, and asserted that the creditor was indebted to the debtor sufficed as an answer, and the failure to raise personal-jurisdiction or service-of-process defenses in that answer waived the defenses. Ahmad v. Excell Petroleum, Inc., 276 Ga. App. 167, 623 S.E.2d 6 (2005).

Plea to jurisdiction without objection to service. — When there is irregular or insufficient service or no service at all, but the defendant, not objecting to service, files a plea to the jurisdiction on grounds of nonresidence in the county, the object of service (opportunity to be heard) becomes accomplished of record in the case; hence, filing of such plea without objecting to service is waiver of service. Weddington v. Kumar, 149 Ga. App. 857, 256 S.E.2d 141 (1979).

Attack on proof of service only. — When the defendant did not attack the validity of service or contend that no service was made, but only attacked the lack of proof thereof, the defendant waived service by appearing and pleading. Daniel & Daniel, Inc. v. Stewart Bros., 139 Ga. App. 372, 228 S.E.2d 586 (1976), overruled on other grounds, Montgomery v. USS Agri-Chem. Div., 155 Ga. App. 189, 270 S.E.2d 362 (1980).

Party's appearance before the trial court subsequent to the filing of the party's pleading in which the party contests the sufficiency of process does not amount to a waiver of that defense. Gaddis v. Dyer Lumber Co., 168 Ga. App. 334, 308 S.E.2d 852 (1983).

Plea to jurisdiction on ground of nonresidence as waiver of service. — When there is irregular or insufficient service or no service at all, but the defendant, not objecting to the service or want of service, files a plea to the jurisdiction on the ground of the defendant's nonresidence in the county, the object of service (opportunity to be heard) becomes accomplished of record in the case, and the filing of such plea without objecting to the service or want of service is waiver of service. Cutcliffe v. Pryse, 187 Ga. 51, 200 S.E. 124 (1938) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-209).

Motion complaining of void process not waiver. — When a want of jurisdiction appears on the face of the proceedings, an appearance by motion on the part of the person at whom such void process was directed, complaining of the want of the jurisdiction of the court, is not such an appearance as will result in the waiver of the process and service. Burch v. Crown Laundry, 78 Ga. App. 421, 50 S.E.2d 768 (1948), aff'd, 205 Ga. 211, 53 S.E.2d 116 (1949) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-501).

Plea to merits not waiver when want of service is pled. — Appearance and pleading to the merits will waive service, if no objection is made to the want of service, but it does not have such effect when before or at the same time want of service is pled; both pleas may be filed together without destroying each other. Cutcliffe v. Pryse, 187 Ga. 51, 200 S.E. 124 (1938) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-209).

Pleading to and defending on the merits when legally required to do so, and at a time when the court had jurisdiction over a codefendant, did not constitute a waiver by the defendant on the question of improper venue. Routh v. St. Marys Airport Auth., 178 Ga. App. 191, 342 S.E.2d 502 (1986).

Defense of lack of service not waived. — It was clear that the defendant preserved the issues of lack of service and insufficiency of service by pleading the defenses in accordance with O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12, and, by reasserting the defenses in the defendant's motion for summary judgment, the defendant documented the defendant's intent that the defendant did not waive the defenses, and this was recognized and adhered to by the trial court. Roberts v. Bienert, 183 Ga. App. 751, 360 S.E.2d 25 (1987).

Participation in discovery after defense of insufficiency of service has been properly raised in an answer to a complaint does not constitute a waiver of the defective service. Garrett v. Godby, 189 Ga. App. 183, 375 S.E.2d 103 (1988), cert. denied, 189 Ga. App. 912, 375 S.E.2d 103 (1989); Exum v. Melton, 244 Ga. App. 775, 536 S.E.2d 786 (2000).

No waiver of jurisdiction in divorce case. — Divorce suits do not affect the formal parties to the suit alone but the entire social fabric as well; therefore, the provisions of former Code 1933, § 81-503 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-1-2), which authorizes parties in certain cases to waive jurisdiction, does not apply to a divorce suit. Haygood v. Haygood, 190 Ga. 445, 9 S.E.2d 834 (1940) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-503).

Waiver of improper venue and jurisdictional claims found in divorce case. — Because one of the parties in a divorce trial did not raise a claim that jurisdiction and venue were improper until a motion for new trial, this claim was waived under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(h)(1)(B). Fine v. Fine, 281 Ga. 850, 642 S.E.2d 698 (2007).

Waiver of venue objection. — Because the trial court erred in opening a default against lenders, the trial court also erred in transferring the case for lack of proper venue. Under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(h)(1), by failing to answer, the lenders waived any objection to venue. Flournoy v. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A., 289 Ga. App. 560, 657 S.E.2d 625 (2008).

Waiver of personal jurisdiction defense. — Employer who appeared and participated in trial on the merits, after the trial court denied the employer's plea in abatement, submitted to the court's jurisdiction for trial on the merits and waived the employer's personal jurisdiction defense. Singleton v. State, 263 Ga. App. 653, 588 S.E.2d 757 (2003).

Waiver of defense of insufficient service. — Trial court's order of forfeiture was upheld on appeal and, thus, was not subject to dismissal as: (1) the trial court was presented with testimony from witnesses other than the affiant, as well as sufficient other evidence, to support the order; (2) the alleged property owner waived any defense of insufficient service; and (3) an alternative code section did not afford the owner relief. McDowell v. State of Ga., 290 Ga. App. 538, 660 S.E.2d 24 (2008).

3. Failure to State Claim, Join Party, or State Defenses

Failure to state claim may be raised at time of trial. — It is certainly proper and preferable that the defense of failure to state a claim be filed along with or as a part of the answer, but subsection (h) of this section specifically permits such motion to be filed even at the time of trial. Southern Concrete Co. v. Carter Constr. Co., 121 Ga. App. 573, 174 S.E.2d 447 (1970).

Failure to state a claim cannot be raised by motion after judgment. Loukes v. McCoy, 129 Ga. App. 167, 199 S.E.2d 125 (1973).

Treatment as motion for summary judgment. — In an action filed by children to recover damages for injuries sustained by their parent in a fall in a nursing home facility, a motion to dismiss the action for failure to state a claim filed by the center that operated the facility was converted to a motion for summary judgment and, on appeal, was to be reviewed as such; the children, as nonmovants, submitted documentary evidence in response to the motion and, by doing so, in effect requested that the motion be converted into one for summary judgment and acquiesced in the trial court's decision not to give notice of the actual nature of the pending motion. Gaddis v. Chatsworth Health Care Ctr., Inc., 282 Ga. App. 615, 639 S.E.2d 399 (2006).

In a wrongful foreclosure action, the trial court erred in conducting a hearing on the defendants' motion to dismiss and in converting the motion to dismiss into a motion for summary judgment by considering evidence outside the pleadings without giving the plaintiff prior notice as the trial court's notice of hearing stated that the court was conducting a status conference, and the notice made no mention of the defendants' motion to dismiss. Garner v. US Bank Nat'l Ass'n, 329 Ga. App. 86, 763 S.E.2d 748 (2014).

Failure to file defense on appeal to superior court from property evaluation. — Default judgment will not lie for failure to file defensive pleadings in a de novo hearing before a jury on appeal in the superior court from a property evaluation. Hall County Bd. of Tax Assessors v. Reed, 142 Ga. App. 556, 236 S.E.2d 532 (1977).

Complaint failed to state claim. — Trial court properly dismissed an inmate's petition for a writ of habeas corpus for failing to state a claim upon which relief could be granted based on a finding that such was prematurely filed in that no governor's warrant had been issued or served from the seeking state at the time the petition was filed and the inmate had only been arrested for Georgia offenses; moreover, to the extent that the inmate might have been seeking to challenge an arrest without a warrant pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-13-34, insufficient facts were pled which supported such a claim. Powell v. Brown, 281 Ga. 609, 641 S.E.2d 519 (2007).

Failure to join indispensable party.

— Defense of failure to join an indispensable party is subject to defense of waiver under paragraph (h)(2) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12 and must be asserted before judgment or the defense is waived. Adams v. Wright, 162 Ga. App. 550, 293 S.E.2d 446 (1982).

Failure to raise the defense of failure to join an indispensable party by motion or defensive pleading results in a waiver of the defense. Mathis v. Hammond, 268 Ga. 158, 486 S.E.2d 356 (1997).

Immunity defense not waived if pled in answer.

— In a claim of immunity grounded on a state policy enacted to encourage the rendering of emergency medical services, defendant's answer which pled a defense of failure to state a claim upon which relief could have been granted, and asserted the action was barred under the doctrine of sovereign immunity complied with O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12 and the defendant did not waive the right to the defenses. Ramsey v. City of Forest Park, 204 Ga. App. 98, 418 S.E.2d 432 (1992).

Pleading of failure to state claim sufficient notice of immunity defenses.

— Under notice pleading, an answer pleading a defense of failure to state a claim was minimally sufficient to give notice of substantive immunity defenses under either O.C.G.A. § 31-11-8 or O.C.G.A. § 36-33-3. Ramsey v. City of Forest Park, 204 Ga. App. 98, 418 S.E.2d 432 (1992).

Case properly dismissed. — Purchaser's tortious interference with a contract claim was properly dismissed pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(b)(6) because the purchaser could not maintain such a claim against the lender because the lender had a direct interest in the contract. Additionally, the purchaser's abuse of litigation claim was properly dismissed under § 9-11-12(b)(6) because the lender's dispossessory claim against the purchaser and seller, the subject of the abuse of litigation claim, succeeded, which was a complete defense under O.C.G.A. § 51-7-82(c). LaSonde v. Chase Mortg. Co., 259 Ga. App. 772, 577 S.E.2d 822 (2003).

Case improperly dismissed. — Because a neighbor adequately set forth a cause of action for ejection in their amended complaint, specifically alleging that during the elevation of their own property, the adjacent landowner and its transferee appropriated the neighbor's property to the extent that they placed the fill dirt presently being used as lateral support over the common boundary and onto the neighbor's property, the trial court erred in dismissing the complaint. MVP Inv. Co. v. North Fulton Express Oil, LLC, 282 Ga. App. 512, 639 S.E.2d 533 (2006).

4. Subject Matter Jurisdiction

Jurisdiction of subject matter not waivable.

— Rule that a plea to the jurisdiction may be filed on appeal applies only to pleas to the jurisdiction of the subject matter, which can never be waived. Garrison v. McGuire, 114 Ga. App. 665, 152 S.E.2d 624 (1966) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-503).

Dismissal for lack of subject matter jurisdiction.

— Paragraph (h)(3) of this section deals solely with the duty of the trial court to dismiss an action when it appears that subject matter jurisdiction, a nonwaivable defect which would render any judgment in the action void, is absent. McLanahan v. Keith, 239 Ga. 94, 236 S.E.2d 52 (1977), overruled on other grounds, Little v. Walker, 250 Ga. 854, 301 S.E.2d 639 (1983).

Dismissal not authorized. — When an original creditor acquired an existing debt obligation of guarantor and the substantive rights in that indebtedness were then assigned to a subsequent creditor through the sale of the original creditor's stock, there was no need for equitable reformation of any writing, and so the trial court did not err by refusing to dismiss the contract action as being beyond the subject matter jurisdiction of the county court. Davis v. Concord Com. Corp., 209 Ga. App. 595, 434 S.E.2d 571 (1993).

Waiver or Preservation ofDefenses (Cont'd)*4. Subject Matter*Jurisdiction (Cont'd)

Paragraph (h)(3) does not authorize a judge to enforce, over the objection of the defendant, a waivable defense held by that defendant. McLanahan v. Keith, 239 Ga. 94, 236 S.E.2d 52 (1977), overruled on other grounds, Little v. Walker, 250 Ga. 854, 301 S.E.2d 639 (1983).

Effect of hospital governmental entity's delayed non-waiver of service.

— Patients exercised due diligence (under a laches-type of test) to serve a hospital after the hospital informed the patients, after the statute of limitations expired, that the hospital was a governmental entity that, under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4(d), could not accept the patients' request to waive service of process. Therefore, the patient's suit, filed before the statute of limitations expired, related back under laches and O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(b) and the statute of limitations did not bar the dismissed claims against the hospital and, thus, the trial court abused the court's discretion in dismissing the action. Carver v. Tift County Hosp. Auth., 268 Ga. App. 153, 601 S.E.2d 475 (2004).

9-11-13. Counterclaim and cross-claim.

(a) Compulsory counterclaims. A pleading shall state as a counterclaim any claim which at the time of serving the pleading the pleader has against any opposing party, if it arises out of the transaction or occurrence that is the subject matter of the opposing party's claim and does not require for its adjudication the presence of third parties of whom the court cannot acquire jurisdiction. But the pleader need not state the claim if (1) at the time the action was commenced the claim was the subject of another pending action, or (2) the opposing party brought an action upon his claim by attachment or other process by which the court did not acquire jurisdiction to render a personal judgment on that claim, and the pleader is not stating any counterclaim under this Code section, or (3) the claim is not within the jurisdiction of the court.

(b) Permissive counterclaims. A pleading may state as a counterclaim any claim against an opposing party not arising out of the transaction or occurrence that is the subject matter of the opposing party's claim. But any such permissive counterclaim shall be separated for the purposes of trial, unless the parties otherwise agree.

(c) Counterclaim exceeding opposing claim. A counterclaim may or may not diminish or defeat the recovery sought by the opposing party. It may claim relief exceeding in amount or different in kind from that sought in the pleading of the opposing party.

(d) Counterclaim against the state. This Code section shall not be construed to enlarge beyond the limits fixed by law the right to assert counterclaims or to claim credits against the state or an officer or agency thereof.

(e) Counterclaim maturing or acquired after pleading. A claim which either matured or was acquired by the pleader after serving his pleading may, with the permission of the court, be presented as a counterclaim by supplemental pleading.

(f) Omitted counterclaim. When a pleader fails to set up a counterclaim through oversight, inadvertence, or excusable neglect, or when justice requires, he may by leave of court set up the counterclaim by amendment.

(g) Cross-claim against coparty. A pleading may state as a cross-claim any claim by one party against a coparty arising out of the transaction or occurrence that is the subject matter either of the original action or of a counterclaim therein or relating to any property that is the subject matter of the original action. The cross-claim may include a claim that the party against whom it is asserted is or may be liable to the cross-claimant for all or part of a claim asserted in the action against the cross-claimant.

(h) Additional parties may be brought in. When the presence of parties other than those to the original action is required for the granting of complete relief in the determination of a counterclaim or cross-claim, the court shall order them to be brought in as defendants as provided in this chapter, if jurisdiction of them can be obtained.

(i) Separate trials; separate judgments. If the court orders separate trials as provided in subsection (b) of Code Section 9-11-42, judgment on a counterclaim or cross-claim may be rendered in accordance with the terms of subsection (b) of Code Section 9-11-54 when the court has jurisdiction to do so, even if the claims of the opposing party have been dismissed or otherwise disposed of. General Consideration

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code 1933, §§ 81-101, 81-105 and 81-106 are included in the annotations for this Code section.

Controversies growing out of plaintiff's claim. — Policy of the law requires controversy growing out of cause of action alleged by the plaintiff to be settled in that suit. Brewer v. Williams, 210 Ga. 341, 80 S.E.2d 190 (1954) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-106).

One who goes into court of county other than that of one's residence, to assert a claim or set up an equity, must be content to allow that court to determine any counterclaim growing out of the original suit, which the defendant sees fit to set up by a cross action. Brewer v. Williams, 210 Ga. 341, 80 S.E.2d 190 (1954) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-106).

Setoff is a cross action and must be pled with as much certainty and definiteness as a declaration in any suit of law. Morris v. International Agric. Corp., 53 Ga. App. 517, 186 S.E. 583 (1936); City Stores Co. v. Henderson, 116 Ga. App. 114, 156 S.E.2d 818 (1967) (decided under former Code 1933, §§ 8-101 and 81-105).

Applicability in dispossessor action. — Trial court correctly disallowed evidence of emblements or emoluments in a dispossessory action after the defendant failed to assert any such claim in the defendant's answer or as a counterclaim, to proffer evidence of details of the alleged specific improvements that might be the basis for such a claim, or to proffer evidence as to an agreement between the parties for reimbursement of the cost of any improvements. Gentry v. Chateau Properties, 236 Ga. App. 371, 511 S.E.2d 892 (1999).

Inapplicable to contempt. — Provisions of this section with respect to counterclaims and cross complaints are not applicable in contempt cases. McNeal v. McNeal, 233 Ga. 836, 213 S.E.2d 845 (1975); Culpepper v. Brewer, 242 Ga. 210, 248 S.E.2d 619 (1978).

This section is not applicable in contempt cases. Word v. Word, 236 Ga. 100, 222 S.E.2d 382 (1976).

Subsection (a) of this section is not applicable in contempt cases. Blease v. Blease, 238 Ga. 651, 235 S.E.2d 21 (1977).

Counterclaim for change of custody not permitted in contempt action. — Provisions of the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) authorizing counterclaims and cross complaints when not permitted prior to its enactment does not affect a contempt motion so that if the movant is not a resident of the county, wherein the contempt citation is filed, the court is without jurisdiction to consider a counterclaim or cross complaint to modify a prior judgment granting custody of the child. Davis v. Davis, 230 Ga. 33, 195 S.E.2d 440 (1973); Fernandez v. Fernandez, 232 Ga. 697, 208 S.E.2d 498 (1974).

Counterclaim seeking modification of a former custody judgment based on a change of conditions cannot be filed in answer to an application for contempt. Word v. Word, 236 Ga. 100, 222 S.E.2d 382 (1976).

In child custody cases, when the custodial parent files a contempt action in the noncustodial resident's jurisdiction for purposes of enforcing a divorce decree, a counterclaim for change of custody will not lie. Matthews v. Matthews, 238 Ga. 201, 232 S.E.2d 76 (1977).

Contempt motion is not a submission to court's jurisdiction. — Motion filed seeking to have party to divorce proceeding held in contempt of court for failure to comply with decree of court is not tantamount to filing of complaint wherein movant submits to the venue of the court. Davis v. Davis, 230 Ga. 33, 195 S.E.2d 440 (1973); Fernandez v. Fernandez, 232 Ga. 697, 208 S.E.2d 498 (1974).

Recovery of damages for malicious use of process cannot be had by cross action or counterclaim since it is a condition precedent that the main suit must have terminated favorably to the defendant before the claim can be prosecuted in any fashion. Metro Chrysler-Plymouth, Inc. v. Pearce, 121 Ga. App. 835, 175 S.E.2d 910 (1970).

Logical relationship test satisfied.

— Bank sued the bank's customer to recover for an overdraft; before filing the customer's counterclaim, the customer sued the bank in another county. As the customer raised the same claims in the customer's complaint and counterclaim, and as there was a logical relationship between the parties' claims, the customer's counterclaim was compulsory; therefore, the customer's suit against the bank was barred by O.C.G.A. § 9-2-5(a). Steve A. Martin Agency, Inc. v. PlantersFIRST Corp., 297 Ga. App. 780, 678 S.E.2d 186 (2009).

Res judicata applied. — Dismissal of the complaint was affirmed because upon the plaintiffs' voluntary dismissal of the plaintiffs' complaint in the prior action, the defendants' claims stood alone and, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-13(a), the plaintiffs were required to file as a "counterclaim" to the defendant's claims any claims which the plaintiffs had arising out of the transaction or occurrence that was the basis of the defendant's claims. Burrowes v. Tenet Healthsystem GB, Inc., 319 Ga. App. 389, 735 S.E.2d 131 (2012).

Counterclaims

1. In General

Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) allows the broadest assertion of counterclaims. Cities Serv. Oil Co. v. Cronan, 123 Ga. App. 794, 182 S.E.2d 484 (1971).

Counterclaim must have matured.

— To come within the scope of this section, a counterclaim must have “matured.” Metro Chrysler-Plymouth, Inc. v. Pearce, 121 Ga. App. 835, 175 S.E.2d 910 (1970).

Time limitations. — Counterclaim was timely if filed within the time that a party was obligated to answer the main action as long as the limitations period for the counterclaim had not expired before the main action was filed. When both the main action against a truck driver and the truck driver’s third party complaint against an injured person were filed within the two year statute of limitations period, the injured person’s personal injury counterclaim against the truck driver was not barred, even though the counterclaim was filed beyond the two year period, and the trial court erred in dismissing the counterclaim. Harpe v. Hall, 266 Ga. App. 340, 596 S.E.2d 666 (2004).

Plaintiff must have complete cause of action when suit filed. — Rule that there can be no recovery unless the plaintiff had a complete cause of action at the time the suit is filed, and that a cause of action accruing pending suit will not entitle the plaintiff to recover, applies equally to a counterclaim. Metro Chrysler-Plymouth, Inc. v. Pearce, 121 Ga. App. 835, 175 S.E.2d 910 (1970).

Counterclaim sets up affirmative demand. — Counterclaim, by its essential nature, goes beyond the defensive and sets up an affirmative demand; it must state the elements of such a demand, and should state a cause of action in favor of the party alleging it against the plaintiff. Metro Chrysler-Plymouth, Inc. v. Pearce, 121 Ga. App. 835, 175 S.E.2d 910 (1970).

Ex delicto counterclaim may be asserted against an ex contractu action. Elsner v. Cathcart Cartage Co., 124 Ga.

App. 615, 184 S.E.2d 685 (1971); Ben L. O’Callaghan Co. v. Bond Supply Co., 138 Ga. App. 186, 225 S.E.2d 774 (1976).

Ex contractu counterclaim may be asserted against an ex delicto action. Hanover Ins. Co. v. Nelson Conveyor & Mach. Co., 159 Ga. App. 13, 282 S.E.2d 670 (1981).

Counterclaim for damages from plaintiff’s action. — Generally, the defendant cannot by counterclaim bring an action for damages against the plaintiff for having filed and prosecuted the very action in which the defendant asserts the counterclaim. Ferguson v. Atlantic Land & Dev. Corp., 158 Ga. App. 33, 279 S.E.2d 470, rev’d on other grounds, 248 Ga. 69, 281 S.E.2d 545 (1981).

Effect of pending counterclaim on summary judgment. — When there is a pending valid counterclaim, the trial court need not deny a persuasive and valid motion for summary judgment, and it is not error per se to grant a motion for summary judgment when there is a pending, valid counterclaim. Williams v. Church’s Fried Chicken, Inc., 158 Ga. App. 26, 279 S.E.2d 465 (1981).

Application of the prior pending doctrine. — In a personal injury accident between two drivers, the trial court erroneously denied the first driver’s motion to dismiss a counterclaim asserted by the second driver because the second driver had a prior pending action against the first driver in another county, and the parties’ status in both actions was identical. Moreover, given the first driver’s assurances that the instant suit would be dismissed in favor of defending the second driver’s claims in the prior pending action, the denial of the first driver’s motion to dismiss the second driver’s counterclaim was inconsistent with the purpose of O.C.G.A. § 9-2-5. Jenkins v. Crea, 289 Ga. App. 174, 656 S.E.2d 849 (2008).

Pleading which places corporation as third-party plaintiff in derivative suit. — When the affirmative pleading filed by defendant officers, under former §§ 14-2-153 and 14-2-154 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 14-2-831 and 14-2-832), in a corporate action in tort for breach of a fiduciary duty would have the result of placing the corporation as a third-party plaintiff in a stockholders' derivative suit, the purpose of which is to procure certain relief for the benefit of the corporation, such pleading does not appear to be either a compulsory counterclaim arising out of the transaction which is the subject of the complaint under subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-13 or a permissive counterclaim under subsection (b) of § 9-11-13. Henderson v. Kent, 158 Ga. App. 206, 279 S.E.2d 503 (1981).

Counterclaim in declaratory judgment action. — Since the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) is applicable to declaratory judgment actions, it would appear that the defendant in such an action could interpose a counterclaim against the plaintiff. Harrison v. Speidel, 244 Ga. 643, 261 S.E.2d 577 (1979).

Counterclaims and cross-claims are not properly maintainable in a declaratory judgment action when those claims do not arise out of a transaction or question presented by an action for declaratory judgment. Colonial Penn Ins. Co. v. Hart, 162 Ga. App. 333, 291 S.E.2d 410 (1982).

Counterclaim for contribution is permissive. — Party who chooses not to assert his or her claim for contribution as a counterclaim is not barred from bringing a separate suit for contribution after a judgment has been entered in the original tort action. Tenneco Oil Co. v. Templin, 201 Ga. App. 30, 410 S.E.2d 154 (1991).

Counterclaim for breach of warranty not redundant with affirmative defense of nonconformity. — In suit to recover on purchase order, the trial court errs in striking a counterclaim for breach of warranty because it is allegedly redundant in view of an affirmative defense of right to refuse payment because of nonconformity. Bingham, Ltd. v. Tool Technology, Inc., 166 Ga. App. 220, 303 S.E.2d 761 (1983).

Subsequent condemnation action. — Condemnee's counterclaim for damages arising from condemnor's use of previously condemned land could not be raised in condemnor's action to condemn additional land. Flo-Rob, Inc. v. Colonial Pipe- line Co., 170 Ga. App. 650, 317 S.E.2d 885 (1984).

Counterclaim outside bounds of condemnation proceeding. — After the Department of Transportation had initiated condemnation proceedings against a property owner, the owner was not permitted to file a counterclaim to recover damages for unauthorized use of the remainder because the subject of the counterclaim was outside the bounds of this type of condemnation. DOT v. Fina Oil & Chem. Co., 194 Ga. App. 185, 390 S.E.2d 99 (1990).

Late filing of a counterclaim pursuant to subsection (f) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-13 is permitted only as an amendment to pleadings already on file. Thus, once a case is in default, the defendant may not file responsive pleadings unless and until the default is opened. Ragan v. Smith, 188 Ga. App. 770, 374 S.E.2d 559 (1988).

Jurisdiction of property damage counterclaim in Civil Court of Fulton County. — Under the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9), the Civil Court of Fulton County has jurisdiction when actions based on property damage is raised as a counterclaim. Cities Serv. Oil Co. v. Cronan, 123 Ga. App. 794, 182 S.E.2d 484 (1971).

Permission of court required. — While a trial court erred in dismissing a director's permissive counterclaim with prejudice, the trial court would not have erred in dismissing the claim without prejudice because the director did not seek the trial court's permission before filing the claim. Sampson v. Haywire Ventures, Inc., 278 Ga. App. 525, 629 S.E.2d 515 (2006).

Judicial immunity prevented counterclaim. — Counterclaims filed by the county and the county's commissioner were properly dismissed as the judge's handling of traffic cases, including dismissal of 60 cases after the judge lost in a general election, was protected by judicial immunity. Heiskell v. Roberts, 295 Ga. 795, 764 S.E.2d 368 (2014).

Claims did not arise out of the same transaction. — As a developer's tort claims did not arise out of the same transaction or occurrence as the prior claims brought by investors, the claims were properly not deemed compulsory counterclaims; rather, the developer's claims were based on the investors' filing of a lis pendens that occurred in the investors' action. Meadow Springs, LLC v. IH Riverdale, LLC, 323 Ga. App. 478, 747 S.E.2d 47 (2013).

2. Compulsory Counterclaims

When counterclaim compulsory. — This section makes counterclaims mandatory when the counterclaims arise out of the same transaction or occurrence. Coastal Air Serv., Inc. v. Tarco Aviation Serv., Inc., 301 F. Supp. 586 (S.D. Ga. 1969).

Party must raise any claim against an opposing party which arises out of the transaction or occurrence that is the subject-matter of the opposing party's claim as long as the presence of a third party is not required. Southern Jam, Inc. v. Robinson, 675 F.2d 94 (5th Cir. 1982).

Compulsory counterclaim is one which: (1) arises out of the same transaction or occurrence as the main claim; and (2) has matured at the time the answer is filed. Tenneco Oil Co. v. Templin, 201 Ga. App. 30, 410 S.E.2d 154 (1991).

Claim which has not yet accrued cannot be treated as a compulsory counterclaim. Tenneco Oil Co. v. Templin, 201 Ga. App. 30, 410 S.E.2d 154 (1991).

Under Georgia law, claims that have not accrued by the time of the first pleading are not compulsory counterclaims, such that neither a civil conspiracy claim nor an unjust enrichment claim brought on behalf of a software subsidiary constituted compulsory counterclaims, for failure to accrue until a prior action had already concluded in the entry of a default judgment. Akin v. PAFEC Ltd., 991 F.2d 1550 (11th Cir. 1993).

"Occurrence" or "same transaction" construed. — Term "occurrence" or "same transaction" may comprehend a series of many occurrences, depending not so much upon the immediateness of their connection as upon their logical relationship. Myers v. United Servs. Auto. Ass'n, 130 Ga. App. 357, 203 S.E.2d 304 (1973).

Term "occurrence" or "same transaction" as used in this section has been given a broad and realistic interpretation by the courts. P & J Truck Lines v. Canal Ins. Co., 148 Ga. App. 3, 251 S.E.2d 72 (1978).

Subsection (a) and § 9-10-30 compared. — Subsection (a) of Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 13 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-13), allowing counterclaims arising out of the transaction on which the complaint is based, may be compared to Ga. L. 1962, p. 659, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-10-30), allowing equitable relief in the county where proceedings are pending, rather than county of residence, as to matters included in the litigation. Howard Concrete Pipe Co. v. Cohen, 139 Ga. App. 491, 229 S.E.2d 8 (1976).

Key phrase in subsection (a) is that the claim "arises out of the transaction or occurrence that is the subject-matter of the opposing party's claim"; the cause of action has no express bearing on the issue, nor would the fact that the plaintiff might have a different status in the second suit, as opposed to the first, be of any consequence. Harbin Lumber Co. v. Fowler, 137 Ga. App. 90, 222 S.E.2d 878 (1975).

When there was some superficial relation between various libel claims, as the claims were all based upon statements made in the context of a disputed election, but it was not the election itself that was the subject matter of each of the claims but rather the individual statements themselves, evidence regarding the plaintiffs' alleged defamatory statements was largely irrelevant to the question of whether the defendant's statements were false and defamatory, and the trial court erred in dismissing the plaintiffs' claims on the ground that the claims constituted compulsory counterclaims in defendant's prior actions. Bigley v. Mosser, 235 Ga. App. 583, 509 S.E.2d 406 (1998).

Any claim that is logically related to a claim being sued on is properly the basis for a compulsory counterclaim. Myers v. United Servs. Auto. Ass'n, 130 Ga. App. 357, 203 S.E.2d 304 (1973); P & J Truck Lines v. Canal Ins. Co., 148 Ga. App. 3, 251 S.E.2d 72 (1978).

Test to be applied in determining whether a counterclaim is compulsory is whether there is any logical relationship between the claim advanced by the plaintiff and the claim asserted by the defendant. Myers v. United Servs. Auto. Ass'n, 130 Ga. App. 357, 203 S.E.2d 304 (1973); P & J Truck Lines v. Canal Ins. Co., 148 Ga. App. 3, 251 S.E.2d 72 (1978); Goss & Goss Dev. Co. v. First Union Nat'l Bank, 196 Ga. App. 436, 396 S.E.2d 19 (1990).

Broad test to be applied in determining whether a counterclaim is compulsory is whether a logical relationship exists between the respective claims asserted by the opposing parties. Schoen v. Home Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 167 Ga. App. 644, 307 S.E.2d 72 (1983).

Test to be applied in determining whether a counterclaim is compulsory under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-13(a) is whether there is any logical relationship between the claim advanced by the plaintiff and the claim asserted by the defendant; any claim that is logically related to another claim that is being sued on is properly the basis for a compulsory counterclaim. Kennestone Hosp., Inc. v. Hopson, 264 Ga. App. 123, 589 S.E.2d 696 (2003).

Separate action not maintainable on compulsory counterclaim. — Under subsection (a) of this section, party may not “decline to litigate” a compulsory counterclaim in the original action and seek to bring a separate action. Myers v. United Servs. Auto. Ass'n, 130 Ga. App. 357, 203 S.E.2d 304 (1973); Brittany Apts. v. Chapman, 141 Ga. App. 168, 233 S.E.2d 27 (1977); Aycock v. Calk, 228 Ga. App. 172, 491 S.E.2d 383 (1997).

Party may not raise issues arising out of the same transaction which should have been pled as a compulsory counterclaim in another separate suit. Harbin Lumber Co. v. Fowler, 137 Ga. App. 90, 222 S.E.2d 878 (1975).

Failure to plead a compulsory counterclaim can result in losing the right to assert that claim in a subsequent action. Kitchens v. Lowe, 139 Ga. App. 526, 228 S.E.2d 923 (1976).

Failure to file and litigate compulsory counterclaim subjects party to dismissal of the party's claim when brought in a separate second litigation. P

& J Truck Lines v. Canal Ins. Co., 148 Ga. App. 3, 251 S.E.2d 72 (1978).

Arising out of same transaction test met. — Hospital's home court did not err in transferring the remaining counterclaim to a patient's home court for trial as the hospital consented to the patient's home court trying the patient's counterclaim against the hospital for the improper release of the patient's mental health records when it invoked the jurisdiction of that court to pursue its suit against the patient for non-payment for medical services since: (1) both claims arose out of the contractual relationship between the hospital and the patient; (2) the common nexus between the claims was the mental health treatment the hospital gave to the patient; (3) the hospital sought to recover monies due for the treatment at issue in the patient's counterclaim; and (4) this commonality met the broad similarity or connectedness test as well as the arising out of the same transaction or occurrence test used for determining whether a counterclaim was compulsory under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-13(a). Kennestone Hosp., Inc. v. Hopson, 264 Ga. App. 123, 589 S.E.2d 696 (2003).

Trial court did not err in granting a lessee's motion to dismiss a lessor's action against the lessee because the lessor's claim for unpaid rent arose from the same transaction or occurrence as that giving rise to the lessee's prior pending action against the lessor; thus, the lessor was required to assert the lessor's claim in that action. Metro Brokers, Inc. v. Sams & Cole, LLC, 316 Ga. App. 398, 729 S.E.2d 540 (2012).

Declaratory judgment actions. — Counterclaims based on negligence are not properly maintainable as compulsory counterclaims in a declaratory judgment action, the subject of which involves liability or nonliability of an insurance company. Colonial Penn Ins. Co. v. Hart, 162 Ga. App. 333, 291 S.E.2d 410 (1982).

Treatment of setoff as type of counterclaim. — Confusion or misdesignation as to whether the defendant's defense in a loan suit was a setoff or a counterclaim would not be so harmful as to require reversal because the court can treat a setoff as a type of counterclaim, and because the court treats pleadings as if there had been a proper designation when justice requires. Gwinnett Com. Bank v. Flake, 151 Ga. App. 578, 260 S.E.2d 523 (1979).

When the defendant neither filed a compulsory counterclaim nor pled a set-off as an affirmative defense, there was no error in the trial court's failure to provide for a set-off for lease deposits prior to calculating pre-judgment and post-judgment interest. American Medical Transp. Group, Inc. v. Glo-An, Inc., 235 Ga. App. 464, 509 S.E.2d 738 (1998).

Counterclaim for contribution in the event of judgment finding the plaintiff and the defendant guilty of concurring negligence, a claim arising out of the occurrence which is the subject matter of the complaint, and as such is maintainable; it is not in the nature of an independent suit, which can be maintained only in the county of the residence of the alleged joint tortfeasor. Howard Concrete Pipe Co. v. Cohen, 139 Ga. App. 491, 229 S.E.2d 8 (1976).

Recoupment of premiums from insured was a compulsory counterclaim in response to an action by an insured against an insurer for collection of insurance proceeds. P & J Truck Lines v. Canal Ins. Co., 148 Ga. App. 3, 251 S.E.2d 72 (1978).

Adjudication of Truth-in-Lending claims that are not asserted in precedent state court suits on the underlying debt are precluded by subsection (a) of this section. Chapman v. Aetna Fin. Co., 615 F.2d 361 (5th Cir. 1980).

Federal jurisdiction in case of removal. — State procedural statute requiring compulsory counterclaims does not control question of federal jurisdiction in case of removal. Coastal Air Serv., Inc. v. Tarco Aviation Serv., Inc., 301 F. Supp. 586 (S.D. Ga. 1969).

Federal, not state, law determines who is the plaintiff and who is the defendant in removal cases. Coastal Air Serv., Inc. v. Tarco Aviation Serv., Inc., 301 F. Supp. 586 (S.D. Ga. 1969).

Res judicata bars later action. — Party may not raise issues arising out of the same transaction which should have been pleaded as a compulsory counter-claim in another separate suit. When the first suit is completed, then res judicata serves to bar proceeding with the second action. First Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. I.T.S.R.E., Ltd., 159 Ga. App. 861, 285 S.E.2d 593 (1981).

Since an insured's counterclaim for property damage against a tortfeasor, which the insured later withdrew, was a compulsory counterclaim under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-13(a), the insurer was barred by res judicata and O.C.G.A. § 9-12-40 from reasserting that claim in a subsequent suit in which the insurer sought to recover from the tortfeasor for damages the insurer paid to the insured. Allstate Ins. Co. v. Welch, 259 Ga. App. 71, 576 S.E.2d 57 (2003).

Appeals court agreed with the trial court that the doctrine of res judicata barred the negligence and breach of contract claims asserted by two property owners against a contractor as: (1) the claims were essentially identical to the allegations in a counterclaim filed in a prior Cherokee County action; (2) the parties in the two cases were identical for purposes of res judicata; and (3) the Cherokee County suit resulted in an adjudication on the merits. Perrett v. Sumner, 286 Ga. App. 379, 649 S.E.2d 545 (2007).

When a suit is voluntarily dismissed, the doctrine of res judicata cannot operate to bar a compulsory counterclaim in a later lawsuit, even if the claim was not asserted in the prior suit. Walker v. Bishop, 169 Ga. App. 236, 312 S.E.2d 349 (1983).

Condemnation proceeding was not a compulsory counterclaim, under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-13(a), in a federal court action brought by a condemnee seeking damages for announcement of the condemnation and seeking to enjoin it; hence, the condemnation proceeding was not barred by res judicata. Ideal Leasing Servs. v. Whitfield County, 254 Ga. App. 397, 562 S.E.2d 790 (2002).

Setoff and recoupment are counterclaims and not defenses and when the setoff and recoupment claims arise from the same transaction as that set forth in the original pleadings of the plaintiffs' complaint, these counterclaims are compulsory and should be raised in the defendant's original answer. Swim Dixie Pool Corp. v. Kraemer, 157 Ga. App. 748, 278 S.E.2d 448 (1981).

Debtor's failure to join bank officer bars further litigation against officer.

— Since the vice-president of the bank was a person necessary for proper adjudication of the debtor's defenses and third-party claim in the prior suit and vice-president's joinder was mandatory under subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-13, the debtor, having failed to file a compulsory counterclaim against the vice-president or to join the vice-president as an indispensable party, was also barred from further litigation against the vice-president on these issues. Usher v. Johnson, 157 Ga. App. 420, 278 S.E.2d 70 (1981).

Claim for rentals need not be made by a counterclaim in an action wherein the possessors of certain property seek to set aside a deed to one of the present title holder's predecessors in title based on alleged fraudulent misrepresentations. Schoen v. Home Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 167 Ga. App. 644, 307 S.E.2d 72 (1983).

Claim of abusive litigation arises, by necessity, only after the commencement of civil proceedings. It is derivative in nature, and hence it must be pled as a compulsory counterclaim or compulsory additional claim. Yost v. Torok, 256 Ga. 92, 344 S.E.2d 414 (1986).

Although the Georgia Supreme Court has designated Yost abusive litigation claims as compulsory, this determination is not controlling in federal courts. A.L. Williams Corp. v. Faircloth, 120 F.R.D. 135 (N.D. Ga. 1987).

Waiver of defense in second action.

— Compulsory counterclaim, if not asserted in the primary action, cannot later be asserted in a second action, but this preclusive effect is not present unless the party wishing to assert the defense affirmatively raises the defense in the party's responsive pleadings. If the defense is not so raised, the defense is waived. Hubbard v. Stewart, 651 F. Supp. 294 (M.D. Ga. 1987).

Amendment denied when defendant had knowledge of claim.

— When the defendant introduced in evidence two letters the defendant received from the plaintiff's attorney three to four months after the subject defaulted note was executed, the defendant's counterclaim could not be added by amendment when the defendant had knowledge of the claims at the time the defensive pleadings were prepared and filed in the first instance. Shaw v. Ruiz, 207 Ga. App. 299, 428 S.E.2d 98 (1993).

Trial court properly granted summary judgment for an executor in the child's suit seeking recovery under quantum meruit as: (1) Georgia law applied to procedural matters such as whether a claim was a compulsory counterclaim; and (2) the claim was a compulsory counterclaim in the executor's suit against the child in Florida seeking to quiet title to properties the child allegedly improperly transferred since both suits involved the child's entitlement to a portion of the estate, and if the child was entitled to payment for the child's services, the issue should have been raised in the Florida suit to offset the claim that the child had been unjustly enriched. Harper v. Harper, 267 Ga. App. 553, 600 S.E.2d 659 (2004).

Insured's counterclaim for property damage against a tortfeasor, which the insured later withdrew, was a compulsory counterclaim, under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-13(a), because the counterclaim arose out of the same incident that was the subject of the tortfeasor's suit, and there was a logical relationship between the tortfeasor's claim and the insured's claim. Allstate Ins. Co. v. Welch, 259 Ga. App. 71, 576 S.E.2d 57 (2003).

3. Permissive CounterclaimsPermissive counterclaims do not arise out of same transaction.

— Under subsection (b) of this section, permissive counterclaims do not arise out of the same transaction and in fact need not be tried with the main action. Dixie Home Bldrs., Inc. v. Waldrip, 146 Ga. App. 464, 246 S.E.2d 471 (1978).

Claims that mature or are acquired by pleader after pleading has been served are permissive rather than compulsory counterclaims. Jenkins v. Martin, 142 Ga. App. 573, 236 S.E.2d 542 (1977).

Counterclaim in tort when main action on contract. — Permissive counterclaims may be based on a cause of action ex delicto when the main action was ex contractu. Dixie Home Bldrs., Inc. v. Waldrup, 146 Ga. App. 464, 246 S.E.2d 471 (1978).

Failure to assert a permissive counterclaim at the proper time will only result in the party being unable to make the contentions in the suit in question, not that the party will be barred in a future suit. Kitchens v. Lowe, 139 Ga. App. 526, 228 S.E.2d 923 (1976).

4. Counterclaims Maturing or Acquired After Pleading

Claims that mature or are acquired by pleader after pleading has been served are permissive rather than compulsory counterclaims. Jenkins v. Martin, 142 Ga. App. 573, 236 S.E.2d 542 (1977); Wagner v. Howell Enters., Inc., 184 Ga. App. 394, 361 S.E.2d 698 (1987).

Because the basis for a director's counterclaim for conversion of stock did not occur until after the director filed the answer, that claim matured after the answer was filed, and thus the claim was a permissive, not compulsory counterclaim pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-13(e); a trial court erred in dismissing the counterclaim with prejudice. Sampson v. Haywire Ventures, Inc., 278 Ga. App. 525, 629 S.E.2d 515 (2006).

Claim which occurs subsequent to the time of serving the pleading would fall in the category of a permissive counterclaim. Georgia Power Co. v. Jones, 122 Ga. App. 614, 178 S.E.2d 265 (1970).

Separate action permitted. — Supplemental counterclaim brought under subsection (e) of this section is permissive rather than compulsory; the action may be brought in a separate suit, and will not be lost if permission to plead the counterclaim is denied. Jenkins v. Martin, 142 Ga. App. 573, 236 S.E.2d 542 (1977).

Permission of the court is a necessary prerequisite to supplemental pleading of a counterclaim under subsection (e) of this section. Jenkins v. Martin, 142 Ga. App. 573, 236 S.E.2d 542 (1977).

Discretion of court under subsection (e). — Subsection (e) of this section envisions the exercise of discretion by the trial judge. Carvel Corp. v. Rabey, 140 Ga. App. 205, 230 S.E.2d 355 (1976).

Decision to grant or deny a motion or a counterclaim is totally within the trial court's discretion. Jenkins v. Martin, 142 Ga. App. 573, 236 S.E.2d 542 (1977); Feifer v. Reliance Kitchens, USA, Inc., 189 Ga. App. 653, 377 S.E.2d 28 (1988).

Counterclaim predicated on the bringing of plaintiff's claim and its unsuccessful conclusion, which the defendant claims is the basis for an action for wrongful attachment, allowing the defendant to recover under the bond issued pursuant to such attachment, was a permissive counterclaim which matured or was acquired by the defendant after serving the pleading, and could properly be brought in another action; hence, the trial judge did not err in dismissing such counterclaim, in effect denying permission for the defendant to present the claim by supplemental pleading under subsection (e) of this section. Carvel Corp. v. Rabey, 140 Ga. App. 205, 230 S.E.2d 355 (1976).

When corporation, after filing answer, assigns various instruments to its wholly owned subsidiary, and amends its counterclaim by adding claims based on these assignments, these additional causes of action do not constitute compulsory counterclaims which the corporation was required to assert at the time it filed its original answer, when there is no evidence that the subsidiary is a sham, or that it is being used to defeat a public convenience, to justify a wrong, protect fraud, defend crime, or any other reason which in equity and good conscience would justify the disregard of its separate entity. Bass v. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank, 168 Ga. App. 668, 309 S.E.2d 850 (1983).

Action for malicious abuse of process, not being in existence at the time the plaintiff served the plaintiff's pleadings in response to the defendant's original complaint, was not a compulsory counterclaim in that action and could properly be filed as a separate action. Ostrov v. Coyner, 187 Ga. App. 109, 369 S.E.2d 298 (1988).

Counterclaims (Cont'd)4. Counterclaims Maturing or Acquired After Pleading (Cont'd)

Counterclaim filed after party added. — Since an owner's counterclaims were filed after a transferor's son was added as a party, and the owner acknowledged that the owner did not request leave of court to file the counterclaims, the trial court properly dismissed the counterclaims; while the owner claimed that the trial court implicitly considered the claims as properly filed, no evidence in the record supported this claim. Hale v. Scarborough, 279 Ga. App. 614, 631 S.E.2d 812 (2006).

5. Omitted Counterclaims

Phrase "when justice so requires" in subsection (f) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-13 furnishes an independent ground for setting up an omitted counterclaim. Thus, a trial court should grant leave to set up an omitted counterclaim "when justice so requires" even though the other grounds, "oversight, inadvertence, or excusable neglect" are not present. White v. Fidelity Nat'l Bank, 188 Ga. App. 539, 373 S.E.2d 640, cert. denied, 188 Ga. App. 913, 373 S.E.2d 640 (1988).

Leave of court required for filing. — Although the defendant filed a motion seeking leave to file additional counterclaims, when the defendant failed to obtain a ruling before proceeding, the trial court did not err in dismissing the defendant's additional counterclaims. Cornelius v. Auto Analyst, Inc., 222 Ga. App. 759, 476 S.E.2d 9 (1996).

Discretion of court under subsection (f). — Subsection (f) of this section envisions the exercise of discretion by the trial judge. Carvel Corp. v. Rabey, 140 Ga. App. 205, 230 S.E.2d 355 (1976).

Under subsection (f) of this section, the trial judge is vested with discretion which will not be controlled absent a legal abuse. Clairmont Foods, Inc. v. Huddle House, Inc., 142 Ga. App. 171, 235 S.E.2d 635 (1977).

Decision to allow counterclaim to be pled is matter of judicial discretion and may be reversed on appeal only if the party can demonstrate that the court abused the court's discretion. Rohner, Gehrig & Co. v. Capital City Bank, 655 F.2d 571 (5th Cir. 1981).

Whether justice requires the grant of leave to set up an omitted counterclaim is a matter which addresses itself to the sound discretion of the trial court. White v. Fidelity Nat'l Bank, 188 Ga. App. 539, 373 S.E.2d 640, cert. denied, 188 Ga. App. 913, 373 S.E.2d 640 (1988).

Permitting an omitted counterclaim is within the discretion of the trial court; the court should be liberal in allowing such claims when no prejudice would result. Martin & Jones Produce, Inc. v. Lundy, 197 Ga. App. 38, 397 S.E.2d 461 (1990); Parks v. Multimedia Techs., Inc., 239 Ga. App. 282, 520 S.E.2d 517 (1999).

Generally, it is a matter of the trial court's discretion whether to allow the late filing of counterclaims pursuant to subsection (f) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-13. Eudaly v. Valmet Automation (USA), Inc., 201 Ga. App. 497, 411 S.E.2d 311, cert. denied, 201 Ga. App. 903, 411 S.E.2d 311 (1991).

Trial court erred by denying a mortgagor's motion to add a counterclaim as moot because the trial court had discretion, based upon any of the factors listed in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-13(f) to permit the filing of the counterclaims, but it issued no ruling pursuant to the statute; thus, the judgment of the trial court denying the motion as moot was vacated, and the case was remanded for the trial court to exercise the court's discretion and issue a ruling on the merits of the motion. Richards v. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A., 325 Ga. App. 722, 754 S.E.2d 770 (2014).

Admission of second compulsory counterclaim within discretion of court. — Whether to allow the filing of a second counterclaim which involved new theories but were clearly compulsory counterclaims based upon the same facts as the underlying complaint was within the discretion of the trial court and was not disturbed absent abuse. Conerly v. First Nat'l Bank, 209 Ga. App. 601, 434 S.E.2d 143 (1993).

Abuse of discretion. — When the trial court had set a deadline for motions and for the filing of a pretrial order, the court abused the court's discretion in allowing the defendant to file late counterclaims without a showing of necessity or justice pursuant to subsection (f) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-13; and, having allowed the defendant to file late counterclaims, the court prima facie abused the court's discretion in refusing the plaintiff time for discovery and for denying a continuance. Eudaly v. Valmet Automation (USA), Inc., 201 Ga. App. 497, 411 S.E.2d 311, cert. denied, 201 Ga. App. 903, 411 S.E.2d 311 (1991).

Assertion of different basis for counterclaim on appeal. — Having first asserted grounds for adding a counterclaim which did not state a viable claim as a matter of law, the defendant could not assert a different ground on appeal, since such a claim would constitute a shifting of the position raised before and ruled upon by the trial court and, as such, it was not preserved for appellate review. Strong v. Wachovia Bank, 215 Ga. App. 535, 451 S.E.2d 524 (1994).

Subsection (f) of this section applies to both compulsory and permissive counterclaims. Kitchens v. Lowe, 139 Ga. App. 526, 228 S.E.2d 923 (1976).

Question of type of counterclaim involved is a factor to be considered by the trial judge in making a determination under subsection (f) of this section. Kitchens v. Lowe, 139 Ga. App. 526, 228 S.E.2d 923 (1976).

What is "excusable neglect" under subsection (f) of this section depends on whether or not the defendant or the defendant's counsel had knowledge of the existence of the claim when defensive pleadings were prepared and filed in the first instance, and whether, under the facts, there has been unreasonable or inexcusable delay in the tendering of the amendment. Sasser & Co. v. Griffin, 133 Ga. App. 83, 210 S.E.2d 34 (1974); Aycock v. HFC, 142 Ga. App. 207, 235 S.E.2d 578 (1977), cert. dismissed, 240 Ga. 570, 241 S.E.2d 835 (1978).

Knowledge of claim at time of filing of pleading. — Finding of oversight or of inadvertence is unsupported if it appears from the pleadings or the facts that the defendant or the defendant's counsel had knowledge of the existence of the claim when the defensive pleadings were prepared and filed in the first instance. Blount v. Kicklighter, 125 Ga. App. 159, 186 S.E.2d 543 (1971); Adderholt v.

Adderholt, 240 Ga. 626, 242 S.E.2d 11 (1978).

Judge should allow the amendment "when justice requires," even if other requirements are not met. Kitchens v. Lowe, 139 Ga. App. 526, 228 S.E.2d 923 (1976).

Submission of evidence and finding as to cause of delay. — Before a delayed filing of a counterclaim is allowed pursuant to subsection (f) of this section, the court should require submission of evidence and make a finding therefrom as to whether the delay was occasioned by oversight, inadvertence, or excusable neglect. Blount v. Kicklighter, 125 Ga. App. 159, 186 S.E.2d 543 (1971); Adderholt v. Adderholt, 240 Ga. 626, 242 S.E.2d 11 (1978); Williams v. Buckley, 148 Ga. App. 778, 252 S.E.2d 692 (1979).

It is error for court to allow late counterclaim without evidence and without requiring the defendant to make the showing required of the defendant by subsection (f) of this section. Adderholt v. Adderholt, 240 Ga. 626, 242 S.E.2d 11 (1978).

Courts should be very liberal in allowing amendments to include compulsory counterclaims, and even permissive counterclaims when no prejudice would result, when the pleader has not been guilty of inexcusable neglect, or has not by reprehensible conduct deprived oneself of any claim to special consideration by the court. Blount v. Kicklighter, 125 Ga. App. 159, 186 S.E.2d 543 (1971).

As a general rule, leave to amend and set up a counterclaim shall be given freely, but this does not dispense with the necessity of showing that justice so requires. Adderholt v. Adderholt, 240 Ga. 626, 242 S.E.2d 11 (1978).

Courts should be very liberal in allowing amendments to assert compulsory counterclaims when no prejudice would result. Williams v. Buckley, 148 Ga. App. 778, 252 S.E.2d 692 (1979).

Malpractice action against an attorney accrued on the date the attorney filed an answer without seeking leave to add an omitted counterclaim, not the date on which the statute of limitation on the counterclaim had run. Gibson v. Casto, 233 Ga. App. 403, 504 S.E.2d 705 (1998).

Counterclaims (Cont'd)5. Omitted Counterclaims (Cont'd)

Allowance of late counterclaim otherwise barred by limitations. — Trial court has discretion to allow a late counterclaim despite the fact that the statute of limitations would otherwise bar a suit on the underlying right of action. Unnever v. Stephens, 142 Ga. App. 787, 236 S.E.2d 886, aff'd, 240 Ga. 313, 242 S.E.2d 478 (1977).

Counterclaim filed after statute of limitations ran. — Trial court did not err in dismissing a counterclaim for unjust enrichment because the four-year statute of limitations for unjust enrichment claims had run, and purchasers and the holders of two outstanding security deeds never sought leave from the trial court to file a late counterclaim as required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-13. Chase Manhattan Mortg. Corp. v. Shelton, 290 Ga. 544, 722 S.E.2d 743 (2012).

New theories after remittitur constitute new counterclaims. — Assertion of new theories as to an alleged defective foreclosure after remittitur constituted additional grounds for count one of the defendant's compulsory counterclaim and, thus, were new counterclaims which were barred. Bellamy v. FDIC, 236 Ga. App. 747, 512 S.E.2d 671 (1999).

Counterclaim on issue of child's custody required. — Husband was allowed to orally raise a counterclaim during the hearing on the wife's motion to modify legal custody because justice required it since the needs of the parties' child could not be satisfied in the absence of the counterclaim and consideration of the counterclaim fostered judicial economy. Daniel v. Daniel, 250 Ga. App. 482, 552 S.E.2d 479 (2001).

Leave to file late counterclaim properly denied. — In subscribers' class action suit against an internet access provider, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by denying the provider's motion under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-13(f) for leave to file omitted compulsory counterclaims against two named subscribers because: (1) the provider waited one and a half years to seek leave to file the counter-claims; and (2) the provider knew of the basis for the provider's counterclaim when the provider filed the provider's answer. EarthLink, Inc. v. Eaves, 293 Ga. App. 75, 666 S.E.2d 420 (2008).

Cross-Claims

Constitutionality. — Subsection (g) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-13, pertaining to cross-claims, and O.C.G.A. § 9-11-14, pertaining to third-party practice, are not in conflict with the Constitution; of course, even if they were, the venue provisions of the Constitution (Ga. Const. 1976, Art. VI, Sec. XIV, Para. VII [see now Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. II, Para. VIII]) would be controlling and cannot be extended or limited by the Civil Practice Act (see O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9). Lester Witte & Co. v. Cobb Bank & Trust Co., 248 Ga. 235, 282 S.E.2d 296 (1981).

Sphere of cross-claims broadened. — Amendment to subsection (g) of this section, allowing cross-claims to be filed if relating to any property that is the subject matter of the original action, was intended to broaden the sphere of such permitted pleadings. Claude A. Hinton, Jr., Inc. v. Institutional Investors Trust, 133 Ga. App. 364, 211 S.E.2d 169 (1974).

Cross-claim is not compulsory, but is permissive. Vineyard v. Fowler, 197 Ga. App. 453, 398 S.E.2d 709 (1990), reversed on other grounds, 261 Ga. 454, 405 S.E.2d 678 (1991).

Cross-claim for contribution is permissive. — Subsection (g) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-13, which authorizes cross-claims, expressly authorizes the bringing of a cross-claim for contribution. The language of the statute, however, is permissive and in no way makes a cross-claim arising out of the same transaction or occurrence as the main claim compulsory. Tenneco Oil Co. v. Templin, 201 Ga. App. 30, 410 S.E.2d 154 (1991).

Cross-claiming codefendant entitled to punitive damages. — Codefendants who are plaintiffs in cross-claim for indemnification against the defendant can recover punitive damages. Privitera v. Addison, 190 Ga. App. 102, 378 S.E.2d 312, cert. denied, 190 Ga. App. 898, 378 S.E.2d 312 (1989).

Cross-claim against joint tort-feasor. — When a party defendant cross-claims against another defendant under subsection (g) of this section, both of whom are being sued as joint tort-feasors, one cannot have judgment against the other prior to the determination of the plaintiffs' suit. Berry v. Cordell, 120 Ga. App. 844, 172 S.E.2d 848 (1969).

Indemnification as against joint tort-feasors. — Fact that joint trespassers might be entitled to indemnification does not mean that other parties might not be so entitled. Privitera v. Addison, 190 Ga. App. 102, 378 S.E.2d 312, cert. denied, 190 Ga. App. 898, 378 S.E.2d 312 (1989).

O.C.G.A. § 9-11-13 does not authorize cross-claim against one who is no longer a party to the action. Smithloff v. Benson, 173 Ga. App. 870, 328 S.E.2d 759 (1985).

Person added for limited purposes. — When a party is added by the court for limited purposes (such as to protect certain funds) and has not been designated a plaintiff or defendant by the court, provisions of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-13 governing cross-claims do not apply to that party. Spivey v. Rogers, 173 Ga. App. 233, 326 S.E.2d 227 (1984).

Res judicata bars a party who foregoes opportunity to file permissive cross-claim from bringing the claim in a subsequent action. Fowler v. Vineyard, 261 Ga. 454, 405 S.E.2d 678 (1991).

Cross-claims for indemnification and contribution, and a later personal injury claim, both arising out of the same traffic accident, involve an identity of subject matter for purposes of res judicata. Fowler v. Vineyard, 261 Ga. 454, 405 S.E.2d 678 (1991).

Additional Parties

“Complete relief” construed. — Term “complete relief” embraces the desirability of avoiding repetitive lawsuits on essentially the same facts or subject matter, as well as the desirability of joining those in whose absence there might be a grant of hollow or partial relief to the parties before the court. Stein v. Burgamy, 150 Ga. App. 860, 258 S.E.2d 684 (1979).

Co-executors of a husband's deceased parents were improperly joined in a wife's action for alimony, and the wife's reliance on the concept of complete relief as a basis for joinder was misplaced because: (1) even if the wife were to be awarded some interest in the estate, whether the wife would have to enforce that right by litigation was entirely speculative; and (2) if further litigation were to prove necessary, the issues and subject matter of litigation attempting to force a distribution from the estate would not be the same as the issues and subject matter in the wife's present action, which involved the entitlement, as a consequence of the marriage, to support from the husband; thus, the absence of the co-executors from the present litigation would not render the relief afforded the wife partial or hollow because the wife would obtain an interest as full and complete as that presently held by the husband. Searcy v. Searcy, 280 Ga. 311, 627 S.E.2d 572 (2006).

Absence of additional alleged joint tortfeasor is no impediment to “complete relief,” as stated in subsection (h) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-13. McCabe v. Lundell, 199 Ga. App. 639, 405 S.E.2d 693, cert. denied, 199 Ga. App. 906, 405 S.E.2d 693 (1991).

Leave of court is a bare requisite when the plaintiff seeks to assert a claim against one who is not already a party to the proceedings. Housing Auth. v. Millwood, 472 F.2d 268 (5th Cir. 1973).

Venue is not relevant inquiry in initial determination of whether to add defendant-in-counterclaim. Instead, the reference in subsection (h) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-13 to the existence of “jurisdiction of [potential defendants-in-counterclaim]” obviously contemplates only a determination as to whether jurisdiction over the person of potential defendants-in-counterclaim can be obtained. McCabe v. Lundell, 199 Ga. App. 639, 405 S.E.2d 693, cert. denied, 199 Ga. App. 906, 405 S.E.2d 693 (1991).

Procedure for bringing in additional parties. — When additional parties should be brought in pursuant to subsection (h) of Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 13 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-13), counterclaimant or cross-claimant should serve the pleading upon the parties to the action who are affected thereby, file it or file and then serve it, secure an order from the court that certain named persons be made defendants to the counterclaim or cross-claim, obtain a summons from the clerk directed to such persons, and then proceed to serve the pleading, which contains the counterclaim or cross-claim, and the summons in the manner provided in Ga. L. 1972, p. 689, §§ 1 and 3 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4) for service of the complaint and summons. Housing Auth. v. Millwood, 472 F.2d 268 (5th Cir. 1973).

Counterclaim not subject to estoppel. — With regard to persons who were not parties to the plaintiff's suit, even though the defendants could have asked the trial court to add them as additional parties under subsection (h) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-13, the trial court had the discretion to deny adding the parties; thus, estoppel did not apply to the defendant's independent action against such persons. Jacobs v. Littleton, 241 Ga. App. 403, 525 S.E.2d 433 (1999).

Joined party may contest venue. — If a motion to join is granted and a defendant-in-counterclaim is thereafter served, then the actually "joined [rather than potentially joinable] party" may contest venue by filing a motion to dismiss, which is to be treated by the trial court as a motion to transfer pursuant to Uniform Superior Court Rule 19. If venue is shown to be proper elsewhere, it would then be incumbent upon the trial court to enter an appropriate order. Such an appropriate order might sever the counterclaim for separate trial pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-42(b) and transfer only the severed counterclaim, while retaining jurisdiction and venue over the main action. McCabe v. Lundell, 199 Ga. App. 639, 405 S.E.2d 693, cert. denied, 199 Ga. App. 906, 405 S.E.2d 693 (1991).

Service of process when additional party brought in. — If a motion to add a party is granted, or if the court orders an additional party brought in on the court's own motion, service of process must be made in the usual way. Housing Auth. v. Millwood, 472 F.2d 268 (5th Cir. 1973).

Trial court erred in failing to allow addition of plaintiff executrix as party in individual capacity in the defendant's counter-claim for intentional infliction of mental distress as O.C.G.A. § 9-11-13 provides for addition of necessary parties for granting of complete relief. Owens v. Owens, 248 Ga. 720, 286 S.E.2d 25 (1982).

Third-party complaint against plaintiff's agent. — Defendant's third-party complaint against the plaintiff's agent was not cognizable against the agent under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-14 since the action could only be fairly regarded as related to the defendant's counterclaim against the plaintiff and, as such, required an order by the trial court pursuant to subsection (h) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-13 joining the agent as a party. McCormick v. Rissanen, 177 Ga. App. 623, 340 S.E.2d 268 (1986).

Joinder in divorce actions of corporations. — In an action for divorce pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 19-5-1, the trial court properly granted the wife's motion pursuant to O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-13(h) and 9-11-19(a)(1) to join two corporations as defendants by counterclaim because, by the husband's own design, any property that could be determined to be marital property was inextricably commingled with the property of the corporations, and, thus, joinder of the corporations was proper to ensure a just division of marital assets. Gardner v. Gardner, 276 Ga. 189, 576 S.E.2d 857 (2003).

Joinder not required. — Trial court did not err in denying a motion for joinder in that, to the extent that the addition of the principals of a real estate developer to the movant's counterclaim was sought because they were joint tortfeasors with the developer, no joinder was required. Chaney v. Harrison & Lynam, LLC, 308 Ga. App. 808, 708 S.E.2d 672 (2011).

Separate Trials and Judgments

Subsection (i) of this section is not entirely clear. Young v. Jones, 140 Ga. App. 66, 230 S.E.2d 32 (1976).

Restrictive construction not intended. — While a literal reading of subsection (i) of Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 13 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-13) indicates by negative implication that jurisdiction over a counterclaim or cross-claim following dismissal of the original claim can be retained only in the limited situation in which separate trials have been ordered pursuant to Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 42 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-42(b)), it seems clear that this restrictive construction was never intended. Young v. Jones, 140 Ga. App. 66, 230 S.E.2d 32 (1976).

Dismissal of main complaint. — Counterclaim is not necessarily subject to dismissal because of dismissal of main complaint. Weems v. Weems, 225 Ga. 19, 165 S.E.2d 733 (1969); Young v. Jones, 140 Ga. App. 66, 230 S.E.2d 32 (1976).

If a counterclaim can be adjudicated without regard to the main claim, it should be judicially considered even though the main claim has been dismissed. Young v. Jones, 140 Ga. App. 66, 230 S.E.2d 32 (1976).

Entry of summary judgment on the main case in favor of the defendant does not effect dismissal of the defendant's counterclaim. Young v. Jones, 140 Ga. App. 66, 230 S.E.2d 32 (1976).

9-11-14. Third-party practice.

(a) When defendant may bring in third party. At any time after commencement of the action a defendant, as a third-party plaintiff, may cause a summons and complaint to be served upon a person not a party to the action who is or may be liable to him for all or part of the plaintiff's claim against him. The third-party plaintiff need not obtain leave to make the service if he files the third-party complaint not later than ten days after he serves his original answer. Otherwise he must obtain leave on motion upon notice to all parties to the action. The person served with the summons and third-party complaint, hereinafter called the third-party defendant, shall make his defenses to the third-party plaintiff's claim as provided in Code Section 9-11-12 and his counterclaims against the third-party plaintiff and cross-claims against other third-party defendants as provided in Code Section 9-11-13. The third-party defendant may assert against the plaintiff any defenses which the third-party plaintiff has to the plaintiff's claim. The third-party defendant may also assert any claim against the plaintiff arising out of the transaction or occurrence that is the subject matter of the plaintiff's claim against the third-party plaintiff. The plaintiff may assert any claim against the third-party defendant arising out of the transaction or occurrence that is the subject matter of the plaintiff's claim against the third-party plaintiff, and the third-party defendant thereupon shall assert his defenses as provided in Code Section 9-11-12 and his counterclaims and cross-claims as provided in Code Section 9-11-13. Any party may move to strike the third-party claim, or for its severance or separate trial. A third-party defendant may proceed under this Code section against any person not a party to the action who is or may be liable to him for all or part of the claim made in the action against the third-party defendant.

(b) When plaintiff may bring in third party. When a counterclaim is asserted against a plaintiff, he may cause a third party to be brought in under circumstances which under this Code section would entitle a defendant to do so.

(c) Exhibits attached to third-party complaint. Any third-party complaint filed shall have attached thereto, as exhibits, a true and correct copy of the original complaint in the action and all other pleadings which have been filed in the action prior to the filing of the third-party complaint. (Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 14; Ga. L. 1969, p. 979, § 1; Ga. L. 1984, p. 22, § 9.)

General Consideration

Constitutionality. — Subsection (g) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-13, pertaining to cross-claims, and O.C.G.A. § 9-11-14, are not in conflict with the Constitution; of course, even if they were, the venue provisions of the Constitution (Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. II) would be controlling and cannot be extended or limited by the Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9. Lester Witte & Co. v. Cobb Bank & Trust Co., 248 Ga. 235, 282 S.E.2d 296 (1981).

Jurisdictional rules of Constitution not affected by section. — Enactment of a new procedural method of bringing in parties cannot change the jurisdictional rules of the Constitution of this state. Register v. Stone's Indep. Oil Distribs., Inc., 227 Ga. 123, 179 S.E.2d 68 (1971). For comment, see 8 Ga. St. B.J. 428 (1972).

Purpose of section. — Purpose of impleader provisions of this section is to avoid multiplicity of actions, to save time and cost of reduplication of evidence, and to assure consistent results from similar evidence and common issues. Bishop v. Georgia Baptist Hosp., 136 Ga. App. 507, 221 S.E.2d 682 (1975).

Section should be liberally construed to promote purpose. — Court should liberally construe the impleader provisions of this section to avoid multiplicity of actions, to save time and cost of reduplication of evidence, and to assure consistent results from similar evidence and common issues. Insurance Co. of N. Am. v. Atlas Supply Co., 121 Ga. App. 1, 172 S.E.2d 632 (1970); McMichael v. Georgia Power Co., 133 Ga. App. 593, 211 S.E.2d 632 (1974); Voyager Life & Health Ins. Co. v. Pulaski Banking Co., 181 Ga. App. 201, 351 S.E.2d 725 (1986).

This section is not a device for bringing into an action any controversy which may happen to have some relationship with it. Dorsey Heating & Air Conditioning Co. v. C.C. Dickson, Inc., 153 Ga. App. 599, 266 S.E.2d 282 (1980).

Vouchment procedure authorized by O.C.G.A. § 9-10-13 has not been superseded by the third-party practice rule of the Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9. Hardee v. Allied Steel Bldgs., Inc., 182 Ga. App. 587, 356 S.E.2d 682 (1987).

When single group or aggregate of operative facts is involved, impleader should be allowed, despite a difference in the legal nature of the claims of the various parties. Insurance Co. of N. Am. v. Atlas Supply Co., 121 Ga. App. 1, 172 S.E.2d 632 (1970).

Statute of limitation on contribution does not begin to run until judgment is entered against third-party plaintiff or until compromise and settlement of the claim is made. Independent Mfg. Co. v. Automotive Prods., Inc., 141 Ga. App. 518, 233 S.E.2d 874 (1977); Greyhound Lines v. Cobb County, 681 F.2d 1327 (11th Cir. 1982).

Grounds for motion for summary judgment. — Third-party defendant is entitled to move for summary judgment against the original plaintiff on any ground for which the original defendant would be entitled to summary judgment against the plaintiff. Empire Shoe Co. v. Nico Indus., Inc., 197 Ga. App. 411, 398 S.E.2d 440 (1990).

Vacation of court's order in interests of justice. — Even when entered, court may, in the interests of justice, vacate an order and reverse the court's position regarding the making of parties, so long as there is no abuse of discretion and the delay works no undue hardship upon the impleaded defendant. Frank B. Wilder & Assocs. v. St. Joseph's Hosp., 132 Ga. App. 373, 208 S.E.2d 145 (1974).

Effect of judgment in third-party defendant's favor when new trial granted to defendant. — When new trial is granted to the defendant in a primary action, but the judgment was returned in favor of a third-party defendant on a third-party complaint, the defendant may not obtain relief after a new trial from a third-party defendant. Norman v. Walker, 123 Ga. App. 413, 181 S.E.2d 310 (1971).

As only issue which could have been determined between truck driver and tire manufacturer in action for wrongful death of passenger was secondary liability of manufacturer (third-party defendant) to driver for death of passenger, manufacturer could not assert doctrine of estoppel by judgment in action brought against it by driver for the driver's own personal injuries. Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. v. Pinyan, 155 Ga. App. 343, 270 S.E.2d 883 (1980).

Claims inappropriate for adjudication. — Because the claims of fraud by borrowers against a mortgage company employee were not derivative, the claims were inappropriate for adjudication under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-14(a). McCray v. Fannie Mae, 292 Ga. App. 156, 663 S.E.2d 736 (2008).

Third-Party Pleadings

Liberal construction should be given to third-party pleadings. Benson Paint Co. v. Williams Constr. Co., 128 Ga. App. 47, 195 S.E.2d 671 (1973).

Bringing of third-party complaint not mandatory. — While a party may set forth a claim as provided by this section, the party is not bound to prosecute the claim in this manner. Latex Filler & Chem. Co. v. Chapman, 139 Ga. App. 382, 228 S.E.2d 312 (1976).

Third-party complaint alleging separate and independent causes of action which were not dependent upon the outcome of the main claim was subject to dismissal when the only connection between the main claim and the third-party action was that the third-party defendant was alleged to have wrongfully deprived the defendant of the money which the plaintiff sought to collect. Quality Ford Sales, Inc. v. Greene, 201 Ga. App. 206, 410 S.E.2d 389 (1991).

Affirmative relief sought by defendant. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-14 does not authorize the defendant to seek affirmative relief solely on the defendant's own behalf. Instead, the complaint must be predicated on secondary or derivative liability, such as indemnity, subrogation, or contribution. Hennessy Cadillac v. Pippin, 197 Ga. App. 448, 398 S.E.2d 725 (1990).

Joinder of direct claim by amendment of third-party complaint. — In an action against the defendant for injuries caused by an automobile collision, when the defendant brought a third-party complaint for indemnity and contribution against a brake repair shop, the defendant's claim for damages to the defendant's own car was properly joined by amendment of the third-party complaint. Shleifer v. Bridgestone-Firestone, Inc., 223 Ga. App. 256, 477 S.E.2d 405 (1996).

Neither admission of liability nor certainty of recovery necessary. — It is not necessary, in order to maintain a third-party complaint, that the original defendant admit liability to the original plaintiff, nor that the allegations show that recovery by the original defendant from the third-party defendant is a certainty. Register v. Stone's Indep. Oil Distribs., 122 Ga. App. 335, 177 S.E.2d 92 (1970), rev'd on other grounds, 227 Ga. 123, 179 S.E.2d 68 (1971).

If the impleader satisfies the pleading requirements of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-14 but nevertheless is not permitted by the trial court to bring in a third party because the defendant alternatively denied any liability, the refusal of the third-party impleader will constitute error inasmuch as it deprives the defendant of the defendant's undisputed right under the principle to bring in one who is or may be liable "to him" for all or part of the plaintiff's claim against the defendant. ARA Transp. v. Barnes, 183 Ga. App. 424, 359 S.E.2d 157 (1987).

Jurisdiction over a third-party direct damage claim is not destroyed if the original action is settled or disposed of in some fashion before adjudication of such claim; but the court, in the exercise of the court's discretion, either may proceed with the claim or dismiss the claim. Cohen v. McLaughlin, 250 Ga. 661, 301 S.E.2d 37 (1983).

Impleader properly denied. — In a dispute between adjoining landowners over title to approximately six acres of land, the trial court properly denied the adjoining neighbors' motion to implead additional third parties, and a motion to add those parties as indispensable third parties under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-19(a), because those individuals had no legal interest in the disputed property at the time the neighbors sought to add them. Pirkle v. Turner, 281 Ga. 846, 642 S.E.2d 849 (2007).

Third-party complaint is subject to notice-pleading provisions of Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 8 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-8(a)). Register v. Stone's Indep. Oil Distribs., 122 Ga. App. 335, 177 S.E.2d 92 (1970), rev'd on other grounds, 227 Ga. 123, 179 S.E.2d 68 (1971).

Adequacy of third-party complaint. — Complaint in third-party tort suit is adequate if sufficient facts are alleged which upon proper proof would allow recovery by a third-party plaintiff from a third-party defendant under applicable substantive law when the subject matter is the same as that involved in the original action. Koppers Co. v. Parks, 120 Ga. App. 551, 171 S.E.2d 639 (1969).

Third-party complaint should be allowed to stand if, under some construction of the facts which might be adduced at trial, recovery would be possible. Register v. Stone's Indep. Oil Distribs., 122 Ga. App. 335, 177 S.E.2d 92 (1979), rev'd on other grounds, 227 Ga. 123, 179 S.E.2d 68 (1971).

Response to third-party complaint required. — If a pleading is construed as a third-party complaint, a response is required, and a default judgment is proper for failure to answer. Wolski v. Hayes, 144 Ga. App. 180, 240 S.E.2d 720 (1977).

Petition treated as third-party complaint. — When an insured seeking to have its insurer defend it against a suit by a student filed a “petition for declaratory judgment” in the same trial court in which the student had filed suit against the insured, instead of impleading the insurer into the pending action, the appellate court would consider the insured’s petition to be a third-party complaint, as it appeared that the actions had been effectively consolidated in the trial court and that the trial court had considered the insured’s petition as if it had been properly styled a third-party complaint. Fireman’s Fund Ins. Co. v. Univ. of Ga. Ath. Ass’n, 288 Ga. App. 355, 654 S.E.2d 207 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 284 (Ga. 2008).

Third-Party Defendants

Third-party defendant may be brought in only if the third party defendant is liable over to original defendant, as in a third-party action for contribution against a joint tort-feasor. Hyde v. Klar, 168 Ga. App. 64, 308 S.E.2d 190 (1983).

Effect of impleader practice is to accelerate liability. Gosser v. Diplomat Restaurant, Inc., 125 Ga. App. 620, 188 S.E.2d 412 (1972).

Impleader is proper only when right to relief exists under applicable substantive law. Smith, Kline & French Labs. v. Just, 126 Ga. App. 643, 191 S.E.2d 632 (1972).

Absolute requirement of every third-party proceeding is that its purpose must be to impose upon third-party defendant liability for part or all of the liability asserted by the original plaintiff against the third-party plaintiff. Wolski v. Hayes, 144 Ga. App. 180, 240 S.E.2d 720 (1977).

Substitution of a party is not authorized. Nelson v. Sing Oil Co., 122 Ga. App. 19, 176 S.E.2d 227 (1970).

Third-party complaint cannot stand if the complaint’s only purpose is to tender a substitute defendant to a plaintiff because a third-party defendant must be one who is or may be liable to a third-party plaintiff for all or part of a plaintiff’s claim against the third-party defendant. Smith, Kline & French Labs. v. Just, 126 Ga. App. 643, 191 S.E.2d 632 (1972).

This section does not allow the tender of another defendant whose liability would flow directly to the original plaintiff rather than secondarily to the original defendant. National Life Assurance Co. v. Massey-Ferguson Credit Corp., 136 Ga. App. 311, 220 S.E.2d 793 (1975).

Tender by defendant of another defendant. — Impleader is not proper when the defendant in effect tenders to the plaintiff an additional defendant against whom the plaintiff might or might not assert a claim. Benson Paint Co. v. Williams Constr. Co., 128 Ga. App. 47, 195 S.E.2d 671 (1973).

This section does not allow tender of another defendant who is or may be liable to the plaintiff; third-party complaint must be against one who is or may be liable to the third-party plaintiff for all or part of the original plaintiff’s claim against the party. Balkcom v. Mull, 129 Ga. App. 277, 199 S.E.2d 346 (1973).

This section does not allow tender of another defendant who may be liable to the plaintiff. Evans v. Lukas, 140 Ga. App. 182, 230 S.E.2d 136 (1976).

No impleading when separate and independent controversies. — This section does not permit impleading when there are separate and independent controversies between the defendant and the third-party defendant; it sanctions the defendant's use of the third-party complaint only when the third-party defendant is or may be liable over to the defendant for all or part of the plaintiff's claim against the defendant. Bill Heard Chevrolet Co. v. GMAC, 120 Ga. App. 328, 170 S.E.2d 454 (1969).

Third-party pleading does not allow the defendant to implead a third-party defendant to recover on a claim on which the third-party defendant is alleged to be directly liable to the defendant; the defendant may only implead one who is or may be liable to the defendant for all or part of the plaintiff's claim against the defendant. Southern Ry. v. Insurance Co. of N. Am., 228 Ga. 23, 183 S.E.2d 912 (1971); Wolski v. Hayes, 144 Ga. App. 180, 240 S.E.2d 720 (1977); Dorsey Heating & Air Conditioning Co. v. C.C. Dickson, Inc., 153 Ga. App. 599, 266 S.E.2d 282 (1980).

O.C.G.A. § 9-11-14 does not authorize defendant to seek affirmative and independent relief solely on the defendant's own behalf from one not a party to the action. Thigpen v. Koch, 126 Ga. App. 182, 190 S.E.2d 117 (1972); Latimore v. International Bus. Invs., Inc., 189 Ga. App. 306, 375 S.E.2d 507 (1988).

Substitute defendant not shown to be secondarily liable. — Substitute defendant not shown to be secondarily liable but brought in to assert an entirely separate claim resulted in summary judgment on third-party complaint. Lamb v. K.M. Ins. Co., 208 Ga. App. 746, 431 S.E.2d 744 (1993).

Notion of secondary or derivative liability is central, and it is irrelevant whether the basis of the third-party claim is indemnity, subrogation, contribution, express or implied warranty, or some other theory. Smith, Kline & French Labs. v. Just, 126 Ga. App. 643, 191 S.E.2d 632 (1972).

Third-party's liability must be dependent or secondary. — Third-party claim may be asserted only when third-party's liability is dependent in some way on the outcome of the main claim or when the third-party is secondarily liable to the defendant. Smith, Kline & French Labs. v. Just, 126 Ga. App. 643, 191 S.E.2d 632 (1972).

Third-party defendant's secondary liability to the original defendant for the original defendant's liability on the main claim is required if a third-party complaint is to meet the statutory requirements. Knapp v. Lolley, 177 Ga. App. 786, 341 S.E.2d 306 (1986).

O.C.G.A. § 9-11-14 allows a defendant to bring into the action a third-party defendant who is or may be liable to the defendant for all or part of the plaintiff's claim against the defendant. The third-party defendant's secondary liability to the original defendant for the defendant's liability on the main claim is required if a third-party complaint is to meet the statutory requirements. Southern Ry. v. Union Camp Corp., 181 Ga. App. 691, 353 S.E.2d 519 (1987).

City could bring a third-party complaint against a corporation that allegedly damaged a pipeline supplying water to a customer since the corporation was alleged to be a tortfeasor only as to the city and it was alleged that, in that tortfeasor's capacity, the corporation was secondarily liable for any contractual damages that the city might ultimately be obligated to pay the customer. Mayor of Savannah v. Southern Bulk Indus., Inc., 198 Ga. App. 867, 403 S.E.2d 447 (1991), cert. denied, 198 Ga. App. 898, 403 S.E.2d 447 (1991).

Third-party action may be maintained only against one who is secondarily liable to original defendant for part or all of the original plaintiff's claim. Wolski v. Hayes, 144 Ga. App. 180, 240 S.E.2d 720 (1977).

Third-party complaint must be predicated on secondary liability, and not based purely on direct liability from the third-party defendant to the plaintiff. Brabham v. Brown, 147 Ga. App. 766, 250 S.E.2d 495 (1978).

On grounds of indemnity, subrogation, contribution, warranty, or the like. — In order to recover on a third-party complaint, a third-party plaintiff must establish a right over against a third-party defendant either by indemnity (in tort or in contract, express or implied), subrogation, contribution, or warranty. Central of Ga. Ry. v. Lester, 118 Ga. App. 794, 165 S.E.2d 587 (1968).

For third-party action to be maintained, it must appear that proposed third-party defendant is or may be secondarily liable to third-party plaintiff, and a right over against the third-party must be established, either by indemnity, subrogation, contribution, or warranty. Bill Heard Chevrolet Co. v. GMAC, 120 Ga. App. 328, 170 S.E.2d 454 (1969).

This section permits impleading of third party who is secondarily liable over to defendant for all or part of the plaintiffs recovery, whether by indemnity, subrogation, contribution, express or implied warranty, or otherwise. Insurance Co. of N. Am. v. Atlas Supply Co., 121 Ga. App. 1, 172 S.E.2d 632 (1970).

Only one who is secondarily liable to the original defendant (third-party plaintiff) may be brought in as a third-party defendant as in cases of indemnity, subrogation, contribution, warranty, and the like. Burroughs Corp. v. Outside Carpets, Inc., 127 Ga. App. 622, 194 S.E.2d 487 (1972).

Third-party complaint is maintainable for contribution, as well as for indemnity, subrogation, express and implied warranty, and the like. McMichael v. Georgia Power Co., 133 Ga. App. 593, 211 S.E.2d 632 (1974).

Third-party plaintiff (original defendant) must show that in some fashion a third-party defendant is or may be secondarily liable to the third-party plaintiff through indemnity, subrogation, contribution, or warranty. National Life Assurance Co. v. Massey-Ferguson Credit Corp., 136 Ga. App. 311, 220 S.E.2d 793 (1975).

In a proceeding seeking confirmation of an arbitrator's award in a home construction dispute, it was not error for the trial court to join a surety the homeowners obtained to secure the release of the builder's lien on their property, even though the surety was not an indispensable party under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-14, because the surety was a necessary party whose joinder could have been ordered by the trial court absent a motion. Marchelletta v. Seay Constr. Servs., 265 Ga. App. 23, 593 S.E.2d 64 (2004).

Attorney could not be held solely liable to a court reporting service for $851.10, representing court reporting fees owed, as the clients the attorney was representing at the time the services were rendered should have been joined in the litigation, pursuant to both O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-14(a) and 9-11-19(a), given that: (1) the clients could have been liable to the attorney for all or part of the court reporting fees; and (2) the attorney's claim that the clients made partial payment for the court reporting services also rendered the clients necessary parties for adjudication of this dispute. Free v. Lankford & Assocs., Inc., 284 Ga. App. 328, 643 S.E.2d 771 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 560 (Ga. 2007).

Fact that third-party defendant may not be liable for all damages alleged does not preclude the use of third-party practice since this section specifically provides for partial liability; apportioning the damages would be for the jury. Caudle v. Whiddon, 126 Ga. App. 21, 189 S.E.2d 875 (1972).

No legal relationship between plaintiff and third-party defendant need be shown. Smith, Kline & French Labs. v. Just, 126 Ga. App. 643, 191 S.E.2d 632 (1972).

Fact that plaintiff has no claim against third party irrelevant. — It is irrelevant to the defendant's right to bring in a third party claimed to be liable over to the defendant that the plaintiff has no claim against the third party, or declines to assert a claim against the third-party. Smith, Kline & French Labs. v. Just, 126 Ga. App. 643, 191 S.E.2d 632 (1972).

Third-party complaint against plaintiff's agent. — Defendant's third-party complaint against the plaintiff's agent was not cognizable against the agent since the action could only be fairly regarded as related to the defendant's counterclaim against the plaintiff and, as such, required an order by the trial court pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-13(h) joining the agent as a party. McCormick v. Rissanen, 177 Ga. App. 623, 340 S.E.2d 268 (1986).

Impleading insurer who fails to defend insured. — When an insurer has disclaimed liability and refused to defend on behalf of the insured, automatic denial of an insured's motion to implead the insurer is improper and separate trials are justifiable only on grounds of the prejudice caused by the confusion and delay of litigating the actions together, not on the grounds of provisions in the insurance contract which attempt to override O.C.G.A. § 9-11-14. Munday v. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co., 172 Ga. App. 382, 323 S.E.2d 193 (1984).

Tender of defendant liable to plaintiff. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-14 dealing with third-party complaints does not allow the tender of another defendant who is or may be liable to the plaintiff. Cohran v. Jones, 160 Ga. App. 761, 288 S.E.2d 80 (1981), aff'd, 249 Ga. 510, 291 S.E.2d 538 (1982).

Third-party complaint is maintainable under Ga. L. 1969, p. 979, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-14) for contribution among several joint trespassers pursuant to Ga. L. 1972, p. 134, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 51-12-32). Evans v. Lukas, 140 Ga. App. 182, 230 S.E.2d 136 (1976).

Joint tortfeasors. — Defendant can bring in other joint tortfeasors in order to enforce claim for contribution. Gosser v. Diplomat Restaurant, Inc., 125 Ga. App. 620, 188 S.E.2d 412 (1972).

If right of contribution among joint tortfeasors may arise, third-party action can be maintained, unless barred for some other reason. Maxwell Bros. of Athens v. Deupree Co., 129 Ga. App. 254, 199 S.E.2d 403 (1973).

Although a defendant is not generally permitted to offer a substitute defendant by third-party complaint, a third-party complaint is nevertheless maintainable under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-14 against a joint tortfeasor for contribution. Winkler, Inc. v. Vilston, N.V., 172 Ga. App. 686, 324 S.E.2d 542 (1984); Confetti Atlanta, Ltd. v. Gray, 195 Ga. App. 719, 394 S.E.2d 632 (1990).

Application of O.C.G.A. § 51-12-32. — Ga. L. 1972, p. 134, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 51-12-32) relates only to contribution among "joint trespassers," that is, joint tortfeasors, and proposed third-party defendant cannot be made liable as a joint tort-feasor when it, as employer, has already paid workers' compensation to the plaintiffs. Central of Ga. Ry. v. Lester, 118 Ga. App. 794, 165 S.E.2d 587 (1968).

Even though right to contribution does not accrue until after judgment (or compromise and settlement), a third-party action for contribution may be maintained. Evans v. Lukas, 140 Ga. App. 182, 230 S.E.2d 136 (1976).

Timing of right to contribution. — Fact that contribution may not actually be obtained until original defendant has been cast in judgment and has paid does not prevent impleader; impleader judgment may be so fashioned as to protect rights of other tort-feasors, so that defendants judgment over against them may not be enforced until the defendant has paid the plaintiff's judgment or more than the defendant's proportionate share, whichever the law may require. Gosser v. Diplomat Restaurant, Inc., 125 Ga. App. 620, 188 S.E.2d 412 (1972).

Third-party action for contribution may be maintained even though the right to contribution does not accrue until after judgment or disposition through compromise and settlement. Hennessy Cadillac v. Pippin, 197 Ga. App. 448, 398 S.E.2d 725 (1990).

When third-party complaint maintainable on indemnity theory. — Third-party complaint cannot be supported on the theory of indemnity unless the third-party defendant is primarily responsible for the negligence or wrongful act which caused the injury. Central of Ga. Ry. v. Lester, 118 Ga. App. 794, 165 S.E.2d 587 (1968).

Defendant may bring in a third-party nonresident defendant if that defendant's liability to the original defendant allegedly arises by virtue of the tort forming the basis for the original action or by virtue of a contract between the defendant and the third-party defendant, such as one for indemnification, related to such tort. J.C. Penney Co. v. Malouf Co., 230 Ga. 140, 196 S.E.2d 145 (1973).

If a defendant is sued in tort, and a nonresident third-party has contracted with the defendant to indemnify the defendant against loss for such tort, then the indemnifying party can be brought into the action as a third-party defendant. J.C. Penney Co. v. Malouf Co., 230 Ga. 140, 196 S.E.2d 145 (1973).

Plaintiff's spouse not a proper third-party defendant in tort action.

— In an action against a railroad brought by a plaintiff to recover for injuries suffered when the car in which the plaintiff was riding, being driven by the plaintiff's spouse, was struck by the train, the plaintiff's spouse was not subject to suit by the plaintiff for negligence, and therefore could not be a joint tort-feasor with the railroad; hence, since under Ga. L. 1972, p. 134, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 51-12-32) the right to contribution relates only to joint tort-feasors, the third-party complaint brought by the railroad on the theory that the railroad would be entitled to contribution from the plaintiff's spouse failed to state a claim. Southern Ry. v. Brewer, 122 Ga. App. 292, 176 S.E.2d 665 (1970).

Maker of promissory note, sued by holder in due course, may not file third-party complaint against original payee who transferred the note before maturity without recourse. Bill Heard Chevrolet Co. v. GMAC, 120 Ga. App. 328, 170 S.E.2d 454 (1969).

Impleader of counterclaimant's insurer not authorized. — This section is not designed to authorize the plaintiff against whom a counterclaim has been filed to implead the defendant-counterclaimant's insurance company. Thigpen v. Koch, 126 Ga. App. 182, 190 S.E.2d 117 (1972).

Motions

Impleader motion more than ten days after answer within court's discretion. — When motion to implead third-party defendant is made more than ten days after original answer, motion is addressed to court's discretion. Holland-America Line v. United Coops., 124 Ga. App. 375, 183 S.E.2d 620 (1971).

There is no built-in requirement as to when impleader motion allowed by court must be filed; such a motion is addressed to the discretion of the court. Frank B. Wilder & Assocs. v. St. Joseph's Hosp., 132 Ga. App. 373, 208 S.E.2d 145 (1974).

Timeliness is factor governing exercise thereof.

— Decision to grant or deny motion for leave to implead a third-party defendant is committed to the sound discretion of the court, and timeliness of such motion is a factor governing the exercise of such discretion. Jenkins v. Chambers, 127 Ga. App. 200, 193 S.E.2d 222 (1972).

When motion for leave to implead is not promptly made and movant offers no reasonable excuse for delay, the motion may properly be denied. Jenkins v. Chambers, 127 Ga. App. 200, 193 S.E.2d 222 (1972); Cherokee Nat'l Life Ins. Co. v. Coastal Bank, 239 Ga. 800, 238 S.E.2d 866 (1977).

Trial court did not err in denying a defendant contractor's motion to add subcontractors as third-party defendants because the motion was made four years after the initial action for construction defects was brought against the contractor, and the contractor failed to explain why the contractor attempted repairs took two years or why, once the contractor was aware that the problems could not be fixed, the contractor waited another eight months to add the subcontractors. R. Larry Phillips Constr. Co. v. Muscogee Glass, 302 Ga. App. 611, 691 S.E.2d 372, cert. denied, No. S10C1105, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 568; cert. denied, No. S10C1094, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 587 (Ga. 2010).

Denial of motion made after summary judgment not improper.

— When motion to implead the third-party defendant was filed approximately eight months after the original answer, and after grant of summary judgment fixing liability between the original parties, it was not an abuse of the court's discretion to deny the motion. Holland-America Line v. United Coops., 124 Ga. App. 375, 183 S.E.2d 620 (1971).

Order denying defendant's motion to implead a third party is not appealable, inasmuch as the order does not finally dispose of any rights of the defendant. Davis v. Roper, 119 Ga. App. 442, 167 S.E.2d 685 (1969).

Venue

Venue of third-party complaint for contribution. — Right of contribution from a joint tort-feasor is a substantive right, and even though an action to recover such contribution is brought as a third-party complaint, it has the nature of an independent suit, which can be maintained only in the county of residence of the alleged joint tort-feasor. Register v. Stone's Indep. Oil Distribs., Inc., 227 Ga. 123, 179 S.E.2d 68 (1971). For comment, see 8 Ga. St. B.J. 428 (1972).

When the defendants, as third-party plaintiffs, seek contribution by third-party defendants of their pro rata share of any verdict and judgment obtained against them, the action cannot be brought in a county other than that of the residence of the third-party defendants. Register v. Stone's Indep. Oil Distribs., Inc., 227 Ga. 123, 179 S.E.2d 68 (1971). For comment, see 8 Ga. St. B.J. 428 (1972).

Independent claim must satisfy venue requirements. — When the claim, whether advanced by the original plaintiff or the original defendants, is essentially independent rather than ancillary to the main action, it must satisfy within itself the constitutional venue requirements (Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. II). Henderson v. Kent, 158 Ga. App. 206, 279 S.E.2d 503 (1981).

Venue of third-party complaint for indemnification. — For purposes of venue involving a nonresident third-party defendant by whom a third-party plaintiff was contractually indemnified, the "act" causing expenses and damages to the defendant (third-party plaintiff) occurred when the suit was brought in a particular county. J.C. Penney Co. v. Malouf Co., 230 Ga. 140, 196 S.E.2d 145 (1973).

Claims against third party defendants barred by res judicata. — Trial court correctly ruled that the claims against the third-party defendants were barred by res judicata because there was identity of the first and second causes of action, identity of the parties or their privies, a prior adjudication by a court of competent jurisdiction, and the assignee's managing partner and primary stockholder testified at deposition that the damages sought in the second suit were the same damages sought in the first suit. Bostick v. CMM Props., 327 Ga. App. 137, 755 S.E.2d 895 (2014).

9-11-15. Amended and supplemental pleadings.

(a) Amendments. A party may amend his pleading as a matter of course and without leave of court at any time before the entry of a pretrial order. Thereafter the party may amend his pleading only by leave of court or by written consent of the adverse party. Leave shall be freely given when justice so requires. A party may plead or move in response to an amended pleading and, when required by an order of the court, shall plead within 15 days after service of the amended pleading, unless the court otherwise orders.

(b) Amendments to conform to the evidence. When issues not raised by the pleadings are tried by express or implied consent of the parties, they shall be treated in all respects as if they had been raised in the pleadings. Such amendment of the pleadings as may be necessary to cause them to conform to the evidence and to raise these issues may be made upon motion of any party at any time, even after judgment; but failure so to amend does not affect the result of the trial of these issues. If evidence is objected to at the trial on the ground that it is not within the issues made by the pleadings, the court may allow the pleadings to be amended and shall do so freely when the presentation of the merits of the action will be subserved thereby and the objecting party fails to satisfy the court that the admission of the evidence would prejudice him in maintaining his action or defense upon the merits. The court may grant a continuance to enable the objecting party to meet the evidence.

(c) Relation back of amendments. Whenever the claim or defense asserted in the amended pleading arises out of the conduct, transaction, or occurrence set forth or attempted to be set forth in the original pleading, the amendment relates back to the date of the original pleading. An amendment changing the party against whom a claim is asserted relates back to the date of the original pleadings if the foregoing provisions are satisfied, and if within the period provided by law for commencing the action against him the party to be brought in by amendment (1) has received such notice of the institution of the action that he will not be prejudiced in maintaining his defense on the merits, and (2) knew or should have known that, but for a mistake concerning the identity of the proper party, the action would have been brought against him.

(d) Supplemental pleadings. Upon motion of a party the court may, upon reasonable notice and upon such terms as are just, permit him to serve a supplemental pleading setting forth transactions or occurrences or events which have happened since the date of the pleading sought to be supplemented. Permission may be granted even though the original pleading is defective in its statement of a claim for relief or defense. If the court deems it advisable that the adverse party plead to the supplemental pleading, it shall so order, specifying the time therefor. (Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 15; Ga. L. 1968, p. 1104, § 4; Ga. L. 1972, p. 689, § 6.)

SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS

General Consideration

Editor’s notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code 1910, § 5681, former Code 1933, § 81-1301, and former Code 1933, Ch. 13, T. 81, are included in the annotations for this Code section.

Pleadings are a means, not an end.

— This section is one of the most important that deal with pleadings; it reempha-sizes and assists in attaining the objective of the rules on pleadings: that pleadings are not an end in themselves, but only a means to the proper presentation of a case, and that at all times pleadings are to assist, not deter, disposition of litigation on the merits. McDonough Constr. Co. v. McLendon Elec. Co., 242 Ga. 510, 250 S.E.2d 424 (1978).

Construction with § 50-21-35. — Absent evidence that the Department of Transportation demonstrated actual prejudice from a surviving spouse's failure to comply with O.C.G.A. § 50-21-35 by failing to timely amend a damages complaint with a certificate showing service upon the attorney general, a dismissal order was vacated, and the case was remanded. Ingram v. DOT, 286 Ga. App. 220, 648 S.E.2d 729 (2007).

Not applicable to claims under Georgia's Workers' Compensation Act. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15(c) has not been incorporated into the Georgia Workers' Compensation Act, O.C.G.A. § 34-9-1 et seq. McLendon v. Advertising That Works, 292 Ga. App. 677, 665 S.E.2d 370 (2008).

Amendment of complaint before service. — In a personal injury action, the plaintiff could amend the complaint before the defendant was served, could serve the "recast complaint" without serving a copy of the original complaint, and, therefore, timely served the defendant. Kennedy v. Porter, 213 Ga. App. 398, 444 S.E.2d 818 (1994).

Complaint signed by unlicensed attorney was not void but merely voidable, and the defect was properly cured by amendment. McCormick v. Acree, 232 Ga. App. 834, 503 S.E.2d 88 (1998).

People's right to litigate with governmental bodies should not be decided on technicalities any more than one citizen's right to litigate with another citizen. City of Atlanta v. International Soc'y for Krishna Consciousness of Atlanta, Inc., 240 Ga. 96, 239 S.E.2d 515 (1977).

Amendment to objection to probate. — It was error to dismiss an amended objection to the probate of a will on the ground that the original objection was legally insufficient, as an amendment to a caveat was permitted even when it was the amendment that sustained the validity of the caveat; the original objection put the proponent on notice of the objection, and its amendment the next day to include the grounds of undue influence and mental incapacity was proper under O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-15 and 15-9-89. Deering v. Keever, 282 Ga. 161, 646 S.E.2d 262 (2007).

Mechanic's liens. — This section, providing for amendment of "pleadings," does not apply to a mechanic's lien because such lien is nothing more than a matter of proof. Shirah Contracting Co. v. Waite, 143 Ga. App. 355, 238 S.E.2d 728 (1977).

Recovery of future rents. — In the absence of an amendment to the complaint, supplemental pleadings, or trial of the claims for accrued rents by the express or implied consent of the parties, the trial court was not authorized to enter judgment for the landlord for rents that became due after commencement of the action. Dwyer v. Anand, 210 Ga. App. 419, 436 S.E.2d 532 (1993).

Implied consent to amendment of defendant's counterclaim in landlord/tenant situation. — Although a trial court erred in awarding a tenant attorney fees under O.C.G.A. § 13-6-11 because the tenant's counterclaim was not independent or viable, the error was harmless since attorney fees were authorized under an amended lease provision allowing attorney fees to the prevailing party. The landlord was not misled or denied the opportunity to defend or offer evidence on the issue because at the first trial, the tenant asserted that the tenant was seeking attorney fees as the prevailing party, and at the second trial, the tenant stated in the tenant's opening statement that in addition to seeking attorney fees under § 13-6-11, it was seeking and introducing evidence of attorney fees as recoverable under the lease provision, and having failed to make a contemporaneous objection when the arguments were raised and the evidence introduced, the landlord implicitly consented to the amendment of the pleadings to include the claim and waived any objections thereto. Sugarloaf Mills Ltd. P'ship v. Record Town, Inc., 306 Ga. App. 263, 701 S.E.2d 881 (2010).

Jury trial. — Demand for jury trial must be made at time of original answer, and the defendant cannot later make such request. Williams v. Leonard Heating & Air Conditioning Co., 137 Ga. App. 16, 223 S.E.2d 2 (1975).

Waiver of right to jury trial is not within purview of this section. Marler v. Citizens & S. Bank, 139 Ga. App. 851, 229 S.E.2d 786 (1976), aff'd, 239 Ga. 342, 236 S.E.2d 590 (1977). But see Gregson & Assocs.,

Inc. v. Webb, 143 Ga. App. 276, 238 S.E.2d 274 (1977).

When a third-party defendant had not been served as a party to the main action, there could be no judgment entered in the main action by the trial court against the third-party defendant. Stone Mountain Aviation, Inc. v. Rollins Leasing Corp., 174 Ga. App. 35, 329 S.E.2d 247 (1985).

Evidence of additional damages in trial de novo. — When the plaintiff appealed to the state court from a magistrate court's decision dismissing the plaintiff's claim and awarding damages to the defendant on its counterclaim, and plaintiff had notice of additional damages since the original counterclaim, the defendant could present evidence of additional damages of less than $5,000 relating to the defendant's counterclaim, without formal amendment of the defendant's pleadings. Jr. Mills Constr. v. Trichinotis, 223 Ga. App. 19, 477 S.E.2d 141 (1996).

No waiver of defenses. — Trial court erred by granting a parent's complaint for modification of child custody and support and changing custody, which was filed in that parent's county of residence, as that county was not the jurisdiction wherein the issue of custody and support was originally litigated and the opposing parent never waived the challenge to the jurisdiction of the trial court via a pro se letter, which merely acknowledged receipt of the complaint; as a result, the judgment granting the change of custody was reversed and the case was remanded to the trial court with directions for the trial court to transfer the case to the trial court of the proper county. Hatch v. Hatch, 287 Ga. App. 832, 652 S.E.2d 874 (2007).

Action for breach of fiduciary duty against a conservator was tried by implied consent although it was not pled. — Although the record showed that a conservator did not bring a claim pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 29-5-93(a)(4) in writing, but sought only an accounting pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 29-5-81, the conservator did not object when the administrator raised the issue at the hearing. As a result, the issue of whether the conservator breached the conservator's fiduciary duty was litigated by the implied consent of the parties pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15(b). In re Hudson, 300 Ga. App. 340, 685 S.E.2d 323 (2009).

Grandparents' visitation deemed tried by consent when parent did not object. — Because a parent's only objection to the grandparents' visitation raised at the hearing was the parent's concern for advance notice by the grandparents before scheduling a visit, the parent failed to preserve any objection that the grandparents had failed to intervene in the action as contemplated by O.C.G.A. § 19-7-3(c), pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15(b). Grove v. Grove, 296 Ga. 435, 768 S.E.2d 453 (2015).

Amendments, Generally

1. In General

Right to amend is very broad. Moore v. Bryan, 52 Ga. App. 272, 183 S.E. 117 (1935) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-1301); Dalton Carpet Indus., Inc. v. Chilivis, 137 Ga. App. 266, 223 S.E.2d 460 (1976); McRae v. Britton, 144 Ga. App.

Amendments, Generally (Cont'd)1. In General (Cont'd)

340, 240 S.E.2d 904 (1977); Cooper v. Mason, 151 Ga. App. 793, 261 S.E.2d 738 (1979).

Right to amend is very broad, and the practice of allowing amendments is very liberal. Wright v. Horne, 123 Ga. 86, 51 S.E. 30 (1905) (decided under former Code 1910, § 5681); Cox v. Georgia R.R. & Banking Co., 139 Ga. 532, 77 S.E. 574 (1913) (decided under former Code 1910, § 5681); Jenkins v. Lane, 154 Ga. 454, 115 S.E. 126 (1922) (decided under former Code 1910, § 5681); Richardson v. Hairried, 202 Ga. 610, 44 S.E.2d 237 (1947) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-1301).

This state has a very liberal policy with regard to amendments. Taylor v. Georgia Power Co., 129 Ga. App. 89, 198 S.E.2d 701 (1973); McRae v. Britton, 144 Ga. App. 340, 240 S.E.2d 904 (1977).

Insurer had a duty to provide a defense to the insurer's insured because a fact issue existed as to whether the insured's actions in the underlying incident were criminal and/or intentional; although a cross-appellant originally alleged an intentional act on the part of the insured, the cross-appellant removed all factual allegations of intentional conduct and amended the complaint to allege only negligence and gross negligence. In Georgia, a party's right to amend a complaint pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15(a) was very liberal. Nationwide Mut. Fire Ins. Co. v. Kim, 294 Ga. App. 548, 669 S.E.2d 517 (2008).

Discretion of court. — Right of amendment is very broad, as is discretion of trial court in controlling it, and unless there is a manifest abuse of the court's discretion it will not be controlled. Walker v. Sheehan, 80 Ga. App. 606, 56 S.E.2d 628 (1949) (decided under former Code 1933, §§ 81-1301 and 81-1302).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in allowing a bank to reinstate the bank's claim for attorney fees and litigation expenses in an action against a property owner, seeking to re-establish its priority lien on the owner's property, as the bank had initially withdrawn that claim in order to expedite litigation and also based on the owner's promise to pursue expeditious litigation, wherein both parties agreed to avoid questioning a witness regarding bad faith, but the owner continued to pursue the questioning; further, such amendment was to be liberally allowed, the bank's intent to seek such an award was clear, and the owner was unable to show surprise or prejudice by allowance of the amendment. Schowalter v. Washington Mut. Bank, 275 Ga. App. 182, 620 S.E.2d 437 (2005).

Trial court's denial of the first insurer's motion for a directed verdict, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-50, in the second insurer's declaratory judgment action regarding contested motor vehicle coverage, was proper as the second insurer met the three-step requirement for institution of a declaratory judgment action because there was no suit pending that could have gone into default or been prejudiced, the declaratory judgment action was timely filed, and it provided a reservation-of-rights letter which listed the insured's lack of cooperation as the basis for questioning coverage; although the second insurer later provided four additional reasons in the declaratory judgment action, including fraud and misrepresentation which was found by the jury, such additional reasons did not have to be set forth in the reservation-of-rights letter as amendments under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15(a) were permissible. Gov't Emples. Ins. Co. v. Progressive Cas. Ins. Co., 275 Ga. App. 872, 622 S.E.2d 92 (2005).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by amending a pretrial order to allow for bifurcation of a trial, upon the motion of the defendants, because at the hearing on the motion to amend, the plaintiff never objected on the grounds that the timing of the motion to bifurcate caused any injustice; therefore, no reversible error occurred with regard to the plaintiff's timing argument. Bolden v. Ruppenthal, 286 Ga. App. 800, 650 S.E.2d 331 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 756 (Ga. 2007).

Subsection (a) is to be liberally construed in favor of allowance of amendments, particularly when the opposing party is not prejudiced thereby. MCG Dev. Corp. v. Bick Realty Co., 140 Ga. App. 41, 230 S.E.2d 26 (1976); Bourquine v. City of Patterson, 151 Ga. App. 232, 259 S.E.2d 214 (1979).

Cross-claim by codefendant. — Pleadings must be treated as if amended to include cross-claiming codefendant's plea and prayer for compensation when the issue was tried by express or implied consent of the parties. Privitera v. Addison, 190 Ga. App. 102, 378 S.E.2d 312, cert. denied, 190 Ga. App. 898, 378 S.E.2d 312 (1989).

Decisions to be made on merits, not technicalities. — Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 8 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-8(f)), providing that pleadings be construed to do substantial justice, taken in conjunction with Ga. L. 1972, p. 689, § 6 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15), requires that decisions be made on the merits, not upon the niceties of pleadings. Owens v. Cobb County, 230 Ga. 707, 198 S.E.2d 846 (1973).

When the trial court denied a motion to amend a pretrial order strictly on the basis of delay, finding the case was scheduled for trial and had been on prior trial calendars, the court had to reconsider the motion under the proper balancing test. Total Car Franchising Corp. v. Squire, 259 Ga. App. 114, 576 S.E.2d 90 (2003).

Amendment is a resource against waste. McRae v. Britton, 144 Ga. App. 340, 240 S.E.2d 904 (1977).

If an amendment is germane to cause of action, the amendment should be allowed. McRae v. Britton, 144 Ga. App. 340, 240 S.E.2d 904 (1977).

New cause of action. — There is no prohibition against pleading a new cause of action by amendment. Dalton Carpet Indus., Inc. v. Chilivis, 137 Ga. App. 266, 223 S.E.2d 460 (1976); McRae v. Britton, 144 Ga. App. 340, 240 S.E.2d 904 (1977); Cooper v. Mason, 151 Ga. App. 793, 261 S.E.2d 738 (1979); Peterson v. American Int'l Life Assurance Co., 203 Ga. App. 745, 417 S.E.2d 402, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 907, 417 S.E.2d 402 (1992).

Nothing in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 or O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15 prohibited clients who sued a law firm and several attorneys, alleging legal malpractice, from amending the clients' complaint after the clients' claim was dismissed for failure to file the expert's affidavit required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1, in an effort to add claims sounding in something other than professional negligence. Smith v. Morris, Manning & Martin, LLP, 264 Ga. App. 24, 589 S.E.2d 840 (2003).

O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15(a) permits, but does not require, a party to respond to an amended pleading, and allegations in an amended petition are "deemed denied or avoided" even in the absence of an answer; a trial court erred in holding that a director was required to plead a conversion of stock counterclaim "upon receipt of the amended complaint." Sampson v. Haywire Ventures, Inc., 278 Ga. App. 525, 629 S.E.2d 515 (2006).

Striking original pleadings. — Nothing in subsection (a) of this section prohibits amendment of the complaint by striking all the original pleadings. Stith v. Hudson, 231 Ga. 520, 202 S.E.2d 392 (1973).

When less than all of plaintiff's claims are added or dropped, the additions and deletions are not dismissals and renewals governed by O.C.G.A. §§ 9-2-61(a) and 9-11-41(a), but simply amendments governed by the liberal amendment rules of subsections (a) and (c) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15. Young v. Rider, 208 Ga. App. 147, 430 S.E.2d 117 (1993).

Amendment to correct error in filing answer. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by striking the claimants' answers to the complaint in a forfeiture proceeding because the claimants were permitted by law to amend the claimants' answers to correct the lack of verification, but never did so and, although the claimants' claim that the trial court failed to afford the claimants an opportunity to amend the claimants' pleadings, the claimants failed to show that the trial court refused to consider such an amendment or did anything to preclude or bar the filing thereof. Howard v. State of Ga., 321 Ga. App. 881, 743 S.E.2d 540 (2013).

After remand from appellate court. — After a trial court's summary judgment ruling was reversed by the appellate court and the case was remanded, the trial court did not err in allowing the defendant to amend the answer and the counterclaim under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15 to add claims for compensatory and punitive damages as the action had not been fully adjudicated and claims remained after remand. Kace Invs., L.P. v. Hull, 278 Ga. App. 477, 629 S.E.2d 26 (2006).

Facts upon which court's venue depends may be added by amendment. Middlebrooks v. Daniels, 129 Ga. App. 790, 201 S.E.2d 338 (1973).

Legal guardians were entitled to amend the guardians' complaints to allege additional facts supporting venue in the county since the guardians initially filed their complaints, even after their cases had been moved to the trial court in a second county based on the fact that they initially only pled that venue was supported in the first county because that was where the truck collision occurred. However, their initial complaints were sufficient to support venue and their amended complaints added that the legal guardians learned that the truck owner had an office and transacted business in the initial county of filing and since that allegation was added to challenge the truck owner's assertions that venue was based solely on where the accident occurred and that there was an entitlement to move the lawsuits to the county where the owners had their principal place of business. Mohawk Indus. v. Clark, 259 Ga. App. 26, 576 S.E.2d 16 (2002).

Application of relation back statute to venue. — Trial court did not err in denying a motion filed by a corporate president and the president's spouse to dismiss a corporation's action against them or, in the alternative, to transfer the case because the trial court's application of the relation-back statute, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15(c), did not violate the constitutional right of the president and the spouse to be sued in the county where they resided under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. II, Para. VI; because the president and the spouse were not residents of Georgia when the suit was filed, the proper venue had to be determined pursuant to Georgia's Long Arm Statute, O.C.G.A.

Complaint may be amended so as to validate service of process. Leniston v. Bonfiglio, 138 Ga. App. 151, 226 S.E.2d 1 (1976). For comment, see 28 Mercer L. Rev. 559 (1977).

Omission to give court jurisdiction in the pleadings is amendable. Southern Grocery Stores, Inc. v. Kelly, 52 Ga. App. 551, 183 S.E. 924 (1936) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-1309).

Amendment by substitution of affidavit permissible. — When the plaintiff filed a valid affidavit as a substitute for a defective one before the court ruled on the defendant's motion to dismiss, this amendment by substitution was as permissible as an amendment by striking from or adding to the contents of the paper which it is sought to amend. Phoebe Putney Mem. Hosp. v. Skipper, 235 Ga. App. 534, 510 S.E.2d 101 (1998).

Allowing amendment of complaint to seek damages was not an abuse of discretion by the court. Glynn-Brunswick Mem. Hosp. Auth. v. Gibbons, 243 Ga. App. 341, 530 S.E.2d 736 (2000).

No requirement to answer amended complaint. — Allegations of an amended complaint were deemed denied by operation of law, and because the holding in Division 1 of Teamsters Local 515 v. Roadbuilders, Inc. of Tennessee, 249 Ga. 418, 420, 291 S.E.2d 698 (Ga. 1982), and its progeny, e.g., Wilson Welding Service v. Partee, 234 Ga. App. 619, 620, 507 S.E.2d 168 (Ga. Ct. App. 1998), conflicted with that rule of law, those decisions were overruled; a trial court erred in holding that a defendant was required to answer an amended complaint to avoid a default and in defaulting a defendant upon a failure to answer an amended complaint. Shields v. Gish, 280 Ga. 556, 629 S.E.2d 244 (2006).

Amendment of admissions not a pleading. — Response to requests for admission is not a pleading as pleadings are defined as seven specific filings, including a complaint and an answer and case law distinguishes an amendment of a complaint from the withdrawal or amendment of admissions, which are governed by different statutory procedures and schemes. Brougham Casket & Vault Co., LLC v. DeLoach, 323 Ga. App. 701, 747 S.E.2d 707 (2013).

Venue of affidavit. — When heading of venue of an affidavit was by mistake incorrectly stated to be in a state and county other than the state and county where it was actually signed and sworn to, but it appeared from the jurat that it was signed and sworn to in the proper jurisdiction, the judge did not err in allowing the affidavit to be amended by inserting proper venue. Southern Grocery Stores, Inc. v. Kelly, 52 Ga. App. 551, 183 S.E. 924 (1936) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-1309).

Reduction of amount claimed to jurisdictional limitation of court. — Cross-action may be amended to reduce amount claimed to a sum within the jurisdictional limitation of the court. Allied Enters., Inc. v. Brooks, 93 Ga. App. 832, 93 S.E.2d 392 (1956) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-1301).

Amendment pleading law of foreign state. — Original complaint seeking recovery for wrongful death of spouse sufficiently stated cause of action as measured by standards of notice pleading, and an amendment pleading the applicable law of North Carolina was allowable and would relate back to the filing of the original complaint. Atlanta Newspapers, Inc. v. Shaw, 123 Ga. App. 848, 182 S.E.2d 683 (1971).

Failure to verify, if required, is an amendable defect. Rigby v. Powell, 233 Ga. 158, 210 S.E.2d 696 (1974), overruled on other grounds, Wilson v. Nichols, 253 Ga. 84, 316 S.E.2d 752 (1984); MCG Dev. Corp. v. Bick Realty Co., 140 Ga. App. 41, 230 S.E.2d 26 (1976).

Condemnation proceedings. — Amendment with regard to condemnation proceedings is perfectly proper when the amendment's allowance does not adversely and substantially affect the condemnee's rights. Taylor v. Georgia Power Co., 129 Ga. App. 89, 198 S.E.2d 701 (1973).

Amendment in condemnation proceedings, effect of which was to limit condemnor's use of the land condemned, did not amount to abandonment, nor to a substantial change such as would require that it be stricken, and until final judgment was reached, there was no impediment to such amendment. Taylor v. Georgia Power Co., 129 Ga. App. 89, 198 S.E.2d 701 (1973).

Forfeiture proceedings. — Since the claimant contesting the forfeiture of property was authorized to amend the claimant's answer to a forfeiture complaint, the court erred in granting the state's motion to strike the amendment. Jackson v. State, 231 Ga. App. 320, 498 S.E.2d 159 (1998).

Garnishment proceedings. — Prior to judgment thereon, a motion filed to modify and reduce a garnishment judgment under O.C.G.A. § 18-4-91 may be retroactively amended to substitute the name and signature of a licensed Georgia attorney pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15. North Ga. Medical Ctr. v. Food Lion, Inc., 238 Ga. App. 78, 517 S.E.2d 799 (1999).

Amendment to add defense. — In an action for breach of a lease agreement, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the defendants' attempt to amend the defendants' answer to add a defense of condemnation. Ford's & Gantt Co. v. Wallace, 249 Ga. App. 273, 548 S.E.2d 31 (2001).

Affirmative defenses. — While bringing in affirmative defense of denial of performance or occurrence of conditions precedent 15 months after filing of an original answer is not beneficial to the orderly disposition of a case, it is nevertheless permitted. Sasser & Co. v. Griffin, 133 Ga. App. 83, 210 S.E.2d 34 (1974).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in granting the defendant's motion to amend a pretrial order for the purpose of adding the affirmative defenses of unconscionability, illegality, and fraud because the defendant had raised the defenses on motion for summary judgment and there was neither prejudice arising out of surprise nor waiver as a matter of law. Driggers v. Campbell, 247 Ga. App. 300, 543 S.E.2d 787 (2000).

Amendment a matter of right before entry of pretrial order. — Subsection (a) of this section allows amendment as a matter of right before entry of a pretrial order. Clover Realty Co. v. Todd, 237 Ga. 821, 229 S.E.2d 649 (1976).

Amendments may be filed at any time before entry of a pretrial order without permission of the court. Newbern v. Chapman Funeral Chapel, 158 Ga. App. 790, 282 S.E.2d 379 (1981).

Because the trial court had not entered a pretrial order, a patient's spouse was entitled to amend a medical malpractice complaint after the patient's death to add a wrongful death claim as a matter of course and without leave of court. Wesley Chapel Foot & Ankle Ctr., LLC v. Johnson, 286 Ga. App. 881, 650 S.E.2d 387 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 820 (Ga. 2007).

Trial court did not err in considering the claims that a plaintiff asserted in two amendments to a petition, although the amendments were filed after an order granting dissolution of a limited liability company was entered, because the judgment on the dissolution petition was not a final judgment, the defendant's counterclaim had yet to be heard, and no pretrial order had been filed at the time the amendments were made. Moses v. Pennebaker, 312 Ga. App. 623, 719 S.E.2d 521 (2011).

Amendment compromising class action not allowed as matter of right.

— General rule permitting amendment as a matter of course and without leave of court before entry of pretrial order has no application in respect to a class action, if the proposed amendment would have the effect of compromising the claim. Murphy v. Hope, 229 Ga. 836, 195 S.E.2d 24 (1972).

Amendments allowed before pretrial order in special statutory proceedings. — State should have been allowed to amend the action to make the Code section conform to the allegations contained in the condemnation action since the property seized was a result of a gambling offense, not a drug offense and although these offenses are special statutory proceedings, the Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 11. T. 9, is applicable. State

v. Walls, 202 Ga. App. 899, 415 S.E.2d 921 (1992).

Expert affidavits in malpractice actions. — Expert affidavits, which the plaintiffs had filed in an earlier action against the defendants for medical malpractice, functioned as an amendment to the plaintiffs' complaint in a subsequent action against the defendants since the affidavits were attached to the plaintiffs' response to the defendants' motion to dismiss. Bell v. Figueredo, 259 Ga. 321, 381 S.E.2d 29 (1989).

Failure to attach supporting affidavit to professional malpractice complaint was an amendable defect under subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15 since the plaintiffs had obtained the affidavit before filing suit and had simply neglected to file the affidavit with the plaintiffs' complaint. St. Joseph's Hosp. v. Nease, 259 Ga. 153, 377 S.E.2d 847 (1989).

Failure to file an expert's affidavit with a complaint for professional malpractice, as required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1, is an amendable defect, at least when the plaintiff has obtained the affidavit prior to filing the complaint and the failure to file the affidavit was the result of a mistake. Reid v. Brazil, 193 Ga. App. 1, 387 S.E.2d 1, cert. denied, 193 Ga. App. 910, 387 S.E.2d 1 (1989).

Malpractice plaintiffs' purported amendment did not remedy the deficiency in the plaintiffs' complaint concerning the plaintiffs' failure to file the expert affidavit required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1. Anderson v. Navarro, 227 Ga. App. 184, 489 S.E.2d 40 (1997).

Trial court did not err in denying dismissal of a patient's medical malpractice complaint against the physicians and their employers, based on the physicians' claim that the patient failed to file a timely expert affidavit which raised the claim of lack of informed consent, as required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1, as the patient's initial complaint had an expert affidavit timely filed, and thereafter, an amended affidavit asserting the lack of informed consent was filed pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15; dismissal was not warranted unless an expert affidavit was never initially filed in a timely manner. Bhansali v. Moncada, 275 Ga. App. 221, 620 S.E.2d 404 (2005).

Trial court erred in dismissing a client's amended legal malpractice complaint, which included fraud and breach of fiduciary duty, as the client's failure to file an expert affidavit pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 did not result in an automatic adjudication on the merits or preclude amendment after the expiration of the relevant statute of limitation; further, the appeals court disagreed that the client's fraud and breach of fiduciary duty claims were barred because those claims arose from the same factual allegations, as the original claim for professional negligence, and because the fraud claim was grounded in intentional conduct, the claim did not need to be accompanied by an expert affidavit. Shuler v. Hicks, Massey & Gardner, LLP, 280 Ga. App. 738, 634 S.E.2d 786 (2006).

Amendment of complaint in medical malpractice action to cure defective affidavit allowed. — In a professional malpractice action, when a plaintiff files a complaint accompanied by an affidavit from a person not competent to testify as an expert in the action, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1(e) permits the plaintiff to cure that defect by filing an amended complaint with the affidavit of a second, competent expert. Gala v. Fisher, 770 S.E.2d 879, No. S14G0919, 2015 Ga. LEXIS 198 (2015).

Amendment of medical malpractice complaint to include statement regarding failure to attach affidavit. — When a medical malpractice complaint, filed within 10 days of the expiration of the statute of limitations, stated that an affidavit would be filed within the extended filing time, and the affidavit was filed within that time, the plaintiff could amend the complaint to include the required language that the affidavit could not be prepared because of time constraints. Glisson v. Hospital Auth., 224 Ga. App. 649, 481 S.E.2d 612 (1997).

O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15 allows a plaintiff to amend the complaint to comply with O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1(b) (now (e)) within 45 days of filing and thereby trigger the automatic extended filing period. Peterson v. Columbus Med. Ctr. Found., Inc., 243 Ga. App. 749, 533 S.E.2d 749 (2000).

Amendment during pretrial conference. — State has right to amend as matter of right during the pretrial conference, which is delineating the issues and contentions of the parties, but prior to the taking of the evidence. State v. Croom, 168 Ga. App. 145, 308 S.E.2d 427 (1983).

Pretrial proceedings end with final commencement. — Reasonable intentment of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15 is that after the time for a pretrial conference has passed and neither the court nor the parties have insisted upon the entry of a pretrial order and no such order is entered, pretrial proceedings end with the commencement of the trial proper and the taking of evidence. The unfettered right to amend ceases and a party may amend a party's pleading only by leave of court or by the consent of the adverse party. Black v. Lowry, 159 Ga. App. 57, 282 S.E.2d 700 (1981).

Once pretrial order has been entered, party may not amend without leave of court or consent of the opposite party as entry of such order limits the issues for trial to those not disposed of by admissions and agreement of counsel, and controls the subsequent course of the action, unless modified at trial to prevent manifest injustice. Gaul v. Kennedy, 246 Ga. 290, 271 S.E.2d 196 (1980).

Prior to 1968, Georgia practice permitted a very liberal right of amendment to the pleadings, the genesis of which is apparently in Ga. L. 1853-54, pp. 48-49, authorizing amendment in any stage of the cause; however, as amended in 1968, subsection (a) of this section now provides that amendments, except to conform to the evidence, are permitted after entry of a pretrial order only by leave of court or written consent of the adverse party. Summer-Minter & Assocs. v. Giordano, 231 Ga. 601, 203 S.E.2d 173 (1974).

Entry or pretrial order determinative. — Under subsection (a) of this section, it is the entry of a pretrial order, not the pretrial conference, which is determinative of when an amendment is proper as a matter of course. Altamaha Convalescent Ctr., Inc. v. Godwin, 137 Ga. App. 394, 224 S.E.2d 76 (1976).

Pretrial order not modified on trial date. — Trial court did not err in refusing to modify a pretrial order when the motion was not made until the date set for trial.

Ostroff v. Coyner, 187 Ga. App. 109, 369 S.E.2d 298 (1988).

Amendment prior to pretrial order seeking sum then overdue. — Trial court did not err in granting judgment for the sums prayed for in the first amendment when the first amendment to the dispossessory action was filed pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15 before any pretrial order was issued, and it sought judgment for rent installments that were then overdue. Peterson v. American Int'l Life Assurance Co., 203 Ga. App. 745, 417 S.E.2d 402, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 907, 417 S.E.2d 402 (1992).

Amendments after entry of pretrial order are to be liberally granted by the court as justice requires. Midtown Properties, Inc. v. George F. Richardson, Inc., 139 Ga. App. 182, 228 S.E.2d 303 (1976).

In considering belated motions to amend pleadings, a judge must freely allow amendment when justice so requires. Leslie, Inc. v. Solomon, 141 Ga. App. 673, 234 S.E.2d 104 (1977).

Amendment allowed when evidence, no pretrial order. — When there was evidence in the record to support the plaintiff's claim, and when no pretrial order had been entered, the court erred in refusing to allow the plaintiff to amend the plaintiff's complaint to include the claim. Carpet Cent., Inc. v. Johnson, 222 Ga. App. 26, 473 S.E.2d 569 (1996).

Effect on judicial admissions. — If the party amended the party's pleadings to withdraw the party judicial admissions, the party could introduce evidence contravening the admissions, and if such contradictory evidence was admitted, even over the objection of the other party, then under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15(b), such evidence could be deemed to amend the pleadings to withdraw the admissions. SAKS Assocs., LLC v. Southeast Culvert, Inc., 282 Ga. App. 359, 638 S.E.2d 799 (2006).

Amendment to conform to evidence. — Because it was undisputed that the ultimate issue for trial was whether an option contract between the decedent and the decedent's son covered all, or only some, of the decedent's land, and considerable evidence was presented on that issue at trial, the son's amended pleading to conform to that evidence was properly allowed in order to subserve the presentation of the merits of the action, and the estate failed to show that the estate was prejudiced by the allowance. Morris v. Morris, 282 Ga. App. 127, 637 S.E.2d 838 (2006).

In exercising discretion to allow amendment, judge should balance possible prejudice to nonmoving party with moving party's reason for delay. Leslie, Inc. v. Solomon, 141 Ga. App. 673, 234 S.E.2d 104 (1977); Patterson v. Duron Paints of Ga., Inc., 144 Ga. App. 123, 240 S.E.2d 603 (1977); Bourquine v. City of Patterson, 151 Ga. App. 232, 259 S.E.2d 214 (1979).

Mere delay in seeking leave to amend is not sufficient reason for denial. MCG Dev. Corp. v. Bick Realty Co., 140 Ga. App. 41, 230 S.E.2d 26 (1976); Patterson v. Duron Paints of Ga., Inc., 144 Ga. App. 123, 240 S.E.2d 603 (1977).

Diligence of party not irrelevant. — Subsection (a) of this section does not mean that amendments will be allowed regardless of the diligence of a party. Blount v. Kicklighter, 125 Ga. App. 159, 186 S.E.2d 543 (1971).

Court abuses the court's discretion in refusing to allow a party leave to amend when that party sought in good faith to correct an inadvertent oversight on behalf of its counsel and there was no prejudice to the opposing party. MCG Dev. Corp. v. Bick Realty Co., 140 Ga. App. 41, 230 S.E.2d 26 (1976).

Grant of divorce on motion for judgment on pleadings is not pretrial order which terminates unrestricted right to amend pleadings. Price v. Price, 243 Ga. 4, 252 S.E.2d 402 (1979).

Leave required for amendment after order adopting findings of special master. — Entry of order making special master's findings of fact that the judgment of the court is an event which requires leave of court or consent of the adverse party to file an amendment. Gauker v. Eubanks, 230 Ga. 893, 199 S.E.2d 771 (1973).

Denial of motion to strike amendment is tantamount to leave of court to file such amendment. Brookshire v. J.P. Stevens Co., 133 Ga. App. 97, 210 S.E.2d 46 (1974).

Denial of summary judgment as implicit approval of amendment. — Although personal injury plaintiff never sought leave of court to add defendants, the trial court's denial of patron-defendant's motion for summary judgment, made on the ground that no motion for leave to amend was filed, amounted to an implicit approval of the plaintiff's amendment. Good Ol' Days Downtown, Inc. v. Yancey, 209 Ga. App. 696, 434 S.E.2d 740 (1993).

Defendant did not waive the statute of limitation defense by failing to assert the defense in the defendant's original answer, when such defense was properly asserted by the defendant's amendment to the defendant's answer. Gober v. Hospital Auth., 191 Ga. App. 498, 382 S.E.2d 106 (1989).

Waiver of statute of limitation if not raised prior to pretrial order. — Although statute of limitation is waivable, it may be raised by amendment; but such defense is waived by failure to raise the issue prior to a pretrial order. Gaul v. Kennedy, 246 Ga. 290, 271 S.E.2d 196 (1980).

Grant of new trial is a de novo proceeding insofar as the right to amend by supplying additional germane allegations of fact is concerned. Sirmans v. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank, 132 Ga. App. 894, 209 S.E.2d 697 (1974).

Certification of service of amendment. — Under subsection (a) of Ga. L. 1968, p. 1104, § 4 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15) and Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 4 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-5), party amending a pleading need only certify service of the amendment on the other party's counsel by mail contemporaneous with filing of the amendment. Locklear v. Morgan, 127 Ga. App. 326, 193 S.E.2d 208 (1972).

Response to amendment not required. — This section allows a response to an amended pleading, but does not require such a response. Building Assocs. v. Crider, 141 Ga. App. 825, 234 S.E.2d 666 (1977).

Amendment to reflect partnership status. — When the complaint was brought in a name which indicated a corporate entity, the trial court erred in dismissing the complaint and denying the plaintiffs' motion to amend the plaintiffs' complaint to declare its true status as a partnership. Holliday Constr. Co. v. Higginbotham, 170 Ga. App. 114, 316 S.E.2d 560 (1984).

Failure to attach exemplified copy of foreign divorce decree is amendable defect. A former wife's failure to verify and attach an exemplified copy of a foreign divorce decree to her petition against her former husband for modification of child support was an amendable defect; her petition was amendable as a matter of right prior to entry of a pretrial order. Hutto v. Plagens, 254 Ga. 512, 330 S.E.2d 341 (1985).

Specifying correct court in petition. — Failure to address a petition to a specific court is an amendable defect. Mincey v. Stamper, 253 Ga. 301, 319 S.E.2d 857 (1984).

Even though the original petition was never formally amended to cure a failure to specify a court, the defect was not a ground for dismissal when the defendant admitted service of the petition and answered the petition in the correct court. Mincey v. Stamper, 253 Ga. 301, 319 S.E.2d 857 (1984).

Verification of pleadings. — When verification of pleadings is required by statute, the lack thereof has been considered to be a mere procedural defect in the form of the pleading and readily amendable pursuant to subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15. Ballard v. Frey, 179 Ga. App. 455, 346 S.E.2d 893 (1986).

Delay in ruling on motion to amend until after commencement of trial. — When appellees' motion to amend was made prior to commencement of trial, but was not ruled upon until trial had progressed somewhat, there was no error in permitting amendment at that time, inasmuch as the appellees had an unfettered right to amend their answer when the motion was made. Slater v. Jackson, 163 Ga. App. 342, 294 S.E.2d 557 (1982).

Timeliness of amendment. — When a motion to amend was filed on the last business day prior to beginning of trial which was more than six months after the date of the pretrial order, and when the record contained no showing of a lack of laches or inexcusable delay, there was no abuse of the trial court's discretion in the court's denial of the plaintiff's motion to amend. Mulkey v. GMC, 164 Ga. App. 752, 299 S.E.2d 48 (1982), rev'd on other grounds, 251 Ga. 32, 302 S.E.2d 550 (1983).

Since there was no pretrial order issued in the case, the amended complaint, supported by the affidavit which was filed and served on the day preceding the hearing, could not properly be disallowed based upon untimeliness under the local rule. Gilbert v. Decker, 165 Ga. App. 11, 299 S.E.2d 65 (1983).

When the plaintiffs amended the plaintiffs' complaint to plead special damages by dollar amount pursuant to a court order which gave no deadline for compliance, the amendment, filed prior to the entry of a pretrial order, was proper and timely and should have been considered by the trial court. Torok v. Yost, 194 Ga. App. 94, 389 S.E.2d 793, cert. denied, 194 Ga. App. 912, 389 S.E.2d 793 (1989).

Buyer's request to amend the buyer's complaint to seek reformation of two installment contracts for the purchase of certain land was timely since the request was made in the absence of a pre-trial order and prior to the taking of any evidence at trial. L.S. Land Co. v. Burns, 275 Ga. 454, 569 S.E.2d 527 (2002).

Expired lien claim. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15 does not allow for the amendment of an expired claim of lien pursuant to the three month limitations period of O.C.G.A. § 44-14-361.1(a)(2). Tri-City Constr. Co. v. Sandy Plains Partnership, 206 Ga. App. 506, 426 S.E.2d 57 (1992).

When time for pretrial conference has passed and neither the court nor a party has insisted upon the entry of a pretrial order and no such order had been issued, a party's unfettered right to amend ceases upon the commencement of the trial proper and the taking of evidence, but when an amendment was filed and served the morning of trial, since no pretrial order had been issued and the plaintiff's amendment was filed and served prior to the commencement of trial, the amendment should have been permitted as a matter of right. Jackson v. Paces Ferry Dodge, Inc., 183 Ga. App. 502, 359 S.E.2d 412 (1987).

New defendant must be served. — While subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15, in conjunction with O.C.G.A. § 9-11-21, is authority for a trial court to grant a motion to add a party to a pending action, the grant of such a motion does not dispense with the requirement that a new defendant be served. Gaskins v. A.B.C. Drug Co., 183 Ga. App. 518, 359 S.E.2d 364 (1987).

Amendment of action for equitable partition of real property was properly allowed to include a claim for wrongful foreclosure based on events that happened after the filing of the action. Blanton v. Duru, 247 Ga. App. 175, 543 S.E.2d 448 (2000).

Mandatory amendment of pretrial order. — Rule relating to the mandatory amendment of a pretrial order (as a pleading) when no objection is made to the introduction of evidence on an issue that is excluded from a pretrial order applies even more emphatically when the issue is raised in the pleadings, is tried by express or implied consent, and is sought to be preserved by amendment of a pretrial order. Galletta v. Hillcrest Abbey W., Inc., 185 Ga. App. 20, 363 S.E.2d 265 (1987), cert. denied, 185 Ga. App. 910, 363 S.E.2d 265 (1988).

Amendment of complaint after reversal. — Complaint cannot be amended under subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15 in a new trial after a reversal without leave of the court or the written consent of an adverse party when a pretrial order was entered in the first trial. Kirkland v. Southern Disct. Co., 187 Ga. App. 453, 370 S.E.2d 640 (1988), cert. denied, 187 Ga. App. 453, 370 S.E.2d 640 (1989).

Failure on appeal to show that trial court prevented amendment. — Chief executive officer's (CEO) claim that the trial court should have allowed the CEO to amend the complaint was rejected as the CEO failed to show that the trial court prevented the CEO from amending the complaint. Tidikis v. Network for Med.

Communs. & Research, LLC, 274 Ga. App. 807, 619 S.E.2d 481 (2005).

Amendment of habeas petition before hearing allowed. — Habeas court severed count one of a state habeas corpus petition and, following a hearing, granted relief on this count. When the order granting relief on count one was reversed on appeal, all the other issues in the petition remained “still pending,” and the defendant was entitled to amend the defendant’s petition as of right at any time before the hearing on these remaining issues. Nelson v. Zant, 261 Ga. 358, 405 S.E.2d 250 (1991).

Amendment after party repositioned as plaintiff. — When a debtor who filed counterclaims against a collection agency was repositioned as the plaintiff after the agency’s complaint was dismissed, the debtor was free to add additional claims under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15(a). 1st Nationwide Collection Agency, Inc. v. Werner, 288 Ga. App. 457, 654 S.E.2d 428 (2007).

Effect on removal. — Because an employer should not have removed an employee’s discrimination case until the state court had ruled on the employee’s motion to amend the complaint to add federal claims, there was no basis for removal under 28 U.S.C. § 1446, and removal was premature, requiring remand to state court under 28 U.S.C. § 1447(c). Even though O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15(a) allowed amendment as a matter of course without leave of court, the record did not contain a copy of the amended complaint and there was no indication as to whether a pretrial order or consent agreement limiting the time for amendments to pleadings existed. Jackson v. Bluecross & Blueshield of Ga., Inc., No. 4:08-CV-49 (CDL), 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 91036 (M.D. Ga. Nov. 10, 2008).

Consent to implied amendment of pleadings. — By failing to make a contemporaneous objection to documentary evidence and testimony of a landlord’s principal, a tenant consented under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15(b) to the implied amendment of the pleadings to include a claim for the additional unpaid rent; it was not until closing argument that the tenant objected and raised for the first time the issue of whether the landlord could seek rent that had become overdue after the filing of the complaint. Westmoreland v. JW, LLC, 313 Ga. App. 486, 722 S.E.2d 102 (2012).

2. Name or Capacity of Party; New Parties

Section in pari materia with § 9-11-21. — When a party seeks to add a new party by amendment, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15 must be read in pari materia with O.C.G.A. § 9-11-21, which allows the dropping and adding of parties only “by order of the court on motion of any party.” When no such motion or leave of court was granted, the trial court improperly denied the “amended” defendant’s motion to dismiss. Dollar Concrete Constr. Co. v. Watson, 207 Ga. App. 452, 428 S.E.2d 379 (1993).

In a personal injury action, and by reading O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15(a) in pari materia with O.C.G.A. § 9-11-21, because a plaintiff sued two parties, but substituted only one, the partnership originally sued was not required to file an answer absent an order from the court to do so, and hence could not be found in default; as a result, the trial court correctly found a proper case was made for the default to be opened. Marwede v. EQR/Lincoln L.P., 284 Ga. App. 404, 643 S.E.2d 766 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 504 (Ga. 2007).

Subsequently-named corporation lacked standing to appeal from orders against the previously-named corporation as that corporation was not a party to the litigation, was not granted or denied intervention pursuant to a motion to amend with leave of court, and an attempted substitution by the predecessor was more than an attempt to correct a misnomer. Degussa Wall Sys. v. Sharp, 286 Ga. App. 349, 648 S.E.2d 687 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 701 (Ga. 2007).

When O.C.G.A. § 9-11-21 does not apply. — When there is a substitution by amendment of a “John Doe” or “Jane Doe” named in the original complaint for the real defendant, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-21 does not apply and subsection (c) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15 is applicable; therefore, leave of court is not necessary for the substitution.

Amendments, Generally (Cont'd)2. Name or Capacity of Party; New Parties (Cont'd)

Smith v. Vencare, Inc., 238 Ga. App. 621, 519 S.E.2d 735 (1999).

Although a borrower failed to obtain the state court's leave before filing a third amended complaint, as required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-21, the amended complaint was not ineffective to add a non-diverse attorney and law firm, and the federal district court was able to consider the attorney and law firm in determining the existence of diversity jurisdiction for purposes of the borrower's motion for remand under 28 U.S.C. § 1447; because the attorney and law firm were substituted for John Does named in the original complaint, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-21 did not apply, rather, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15(c), which allowed for the substitution by amendment of a John Doe without the state court's leave applied; accordingly, the amendment became effective when the amendment was filed, meaning complete diversity of citizenship did not exist, and remand of the matter to the state court was appropriate. Peachtree/Stratford, L.P. v. Phoenix Home Life Ins. Co., No. 1:06-CV-0514-RWS, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 28840 (N.D. Ga. May 2, 2006).

Signed amended answer cured failure to sign original answer. — Trial court properly found that a client's failure to sign the original answer to a law firm's complaint on an open account was an amendable defect which was cured by subsequently-filed signed and verified amended answers under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15(a) because the amended answers were filed before the entry of any pretrial order and the firm did not show that the firm's case was prejudiced; the original answer was not a nullity under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-1(a) because the client's name on the signature line, placed there at the client's request by an attorney who represented the client in a divorce, evinced the client's intent to answer the complaint. Edenfield & Cox, P.C. v. Mack, 282 Ga. App. 816, 640 S.E.2d 343 (2006).

Name of either plaintiff or defendant may be corrected by amendment prior to judgment, so long, at least, as the name by which the originally designated party is described imports a person, firm, or corporation, even though it is in fact not so. Locklear v. Morgan, 127 Ga. App. 326, 193 S.E.2d 208 (1972).

Section controls over § 9-10-132 in case of misnomer. — To the extent that O.C.G.A. §§ 9-10-132 and 9-11-15 are inconsistent, the latter expression of the legislature, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15, controls. When a party named in a complaint is reasonably recognizable as a misnomer for the real party in interest, the misnomer may be corrected by amendment to the pleadings pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15. United States Xpress, Inc. v. W. Timothy Askey & Co., 194 Ga. App. 730, 391 S.E.2d 707 (1990).

Misnomer in name of corporation can be corrected by amendment. Patterson v. Duron Paints of Ga., Inc., 144 Ga. App. 123, 240 S.E.2d 603 (1977).

When the party plaintiff named in a complaint is not a legal entity but is reasonably recognizable as a misnomer for a legal entity which is the real party plaintiff, the misnomer may be corrected by amendment. Block v. Voyager Life Ins. Co., 251 Ga. 162, 303 S.E.2d 742 (1983).

Because the named corporation should have known that there was a mistake in the corporate identity, so that the mistake should not have delayed the trial, dismissal of the entire case as to all parties was an abuse of discretion. Smith v. Vencare, Inc., 238 Ga. App. 621, 519 S.E.2d 735 (1999).

Correction of misnomer did not constitute substitution of parties under O.C.G.A. § 9-10-132 or amendment of complaint under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15(a). — Consumer's lawsuit against a telecommunications company was improperly dismissed because the consumer had effected service, but had wrongly named the company, and correction of the misnomer did not constitute a substitution of the parties under O.C.G.A. § 9-10-132 or an amendment of the complaint under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15(a); thus, the consumer should not have been required to effect service on the company a second time. Mathis v. BellSouth Telecomms., Inc., 301 Ga. App. 881, 690 S.E.2d 210 (2010).

Amendment to correct party name.

— Erroneous name of a defendant may be amended to correct the name, even after the statute of limitations has run. London Iron & Metal Co. v. Logan, 133 Ga. App. 692, 212 S.E.2d 21 (1975).

When real defendant has been properly served, the plaintiff has right to amend in order to correct a misnomer; correction of a misnomer involves no substitution of parties and does not add a new and distinct party. London Iron & Metal Co. v. Logan, 133 Ga. App. 692, 212 S.E.2d 21 (1975).

Plaintiff who has sued the wrong defendant may move to amend the plaintiff's pleading after the statute of limitation has run and that amendment will relate back to the time of the original pleading if the proper defendant has received actual notice and knew or should have known that, but for the plaintiff's mistake, it would have been the party sued. Ciprotti v. United Inns, Inc., 209 Ga. App. 457, 433 S.E.2d 585 (1993).

Correction of a misnomer involves no substitution of parties and does not add a new and distinct party. Khawaja v. Lane Co., 239 Ga. App. 93, 520 S.E.2d 1 (1999).

Defendant must have notice before amendment to correct misnomer.

— After the plaintiff named the wrong corporate defendant in the plaintiff's original complaint and, after expiration of the statute of limitations, served an amended complaint on the proper company, such service did not meet the requirements of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15 because the plaintiff failed to contradict evidence that the company was unaware of and had no notice of the action until the company was served with the amended complaint. American Transp., Inc. v. Thompson, 218 Ga. App. 54, 460 S.E.2d 298 (1995).

Capacity of plaintiff. — Amendment changing capacity in which the plaintiff brings an action is permissible even after the statute of limitations has run, and since such amendment does not change the parties before the court, the amendment should be liberally granted. Atlanta Newspapers, Inc. v. Shaw, 123 Ga. App. 848, 182 S.E.2d 683 (1971); C & S Land, Transp. & Dev. Corp. v. Yarbrough, 153 Ga. App. 644, 266 S.E.2d 508 (1980).

Complaints may be amended to change the capacity of the plaintiff, as well as to add new plaintiffs. Morris v. Chewning, 201 Ga. App. 658, 411 S.E.2d 891 (1991).

Although an estate's malpractice action was not initially brought by the real party in interest — the estate's administrator — the administrator was timely substituted as the plaintiff in the action by amendment which, under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-17(a), had the same effect as if the action had been commenced by the real party in interest. Thus, the suit was not time-barred by O.C.G.A. § 9-3-71(b)'s five-year repose period, and a doctor and the health care facilities were not entitled to summary judgment. Memar v. Styblo, 293 Ga. App. 528, 667 S.E.2d 388 (2008).

Subsection (a) to be read in pari materia with § 9-11-21 when new party added.

— When a party seeks to add a new party by amendment, subsection (a) of Ga. L. 1972, p. 689, § 6 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15) must be read in pari materia with Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 21 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-21), which allows dropping and adding of parties only by order of the court on motion. Clover Realty Co. v. Todd, 237 Ga. 821, 229 S.E.2d 649 (1976), cert. denied, 198 Ga. App. 898, 400 S.E.2d 388 (1991); Slater v. Brigadier Homes, Inc., 198 Ga. App. 67, 400 S.E.2d 338 (1990).

Adding or dropping parties. — In order for an additional party to be added to an existing suit by amendment, leave of court must first be sought and obtained pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-21. Among the factors to be considered by the trial court in determining whether to allow the amendment are whether the new party will be prejudiced thereby and whether the movant has some excuse or justification for having failed to name and serve the new party previously. Aircraft Radio Systems, Inc. v. Von Schlegell, 168 Ga. App. 109, 308 S.E.2d 211 (1983).

Court order is required to add or drop parties under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-21, and even the liberal amendment provisions of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15 are limited by this requirement. Young v. Rider, 208 Ga. App. 147, 430 S.E.2d 117 (1993).

In an action arising from an automobile accident the injured persons met the requirements for effecting an amendment under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15(c) to add the driver's employer because the amendment arose out of the same occurrence as the original complaint, the employer, a wholly-owned subsidiary of the named defendant, had notice of the action, was not prejudiced, and knew or should have known it would have been named a defendant but for a mistake, the trial court abused the court's discretion in denying the motion for leave to amend. Rasheed v. Klopp Enters., 276 Ga. App. 91, 622 S.E.2d 442 (2005).

In a personal injury action, a trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by refusing to permit the plaintiff to add a defendant because, under these circumstances, the plaintiff identified the additional party in the plaintiff's amended complaint as a negligent party nearly four months before the expiration of the statute of limitations; the proposed added party met the burden of showing that there was no mistake concerning the proposed added party's identity and that O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15(c) was inapplicable. Steed v. Wellington Healthcare Servs., LLC, 285 Ga. App. 446, 646 S.E.2d 517 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 690 (Ga. 2007).

In a suit by appellants, a company and the company's president, against a law firm, the trial court properly denied a motion to add a partner as a party defendant under O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-15(c) and 9-11-21 when the appellants claimed that the partner had violated the attorney-client privilege. Appellants did not assert that the partner ever personally represented the appellants or any related entities; accordingly, any attorney-privilege implicated in the fax would be that between the appellants and the law firm, and not between the appellants and the partner individually. Smith v. Morris, Manning & Martin, LLP, 293 Ga. App. 153, 666 S.E.2d 683 (2008).

Marketing network properly removed the distributors' action under 28 U.S.C. §§ 1332 and 1441 because the case was not removable until a first amended complaint was filed adding substantially different claims and causing the likely amount in controversy to surpass the jurisdictional amount. Thus, removal was timely under 28 U.S.C. § 1446(b), and the adding of a non-diverse distributor as plaintiff was improper without a court order pursuant to O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-15 and 9-11-21, making the matter completely diverse. Campbell v. Quixtar, Inc., No. 2:08-CV-0044-RWS, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 46567 (N.D. Ga. June 13, 2008).

Passenger's motion to amend a complaint to include the driver of a car as a defendant in a suit arising from a traffic accident was properly denied because the passenger was unable to establish the third condition of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15(c); there was no evidence that the passenger was mistaken about the driver's identity as the negligent operator who caused the collision. At a deposition, the passenger testified that the vehicle in which the passenger was riding was hit by a young woman who had spoken to the passenger at the scene immediately following the collision, and that the passenger had no reason to believe that the owner was driving the car at the time of the accident. Valentino v. Matara, 294 Ga. App. 776, 670 S.E.2d 480 (2008).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by denying a student's motion for leave to amend the complaint to substitute parties under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-21 as the student did not offer an acceptable excuse or justification for failing to name the proper parties that would warrant the conclusion that the trial court ruled inappropriately. Riding v. Ellis, 297 Ga. App. 740, 678 S.E.2d 178 (2009).

Trial court properly dismissed certain parties because no motion was filed pursuant to O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-15 and 9-11-21 to add the parties and no leave of court was granted to add the parties. Odion v. Varon, 312 Ga. App. 242, 718 S.E.2d 23 (2011), cert. denied, No. S12C0399, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 561 (Ga. 2012).

Name of plaintiff or defendant may be corrected by amendment prior to judgment so long, at least, as the name by which the originally designated party is described imports a person, firm, or corporation, even though it is in fact not so. Parker v. Kilgo, 109 Ga. App. 698, 137 S.E.2d 333 (1964) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-1303).

Leave of court required to add a party. — Because the claimants never sought leave of court to add a former county commissioner as a party in the commissioner's individual capacity, any unilateral attempt by the claimants to amend the claimants' complaint in this regard through allegations in an appellate brief was ineffective under O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-15 and 9-11-21. Bd. of Comm'rs v. Johnson, 311 Ga. App. 867, 717 S.E.2d 272 (2011).

When the individual members of a city board of education were purportedly parties to an action by amendment and by acknowledgment of service, a trial court's order of substitution was required to make the proper defendant, a city school district, a party substituted in their place; accordingly, the complaining party's attempt to name the school district a defendant by mere amendment was ineffective and the school district was therefore never served as required by statute. Foskey v. Vidalia City Sch., 258 Ga. App. 298, 574 S.E.2d 367 (2002).

Intervention distinguished. — Intervention involves not a mistake in pleading but the injection of a third person uncontrolled by the parties; should an intervenor seek to litigate issues different from those already pending between the parties, to claim additional damages, or to raise additional defenses, the ability to raise these matters would be controlled by O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-15(c) and 9-11-21. AC Corp. v. Myree, 221 Ga. App. 513, 471 S.E.2d 922 (1996).

Amendment alleging legal status. — When name of defendant does not import a legal entity, but in fact the defendant is a corporation or partnership, such defect may be cured by amendment alleging the legal status. Mauldin v. Stogner, 75 Ga. App. 663, 44 S.E.2d 274 (1947) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-1301 et seq.).

Representative capacity of administrator. — Suit by administrator may be amended by inserting additional words to describe the administrator's representative character. Dorsey v. Georgia R.R. Bank & Trust, 82 Ga. App. 237, 60 S.E.2d 828 (1950) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-1308).

Petition brought against corporation may be amended by adding word "incorporated," so as to state correct name of the corporation. Ernest G. Beaudry, Inc. v. Freenan, 73 Ga. App. 736, 38 S.E.2d 40 (1946) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-1303).

Naming individual doing business under trade name. — When suit is brought against defendant in a trade name, the petition is amendable by inserting the name of the individual doing business under that trade name. Mauldin v. Stogner, 75 Ga. App. 663, 44 S.E.2d 274 (1947) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-1301 et seq.).

Grant of motion to correct a misnomer in corporate name inappropriate. — In a negligence suit brought by a pedestrian against an originally named company in the complaint, the trial court abused the court's discretion by granting the pedestrian's motion to correct a misnomer thereby changing the name of the defendant in the action to a limited partnership as the limited partnership was never served with the complaint, delivery of the summons and complaint to the limited partnership's registered agent was insufficient for service as the originally named company was used in the pleadings and the registered agent did not represent that originally named company, and the name change was not a mere correction but more of a party substitution. Nat'l Office Partners, L.P. v. Stanley, 293 Ga. App. 332, 667 S.E.2d 122 (2008).

Addition of child as plaintiff in wrongful death action. — Petition for homicide of wife and mother, brought by husband for himself and as next friend for all surviving children except one, is amendable by making omitted child a party plaintiff. Wallace v. Brannen, 56 Ga. App. 856, 193 S.E. 901 (1937) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-1303).

When original petition for homicide of wife and mother was brought within the period of limitations, failure with such period to make all surviving children parties plaintiff did not bar such action, as an amendment adding an additional child as the plaintiff related to the bringing of the suit. Wallace v. Brannen, 56 Ga. App. 856, 193 S.E. 901 (1937) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-1303).

Suit brought for and in minor's behalf may be amended to show it is one by the minor by next friend. Crabb v. Stone, 106 Ga. App. 65, 126 S.E.2d 284 (1962) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-1303).

Substitution of one administrator for another. — One suing as administrator may amend by substituting another suing as administrator. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank v. Mize, 56 Ga. App. 327, 192 S.E. 527 (1937) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-1307).

New plaintiff, suing for the use of former plaintiff, may be made by amendment. Sybilla v. Connally, 66 Ga. App. 678, 18 S.E.2d 783 (1942) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-1307).

Amendments After Verdicts or JudgmentNo right to amend after judgment.

— While right to amend is very broad, it may not be exercised after case has been tried and judgment rendered therein which has not been set aside or vacated. Felker v. Johnson, 56 Ga. App. 659, 193 S.E. 472 (1937) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-1301).

This section does not allow amendment after judgment, has been rendered unless the judgment has been reversed or set aside, has been rendered. Christopher v. McGehee, 124 Ga. App. 310, 183 S.E.2d 624, aff'd, 228 Ga. 466, 186 S.E.2d 97 (1971).

While the right to amend is very broad, the right may not be exercised after the case has been tried and judgment rendered therein. Hunt v. Henderson, 178 Ga. App. 688, 344 S.E.2d 470 (1986).

Once judgment on the pleadings was entered in favor of the owner of a car on the personal injury claims of a driver injured in a collision that involved the owner's car while the car was being driven by another person, the driver could not amend the complaint to add additional claims against the owner. Fredrick v. Hinkle, 297 Ga. App. 101, 676 S.E.2d 415 (2009).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in dismissing a parent's third amended petition for mandamus, which was filed after judgment had been entered, because the plaintiff did not obtain leave of the court to amend the complaint, and the defendant expressly opposed all post-judgment filings. R.A.F. v. Robinson, 286 Ga. 644, 690 S.E.2d 372 (2010).

Too late to amend after verdict or directed verdict. — Once issues are narrowed for trial, the complaint stands only upon those facts adduced at trial by the plaintiff, and after the verdict is returned or a motion for directed verdict is sustained, it is too late to amend, even pending remittitur. Summer-Minter & Assocs. v. Giordano, 231 Ga. 601, 203 S.E.2d 173 (1974).

After affirmance by appellate court.

— When the entire tax case was tried on the case's merits by the superior court, affirmance of the court's judgment by the Court of Appeals on the merits, without condition of direction, left the trial court without jurisdiction to pass on amendments tendered after receipt of the remittitur but before the judgment of the higher court was by formal order made the judgment of the lower court. Forrester v. Pullman Co., 66 Ga. App. 745, 19 S.E.2d 330 (1942) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 13, T. 81).

Amended answer stricken after ruling by appellate court. — As an appellate court's prior ruling was determinative of all claims, the trial court did not err in striking the appellants' amended answer raising, for the first time, a statute of limitations defense. Falanga v. Kirschner & Venker, P.C., 298 Ga. App. 672, 680 S.E.2d 419 (2009).

Amendments did not alter who prevailing party was in litigation. — In a wrongful death and breach of contract action wherein the plaintiff did not prevail, the trial court erred by awarding the plaintiff attorney fees under an aircraft purchase agreement (APA) because the defendant was the prevailing party and under the fee-shifting clause of the agreement, the prevailing party was entitled to an award of attorney fees and plaintiff's amendments to the complaint to remove references relying on the APA for liability did not alter that the APA governed the parties' transaction. Eagle Jets, LLC v. Atlanta Jet, Inc., 321 Ga. App. 386, 740 S.E.2d 439 (2013).

Amendments to Conform to Evidence

Pleadings may in effect be amended by evidence adduced upon trial. Juneau v. Juneau, 98 Ga. App. 330, 105 S.E.2d 913 (1958) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-1301).

Parties may, by express consent or by introduction of evidence without objection, amend pleadings at will. McDonough Constr. Co. v. McLendon Elec. Co., 242 Ga. 510, 250 S.E.2d 424 (1978); Carreras v. Austell Box Bd. Corp., 154 Ga. App. 135, 267 S.E.2d 792 (1980).

In an action for fraud, although claims of breach of contract and forgery were not expressly averred in the complaint, when evidence as to those issues was introduced at trial without objection on grounds that it was beyond the scope of the pleadings, the pleadings were amended implicitly pursuant to subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15. Rockdale Body Shop, Inc. v. Thompson, 222 Ga. App. 821, 476 S.E.2d 22 (1996).

Issue of actual damages, having been litigated by the implied consent of the parties, was not foreclosed because of its absence from the complaint. Conner v. Conner, 269 Ga. 112, 499 S.E.2d 54 (1998).

Application of subsection (b). — Subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15 applies when issues not raised by the pleadings are tried by express or implied consent of the parties. Borenstein v. Blumenfeld, 250 Ga. 606, 299 S.E.2d 727 (1983).

Guardian of the property testified that the guardian was in court to explain to the court what the documentation in the court file showed had occurred, to explain further with some facts that were not in the file, and to respond to the answer of the guardian ad litem; the guardian testified about the grounds for the guardian's revocation, later considered by the court in the court's revocation order, and it followed that the guardian expressly or by implication consented to the consideration of those grounds in the order revoking the guardian's letters. In re Longino, 281 Ga. App. 599, 636 S.E.2d 683 (2006), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 92 (Ga. 2007).

Beneficiaries of a will sued the decedent's grandchild for conversion of stock the beneficiaries alleged was intended to be part of the decedent's estate. The grandchild's claim that fraud had not been pled or proven was unavailing as the trial court amended the pleadings under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15(b) to conform to the evidence and charged the jury on fraud; and the jury found by special verdict that the grandchild, with intent to commit fraud, converted the stock. Bunch v. Byington, 292 Ga. App. 497, 664 S.E.2d 842 (2008).

Subsection (b) is not permissive in terms: the subsection provides that issues tried by express or implied consent shall be treated as if raised by the pleadings. McDonough Constr. Co. v. McLendon Elec. Co., 242 Ga. 510, 250 S.E.2d 424 (1978).

Construction of § 9-11-16 in light of subsection (b) of this section. — Ga. L. 1968, p. 1104, § 5 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-16), relating to pretrial procedure, must always be considered in light of the mandatory provisions of subsection (b) of Ga. L. 1972, p. 689, § 6 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15), and the test of implied amendment of pleadings should always be whether the opposing party had a fair opportunity to defend and offer evidence or was misled. Carreras v. Austell Box Bd. Corp., 154 Ga. App. 135, 267 S.E.2d 792 (1980).

Subsection (b) does not overlap with § 9-11-60. — Subsection (b) of Ga. L. 1972, p. 689, § 6 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15) concerns only amendments to conform to the evidence, and in no respect overlaps with Ga. L. 1974, p. 1138, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(d)), relating to relief from judgments. Moore v. American Fin. Sys., 236 Ga. 610, 225 S.E.2d 17 (1976).

Subsection (b) is applicable to defenses as well as to claims, and to the extent to which the subsection applies, the subsection operates as an exception to the rule that defenses not pled are waived. McDonough Constr. Co. v. McLendon Elec. Co., 242 Ga. 510, 250 S.E.2d 424 (1978).

Evidence supporting affirmative defense. — Subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15 provides that, at trial, the pleadings are deemed automatically amended to conform to the evidence that has been admitted without objection; therefore, an affirmative defense may be asserted for the first time at trial. Brackett v. Cartwright, 231 Ga. App. 536, 499 S.E.2d 905 (1998).

"Prejudice," under subsection (b), means undue difficulty in prosecuting a law suit, as a result of a change of tactics or theories on the part of the other party. Munsford Co. v. Klingenberg, 138 Ga. App. 791, 227 S.E.2d 507 (1976).

Evidence received without objection amends pleadings by operation of law. McLendon Elec. Co. v. McDonough Constr. Co., 149 Ga. App. 115, 253 S.E.2d 772 (1979); Sambo's of Ga., Inc. v. First Am. Nat'l Bank, 152 Ga. App. 899, 264 S.E.2d 330 (1980).

Trial court did not err by granting the former husband reimbursement of pension benefits despite the former husband's failure to request that relief in the pleadings; pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15(b), the issue was treated as if the issue had been raised because the former wife permitted the issue to be litigated without objection. Howington v. Howington, 281 Ga. 242, 637 S.E.2d 389 (2006).

Formal pleading of defenses unnecessary when tried by consent. — Fact that a defense, even an affirmative defense, has not been formally pled is immaterial if the issue was tried by express or implied consent; lack of an amendment does not affect the judgment in any way. McDonough Constr. Co. v. McLendon Elec. Co., 242 Ga. 510, 250 S.E.2d 424 (1978).

In a suit on a promissory note, the trial court did not err by considering the affirmative defense of failure of consideration, which the maker had not pled, since the payee failed to object when the maker's counsel argued failure of consideration in the maker's opening statement and in the maker's motion for directed verdict; this issue was thus tried by the implied consent of the parties under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15(b). Drake v. Wallace, 259 Ga. App. 111, 576 S.E.2d 87 (2003).

Issues tried by consent are treated as if pled. — If an issue not raised by the pleadings is tried by express or implied consent, it is to be treated as if made by the pleadings. Iowa Sheet Metal Contractors v. Jenkins, 119 Ga. App. 162, 166 S.E.2d 599 (1969).

Construction of pleading to uphold verdict. — Absent amendment, when no objection is interposed, pleading will be considered to have been amended so as to uphold the verdict. Thompson v. Frost, 125 Ga. App. 753, 188 S.E.2d 905 (1972).

Counterclaim not automatically amended to conform to evidence. — Provisions of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15 will not operate to amend automatically a counterclaim to conform to evidence introduced in a deposition taken during the discovery process and prior to trial. Feely v. First Am. Bank, 206 Ga. App. 53, 424 S.E.2d 345 (1992).

Pleadings not amended by evidence absent litigation of issue and opportunity to defend. — Provisions of the Civil Practice Act (see nw O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) respecting amendment of pleadings by introduction of evidence and grant of relief in accordance with such evidence have no application when propriety of such relief was not litigated and the opposing party had no opportunity to assert defenses to such relief. Cross v. Cross, 230 Ga. 91, 195 S.E.2d 439 (1973).

Withdrawal of admission by amendment of pleadings. — In an action against a negligent driver's father, the father's initial admission that the vehicle was a family purpose vehicle was made regarding a legal opinion, i.e., agency under the family purpose doctrine, and, therefore, it could not be an admission in judicio or an admission against interest because it was a legal opinion or conclusion that had been withdrawn by amendment from the pleadings. Wahnschaff v. Erdman, 232 Ga. 77, 502 S.E.2d 246 (1998).

It was incumbent upon the plaintiff to put the defendant on notice prior to the close of evidence of the plaintiff's contention that an additional issue was being placed before the jury for resolution. Smith v. Smith, 235 Ga. 109, 218 S.E.2d 843 (1975).

Whether issue has been tried by implied consent is a question of fact, and a decision on this question is generally considered to be within the sound discretion of the trial court. Smith v. Smith, 235 Ga. 109, 218 S.E.2d 843 (1975); Andean Motor Co. v. Mulkey, 251 Ga. 32, 302 S.E.2d 550 (1983).

Implied consent usually is found when one party raises an issue material to the other party's case, or when evidence is introduced without objection. McDonough Constr. Co. v. McLendon Elec. Co., 242 Ga. 510, 250 S.E.2d 424 (1978); Carreras v. Austell Box Bd. Corp., 154 Ga. App. 135, 267 S.E.2d 792 (1980); All Risk Ins. Agency, Inc. v. Southern Bell Tel. & Tel. Co., 182 Ga. App. 190, 355 S.E.2d 465 (1987); McCullum v. Doe, 190 Ga. App. 444, 379 S.E.2d 233 (1989); Mortgage Sav. Co. v. KKFB Inv. Co., 196 Ga. App. 283, 396 S.E.2d 16 (1990); Bowers v. Howell, 203 Ga. App. 636, 417 S.E.2d 392 (1992).

Consent not implied absent indication of new issue. — When evidence claimed to show that an issue was tried by consent was relevant to an issue already in the case as well as to the issue that was the subject matter of the amendment, and there was no indication at trial that the party who introduced the evidence was seeking to raise a new issue, pleadings would not be deemed amended under subsection (b) of this section. Smith v. Smith, 235 Ga. 109, 218 S.E.2d 843 (1975).

When the evidence offered is relevant to an issue before the court, consent to an amendment of the pleadings will not be implied absent a clear indication that the party introducing the evidence was attempting to raise a new issue. Southern Dist. Co. v. Kirkland, 181 Ga. App. 263, 351 S.E.2d 685 (1986).

When the defendant argued that the pleadings should be amended to set forth failure of consideration and breach of warranty issues, and insisted that the issues were tried with implied consent, but did not argue that the pleadings should be amended in the interest of justice even though the plaintiff objected to the failure of consideration and breach of warranty evidence, the defendant would not be heard on appeal to argue that the trial court should have granted the written motion to amend the pleadings in spite of the plaintiff's objection to the failure of consideration and breach of warranty evidence. Avery v. Chrysler Credit Corp., 194 Ga. App. 682, 391 S.E.2d 410, cert. denied, 194 Ga. App. 911, 391 S.E.2d 410 (1990).

Trial court did not err by prohibiting a former insurance agent from presenting to the jury a claim of slander per se with respect to statements made by a competing insurance agent in front of the former insurance agent's home and before the former insurance agent's spouse as the complaint did not claim as a separate basis for recovery the statements made at the house, rather, it only addressed statements purportedly made to customers. Thus, the trial court was authorized to find that the issue was not tried by the implied consent of the parties since the competing insurance agent had no notice of such allegations and, therefore, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by disallowing the statements from being presented to the jury as a separate claim of slander per se. Am. Southern Ins. Group, Inc. v. Goldstein, 291 Ga. App. 1, 660 S.E.2d 810 (2008), cert. denied, No. S08C1555, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 680 (Ga. 2008).

If adverse party objects, new claims should not be considered. — When defendants made a clear objection to admission of evidence of additional claims, not raised in the pleadings, such claims were not tried with the defendants express or implied consent, and absent an amendment to the pleadings, the court was not authorized to admit evidence or enter judgment for claims based on such evidence. Burger King Corp. v. Garrick, 149 Ga. App. 186, 253 S.E.2d 852 (1979); Bland v. Graham, 249 Ga. App. 856, 549 S.E.2d 809 (2001).

Consent not implied by adverse party's absence from trial. — Consent to introduce evidence relating to a party and cause of action not within the framework of the lawsuit cannot be implied from the absence of the other party on the trial of the case. Burgess v. Nabers, 122 Ga. App. 445, 177 S.E.2d 266 (1970).

Amendment permitted absent prejudice to objecting party. — Defendant was properly permitted, over the plaintiff's repeated objections, to introduce evidence of certain expenses not specifically included in the defendant's counterclaim when the plaintiff did not satisfy the trial court that admission of the evidence would prejudice the plaintiff. Kim v. McCullom, 222 Ga. App. 439, 474 S.E.2d 654 (1996).

When an issue is raised by evidence, charge on subject is authorized, notwithstanding failure of the pleadings to present such issue. Sligh v. Western Elec. Co., 152 Ga. App. 80, 262 S.E.2d 245 (1979).

Amendments may be filed to conform to the evidence, even though the amendments technically change the theory of the cause of action. Thompson v. Frost, 125 Ga. App. 753, 188 S.E.2d 905 (1972).

Pleading may be amended after judgment only insofar as to make the pleading conform to the evidence. Buffington v. Nalley Dist. Co., 117 Ga. App. 820, 162 S.E.2d 212 (1968).

Plaintiff not required to amend in every case. — Fact that this section contains liberal provisions making it possible to amend pleadings during the course of trial does not require the plaintiff to so amend in every case in which the plaintiff might do so. Whitley Constr. Co. v. Whitley, 134 Ga. App. 245, 213 S.E.2d 909 (1975).

Failure to amend does not affect result of trial. — While amendments to conform to the evidence are authorized, failure to amend does not affect result of the trial of an issue not made specifically by the pleadings. Iowa Sheet Metal Contractors v. Jenkins, 119 Ga. App. 162, 166 S.E.2d 599 (1969).

Verdict and judgment supported by evidence will stand. — Notwithstanding mandate of subsection (b) of this section to amend the pleadings to conform to the evidence, if the verdict and judgment are supported by evidence received without objection, the verdict and judgment will stand even without amendment. Jolly v. Jolly, 137 Ga. App. 625, 224 S.E.2d 807 (1976).

Amendment jeopardizing or overthrowing judgment not authorized. — Party cannot shift ground and try a new theory of recovery through a proposed amendment, effect of which would be not to conform the pleadings to a judgment the party had won, but to jeopardize and perhaps overthrow a judgment the party has lost; the dividing line is drawn between this use of amendment and those uses aimed at conformity. Summer-Minter & Assocs. v. Giordano, 231 Ga. 601, 203 S.E.2d 173 (1974).

Irrelevant testimony need not be admitted. — While the trial court is permitted to admit evidence by allowing pleadings to be amended, and may grant a continuance to enable the objecting party an opportunity to prepare a defense, this section does not require the court to admit testimony that is irrelevant and outside the pleadings. Madaris v. Madaris, 224 Ga. 577, 163 S.E.2d 745 (1968).

Evidence of failure of conditions precedent. — When, at trial, specific evidence showing that all conditions precedent had not occurred was introduced by the defendant without objection, this evidence amended the pleadings by operation of law. McDonough Constr. Co. v. McLendon Elec. Co., 242 Ga. 510, 250 S.E.2d 424 (1978).

Divorce petition giving no indication that spouse is seeking alimony cannot be amended by introduction of evidence if the other spouse has filed no pleadings and does not litigate the issues at the trial. Lambert v. Gilmer, 228 Ga. 774, 187 S.E.2d 855 (1972).

When complaint for divorce did not affirmatively allege residence, so as to show legal jurisdiction of the court over the subject matter, such issue may be raised by the evidence, and if so raised is tantamount to an amendment of the pleadings to that effect. Tanis v. Tanis, 240 Ga. 718, 242 S.E.2d 71 (1978).

Recovery on quantum meruit in contract action. — Rule that one may not recover on quantum meruit, if evidence so warrants, in a contract action no longer obtains, under subsection (b) of this section. Thompson v. Frost, 125 Ga. App. 753, 188 S.E.2d 905 (1972); Lake Lanier Cottage Owners Ass'n v. BMS Enters., Inc., 194 Ga. App. 858, 392 S.E.2d 312 (1990).

Probate proceedings. — Despite an administrator's claim that the probate court's order did not conform to the issues pled, and specifically, that the court erred in resolving conflicting claims to alleged property of the estate and ordering reimbursement: (1) the probate court did not resolve conflicting claims to alleged property of the estate; (2) the administrator impliedly consented to adjudicating the issues; and (3) as the question of the legitimacy of the transactions was properly before the court, the court did not err in addressing the issue or in granting the relief necessary to protect the estate. Ray v. Nat'l Health Investors, Inc., 280 Ga. App. 44, 633 S.E.2d 388 (2006).

Grant of equitable relief not prayed for. — Under Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 54 and Ga. L. 1968, p. 1104, § 4 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-15 and 9-11-54), rule that equitable relief is limited to that alleged and prayed for is no longer applicable. DeRose v. Holcomb, 226 Ga. 289, 174 S.E.2d 410 (1970).

Under Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 54 and Ga. L. 1968 p. 1104, § 4 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-15 and 9-11-54), when the issue is raised, the trial court is authorized to grant equitable relief, though not specifically prayed for. Logan v. Nunnally, 128 Ga. App. 43, 195 S.E.2d 659 (1973).

In absence of transcript the appellate court must assume that evidence amended pleadings under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15 and authorized the verdict rendered. Hopkins v. Hopkins, 168 Ga. App. 144, 308 S.E.2d 426 (1983).

Although a prospective property purchaser initially asserted a claim for specific performance based only on a right of first refusal in a contract between the purchaser and the property owner, for which relief was denied, and the purchaser thereafter purportedly amended the complaint to add a claim for the existence of a separate contract for the sale of the property at issue, because the purchaser did not include a transcript from the hearing after the amendment, wherein the trial court indicated that the court's prior order was a final judgment on the merits, there was nothing to support the purchaser's claim on appeal that the additional contract claim was raised at that hearing by consent of the parties, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15(b); the appellate court had to assume the trial court's judgment was correct and affirm, absent the transcript. Bay Meadow Corp. v. Hart, 276 Ga. App. 133, 622 S.E.2d 478 (2005).

Father failed to show reversible error because, although the father argued that the trial court's order improperly modified the father's custodial rights since there were no pleadings or motions pending in the action that would allow modification of the custodial rights, without a transcript, the court of appeals had no information about how the issue was treated at trial, and the issue could have been tried by express or implied consent of the parties. Johnson v. Ware, 313 Ga. App. 774, 723 S.E.2d 18 (2012).

Pleadings are deemed automatically amended to conform to evidence presented at trial. Gresham v. White Repair & Contracting Co., 158 Ga. App. 235, 279 S.E.2d 528 (1981).

Pleadings amended to include claim for engineer services. — Even though the defendant's claim for engineer services or cost thereof was not included in the defendant's counterclaim, since the evidence of such claim was received without objection, the defendant's counterclaim was amended by operation of law. Fruin-Colnon Corp. v. Air Door, Inc., 157 Ga. App. 804, 278 S.E.2d 708 (1981).

When a landlord raised the issue of compliance with lease terms, though such issue was not raised in the pleadings, the landlord could not complain when the defendant lessee sought to challenge the landlord's position of compliance. May v. Poole, 174 Ga. App. 224, 329 S.E.2d 561 (1985).

Trial court did not err in failing to submit this issue to the jury as the issue of express warranty was not tried by implied consent; the parties viewed the service contract evidence as relevant to whether the Magnuson-Moss Warranty Act, 15 U.S.C. § 2301 et seq., which formed the basis of the buyer's implied warranty claim, applied to the case and the evidence, therefore, related to an issue originally raised in the complaint but the record contained no suggestion that the buyer introduced the service contract evidence as part of an express warranty claim. Dildine v. Town & Country Truck Sales, Inc., 259 Ga. App. 732, 577 S.E.2d 882 (2003).

Defaulting defendant, not put on notice, did not "consent" to punitive damages. — Defendant, who was in default and had been put on notice that the plaintiff considered the defendant's conduct in repairing the plaintiff's roof to be merely negligent, could not be held to have consented to an amendment of the pleadings to support an award of punitive damages. Ticor Constr. Co. v. Brown, 255 Ga. 547, 340 S.E.2d 923 (1986).

Amendment after commencement of trial. — Trial court did not err by granting a builder leave to file an amended complaint that included a claim for attorney fees after the commencement of the trial because homeowners could not show that the homeowners were prejudiced by the filing of the amended complaint of which the homeowners had prior notice and to which the homeowners had already consented; while the builder was required to obtain leave of court because the pleading had not been filed prior to the commencement of trial, under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15(a), leave was to be freely given when justice so required. Harris v. Tutt, 306 Ga. App. 377, 702 S.E.2d 707 (2010).

Post-judgment amendment to add a claim for attorney fees would have been proper if the issue of such fees had been tried by express or implied consent of the parties; when this was not the case, the court erred in admitting evidence regarding attorney fees. Preferred Risk Ins. Co. v. Boykin, 174 Ga. App. 269, 329 S.E.2d 900, cert. denied, 254 Ga. 349, 331 S.E.2d 879 (1985).

Relation Back of Amendments

1. In General

Subsection (c) duplicates federal rule. — Subsection (c) of this section, as amended in 1972, is an exact duplicate of Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(c), as amended in 1966. Gordon v. Gillespie, 135 Ga. App. 369, 217 S.E.2d 628 (1975).

Scope of subsection (c). — Scope of subsection (c) of this section is not limited only to cases involving statutes of limitation. A.H. Robins Co. v. Sullivan, 136 Ga. App. 533, 221 S.E.2d 697 (1975).

Narrow, technical reading of subsection (c) would defeat purposes for which it was designed. Rich's, Inc. v. Snyder, 134 Ga. App. 889, 216 S.E.2d 648 (1975); Samples v. Barnes Group, Inc., 175 Ga. App. 253, 333 S.E.2d 147 (1985).

"Original pleading" as used in subsection (c) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15 means the pleading being amended. Speer, Inc. v. Manis, 164 Ga. App. 460, 297 S.E.2d 374 (1982).

Aim of relation back rule is to ameliorate impact of statute of limitation. See Rich's, Inc. v. Snyder, 134 Ga. App. 889, 216 S.E.2d 648 (1975); Maelstrom Properties, Inc. v. Holden, 158 Ga. App. 345, 280 S.E.2d 383 (1981); Suwannee Swifty Stores, Inc. v. NationsBank, N.A., 245 Ga. App. 198, 536 S.E.2d 299 (2000).

Effect on running of limitations. — When the requirements of subsection (c) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15 are met, even the running of the statute of limitation does not control. Of course, amendment after judgment is not permitted. Hennessy Cadillac v. Pippin, 197 Ga. App. 448, 398 S.E.2d 725 (1990).

When the defendant admitted the defendant was a sister corporation of the original defendant in an action filed on the last day of the limitation period, and that the defendant knew or should have known the action would have been brought against the defendant, the valid service on the original defendant, after the expiration of the statute of limitations, was timely notice of the action. Tanner's Rome, Inc. v. Ingram, 236 Ga. App. 275, 511 S.E.2d 617 (1999).

Motor carrier's motion for permission to file a permissive counterclaim against a shipping broker in a federal action did not satisfy the 18-month statute of limitations in 49 U.S.C. § 14705(a) for bringing a state action against the broker as the motion for leave to file the counterclaim had been denied in the federal action and the notice required under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15(c) was notice of the institution of the action (i.e., notice of the lawsuit itself) and not merely notice of the incidents giving rise to such action. Exel Transp. Servs. v. Sigma Vita, Inc., 288 Ga. App. 527, 654 S.E.2d 665 (2007).

Trial court did not err in denying a doctor's motion to dismiss an administrator's professional negligence claim because the new professional negligence claim related back to the date of the original complaint and was not barred by the two-year statute of limitation as both the original complaint and the amended complaint set forth allegations based upon the decedent's surgery, emergency room visit, and discharge relating to the care received from the doctor following the laparoscopic gallbladder surgery the doctor performed. Jensen v. Engler, 317 Ga. App. 879, 733 S.E.2d 52 (2012).

Primary question for consideration under subsection (c) of this section is whether allowance of the plaintiff's proposed amendment will work an injustice upon the defendant, and timeliness of the motion for leave to amend is one of the elements to be considered. Gordon v. Gillespie, 135 Ga. App. 369, 217 S.E.2d 628 (1975).

Requirement of substantial similarity. — Employee could not use the amendment provisions of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15(c) to add claims for unjust enrichment and quantum meruit to a renewal action against the employer's estate because the claims were not substantially similar to the claims in the original action. Burns v. Dees, 252 Ga. App. 598, 557 S.E.2d 32 (2001).

Sexual assault, battery, and loss of consortium claims which were filed as part of the patient and husband's renewed complaint were not "substantially similar" to claims included in their original complaint and since those actions were otherwise barred because the applicable statute of limitations had run regarding those claims, the trial court should have granted the psychologist's and clinic's motion for judgment on the pleadings as to those claims. Blier v. Greene, 263 Ga. App. 35, 587 S.E.2d 190 (2003).

Burden is on the party seeking amendment to show lack of unexcusable delay or laches. Gordon v. Gillespie, 135 Ga. App. 369, 217 S.E.2d 628 (1975).

Untimeliness alone not sufficient to bar amendment. — Objection that motion to amend under subsection (c) of this section was not timely is not sufficient alone to bar the amendment. Gordon v. Gillespie, 135 Ga. App. 369, 217 S.E.2d 628 (1975).

Amendment to complaint, increasing damages sought, properly relates back to date of original pleading. Pardue Constr. Co. v. Toccoa, 147 Ga. App. 132, 248 S.E.2d 199 (1978).

Although an original complaint sought only money damages, an amendment seeking equitable relief against the property in question related back so as to provide justification for defendants' filing and pursuing lis pendens. Backman v. Packwood Indus., Inc., 227 Ga. App. 416, 489 S.E.2d 135 (1997).

Amendment seeking jury trial. — When amendment to original answer, asking for a jury trial, was filed before entry of a pretrial order, the amendment would relate back to the original date of filing. Marler v. C & S Bank, 239 Ga. 342, 236 S.E.2d 590 (1977).

Assertion of new cause of action. — Strict rule that amendment asserting a new cause of action will not relate back to the time of filing of the original complaint is no longer applicable, unless the causes of action are not only different but arise out of wholly different facts. Sam Finley, Inc. v. Interstate Fire Ins. Co., 135 Ga. App. 14, 217 S.E.2d 358 (1975).

Relation back doctrine did not apply to an employee's second amended complaint filed against an employer's shareholder because the employee personally characterized the action to enforce a judgment as wholly separate and distinct from the claims asserted against the employer; further, the court found unpersuasive the argument that the employee was unaware of the shareholder's identity as the employer's alter ego and that the employee mistakenly believed that the employer and the shareholder were separate entities and that the shareholder was protected by the corporate form. Pazur v. Belcher, 272 Ga. App. 456, 612 S.E.2d 481 (2004).

Amendment not asserting new cause of action. — When plaintiff's original complaint, based on 42 U.S.C. § 1983 violations, was filed within two years after the injury, and the plaintiff asserted a First Amendment claim in an amendment, even though the First Amendment expression arose out of the plaintiff's prior activities, the plaintiff's claim for violation of such right arose out of defendant's acts which were the basis of the § 1983 claim and related back to the date of the original complaint. Blue Ridge Mt. Fisheries, Inc. v. Department of Natural Resources, 217 Ga. App. 89, 456 S.E.2d 651 (1995).

Counts III and IV of the amended complaint related back to the original complaint, filed within the statutory period, when the courts merely specified facts underlying the indebtedness claimed in the original complaint. Herndon v. Heard, 262 Ga. App. 334, 585 S.E.2d 637 (2003).

Amendment validating service of process. — Amendment may relate back to the original complaint, thereby validating service of process. Leniston v. Bonfiglio, 138 Ga. App. 151, 226 S.E.2d 1 (1976). For comment, see 28 Mercer L. Rev. 559 (1977).

Allegation of conditions precedent. — Rule as to relation back applies to allegation of facts which are conditions precedent to existence of a right of action. Middlebrooks v. Daniels, 129 Ga. App. 790, 201 S.E.2d 338 (1973).

Statute of limitation was not tolled while a motion to add the defendants was under advisement by the court; thus, subsection (c) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15 applied to determine whether the action was timely commenced against the additional defendants. Doyle Dickerson Tile Co. v. King, 210 Ga. App. 326, 436 S.E.2d 63 (1993).

Amendment alleging separate publication of same libelous statement alleged in original complaint does not state a claim arising out of the conduct, transaction, or occurrence set forth in the original pleading. Cole v. Atlanta Gas Light Co., 144 Ga. App. 575, 241 S.E.2d 462 (1978).

Failure to file exceptions to auditor's report within the statutory time period of former Code 1933, § 10-301 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-7-14) cannot be cured by later amendments made after expiration of such time period as application of subsection (c) of Ga. L. 1972, p. 689, § 6 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15) under these circumstances would frustrate the purpose of the limitation period and allow a party to do indirectly what cannot be done directly. Wise, Simpson, Aiken & Assoc. v. Rosser White Hobbs Davidson McClellan Kelly, Inc., 146 Ga. App. 789, 247 S.E.2d 479 (1978).

Amendment held not to relate back. — Later amendment cannot relate back under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15 so as to cure a defect and affect vesting of title as of date original declaration petition was filed. Dorsey v. DOT, 248 Ga. 34, 279 S.E.2d 707 (1981).

Count V of the amended complaint did not relate back to the original complaint since the count set forth the new claim of theft by deception, which had not been previously alleged in the almost six years that the suit had been pending. Herndon v. Heard, 262 Ga. App. 334, 585 S.E.2d 637 (2003).

Renewal action. — Amendment to a complaint in a renewal action relates back to the date of the complaint in the renewal action and not the date of the original complaint which was dismissed. Speer, Inc. v. Manis, 164 Ga. App. 460, 297 S.E.2d 374 (1982).

Action to enforce lien. — Subsection (c) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15, which permits amendments to relate back to the time of the original pleading, applies to actions to foreclose liens. Coe & Payne Co. v. Foster & Kleiser, Inc., 258 Ga. 161, 366 S.E.2d 292 (1988).

Action against former land manager. — Claim by a partnership against its former managing partner related back because the claim arose from the same conduct on which the original action was based. Cochran Mill Assocs. v. Stephens, 286 Ga. App. 241, 648 S.E.2d 764 (2007).

Assault and battery claim added to medical malpractice complaint was not time barred since it could not be said that the alleged malpractice and alleged unauthorized touching involved in the operation arose from different facts and, therefore, the amendment related back to the original complaint. Smith v. Wilfong, 218 Ga. App. 503, 462 S.E.2d 163 (1995).

Federal civil rights claim grounded on allegations of a malicious conspiracy between the defendants and the judge who issued a restraining order, brought three years after the accrual of the cause of action and after the original claim for breach of contract, tortious interference with contractual rights, and indemnity did not relate back and was barred by the statute of limitation. Henson v. American Family Corp., 171 Ga. App. 724, 321 S.E.2d 205 (1984).

Amendment to complaint changing the date of the alleged injury properly relates back to the date of the original pleading when change apparently was necessary due to a typographical error in the original complaint. Wilson v. Commercial Cold Storage, Inc., 179 Ga. App. 260, 346 S.E.2d 6 (1986).

Intervenor's claim for pain and suffering was a claim arising out of the conduct, transaction, or occurrence set forth in the original complaint and could be treated as an amendment by a party plaintiff relating back to the date of the original complaint for statute of limitation purposes. P. F. Moon & Co. v. Payne, 256 Ga. App. 191, 568 S.E.2d 113 (2002).

Defect in answer cured. — Because a corporation answered a complaint through a nonattorney corporate principal, the defect in the answer was cured by the filing of an answer by a licensed attorney, and the properly filed answer related back to the date of the original answer, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15(c); accordingly, it was error to enter a default judgment against the corporation pursuant to

O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55. Rainier Holdings, Inc. v. Tatum, 275 Ga. App. 878, 622 S.E.2d 86 (2005).

In a tort action, venue over a defendant was assessed based upon the facts existing at the time the action was originally filed because the defendant was added as a party to a lawsuit under the relation back provision of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15(c). Thus, venue under O.C.G.A. § 14-2-510 was proper based on the defendant's having had an office and transacted business in the county at the time the suit was originally filed. HD Supply, Inc. v. Garger, 299 Ga. App. 751, 683 S.E.2d 671 (2009).

Amendment related back to answer. — Seller's answer was timely and legally sufficient because the seller, which was a corporation, filed an amended answer by and through an attorney of record before the entry of a pre-trial order. Therefore, the amended answer related back to the filing of the seller's answer pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15(c). Murray v. DeKalb Farmers Mkt., Inc., 305 Ga. App. 523, 699 S.E.2d 842 (2010).

Implicit approval to amendment to complaint's requested amount of damages. — Although a condominium association's own documents, including an account ledger, the complaint, and a motion for summary judgment, all showed different amounts due to the association from an owner, there was no issue of fact. The trial court's grant of the association's motion for summary judgment seeking damages which accrued after the date the association's complaint was filed implicitly approved an amendment to the complaint under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15(b). Ellington v. Gallery Condo. Ass'n, 313 Ga. App. 424, 721 S.E.2d 631 (2011).

2. Amendments Changing or Adding Parties

Relation back occurs both as to plaintiff and defendant under subsection (c) of this section when new and old parties have such identity of interest that relation back is not prejudicial, and when new cause of action arose out of the conduct, transaction, or occurrence set forth or attempted to be set forth in the original pleading, provided other requirements are also met. Gordon v. Gillespie, 135 Ga. App.

369, 217 S.E.2d 628 (1975).

Examples of proper changes in parties contemplated and permitted by subsection (c) of this section are: substituting a party for a "John Doe" defendant who has been identified and served; changing capacity of a party plaintiff; changing a misnomer; changing named corporate defendant to reflect true corporation; and adding other survivors of decedent as parties plaintiff. A.H. Robins Co. v. Sullivan, 136 Ga. App. 533, 221 S.E.2d 697 (1975).

Added parties need not be "necessary parties". — There is nothing in language of subsection (c) of this section which requires that in order to add parties whose claims relate back to filing of the original complaint added parties must be necessary parties. Gordon v. Gillespie, 135 Ga. App. 369, 217 S.E.2d 628 (1975).

Addition of strangers to suit not contemplated. — Addition of parties who are altogether strangers to the original suit, insofar as notice and knowledge thereof, was not intended to be encompassed within the word "changing." A.H. Robins Co. v. Sullivan, 136 Ga. App. 533, 221 S.E.2d 697 (1975).

Addition of totally new parties by amendment does not relate back to filing of original suit for purposes of determining whether a prior pending suit exists. A.H. Robins Co. v. Sullivan, 136 Ga. App. 533, 221 S.E.2d 697 (1975).

Subsection (c) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15 negates any idea that the provisions can be used to add parties who are altogether strangers to the action or that, by "relating back" that addition, the plaintiff can escape an expired limitation. Beaver v. Steinichen, 182 Ga. App. 303, 355 S.E.2d 698 (1987).

Complaint amended to add additional plaintiff relates back to the date of the original pleading if the defendant was given notice of the additional plaintiff's claim and if that claim arose out of the same conduct, transaction, or occurrence set forth in the original pleading.

Downs v. Jones, 140 Ga. App. 752, 231 S.E.2d 816 (1976), vacated on other grounds, 142 Ga. App. 316, 235 S.E.2d 760 (1977).

Substitution of proper plaintiff when suit brought by beneficiary. —

When suit is brought by one who has no legal right to maintain the suit, but who has a beneficial interest in the subject matter of the action, substitution of a proper plaintiff will relate back to the time of filing of the original action. Atlanta Newspapers, Inc. v. Shaw, 123 Ga. App. 848, 182 S.E.2d 683 (1971).

Meaning of "changing party against whom claim is asserted." — Because from the viewpoint of the party sought to be added belatedly, it makes no difference whether the party was originally designated as John Doe and not served or originally neither named nor served because another person was erroneously thought to be the correct defendant, both situations are encompassed by reference in subsection (c) of this section to "changing the party against whom a claim is asserted." Thomas v. Home Credit Co., 133 Ga. App. 602, 211 S.E.2d 626 (1974).

Requirements for relation back of amendment changing defendant. —

Amendment to a complaint changing the party defendant relates back to the date of the original pleadings and prevents bar of the statute of limitation if the following requirements are met: (1) suit was commenced within the lawful period; (2) the claim arose out of the conduct, transaction, or occurrence in the original complaint; (3) the new defendant received notice of original filing of the action within the period provided by law for commencing the action against the defendant; (4) notice is such that the defendant will not be prejudiced in maintaining the defendant's defense on the merits; and (5) the new defendant knew or should have known that, but for a mistake concerning identity of the proper party, the action would have been brought against the defendant. Rich's, Inc. v. Snyder, 134 Ga. App. 889, 216 S.E.2d 648 (1975).

Subsection (c) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15 permits an amendment changing the parties to relate back to the date of filing the original petition provided that the amendment arises out of the same facts as the original complaint, that the new defendant has sufficient notice of the action, and that the defendant knew or should have known that, but for a mistake concerning the defendant's identity as a proper party, the action would have been brought against the defendant. Trillium Nursing Home, Inc. v. Thebaut, 189 Ga. App. 411, 375 S.E.2d 888 (1988).

Amendment to add a new party defendant was authorized when the amendment adding the new defendant arose out of the same facts as the original complaint, the new defendant had sufficient notice of the action, and the new defendant knew or should have known that, but for a mistake concerning the defendant's identity as a proper party, the action would have been brought against the defendant. Robinson v. Piggly Wiggly of Calhoun, Inc., 193 Ga. App. 675, 388 S.E.2d 754 (1989); Ford v. Olympia Skate Ctr., Inc., 213 Ga. App. 600, 445 S.E.2d 362 (1994).

Relation back when defendant has notice of cause of action and is not prejudiced. — When defendant is clearly on notice of the "cause of action" sought to be asserted, and is not prejudiced for lack of such notice, amendment by the plaintiff under subsection (c) of this section to add parties will relate back. Gordon v. Gillespie, 135 Ga. App. 369, 217 S.E.2d 628 (1975).

Required notice of institution of the action may be formal or informal. Thomas v. Home Credit Co., 133 Ga. App. 602, 211 S.E.2d 626 (1974).

Notice of incidence giving rise to litigation does not satisfy requirement of subsection (c) of this section that party sought to be added must have notice of institution of action. Hall v. Hatcher Sales Co., 149 Ga. App. 133, 253 S.E.2d 812 (1979); Harrison v. Golden, 219 Ga. App. 772, 466 S.E.2d 890 (1995).

Fair notice as protection intended by statute of limitation. — Subsection (c) of this section is based on idea that party who is notified of litigation concerning a given transaction or occurrence is entitled to no more protection from statutes of limitations than one who is informed of the precise legal description of the rights sought to be enforced; hence, if original pleading gives fair notice of the general fact situation out of which the claim arises, the defendant will not be deprived of any protection which the statute of limitations was designed to afford the defendant. Gordon v. Gillespie, 135 Ga. App. 369, 217 S.E.2d 628 (1975).

Statute of limitation will bar relation back when original complaint did not fairly notify defendant. Downs v. Jones, 140 Ga. App. 752, 231 S.E.2d 816 (1976), vacated on other grounds, 142 Ga. App. 316, 235 S.E.2d 760 (1977); Swan v. Johnson, 219 Ga. App. 450, 465 S.E.2d 684 (1995); Harding v. Godwin, 238 Ga. App. 432, 518 S.E.2d 910 (1999); Deleo v. Mid-Towne Home Infusion, Inc., 244 Ga. App. 683, 536 S.E.2d 569 (2000); Stephens v. McDonald's Corp., 245 Ga. App. 109, 536 S.E.2d 566 (2000).

There was no error in dismissing the petitioner's civil rights complaint without prejudice and with leave to amend and the petitioner's subsequent motion to reconsider because the petitioner did not identify any legal standards or procedures the judge improperly applied, manifest errors in fact-finding by the judge, or newly discovered evidence; the petitioner erroneously argued the dismissal was tantamount to a dismissal with prejudice. McFarlin v. Douglas County, No. 13-15115, 2014 U.S. App. LEXIS 18700 (11th Cir. Sept. 30, 2014) (Unpublished).

Statute of limitations bars addition of new parties in renewal action. — Interaction of the renewal statute (O.C.G.A. § 9-2-61) with the amendment provisions of subsection (c) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15 does not permit the addition of a new party to a second lawsuit which is filed within the six-month renewal period but outside the statute of limitations. Wagner v. Casey, 169 Ga. App. 500, 313 S.E.2d 756 (1984).

Requirements for adding party by amendment not satisfied. See Estate of Thurman v. Dodaro, 169 Ga. App. 531, 313 S.E.2d 722 (1984); Doyle Dickerson Tile Co. v. King, 210 Ga. App. 326, 436 S.E.2d 63 (1993).

ties in order to “correct an alleged misnomer,” pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-10-132, as the plaintiffs sought to add two party defendants, who were new and distinct and who had not been served with process; there was no showing that the parties sought to be added had actual notice of the litigation, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15(c), for purposes of amendment under the relation back doctrine. Green v. Cent. State Hosp., 275 Ga. App. 569, 621 S.E.2d 491 (2005).

Trial court’s denial of summary judgment to a hotel limited liability corporation (LLC) in a personal injury action by an injured patron was error as the action was originally brought against a different entity, the patron attempted to add the LLC and then dismissed that action and brought a new action after expiration of the limitations period under O.C.G.A. § 9-3-33 against the LLC based on the renewal statute pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-2-61, but the patron never sought or obtained court permission to add the LLC as a party, as required by O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-15(a) and 9-11-21; as the amendment to add the LLC was more than a correction of a misnomer because the two named defendants were separate entities, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-10(a) was inapplicable and leave of court was required in order to add the LLC. Valdosta Hotel Props., LLC v. White, 278 Ga. App. 206, 628 S.E.2d 642 (2006).

In an injured party’s direct action against an insurer, because the injured party failed to seek leave of court to add the insurer’s insured as a party, and the relation back doctrine did not apply, the insurer and the insured were properly dismissed from the injured party’s lawsuit. Crane v. State Farm Ins. Co., 278 Ga. App. 655, 629 S.E.2d 424, cert. denied, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 544 (2006).

In a worker’s personal injury suit, the trial court properly denied the worker’s motion to add a franchisor as a defendant under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15(c). The franchisor had not received timely notice of the lawsuit, and the mere fact that the franchisor was a subsidiary of a defendant corporation was insufficient, in and of itself, to impute the corporation’s notice of the lawsuit to the franchisor. Matson v. Noble Inv. Group, LLC, 288 Ga. App. 650, 655 S.E.2d 275 (2007).

Parking lot owner was entitled to dismissal of a plaintiff’s negligence action because the amended complaint adding the owner as a defendant did not relate back under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15(c) and, thus, was barred by the statute of limitations because the mere fact that the owner’s attorney worked in the same firm as the original defendants’ attorney did not impute knowledge of the lawsuit to the owner. LAZ Parking/Georgia, Inc. v. Jones, 294 Ga. App. 122, 668 S.E.2d 547 (2008).

Trial court did not err in denying a motion to substitute parties made by plaintiffs in their negligence suit against a defendant for fire damage because the plaintiffs had known of the existence and potential liability of the corporation the plaintiffs sought to add as a party for more than five years, and the statute of limitations had run. Barrs v. Acree, 302 Ga. App. 521, 691 S.E.2d 575 (2010).

Request by a deceased patient’s widow to add the treating physician’s employer to the widow’s medical malpractice action was properly denied as the widow failed to show that the employer had notice of the institution of the lawsuit prior to the expiration of the statute of limitations; notice to the hospital and the physician of the institution of litigation did not constitute notice to the employer, even though they were all insured by the same carrier. Hunter v. Emory-Adventist, Inc., 323 Ga. App. 537, 746 S.E.2d 734 (2013).

Party offering amendment must demonstrate no inexcusable delay. — Party offering the amendment adding a new party must demonstrate that the party has not been guilty of inexcusable delay. Horne v. Carswell, 167 Ga. App. 229, 306 S.E.2d 94 (1983).

Refusal to add and change designation of third-party defendants. — Trial court did not err in denying the plaintiff’s motion to add and change the designation of third-party defendants, when the third-party defendants were aware of the plaintiff's charges against the defendants and were defending against the defendants' claims before the statute of limitations had expired, and the plaintiff offered no excuse for the delay in attempting to add third-party defendants. Hall v. Scott USA, Ltd., 198 Ga. App. 197, 400 S.E.2d 700 (1990).

Movant may establish lack of prejudice in amendment by showing "identity of interest" between the old and the new parties. Horne v. Carswell, 167 Ga. App. 229, 306 S.E.2d 94 (1983).

Amendment seeking to add insurer, who had subrogation rights in plaintiff's original cause, as party plaintiff was proper and related back to the original petition. Dover Place Apts. v. A & M Plumbing & Heating Co., 167 Ga. App. 732, 307 S.E.2d 530 (1983), aff'd, 255 Ga. 27, 335 S.E.2d 113 (1985).

Relation back provisions of subsection (c) do not apply to service of uninsured motorist carrier. — Relation back provisions of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15(c) do not apply to situations involving service of an uninsured motorist carrier, if for no other reason than simply because such service does not necessarily result in the insurer becoming a party to the action. State Auto Ins. Co. v. Reese, 191 Ga. App. 818, 383 S.E.2d 157, cert. denied, 191 Ga. App. 923, 383 S.E.2d 157 (1989).

Court did not abuse discretion in denying plaintiff's motion to add plaintiff's spouse as a party since the suit had been pending and active for over seven years and the party to be added knew of the suit (as did the party seeking the spouse's addition) and the new party was asserting an independent claim and offered no justification for delaying entry into the lawsuit. Maitlen v. Derst, 178 Ga. App. 305, 342 S.E.2d 777 (1986).

Action against unknown defendant when service not had prior to running of statute. — When a complaint is filed against one designated by a fictitious name, as allowed by Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 47 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-10(a)), but no service on that defendant is made prior to the running of the statute of limitation, and after running of the statute it is desired to substitute name of and serve actual defendant, that substitution and service constitute "changing the party against whom a claim is asserted" within the meaning of subsection (c) of Ga. L. 1972, p. 689, § 6 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15), and the requirements thereof must be met before such substitution may be made. Sims v. American Cas. Co., 131 Ga. App. 461, 206 S.E.2d 121, aff'd sub nom. Providence Wash. Ins. Co. v. Sims, 232 Ga. 787, 209 S.E.2d 61 (1974); Moulden Supply Co. v. Rojas, 135 Ga. App. 229, 217 S.E.2d 468 (1975); Larson v. C.W. Matthews Contracting Co., 182 Ga. App. 356, 356 S.E.2d 35 (1987).

In cases involving "John Doe" or unknown defendant as allowed by Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 47 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-10(a)), when there is no service on the entity intended prior to the running of the statute of limitation, limitation plea is good, unless there has been prior notice of institution of the action or its equivalent so as to bring the case within the exception stated within subsection (c) of Ga. L. 1972, p. 689, § 6 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15). Vaughn v. Collum, 136 Ga. App. 677, 222 S.E.2d 37 (1975), aff'd, 236 Ga. 582, 224 S.E.2d 416 (1976).

When an unidentified party is sued as "John Doe" and service as to the unknown party is successful within the statute of limitations, an amendment to the complaint relates back to the filing of the original complaint. When service has not been effected successfully on the John Doe party within the statutory time of limitations, the test of subsection (c) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15 applies. Bailey v. Kemper Group, 182 Ga. App. 604, 356 S.E.2d 695 (1987).

When one has filed a complaint naming a "John Doe" defendant, the requirements of subsection (c) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15 must be met before the amendment substituting the named party will relate back to the date of the complaint if service has not been effected before the expiration of the statute of limitations. Harper v. Mayor of Savannah, 190 Ga. App. 637, 380 S.E.2d 78 (1989).

trucking company and an insurance company that were originally sued in a timely manner as "John Doe" and were notified within the applicable limitations period that the companies would be sued as regular parties were not entitled to dismissal as the second complaint related back. McNeil v. McCollum, 276 Ga. App. 882, 625 S.E.2d 10 (2005).

Leave and order of court to make new party defendant. — Plaintiff must obtain leave of court for filing an amendment seeking to make a new party defendant, and obtain an order to that effect. Pascoe Steel Corp. v. Turner County Bd. of Educ., 139 Ga. App. 87, 227 S.E.2d 887 (1976).

In order for an additional party to be added to an existing suit by amendment pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15, leave of court must first be sought and obtained pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-21. Horne v. Carswell, 167 Ga. App. 229, 306 S.E.2d 94 (1983).

Prior to adoption of the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9), failure to name necessary party defendants was nonamendable and required dismissal. Guhl v. Tuggle, 242 Ga. 412, 249 S.E.2d 219 (1978).

When amended complaint to add a party defendant was filed within statutory period, the fact that service was perfected upon added party defendant one day after two-year limitation period did not bar the amended complaint. Humble Oil & Ref. Co. v. Fulcher, 128 Ga. App. 606, 197 S.E.2d 416 (1973).

That amendment might relate back and bar statute of limitation is not prejudice such as to bar the amendment to add a party. Dover Place Apts. v. A & M Plumbing & Heating Co., 167 Ga. App. 732, 307 S.E.2d 530 (1983), aff'd, 255 Ga. 27, 335 S.E.2d 113 (1985).

Amendment adding or changing a party may be allowed even though a separate action by or against that party would be barred by the statute of limitation. Horne v. Carswell, 167 Ga. App. 229, 306 S.E.2d 94 (1983); Harper v. DOT, 195 Ga. App. 602, 394 S.E.2d 398 (1990).

Since the statute of limitation had not run at the time plaintiffs filed their first amendments adding a new party defendant it was within the trial court's discretion to grant later motions to amend, although filed after the statute of limitations had run, and have the amendments relate back to the date the original complaints were filed when the occurrence, conduct, or transaction in the original pleadings were the same as that set forth in the amendments; the added party would not be prejudiced in maintaining its defense on the merits; and the added party knew or should have known that the actions would have been brought against it. Bil-Jax, Inc. v. Scott, 183 Ga. App. 516, 359 S.E.2d 362, cert. denied, 183 Ga. App. 905, 359 S.E.2d 362 (1987).

Addition of new party not allowed when statute of limitations has run.

— When husband and wife sought an order permitting them to amend their complaint to add, as a defendant, a probation officer responsible for supervising the juvenile who beat the husband, but the order was sought after the statute of limitations had run and the two submitted no excuse for having failed to name and serve the proposed new party, the trial court was correct in not allowing the complaint to be amended. Sargent v. Department of Human Resources, 202 Ga. App. 874, 415 S.E.2d 918 (1992).

Georgia renewal statute, O.C.G.A. § 9-2-61, could not have been used to suspend the running of the statute of limitation as to defendants different from those originally sued; the trial court did not err in dismissing a premises liability complaint when the injured person originally sued an incorrect defendant, then later sued the store owner after the statute of limitations had expired, then, after that case was dismissed again sued the original incorrect defendant, and finally amended the complaint to include the store owner. Brown v. J. H. Harvey Co., 268 Ga. App. 322, 601 S.E.2d 808 (2004).

Because a belated claim filed against an alleged homebuilder's partner did not relate back to the date of the original complaint, as required by O.C.G.A.

§ 9-11-15(c), summary judgment in favor of the homebuilder was correctly granted based on the expiration of the six-year limitation period under O.C.G.A. § 9-3-24. Wallick v. Lamb, 289 Ga. App. 25, 656 S.E.2d 164 (2007).

Dropping of unintended party. — When a person served with process intended for another answers by denying that the person is the intended defendant, and counterclaims for malicious use of process, the plaintiff could have moved the court, upon learning of the error, to drop the unintended party pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15. Bank South, N.A. v. Tate, 190 Ga. App. 248, 378 S.E.2d 486, cert. denied, 190 Ga. App. 897, 378 S.E.2d 486 (1989).

Addition of party authorized. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in granting the plaintiffs' eleventh-hour motion to amend and add the defendant as a party. Little Tree, Inc. v. Fields, 240 Ga. App. 12, 522 S.E.2d 509 (1999).

Because an administratrix amended a wrongful death complaint to reflect that such was filed in both a capacity as the administratrix of the decedent's estate and as next friend of the decedent's minor children, and there was a direct connection between the old and new parties, the complaint, as amended, related back to the original complaint; further, because the record showed that the decedent's children reached their majority after the complaint was filed, the trial court did not err in adding the children as real parties in interest. Rockdale Health Sys. v. Holder, 280 Ga. App. 298, 640 S.E.2d 52 (2006).

Trial court did not err in finding that the relation-back statute, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15(c), applied and that the amendment to a corporation's complaint adding the corporation's president and the president's spouse related back to the brokers' original filing of the lawsuit because all of the relevant claims in the case arose out of the same facts, conduct, transaction, or occurrence pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15(c); the brokers' original complaint, the corporation's counterclaim, and the corporation's amended complaint against both the brokers and the president and the spouse all asserted claims that arose directly from an alleged oral agreement and the subsequent written broker agreement between the corporation and the brokers. Cartwright v. Fuji Photo Film U.S.A., Inc., 312 Ga. App. 890, 720 S.E.2d 200 (2011), cert. denied, No. S12C0600, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 306 (Ga. 2012).

Motion to add related corporation authorized. — Even though the plaintiff did not move to amend the plaintiff's complaint to add the proper corporation as a defendant until nine months after receiving the originally named defendant's answer and 10 months after the expiration of the statute of limitations, because the plaintiff's motion to amend conforms to the requirements of subsection (c) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15 and was not prejudicial, the trial court abused the court's discretion in denying the motion. Fontaine v. Home Depot, Inc., 250 Ga. App. 123, 550 S.E.2d 691 (2001).

Parents of injured children and one deceased child who sued a car distributor were entitled to add the car manufacturer as a party to the parents' personal injury and wrongful death actions under the relation back doctrine of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15(c) as the car distributor was the wholly owned subsidiary of the car manufacturer, the distributor and the manufacturer had common officers, the same law firm represented the distributor and the manufacturer, the manufacturer was aware of the lawsuits from the beginning, the claims against the manufacturer arose out of the same events as the claims against the distributor, and the manufacturer would not be prejudiced by the action. Parks v. Hyundai Motor Am., Inc., 258 Ga. App. 876, 575 S.E.2d 673 (2002).

Addition of mortgagee in foreclosure proceeding. — Amendment to add the mortgagee as copetitioner to an application to confirm a foreclosure sale would be effective under the relation-back rule even though the thirty-day period imposed by O.C.G.A. § 44-14-161 for reporting the sale and obtaining confirmation on the sale expired by the time the mortgagee moved to be added as a party. Small Bus. Admin. v. Desai, 193 Ga. App. 852, 389 S.E.2d 372, cert. denied, 193 Ga. App. 911, 389 S.E.2d 372 (1989).

Answer to amendment adding party not required. — Construing the pertinent provisions of O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-7, 9-11-8, 9-11-12, 9-11-15, and 9-11-21 in pari materia, it is clear that the Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9, authorizes the addition of parties, by order of the court, and that an “amended complaint” effecting such an addition does not require a responsive pleading, unless the trial court orders a reply thereto. Chan v. W-East Trading Corp., 199 Ga. App. 76, 403 S.E.2d 840, cert. denied, 199 Ga. App. 905, 403 S.E.2d 840 (1991).

O.C.G.A. § 9-11-21 does not apply when the plaintiff seeks to substitute a named defendant for a “John Doe”; the applicable procedure is that set forth in subsection (c) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15. Bishop v. Farhat, 227 Ga. App. 201, 489 S.E.2d 323 (1997).

Relation back not authorized. — Because the evidence showed that a corporation clearly did not have notice of the institution of the action until after expiration of the statute of limitation, relation back of the complaint to add the corporation was not authorized under subsection (c) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15. Khawaja v. Lane Co., 239 Ga. App. 93, 520 S.E.2d 1 (1999).

Because there was no mistake concerning the identity of two motorists involved in a traffic accident with an injured person, the trial court properly held that the injured person’s amended complaint adding a claim against a second motorist did not relate back to the original filing; the injured person’s complaint identified the second motorist as a possible defendant, showing that there was no mistake concerning identity. Dean v. Hunt, 273 Ga. App. 552, 615 S.E.2d 620 (2005).

Supplemental Pleadings

Supplemental pleading allowable only in court’s discretion. — Supplemental pleading pursuant to subsection (d) of this section is allowable not as a matter of right or duty, but only upon motion and at the discretion of the trial judge. Whitley Constr. Co. v. Whitley, 134 Ga. App. 245, 213 S.E.2d 909 (1975).

When a supplemental proceeding was filed without permission, no harmful error occurred because the adverse party was later given an opportunity to appear before the trial court and argue against the supplement. Tyson v. McPhail Properties, Inc., 223 Ga. App. 683, 478 S.E.2d 467 (1996).

Opposite party to be afforded notice and opportunity for hearing. — Provision in subsection (d) of this section for reasonable notice to the opposite party before filing of a supplemental pleading is allowed is designed to afford notice and an opportunity to be heard on the merits. Department of Agric. v. Country Lad Foods, Inc., 226 Ga. 631, 177 S.E.2d 38 (1970).

Lack of prior notice not harmful when rule nisi issued. — When a supplemental pleading is allowed without prior notice to the opposite party, but a rule nisi for hearing thereon on a day certain is issued and served, and hearing is thereafter had on the merits, failure to afford prior notice, while irregular, did not constitute harmful error. Department of Agric. v. Country Lad Foods, Inc., 226 Ga. 631, 177 S.E.2d 38 (1970).

When corporation, after filing answer, assigns various instruments to the corporation’s wholly owned subsidiary, and amends the corporation’s counterclaim by adding claims based on these assignments, these additional causes of action do not constitute compulsory counterclaims which the corporation was required to assert at the time the corporation filed the corporation’s original answer, when there is no evidence that the subsidiary is a sham, or that it is being used to defeat a public convenience, to justify a wrong, protect fraud, defend crime, or any other reason which in equity and good conscience would justify the disregard of its separate entity. Bass v. Citizens & S. Nat’l Bank, 168 Ga. App. 668, 309 S.E.2d 850 (1983).

Failure to allow amendment not shown. — Trial court did not err in dismissing the tort claims filed by a president, instead of allowing the president leave to amend, as the trial court did not prevent the president from amending the complaint; further, the president did not show that the trial court refused to permit an amendment. Tidikis v. Network for Med. Communs. & Research, LLC, 274 Ga. App. 807, 619 S.E.2d 481 (2005).

Additional claims to interest in garnishment suit not tied to consent. — Because, in a garnishment suit brought against an insurer, the insurer made a clear objection to the plaintiffs' additional claims to interest under a consent judgment with its insured, it could not be said that the claims were tried with the insurer's express or implied consent under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15(b). St. Paul Reinsurance Co. v. Ross, 276 Ga. App. 135, 622 S.E.2d 374 (2005).

New theory of recovery. — Trial court did not err in entering summary judgment in favor of a grantor's grandsons in an action filed by the grantor's wife, daughter, and granddaughter challenging the validity of a quitclaim deed because res judicata compelled summary judgment on the counts alleging a cloud on the title, undue influence, and mistake of fact since there was an identity of the parties, a decision of the court of appeals in a prior appeal upholding the trial court's grant of summary judgment constituted an adjudication on the merits, and the causes of action raised in the amended complaint were matters put in issue or which under the rules of law could have been put in issue in the original complaint; restyling the complaint in terms of a theory of recovery ascertainable in the original case will not revive a cause of action that was defeated on appeal from a summary judgment ruling. Smith v. Lockridge, 288 Ga. 180, 702 S.E.2d 858 (2010).

9-11-16. Pretrial procedure; formulating issues; order; calendar.

(a) Upon the motion of any party, or upon its own motion, the court shall direct the attorneys for the parties to appear before it for a conference to consider:

- (1) The simplification of the issues;
- (2) The necessity or desirability of amendments to the pleadings;
- (3) The possibility of obtaining admissions of fact and of documents which will avoid unnecessary proof;
- (4) The limitation of the number of expert witnesses; and
- (5) Such other matters as may aid in the disposition of the action.

(b) The court shall make an order which recites the action taken at the conference and the agreements made by the parties as to any of the matters considered and which limits the issues for trial to those not disposed of by admissions or agreements of counsel. The order, when entered, controls the subsequent course of the action unless modified at the trial to prevent manifest injustice. After entry of the pretrial order, it shall be within the discretion of the court to permit or disallow the presentation of testimony from any expert witness whose name is not contained in the pretrial order; provided, however, that if the additional expert witness is permitted to testify, any opposing party shall be permitted reasonable time to take the deposition of the additional expert witness. The court, in its discretion, may establish by rule a pretrial calendar on which actions may be placed for consideration as provided in subsection (a) of this Code section and may either confine the calendar to jury actions or to nonjury actions or extend it to all actions. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

ISSUES
WITNESSES

General Consideration

Editor’s notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under Ga. L. 1953, p. 269, §§ 1, 2, are included in the annotations for this Code section.

Construction with § 9-11-15(b). — Ga. L. 1968, p. 1104, § 5 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-16) must always be considered in light of the mandatory provisions of Ga. L. 1972, p. 689, § 6 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15(b)), relating to amendments to conform to the evidence, and the test of implied amendment of pleadings should always be whether the opposing party had a fair opportunity to defend and offer evidence or was misled. Carreras v. Austell Box Bd. Corp., 154 Ga. App. 135, 267 S.E.2d 792 (1980); Rockdale Body Shop, Inc. v. Thompson, 222 Ga. App. 821, 476 S.E.2d 22 (1996); Walker v. Sutton, 222 Ga. App. 638, 476 S.E.2d 34 (1996).

Construction with O.C.G.A. § 9-11-16. — Defendant did not waive the issue of attorney’s fees by failing to include the issue in the parties’ pretrial order under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-16 because a motion for attorney’s fees under O.C.G.A. § 9-15-14 could be, according to the language of the statute, made at any time during the action but not later than 45 days after judgment. McClure v. McCurry, 329 Ga. App. 342, 765 S.E.2d 30 (2014).

Manifest injustice. — To prevent ambushing opposing counsel with an unfamiliar witness, Ga. Unif. Super. Ct. R.

7.2(19) provides for mutual disclosure in the pretrial order of all of those who either “will” or “may” be called; as a sanction for non-disclosure, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-16(b) does not allow the calling of an unlisted witness unless the party can show that it is necessary “to prevent manifest injustice.” Ballard v. Meyers, 275 Ga. 819, 572 S.E.2d 572 (2002).

No authority to set aside valid proceedings. — This section does not confer authority upon the court to set aside valid proceedings pending in the cause. Riden v. Commercial Credit Plan, 136 Ga. App. 191, 220 S.E.2d 746 (1975).

Judge not authorized to vacate, modify, or set aside valid proceedings. — Georgia Laws 1953, p. 269, §§ 1 and 2 did not, directly or by inference, confer upon judge of the superior court any power to vacate, modify, or set aside valid proceedings pending in the cause in which a pretrial conference is set by the court. Reynolds v. Reynolds, 217 Ga. 234, 123 S.E.2d 115 (1961), overruled on other grounds, Scherer v. Scherer, 249 Ga. 635, 292 S.E.2d 662 (1982).

Withdrawal or amendment of admissions. — Attempt to withdraw or amend admissions must be accompanied by a showing that the merits of the case will be subserved. Yarbrough v. Magbee Bros. Lumber & Supply Co., 189 Ga. App. 299, 375 S.E.2d 471 (1988).

Trial court did not err in allowing the withdrawal of admissions made by operation of law pursuant to

O.C.G.A. § 9-11-36(b) because O.C.G.A. § 9-11-16(b), governing pretrial orders, did not apply to limit the trial court's discretion to permit withdrawal of the disputed admissions when the trial court's June 5 scheduling order was not intended as a pretrial order. Velasco v. Chambless, 295 Ga. App. 376, 671 S.E.2d 870 (2008).

Mandatory nature of pretrial procedures. — Pretrial rule in this state differs from the federal rule in that, among other things, pretrial procedures are mandatory in this state if sought by a party or the court, but both rules make the pretrial order itself mandatory. Smith v. Davis, 121 Ga. App. 704, 175 S.E.2d 28 (1970).

It is error for court to refuse to grant pretrial hearing and order when a timely motion to this effect has been entered. Kickasola v. Jim Wallace Oil Co., 144 Ga. App. 758, 242 S.E.2d 483, cert. denied, 436 U.S. 921, 98 S. Ct. 2272, 56 L. Ed. 2d 764 (1978).

Mandate of pretrial conference. — It is error for trial court to ignore the mandate of this section requiring a pretrial conference upon timely motion. International Ass'n of Bridge Ironworkers, Local 387 v. Moore, 149 Ga. App. 431, 254 S.E.2d 438 (1979).

Failure to enter pretrial order is error. — It is error for trial court to ignore mandate of this section to make an order. Smith v. Davis, 121 Ga. App. 704, 175 S.E.2d 28 (1970).

Mandatory language of this section makes failure to enter pretrial order error, and the only question remaining is whether the error is harmful. Sheet Metal Workers Int'l Ass'n v. Carter, 144 Ga. App. 48, 240 S.E.2d 569 (1977), rev'd on other grounds, 241 Ga. 220, 244 S.E.2d 860 (1978).

Omission of an issue from a pretrial order is not controlling if evidence pertaining to the issue is introduced without objection, the opposing party is not unfairly surprised, and the issue is actually litigated. Dunkin' Donuts of Am., Inc. v. Gebar, Inc., 202 Ga. App. 450, 414 S.E.2d 683 (1992).

Consolidated pretrial order submitted by the parties but unsigned by the court, which failed to raise a defense mentioned in the answer, did not preclude the defendant from pursuing the defense in a motion prior to trial. Swanson v. State Farm Mut. Auto Ins., 242 Ga. App. 616, 530 S.E.2d 516 (2000).

Failure to submit portion of order.

— Because the sole reason why an equitable division matter went to trial without the consolidated pretrial order required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-16, was the party's failure to submit the party's part of the pretrial order, the party could not be heard to complain of a judgment that the party's own procedure or conduct procured or aided in causing. Graham v. Graham, 291 Ga. 1, 727 S.E.2d 101 (2012).

Order not complete. — Record showed only that the defendant's portion of a proposed consolidated pretrial order was filed, however, it was not a complete pretrial order, or even an order, within the meaning of subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-16, having not been made or signed by the judge. Applied Ecological Sys. v. Weskem, Inc., 212 Ga. App. 65, 441 S.E.2d 279 (1994).

Judge not required to sign order. — Neither O.C.G.A. § 9-11-16 nor Rule 7.2 of the Uniform Superior Court Rules requires the judge to sign a pretrial order proposed by the parties. Swanson v. State Farm Mut. Auto Ins., 242 Ga. App. 616, 530 S.E.2d 516 (2000).

Fact that parties failed to reach any agreements, which trial court stated for the record as the reason for failing to make a pretrial order, affords no legal justification to ignore the mandate to enter such order. Smith v. Davis, 121 Ga. App. 704, 175 S.E.2d 28 (1970).

Harmless failure to enter pretrial order. — Harmless error doctrine applicable to this section is not to be extended loosely; it must clearly appear from the record that failure to enter pretrial order was harmless for the judgment to stand. Sheet Metal Workers Int'l Ass'n v. Carter, 144 Ga. App. 48, 240 S.E.2d 569 (1977), rev'd on other grounds, 241 Ga. 220, 244 S.E.2d 860 (1978).

Pretrial order controls subsequent trial, unless objected to. Brumby v. Brooks, 140 Ga. App. 210, 230 S.E.2d 359

(1976); Hawkins v. Richardson-Merrell, Inc., 147 Ga. App. 481, 249 S.E.2d 286 (1978).

Stipulation by counsel contained in a pretrial order is binding not only as a part of the pretrial order, but also, so long as it is before the court, it is binding because it is a stipulation by the parties upon which a resolution of the issue is to be made, and is binding even though it might in some manner contradict or conflict with the pleadings. Goolsby v. Allstate Ins. Co., 130 Ga. App. 881, 204 S.E.2d 789 (1974).

Evidence contrary to stipulation by counsel in a pretrial order is not admissible; since such stipulation is binding, it may not be disproved. Goolsby v. Allstate Ins. Co., 130 Ga. App. 881, 204 S.E.2d 789 (1974).

No amendment of pretrial order without leave of court or consent of adverse party. — Once a pretrial order has been entered, a party may not amend without leave of court or consent of the opposite party; such order, when entered, limits the issues for trial to those not disposed of by admissions and agreement of counsel, and controls the subsequent course of the action, unless modified at trial to prevent manifest injustice. Gaul v. Kennedy, 246 Ga. 290, 271 S.E.2d 196 (1980).

If litigant desires modification of pretrial order, application should be made to the trial judge either before or during the trial for such modification. Gilbert v. Meason, 145 Ga. App. 662, 244 S.E.2d 601 (1978).

Timeliness of motion to amend pretrial order filed at trial. — Motion to amend pretrial order and proffered amendment filed at trial cannot, as a matter of law, be untimely. Ambler v. Archer, 230 Ga. 281, 196 S.E.2d 858 (1973).

Objection to expert witnesses not timely filed. — In a tenant's action against the leasing agent of the tenant's apartment complex alleging that the tenant was injured by soot emitted from the apartment's heating system, the trial court properly refused to exclude expert opinions on behalf of the tenant on the ground that the opinions were inadmissible under former O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67.1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-7-702); although the agent had notice that the tenant intended to rely on the experts' opinions, the agent did not assert the agent's claim until the last business day before the trial and therefore failed to seek a timely ruling no later than the final pretrial conference contemplated under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-16 as required by former § 24-9-67.1(d). Ambling Mgmt. Co. v. Purdy, 283 Ga. App. 21, 640 S.E.2d 620 (2006).

Pre-trial order did not preclude defendant's challenging fraud claim. — Trial court did not err in denying the plaintiff's motion to preclude the defendants from contesting the merits of a fraud claim under the doctrines of res judicata and collateral estoppel because the bankruptcy court's discussion of the fraud issue was in the context of the court's ruling on whether the automatic stay should be modified so that the pending state court litigation could proceed and was not entitled to preclusive effect. Gajaanan Inv., LLC v. Shahil & Sohail Corp., 323 Ga. App. 694, 747 S.E.2d 713 (2013).

Modification or amendment of pretrial order at trial in court's discretion. — Discretion is reposed in trial judge as to whether to allow modification or amendment of pretrial order at the trial. Ambler v. Archer, 230 Ga. 281, 196 S.E.2d 858 (1973); Khoury Constr. Co. v. Earhart, 191 Ga. App. 562, 382 S.E.2d 392 (1989).

In the absence of an abuse of discretion, a trial court's action in creating, enforcing, and modifying a pretrial order will not be disturbed on appeal. Although the words "borrowed servant" did not appear in a crane company's answer to a complaint alleging its employee was negligent or in the pretrial order, the issue was raised through the company's motion for summary judgment; permitting the company to amend the pretrial order led to neither prejudice arising out of surprise nor waiver as a matter of law, so there was no abuse of discretion in the trial court allowing the company to amend the pretrial order. Gibson v. Tim's Crane & Rigging, Inc., 266 Ga. App. 42, 596 S.E.2d 215 (2004).

Modification of pretrial order as to damages. — Since a pretrial order stated that the damages cap in the Tort Claims Act, O.C.G.A. § 50-21-20 et seq., would apply, the trial court abused the court's discretion by implicitly modifying the pre-trial order to support a judgment in excess of the cap. Dep't of Human Resources v. Phillips, 268 Ga. 316, 486 S.E.2d 851 (1997).

To disallow proffered amendment and construe pretrial order as preventing support of case by evidence works a manifest injustice on the party moving for such amendment. Ambler v. Archer, 230 Ga. 281, 196 S.E.2d 858 (1973).

Rescission of pretrial order on court's motion not authorized. — This section does not provide any authority for a trial judge to rescind a pretrial order on the judge's own motion. Smith v. Billings, 132 Ga. App. 201, 207 S.E.2d 683 (1974).

It must lie within court's power to impose appropriate sanctions to make effective court's pretrial orders. Ambler v. Archer, 230 Ga. 281, 196 S.E.2d 858 (1973).

No harsher sanctions to ensure effectiveness of pretrial orders should be imposed than are necessary to vindicate court's authority. Ambler v. Archer, 230 Ga. 281, 196 S.E.2d 858 (1973).

"Calendar Call of Inactive Cases" is an order of court when properly drawn and signed by the judge, and upon proof of mailing to counsel's last known address, court is authorized to dismiss cases listed for want of prosecution. Roark v. Northeast Sales Distrib. Co., 124 Ga. App. 10, 183 S.E.2d 83 (1971).

Motion in limine is similar in purpose and function to a preliminary ruling on evidence at a pretrial conference, controlling the subsequent course of the action, unless modified at trial to prevent manifest injustice; it is an interlocutory ruling, appealable with the final judgment. Harley-Davidson Motor Co. v. Daniel, 244 Ga. 284, 260 S.E.2d 20 (1979).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying a county's motion in limine concerning an order of the Environmental Protection Division of the Georgia Natural Resources Department, and orders in a prior administrative action, because the documents were evidence that the county had an ownership interest in the dam at issue in the case; if the trial court's rulings concerning evidence that went to the ownership of the dam were erroneous, those errors were rendered harmless by the trial court's direction of a verdict against the county on the issue of ownership. Forsyth County v. Martin, 279 Ga. 215, 610 S.E.2d 512 (2005).

Dismissal of party not authorized. — While the pretrial procedure under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-16 has broad general application, the method for dismissing an action is specifically provided under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41, and the dismissal of a party is not within the purview of the pretrial procedure. Georgia Am. Ins. Co. v. Mills, 183 Ga. App. 707, 359 S.E.2d 697 (1987).

Dismissal of claim for failure to include too harsh a sanction when no prejudice. — Trial court erred by denying a contractor's motion to amend the final pre-trial order by refusing to consider evidence admitted in support of the contractor's breach of contract claim, and by dismissing the claim based on the contractor's failure to submit the contractor's portion of a pre-trial order as required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-16(b); a lesser sanction was appropriate, given there was no prejudice to the owner. Lee Haddock & Assocs., LLC v. Barlow, 328 Ga. App. 279, 759 S.E.2d 622 (2014).

Petition couched in loose pleading could be remedied by motion to strike the improper or irrelevant portion, and pretrial conference and order outlining the issues to be tried. Wallace v. Bleakman, 131 Ga. App. 856, 207 S.E.2d 254 (1974) (decided under Ga. L. 1953, p. 269, §§ 1, 2).

Pretrial order not required if no pretrial conference. — Trial court was not required, under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-16(b), to issue a pretrial order when no pretrial conference was held. Rolleston v. Estate of Sims, 253 Ga. App. 182, 558 S.E.2d 411 (2001), cert. denied, 537 U.S. 1030, 123 S. Ct. 560, 154 L. Ed. 2d 445 (2002).

Pretrial order controlling absent modification. — Pretrial order limiting issues for trial and reciting agreements made by the parties as to any of the matters considered, when entered, controls the subsequent course of the action and determines the issues on which the case is submitted to the jury, unless modified at the trial, pursuant to an application therefor made before or during trial, to prevent manifest injustice. Tolbert v. Free, 111 Ga. App. 811, 143 S.E.2d 440 (1965) (decided under Ga. L. 1953, p. 269, §§ 1, 2).

Pretrial order, limiting issues for trial, controls subsequent course of the action unless modified at the trial. Metropolitan Transit Sys. v. Barnette, 115 Ga. App. 17, 153 S.E.2d 656 (1967) (decided under Ga. L. 1953, p. 269, §§ 1, 2).

Agreement of the parties at a pretrial conference limits issues for trial to those not disposed of by agreement. Polk v. Fulton County, 96 Ga. App. 733, 101 S.E.2d 736 (1957) (decided under Ga. L. 1953, p. 269, §§ 1, 2).

Stipulation binding unless modified. — Stipulation at pretrial conference, whereby the plaintiff admitted the truth of certain allegations, which was made part of the record, became binding between the parties when the stipulation was not modified by any subsequent order of the court, and the course of action on trial of the case on that issue was governed and controlled by that stipulation. Bank of Ga. v. Aiken, 98 Ga. App. 782, 106 S.E.2d 817 (1958) (decided under Ga. L. 1953, p. 269, §§ 1, 2).

If litigant desires modification of a pretrial order, application should be made to the trial judge, either before or during the trial, for such modification. Dumas v. Beasley, 218 Ga. 349, 128 S.E.2d 59 (1962) (decided under Ga. L. 1953, p. 269, §§ 1, 2).

Pretrial conference motion properly denied. — Motion for a pretrial conference that was not filed until after the case was placed on a ready list for trial was properly denied as untimely. Trustees of Trinity College v. Ferris, 228 Ga. App. 476, 491 S.E.2d 909 (1997).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in refusing to admit the construction company's transaction reports, which were created two months before the trial court's pretrial order was filed, as the reports were not listed in the pretrial order despite the fact that the reports could have been produced well in advance of trial and the construction company's bookkeeper was permitted to testify concerning their contents to rehabilitate the bookkeeper's credibility and the data contained in the reports was included in summary form in job cost reports that had been introduced into evidence. Sunflower Props. v. Yocum, 261 Ga. App. 142, 581 S.E.2d 648 (2003).

App. 386, 740 S.E.2d 439 (2013); Ford Motor Co. v. Conley, 294 Ga. 530, 757 S.E.2d 20 (2014).

Issues

Formulation and simplification of the issues are two purposes of the pretrial procedures established by this section. Ambler v. Archer, 230 Ga. 281, 196 S.E.2d 858 (1973); Godfrey v. Kirk, 161 Ga. App. 474, 288 S.E.2d 301 (1982).

Duty of court to formulate issues to show real contentions. — It is the duty of the court, to the extent practicable and possible, to eliminate uncontroversial issues and formulate remaining issues to show the real contentions of the parties. Smith v. Davis, 121 Ga. App. 704, 175 S.E.2d 28 (1970).

Any issue not raised in agreed pre-trial order expressly superseding pleadings is waived. Keeley v. Cardiovascular Surgical Assocs., 236 Ga. App. 26, 510 S.E.2d 880 (1999).

Issue clearly outside scope of pre-trial order is generally not viable issue in the trial of the case. Ackley v. Strickland, 173 Ga. App. 784, 328 S.E.2d 549 (1985); Tahamtan v. Tahamtan, 204 Ga. App. 680, 420 S.E.2d 363 (1992), overruled on other grounds, Holland v. Caviness, 292 Ga. 332, 737 S.E.2d 669 (2013).

Preservation of issues. — Plaintiff preserved the issue of litigation expenses by including in the proposed verdict form (which was part of the pretrial order) a finding of attorneys' fees based on stubborn litigiousness. Parks v. Breedlove, 241 Ga. App. 72, 526 S.E.2d 137 (1999).

Issue not raised in pretrial order considered on appeal. — After minority shareholders brought direct and derivative claims against the president of a corporation for breach of fiduciary duty, even though the defendant did not raise the propriety of the plaintiffs' direct claim in the pretrial order, nor raise the issue until the plaintiff's motion for directed verdict after the close of the evidence, the issue would be considered, since interests other than those of the defendant were at stake, i.e., the rights of corporate creditors and possibly shareholders not parties to the action. Dunaway v. Parker, 215 Ga. App. 841, 453 S.E.2d 43 (1994).

Failure to raise insufficiency of process waives issue. — While the better practice in proceedings under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-16 is to make specific reference as to the disposition of preliminary matters such as those raised pursuant to O.C.G.A.

§ 9-11-12(b) (defenses), the trial court does not abuse the court's discretion in concluding that the defendant who knows that the service of process upon the defendant is insufficient from the time the defendant's answer is filed but, nevertheless, purposefully neglects to pursue this issue at the pretrial conference, waives the insufficiency of service of process defense and thus consents to the jurisdiction of the trial court. Georgia Power Co. v. O'Bryant, 169 Ga. App. 491, 313 S.E.2d 709 (1983).

Issue of damages not waived. — When a nuisance claim was made in the initial complaint, the defense was not prejudiced by the failure to specify a recovery for damages under the theory of nuisance because nuisance was a central theory of recovery from the outset of the case and, therefore, the trial court erred in finding that the plaintiffs waived the issue. Baumann v. Snider, 243 Ga. App. 526, 532 S.E.2d 468 (2000).

Since the pre-trial order specified that a company's damage recovery was limited to the theory of lost profits, alternate recovery theories could not be considered, even though the theory of lost profits was too speculative to allow any recovery. SMD, L.L.P. v. City of Roswell, 252 Ga. App. 438, 555 S.E.2d 813 (2001).

Filing of pretrial memorandums by counsel for both parties did not eliminate necessity for a pretrial order pursuant to this section, since such memorandums did not resolve all of the issues which arose during the trial, and they lacked the authoritative and binding effect which only the judge's order could have, providing an advance ruling on the admissibility of certain evidence. Malcolm v. Cotton, 128 Ga. App. 699, 197 S.E.2d 760 (1973).

Pretrial order should be liberally construed to allow consideration of all questions fairly within the ambit of contested issues. Echols v. Bridges, 239 Ga. 25, 235 S.E.2d 535 (1977); Fussell v. Carl E. Jones Dev. Co., 207 Ga. App. 521, 428 S.E.2d 426 (1993).

Discretion to preclude issues. — Question of precluding issues is within discretion of the trial judge. Echols v. Bridges, 239 Ga. 25, 235 S.E.2d 535 (1977).

Testimony of witness not named in pretrial order. — Decision whether to allow a party to introduce at trial (either in the case-in-chief or in rebuttal) the testimony of a witness not named in the pretrial order is a matter within the discretion of the trial court. Nease v. Buelvas, 198 Ga. App. 302, 401 S.E.2d 320 (1991).

When, in a personal injury action, the issue of "serious injury" was not contained in the pretrial order, but the order provides that the extent of the plaintiff's injuries and damages is the sole question for determination by the jury, the "serious injury" issue is obviously a part of this general issue relating to injuries and damages, and the pretrial order and subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-16 did not prevent submission of that issue to the jury. Fleet Transp. Co. v. Holland, 166 Ga. App. 337, 304 S.E.2d 76 (1983).

Party cannot object for the first time on appeal to specification of issues contained in pretrial order. Brumby v. Brooks, 140 Ga. App. 210, 230 S.E.2d 359 (1976); Hawkins v. Richardson-Merrell, Inc., 147 Ga. App. 481, 249 S.E.2d 286 (1978).

Failure to include defense in order is waiver. — When the defendant seasonably asserted the defense of insufficient service of process in the defendant's answer, but a pretrial conference order subsequently entered after the submission of the other parties' pretrial statements made no reference to this defense, the failure to list the defense in the pretrial order as one of the issues to be resolved in the case waived the previously asserted objection. Long v. Marion, 257 Ga. 431, 360 S.E.2d 255 (1987); Rice v. Cropsey, 203 Ga. App. 272, 416 S.E.2d 786, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 907, 416 S.E.2d 786 (1992).

Pretrial order did not preclude bad faith recovery. — Jury was properly charged on bad faith as an avenue for attorney fees pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 13-6-11 as a pretrial order did not exclude bad faith as an avenue of recovery; the trial court did not err in charging the jury that the jury could award attorney fees if the defendants had acted in bad faith, had been stubbornly litigious, or had caused the client unnecessary trouble and expense. As the trial court did not err in charging on bad faith, the trial court did not compound the error or commit reversible error by charging the jury that "where a jury (was) authorized to find fraud, it (was) authorized to find bad faith." Gerschick v. Pounds, 281 Ga. App. 531, 636 S.E.2d 663 (2006), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 95 (Ga. 2007).

Addition of claim not an abuse of trial court's discretion. — In a breach of contract suit involving a construction contract, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by allowing a modification of a pretrial order to include a theory of recovery for negligent construction because the order was subject to modification to conform to the evidence that was admitted. Fields Bros. Gen. Contrs., Inc. v. Ruecksties, 288 Ga. App. 674, 655 S.E.2d 282 (2007).

Witnesses

Use of witness not listed in pretrial order. — Of itself, this section does not prohibit use of a witness not listed in the pretrial order. Ambler v. Archer, 230 Ga.

281, 196 S.E.2d 858 (1973).

On appeal, party may not argue the merits of issues excluded from consideration on the trial of the case. Hawkins v. Richardson-Merrell, Inc., 147 Ga. App. 481, 249 S.E.2d 286 (1978).

Even when pretrial order limits witnesses to those whose names are furnished to the opposite side prior to trial, the judge in exercising the judge's discretion as to the allowance of witnesses not so named should take into serious consideration whether such testimony is acceptable for purposes of rebuttal, and whether a sanction less serious than forbidding use of the witnesses should be applied. Allstate Ins. Co. v. Reynolds, 138 Ga. App. 582, 227 S.E.2d 77 (1976).

Sanction too harsh. — Refusal of court to permit counsel for caveators to will to call any witness other than themselves was too harsh a sanction to impose on account of failure of their counsel to attend second pretrial hearing or to formulate, in cooperation with opposing counsel, a pretrial order embodying a list of proposed witnesses. Ambler v. Archer, 230 Ga. 281, 196 S.E.2d 858 (1973).

PARTIES

9-11-17. Real party in interest; capacity.

(a) Real party in interest. Every action shall be prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest. An executor, an administrator, a guardian, a bailee, a trustee of an express trust, a party with whom or in whose name a contract has been made for the benefit of another, or a party authorized by statute may bring an action in his own name without joining with him the party for whose benefit the action is brought; and, when a statute so provides, an action for the use or benefit of another shall be brought in the name of the state. No action shall be dismissed on the ground that it is not prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest until a reasonable time has been allowed after objection for ratification of commencement of the action by, or joinder or substitution of, the real party in interest; and such ratification, joinder, or substitution shall have the same effect as if the action had been commenced in the name of the real party in interest.

(b) Capacity to bring or defend an action. The capacity of an individual, including one acting in a representative capacity, to bring or defend an action shall be determined by the law of this state. The capacity of a corporation to bring or defend an action shall be determined by the law under which it was organized, unless a statute of this state provides to the contrary.

(c) Infants or incompetent persons. Whenever an infant or incompetent person has a representative, such as a general guardian, committee, conservator, or other like fiduciary, the representative may bring or defend an action on behalf of the infant or incompetent person. If an infant or incompetent person does not have a duly appointed representative, he may bring an action by his next friend or by a guardian ad litem. The court shall appoint a guardian ad litem for an infant or incompetent person not otherwise represented in an action or shall make such other order as it deems proper for the protection of the infant or incompetent person. No next friend shall be permitted to receive the proceeds of any personal action, in the name and on behalf of an infant, or incompetent person, until such next friend shall have entered into a sufficient bond to the Governor, for the use of the infant and the infant's representatives, conditioned well and fully to account for and concerning such trust, which bond may be sued on by order of the court in the name of the Governor and for the use of the infant. Such bond shall be approved by the court in which the action is commenced and such approval shall be filed in such clerk's office. (Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 17; Ga. L. 1968, p. 1104, § 6; Ga. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

REAL PARTY IN INTEREST

INFANTS OR INCOMPETENT PERSONS

General Consideration

Purpose of section. — Function of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-17 is simply to protect the defendant against a subsequent action by the party actually entitled to recover. Rigdon v. Walker Sales & Serv., Inc., 161 Ga. App. 459, 288 S.E.2d 711 (1982); North Am. Life & Cas. Co. v. Riedl, 209 Ga. App. 883, 434 S.E.2d 820 (1993), rev'd on other grounds, 264 Ga. 395, 444 S.E.2d 736 (1994).

Failure to name legal entity as party. — This section does not control when there is a failure to name a legal entity as a party plaintiff. Cook v. Computer Listings, 137 Ga. App. 526, 224 S.E.2d 501 (1976).

Finding that plaintiff, a joint venture contractor, was not a legal entity did not authorize dismissal of the case. Pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-17, reasonable opportunity should have been allowed for the legal entities composing the joint venture to ratify or join the action, or for the real parties in interest to be joined or substituted in accordance with O.C.G.A. § 9-11-19. Watson/Winter Joint Venture v. Milledge, 224 Ga. App. 395, 480 S.E.2d 389 (1997).

Realignment of defendant as plaintiff. — Order of court is required under the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) to realign a defendant as a plaintiff. Thomas v. Jackson, 238 Ga. 90, 231 S.E.2d 50 (1976).

When suit is brought in name which is neither that of natural person, nor corporation, nor partnership, the suit is a mere nullity, and therefore, with no party plaintiff, there is no case in court, and consequently nothing to amend by. Mathews v. Cleveland, 159 Ga. App. 616, 284 S.E.2d 634 (1981).

Even action brought in name of improper party is amendable. El Chico Restaurants, Inc. v. Transportation Ins. Co., 235 Ga. App. 427, 509 S.E.2d 681 (1998).

Plaintiff properly allowed to remain party despite plaintiff's dissolution at time suit filed. — Court of appeals of Georgia found no merit to the appealing accountants' claim that the trial court erred when the court allowed one of its clients to remain as a party to the litigation because the plaintiff had been administratively dissolved at the time the plaintiff filed suit against the accountants as: (1) the accountants never moved to dismiss that client as a party plaintiff; (2) any issue as to their presence in the suit was not preserved for review; and (3) even if the claim was preserved, the trial court properly concluded that the Florida corporation's reinstatement related back to the time of the plaintiff corporation's dissolution nunc pro tunc. Fowler v. Atlanta Napp Deady, Inc., 283 Ga. App. 331, 641 S.E.2d 573 (2007).

Motion to dismiss when prosecution is by improper plaintiff. — When a motion to dismiss pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(b)(6) is made insofar as the motion is based on the prosecution of a suit by one not the proper party plaintiff, such a motion is to be treated like a matter in abatement in that the erring party, rather than having judgment entered against the party, is now simply precluded from proceeding with the suit until the error has been corrected by the substitution of the proper party plaintiff. Amica Mut. Ins. Co. v. Fleet Multi Fuel Corp., 178 Ga. App. 859, 344 S.E.2d 742 (1986).

Section applies to special statutory proceedings. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-17 applies to special statutory proceedings such as an appeal from the board of equalization to superior court. Spencer v. Lamar County Bd. of Tax Assessors, 202 Ga. App. 742, 415 S.E.2d 332 (1992).

When the individual members of a city board of education were purportedly parties to an action by amendment and by acknowledgment of service, a trial court's order of substitution was required to make the proper defendant, a city school district, a party substituted in their place; accordingly, the plaintiff's attempt to name the school district a defendant by mere amendment was ineffective and the school district was therefore never served as required by statute. Foskey v. Vidalia City Sch., 258 Ga. App. 298, 574 S.E.2d 367 (2002).

Institute was a real party in interest. — Trial court did not err in finding that an institute was a real party in interest in an action on a promissory note and on account because the institute provided some evidence that the institute was the real party in interest when the institute produced and authenticated the institute's statement of the debtor's account showing that the debtor owed the institute, and not any other party, the principal sum of $11,142.92, and the debtor did not provide any evidence that the account had been assigned to a specific third party. Bogart v. Wis. Inst. for Torah Study, 321 Ga. App. 492, 739 S.E.2d 465 (2013).

Real Party in Interest

Similarity to defense in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-19. — Real-party-in-interest objection is similar to the defense of failure to join an indispensable party under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-19. North Am. Life & Cas. Co. v. Riedl, 209 Ga. App. 883, 434 S.E.2d 820 (1993), rev'd on other grounds, 264 Ga. 395, 444 S.E.2d 736 (1994).

If appellant's summary judgment motion is considered as raising a real party in interest defense, the motion was properly denied. An objection on this ground may be made at any time up to and including a trial on the merits, which the appellant did in the appellant's motion in limine and motion for a directed verdict. No case, however, should be dismissed for this reason until a reasonable time has been allowed after objection for ratification of commencement of the action by, or joinder or substitution of, the real party in interest. Accordingly, if the appellant renews this objection, the trial court should consider this issue under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-43(b). Golden Pantry Food Stores, Inc. v. Lay Bros., Inc., 266 Ga. App. 645, 597 S.E.2d 659 (2004).

Time for bringing objection to party. — Real-party-in-interest objection may be made at any time up to and including a trial on the merits. Rigdon v. Walker Sales & Serv., Inc., 161 Ga. App. 459, 288 S.E.2d 711 (1982); Allman v. Hope, 200 Ga. App. 137, 407 S.E.2d 107 (1991).

Dismissal inappropriate following appointment of administrator. — Even though the plaintiff was not the administrator of the plaintiff's spouse's estate at the time the plaintiff filed the complaint, a motion to dismiss should not have been granted since the plaintiff had been appointed administrator at the time the defendants brought the motion. Gor- don v. Walker, 224 Ga. App. 861, 482 S.E.2d 489 (1997).

Action not to be brought by one with derivative interest. — This section requires that an action be brought in the name of the real party in interest, rather than by one whose right is derivative. Rose Hall, Ltd. v. Holiday Inns, Inc., 146 Ga. App. 709, 247 S.E.2d 173 (1978).

Failure to establish. — Appellees failed to present any evidence establishing their status as the current holders of an interest in the contract at issue, despite the appellant's allegation that the contract between them has since been assigned by appellees to a third party; therefore, since the appellant's objection that appellees are not the real parties in interest had yet to be addressed, the trial court erred in granting the appellees' motion for summary judgment. Sawgrass Bldrs., Inc. v. Key, 212 Ga. App. 138, 441 S.E.2d 99 (1994).

Spouse's claim that the spouse had standing as a real party in interest to bring a nuisance claim because the spouse shared an equitable interest in a mobile home park on the damaged property based on the improvements and repairs the spouse had made to the property during the time the spouse had been married to the plaintiff was rejected as no property rights were created in the assets of the marriage while the parties were still married and a trial court's ability to determine the equitable interests of spouses in real property was based on the ancillary jurisdiction the court specifically maintained in divorce actions. Reidling v. City of Gainesville, 280 Ga. App. 698, 634 S.E.2d 862 (2006).

Plaintiffs, purported members of a church's board of directors, filed suit to terminate the pastor's employment. As plaintiffs had five months' notice from the trial court that the plaintiffs had the burden to prove that the plaintiffs had the capacity to bring the suit, the plaintiffs suit was properly dismissed when the plaintiffs failed to meet the plaintiffs' burden. Victory Drive Deliverance Temple, Inc. v. Jackson, 298 Ga. App. 563, 680 S.E.2d 588 (2009).

Trial court erred in granting an assignee summary judgment in an action against a debtor to collect the amount owed on a credit card account agreement the debtor allegedly entered into with an assignor because the assignee failed to show that the assignee was entitled to file suit to recover the outstanding debt against the debtor pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-17(a); the assignee relied on the affidavit of the assignee's agent and business records custodian of its credit card accounts to show that the assignor transferred to the assignee all rights and interests to the debtor's account, but the affidavit failed to refer to or attach any written agreements that could complete the chain of assignment from the assignor to the assignee, and although the assignee contended that the debtor did not raise the assignee's failure to present a valid assignment in the trial court, the record reflected that that issue was squarely before the trial court because the assignee directly addressed the debtor's defense under § 9-11-17 in the assignee's motion for summary judgment, referring to the affidavit to show that it was the assignee. Wirth v. Cach, LLC, 300 Ga. App. 488, 685 S.E.2d 433 (2009).

Prosecution of action by assignee. — When a transfer of interest, such as an assignment, takes place prior to commencement of an action, this section controls and requires that the action shall be prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest. Employers' Liab. Assurance Corp. v. Keelin, 132 Ga. App. 459, 208 S.E.2d 328 (1974).

An assignment for valuable consideration, with notice to the debtor, imposes on the debtor an equitable and moral obligation to pay the assignee. Thus, an insurance company which had notice of an assignment of proceeds but nevertheless paid all benefits to the insureds, rather than the assignee, was liable to the assignee. Santiago v. Safeway Ins. Co., 196 Ga. App. 480, 396 S.E.2d 506, cert. denied, 196 Ga. App. 909, 396 S.E.2d 506 (1990).

Assignment not established. — Trial court erred in dismissing an employee's breach of contract complaint against an employer on the ground that the employee was not a real party in interest under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-17(a) because there was no showing that the employee assigned the employee's right, title, and interest in the parties' employment contract to a limited liability company (LLC); the employee assigned payment under the agreement to the LLC but did not assign the employee's right, title, and interest under the employment agreement, and for the contract to be enforced by the LLC, the assignment would have to be in writing. Phillips v. Selecto Sci., 308 Ga. App. 412, 707 S.E.2d 615 (2011).

Failure to name county as party. — Appellate court could not address complaints about a county when the county was not a named party to the case, and the plaintiff did not seek to join the county in the proceedings below. Strykr v. Long County Bd. of Comm'rs, 277 Ga. 624, 593 S.E.2d 348 (2004).

Foreign corporations. — Foreign corporation which has been dissolved pursuant to the law of its state of incorporation may assert a cause of action in Georgia after it has been dissolved, depending upon the governing strictures of the foreign state. Tillett Bros. Constr. Co. v. DOT, 210 Ga. App. 84, 435 S.E.2d 241 (1993).

Bankruptcy trustee real party in interest. — Bankruptcy trustee was the real party in interest regarding a tort action of the debtor regardless of the trustee's purported assignment to the debtor of the right to prosecute the action while the trustee retained legal title to it. United Techs. Corp. v. Gaines, 225 Ga. App. 191, 483 S.E.2d 357 (1997).

Trial court erred in finding that a Chapter 7 trustee was not the real party in interest in a legal malpractice action, which arose before a client's Chapter 7 bankruptcy case was commenced and was therefore property of the bankruptcy estate; on remand, the case was not to be dismissed until the client was given a reasonable amount of time to secure an abandonment by the Chapter 7 trustee or to substitute the Chapter 7 trustee as the plaintiff. Gingold v. Allen, 272 Ga. App. 653, 613 S.E.2d 173 (2005).

Receiver of a bank in receivership was the real party in interest under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-17(a) to enforce a bond insuring misconduct by the bank's employees, even though the bond was issued in the name of a bankruptcy debtor which was the parent company of the bank, since the bankruptcy trustee did not allege any harm to the debtor from the alleged misconduct of bank employees, and the bond was properly reformed to add the bank as an intended named insured. Lubin v. Cincinnati Ins. Co., No. 1:09-CV-2985-RWS, 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 133794 (N.D. Ga. Dec. 17, 2010), aff'd, 677 F.3d 1039 (11th Cir. 2012).

Section silent as to who may present order or pleading for party. — This section requires that civil actions be brought in the name of the real parties in interest, but does not touch upon the question of who may present an order or pleading to the court on behalf of one of the parties. Dixie-Land Iron & Metal Co. v. Piedmont Iron & Metal Co., 235 Ga. 503, 220 S.E.2d 130 (1975).

Subsection (a) precludes dismissal until reasonable time is allowed after objection to show the real party by ratification, joinder, or substitution, which shall have the same effect as if the action had been commenced in the name of the real party in interest. Wilson Marine Sales & Serv., Inc. v. Fireman's Funds Ins. Co., 133 Ga. App. 220, 211 S.E.2d 145 (1974).

Before trial court can dismiss, based on motion, for failure to join an indispensable party under subsection (a) of this section, a reasonable time must be allowed after hearing of the motion for joinder or substitution. Henry v. Moister, 155 Ga. App. 462, 271 S.E.2d 40 (1980).

When the plaintiff is not the real party at interest, in hearing the preliminary defense the court should make a determination under this section; if the indispensable party can be joined, the court should ordinarily permit the joinder, and should not dismiss but take such other action as may be required. Sherwood Mem. Park v. Bryan, 142 Ga. App. 664, 236 S.E.2d 903 (1977).

Appellees' claim that the administrator of the estate of a property owner's mother, as legal title holder to the devised property at the time a suit challenging the grant of a special exception was filed, was the proper party to bring the action was waived as the appellees did not move to dismiss the action on the ground, and no action was to be dismissed on the ground that it was not prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest until a reasonable time had been allowed after objection for ratification of commencement of the action by, or joinder or substitution of, the real party in interest. Hollberg v. Spalding County, 281 Ga. App. 768, 637 S.E.2d 163 (2006).

Section contemplates substitution of party, not creation of action. —

Subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-17 contemplates that an “action” must already have been commenced prior to substituting as the plaintiff therein the real party in interest. Thus, the statute envisions the substitution of the real party at interest as the plaintiff in an “action” not the initial creation of the “action” itself. Mathews v. Cleveland, 159 Ga. App. 616, 284 S.E.2d 634 (1981).

Substitution not limited to § 9-11-25 situations. — “Substitution” as used in subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-17 is not limited to those instances enumerated in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-25. Franklyn Gesner Fine Paintings, Inc. v. Ketcham, 252 Ga. 537, 314 S.E.2d 903 (1984).

Real party in interest objection is a matter in abatement and does not go to the merits of the action. Hodgskin v. Markatron, Inc., 185 Ga. App. 750, 365 S.E.2d 494 (1988).

Summary judgment improper. — Summary judgment cannot properly be granted to a defendant on the basis of a real-party-in-interest objection. Warshaw Properties v. Lackey, 170 Ga. App. 101, 316 S.E.2d 482 (1984); Georgia Dep’t of Human Resources ex rel. Holland v. Holland, 263 Ga. 885, 440 S.E.2d 9 (1994); Brian Realty Corp. v. DeKalb County, 229 Ga. App. 209, 493 S.E.2d 595 (1997).

Since a real-party-in-interest objection is a matter in abatement and does not go to the merits of an action, such an objection cannot be disposed of by means of summary judgment but is properly disposed of pursuant to a motion to dismiss. Fleming v. Caras, 170 Ga. App. 579, 317 S.E.2d 600 (1984).

Trial court erred in granting summary judgment pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 to a boat owner in an action arising from a boat/jet ski accident; although the plaintiffs were not proper parties to the action, as the plaintiffs did not own the jet ski and did not hold any valid subrogation claim, a real party in interest defense pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-17 was not a proper subject for summary judgment, and the trial court should have dismissed the action. Franco v. Cox, 265 Ga. App. 514, 594 S.E.2d 717 (2004).

Because the trial court’s order was best viewed as an order dismissing the plaintiffs’ complaint for failure to comply with the requirements of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-17, and summary judgment could not properly be granted to a defendant on the basis of a real-party-in-interest objection, absent any evidence that an exception to the final judgment rule applied, the appeal from the trial court’s order had to be dismissed. First Christ Holiness Church, Inc. v. Owens Temple First Christ Holiness Church, Inc., 282 Ga. 883, 655 S.E.2d 605 (2008).

Although an estate’s malpractice action was not initially brought by the real party in interest — the estate’s administrator — the administrator was timely substituted as the plaintiff in the action by amendment which, under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-17(a), had the same effect as if the action had been commenced by the real party in interest. Thus, the suit was not time-barred by O.C.G.A. § 9-3-71(b)’s five-year repose period, and a doctor and the health care facilities were not entitled to summary judgment. Memar v. Styblo, 293 Ga. App. 528, 667 S.E.2d 388 (2008).

Pursuant to the condominium declaration, a condominium association lacked standing to sue the defendants for damages based on defects in the construction of common areas of the condominium. But under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-17(a), the trial court erred by granting the defendants summary judgment before considering the association’s motion to substitute the individual condominium unit owners as real parties in interest. Phoenix on Peachtree Condo. Ass’n v. Phoenix on Peachtree, LLC, 294 Ga. App. 447, 669 S.E.2d 229 (2008).

Consideration of matters outside the pleadings. — When it is necessary to consider matters outside the pleadings in ruling on a motion to dismiss for failure to prosecute the action in the name of the real party in interest, this should be done under the provisions of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-43(b), relating to evidence on motions, and not by way of a motion for summary judgment under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56. Warshaw Properties v. Lackey, 170 Ga. App. 101, 316 S.E.2d 482 (1984).

When it is necessary to consider matters outside the pleadings in ruling on a motion to dismiss for failure to prosecute the action in the name of the real party-in-interest, this may be done under the provisions of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-43(b). Hodgskin v. Markatron, Inc., 185 Ga. App. 750, 365 S.E.2d 494 (1988).

Joinder of real party by appellate court. — Matter of joinder of an indispensable party or the real party in interest is so vital that an appellate court, sua sponte if necessary, may consider it, even though the point was not raised in the trial court and if the indispensable party can be joined, the court should ordinarily permit the joinder and not dismiss the action. S.D.H. Co. v. Stewart, 135 Ga. App. 505, 218 S.E.2d 268 (1975).

Loan receipt given to insurer preserves right of action in the insured, which may bring suit in the insured's own name. General Ins. Co. of Am. v. Bowers, 139 Ga. App. 416, 228 S.E.2d 348 (1976).

Standing after assigning cause to insurer. — Party plaintiff who in the course of litigation has been discovered to have assigned its cause of action pursuant to a subrogation clause in its policy of insurance to its insurer has standing to move the trial court to substitute its insurer in the case as the real party in interest. Dover Place Apts. v. A & M Plumbing & Heating Co., Inc., 176 Ga. App. 805, 338 S.E.2d 44 (1985), overruling Stacey v. Fleet Multi Fuel Corp., 166 Ga. App. 684, 305 S.E.2d 424 (1983).

Subsequently-named corporation lacked standing to appeal from orders against the previously-named corporation as that corporation was not a party to the litigation, was not granted or denied intervention pursuant to a motion to amend with leave of court, and an attempted substitution by the predecessor was more than an attempt to correct a misnomer. Degussa Wall Sys. v. Sharp, 286 Ga. App. 349, 648 S.E.2d 687 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 701 (Ga. 2007).

Assignment of lease. — Trial court erred in granting summary judgment to financing corporation after the financing corporation brought suit against the automobile dealership following the automobile dealership's lease of a vehicle to a person who later defaulted on a lease that the person had forged in the person's mother's name as the record showed that the financing corporation had assigned the lease to another entity and, thus, the other entity, and not the financing corporation, was the real party in interest who was required to file the suit. Town & Country Dodge, Inc. v. World Omni Fin. Corp., 261 Ga. App. 503, 583 S.E.2d 182 (2003).

Subrogation of insurer. — Insured who has transferred the insured's right to maintain action by execution of a full subrogation agreement prior to the time suit is brought is in no position to bring or maintain the suit. Employers' Liab. Assurance Corp. v. Keelin, 132 Ga. App. 459, 208 S.E.2d 328 (1974).

While, under the ordinary insurance contract, the insurer is subrogated to the insured's claims and can pursue an action to recover for the sums paid to the insured, the parties may render inoperative this provision of the insurance contract. When this happens, this provision of the insurance contract should not be admitted into evidence in order to prove that the insured who brings the action is not the "real party in interest." Wheels & Brakes, Inc. v. Capital Ford Truck Sales, Inc., 167 Ga. App. 532, 307 S.E.2d 13 (1983).

Party plaintiff, who in the course of litigation had been discovered to have assigned the plaintiff's cause of action pursuant to a subrogation clause in the plaintiff's policy of insurance to the plaintiff's insurer, had standing to move the trial court to substitute the plaintiff's insurer in the case as the real party in interest. West v. DOT, 176 Ga. App. 806, 338 S.E.2d 45 (1985), overruling Stacey v. Fleet Multi Fuel Corp., 166 Ga. App. 684,

Joinder of uninsured motorist insurer. — Even though an uninsured motorist insurer could not bring a subrogation action in its own name, it should have been permitted to join the action pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-17, or be joined or substituted in accordance with O.C.G.A. § 9-11-19. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Cox, 233 Ga. App. 296, 502 S.E.2d 778 (1998), aff'd, 271 Ga. 77, 515 S.E.2d 832 (1999).

Reassignment back to insured. — In an action by an insured against an insurer, the insured's previous assignment of policy benefits to a chiropractor did not require dismissal of the action on the basis that the insured was not the real party in interest if there was a valid reassignment by the chiropractor to the insured. Jones v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 228 Ga. App. 347, 491 S.E.2d 830 (1997).

Damage to condominium property. — When rights sought to be enforced were right to recover for damages to property and the right to have that property protected against continuance of a nuisance, such rights belonged to owners of the property damaged, and unincorporated condominium association, which had no right to possession of any of the property claimed to have been damaged, lacked standing to maintain an action. Equitable Life Assurance Soc'y v. Tinsley Mill Village, 249 Ga. 769, 294 S.E.2d 495 (1982).

Amenability of insurer to suit by injured party. — Absent policy provisions to the contrary, one who suffers injury is not in privity of contract with the insurer under a liability insurance policy, and cannot reach policy proceeds for payment of one's claim by an action directly against the insurer. Lee v. Petty, 133 Ga. App. 201, 210 S.E.2d 383 (1974).

Ejectment action brought in the fictitious form is subject to substitution of the real party in interest or dismissal. Roe v. Doe, 246 Ga. 138, 268 S.E.2d 901 (1980).

Action against corporation involved in merger. — When former Code 1933, § 22-1007 (see now O.C.G.A. § 14-2-1401 et seq.), relating to prosecution of claims by or against corporations involved in a merger or consolidation, applied, an action could proceed against a former corporation as if a merger had never taken place, or the surviving corporation can be substituted as a defendant. Employers' Liab. Assurance Corp. v. Keelin, 132 Ga. App. 459, 208 S.E.2d 328 (1974).

Action on contract between highway department and construction company by injured third party. — Contract between state highway department (now Department of Transportation) and construction company, by which company undertakes to provide for safety of the public during construction of a project, inures to the benefit of the public, and a member of the public injured as a result of the company's negligence may sue the company directly. Lee v. Petty, 133 Ga. App. 201, 210 S.E.2d 383 (1974).

Defendant's burden to prove facts necessary to support dismissal. — When a motor company filed a tort action against four boys and their parents for damages sustained when the boys allegedly vandalized and destroyed two vehicles while the vehicles were in the company's possession, the trial court erred in placing the burden on the company to establish the company's right to bring the action because in arguing that the company was a real party in interest, the boys and their parents had the burden of proving the facts necessary to support the judgment of dismissal. Jones Motor Co. v. Anderson, 258 Ga. App. 161, 573 S.E.2d 429 (2002).

Determination of appropriate party in landowner dispute. — Defendant objected contending that the defendant was not a proper party against whom relief could be sought because the defendant did not own the real property at issue, having transferred title to a spouse; however, the defendant's argument was without merit as the plaintiff alleged that the defendant had trespassed by intentionally damaging the sewer line on the plaintiff's property, among other things. These allegations were sufficient to show that the defendant could have been joined as a proper party if the defendant had not been so named originally. Dover v. Bowcock, 259 Ga. App. 852, 578 S.E.2d 559 (2003).

Proper plaintiff is new property owner who became “grantor”. — Former property owner lacked standing to bring an action for statutory damages and attorney fees under O.C.G.A. § 44-14-3(c) against a lender that failed to cancel the lender’s security deed on the property after receiving a payoff of the loan as the owner no longer had an interest in the property at the time that the complaint was filed and, accordingly, the owner was not the real party in interest under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-17(a); the new purchaser of the property became “the grantor” that had the capacity to prosecute the claim pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 44-14-3(a)(4). Associated Credit Union v. Pinto, 297 Ga. App. 605, 677 S.E.2d 789 (2009).

Time limit to amend complaint to name real party in interest. — Decedent’s sibling, as the purported representative of the decedent’s spouse, filed a wrongful death suit against medical providers within five years of the alleged negligent acts and, within a reasonable time after the providers objected to the sibling’s standing, filed a motion to amend the complaint to name the decedent’s spouse as the real party in interest. As the proposed amendment did not “initiate” a new claim, the medical malpractice statute of repose, O.C.G.A. § 9-3-71(b), did not prevent amendment of the complaint even though the motion to amend was filed more than five years after the alleged negligence. Rooks v. Tenet Health Sys. GB, Inc., 292 Ga. App. 477, 664 S.E.2d 861 (2008).

Infants or Incompetent Persons

Discretion in appointment of guardian ad litem. — Subsection (c) of this section intends that trial court be given discretion in appointment of a guardian ad litem. O’Neil v. Moore, 118 Ga. App. 424, 164 S.E.2d 328 (1968); Lanier v. Foster, 133 Ga. App. 149, 210 S.E.2d 326 (1974).

Guardian ad litem unnecessary absent conflicting interests. — Appointment of a guardian ad litem was not mandatory because the parent had lawful authority to act on behalf of the parent’s children in regard to their property rights, and because there was no evidence that the parent’s interests in the matters at issue were adverse to that of the children. Dee v. Sweet, 224 Ga. App. 285, 480 S.E.2d 316 (1997).

Minor’s adversary has no legitimate interest in selection of representative. — Selection of an individual to represent a minor’s interest is a matter which peculiarly lends itself to the discretion of the trial court, and is not ordinarily the type of matter in which the minor’s adversary has a legitimate interest. Lanier v. Foster, 133 Ga. App. 149, 210 S.E.2d 326 (1974).

Minor’s next friend has no authority to forfeit minor’s claim by lack of prosecution, except by leave of court. Mosley v. Lankford, 244 Ga. 409, 260 S.E.2d 322 (1979).

Protection of minor’s interest when next friend fails to appear. — It is error to dismiss with prejudice a complaint brought on behalf of a minor by the next friend, for lack of prosecution, without further hearing and determination that dismissal should be with prejudice; hence, when the minor was not represented at the call of the case, it was incumbent upon the trial court to appoint a guardian ad litem or make such other order as the court deemed proper for the protection. Mosley v. Lankford, 244 Ga. 409, 260 S.E.2d 322 (1979).

Guardian ad litem appointed for parent. — Juvenile court did not err by sua sponte evaluating a parent’s competency in a termination of parental rights proceeding as another court had already found the parent mentally incompetent and the parent’s rights were terminated based upon findings independent of that mental competency; thus, no harm was shown by the juvenile court’s failure to hold a competency hearing. As a safeguard, the juvenile court appointed a guardian ad litem for the parent. In the Interest of N. S. E., 293 Ga. App. 171, 666 S.E.2d 587 (2008).

9-11-18. Joinder of claims and remedies.

(a) Joinder of claims. A party asserting a claim to relief as an original claim, counterclaim, cross-claim, or third-party claim may join, either as independent or as alternate claims, as many claims, legal or equitable, as he has against an opposing party.

(b) Joinder of remedies; fraudulent conveyances. Whenever a claim is one heretofore cognizable only after another claim has been prosecuted to a conclusion, the two claims may be joined in a single action; but the court shall grant relief in that action only in accordance with the relative substantive rights of the parties. In particular, a plaintiff may state a claim for money and a claim to have set aside a conveyance fraudulent as to him without first having obtained a judgment establishing the claim for money. (Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 18; Ga. L. 1968, p. 1104, § 7.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Constitutional venue provisions may not be changed by the legislature or the courts, and the adoption of procedural devices for adjudicating claims of various parties in the same action does not effect a change in the venue requirements of the Constitution. Haley v. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank, 141 Ga. App. 13, 232 S.E.2d 362 (1977).

Venue for counterclaim proper. — Hospital's home court did not err in transferring the remaining counterclaim to a patient's home court for trial as the hospital consented to the patient's home court trying the patient's counterclaim against the hospital for the improper release of the patient's mental health records when the hospital invoked the jurisdiction of that court to pursue the hospital's suit against the patient for non-payment for medical services when: (1) both claims arose out of the contractual relationship between the hospital and the patient; (2) the common nexus between the claims was the mental health treatment the hospital gave to the patient; (3) the hospital sought to recover monies due for the treatment at issue in the patient's counterclaim; and (4) this commonality met the broad similarity or connectedness test, as well as the arising out of the same transaction or occurrence test used for determining whether a counterclaim was compulsory under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-13(a). Kennestone Hosp., Inc. v. Hopson, 264 Ga. App. 123, 589 S.E.2d 696 (2003).

Both legal and equitable claims may be set forth in the same complaint under the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9). Miller v. Turner, 228 Ga. 701, 187 S.E.2d 688 (1972).

Joinder of contract and tort actions permitted. — There is now no inhibition to joinder of actions ex contractu and those ex delicto. Continental Ins. Co. v. Mercer, 130 Ga. App. 339, 203 S.E.2d 297 (1973).

Joinder not mandatory. — Even though the multiple claims might be permissively joined, a party is not forced to judgment on all possible causes of action in one suit. Stapleton v. Palmore, 162 Ga. App. 525, 291 S.E.2d 445, aff'd, 250 Ga.

259, 297 S.E.2d 270 (1982); Nationwide-Penncraft, Inc. v. Royal Globe Ins. Co., 162 Ga. App. 555, 291 S.E.2d 760, cert. denied, 249 Ga. App. 687, 294 S.E.2d 529 (1982).

Clear implication of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-18 is that party asserting claim to relief is not required to join independent claims the party has against opposing party. Nationwide-Penncraft, Inc. v. Royal Globe Ins. Co., 249 Ga. 687, 294 S.E.2d 529 (1982).

As to joinder of third-party claim of secondary liability with direct damage claim against third-party defendant under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-18 and Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 18, see Cohen v. McLaughlin, 250 Ga. 661, 301 S.E.2d 37 (1983).

Joinder of direct claim by amendment of third-party complaint. — In an action against the defendant for injuries caused by an automobile collision, when the defendant brought a third-party complaint for indemnity and contribution against a brake repair shop, the defendant's claim for damages to the defendant's own car was properly joined by amendment of the third-party complaint. Shleifer v. Bridgestone-Firestone, Inc., 223 Ga. App. 256, 477 S.E.2d 405 (1996).

Impermissible to seek damages against grantee of fraudulent conveyance. — In the context of a divorce action, it is impermissible for the plaintiff to seek damages against the grantee of an alleged fraudulent conveyance by the defendant. Shah v. Shah, 270 Ga. 649, 513 S.E.2d 730 (1999).

9-11-19. Joinder of persons needed for just adjudication.

(a) Persons to be joined if feasible. A person who is subject to service of process shall be joined as a party in the action if:

(1) In his absence complete relief cannot be afforded among those who are already parties; or

(2) He claims an interest relating to the subject of the action and is so situated that the disposition of the action in his absence may:

(A) As a practical matter impair or impede his ability to protect that interest; or

(B) Leave any of the persons who are already parties subject to a substantial risk of incurring double, multiple, or otherwise inconsistent obligations by reason of his claimed interest.

If he has not been so joined, the court shall order that he be made a party. If he should join as a plaintiff but refuses to do so, he may be made a defendant or, in a proper case, an involuntary plaintiff. If the joined party objects to venue and his joinder would render the venue of the action improper, he shall be dismissed from the action.

(b) Determination by court whenever joinder not feasible. If a person, as described in paragraphs (1) and (2) of subsection (a) of this Code section, cannot be made a party, the court shall determine whether in equity and good conscience the action should proceed among the parties before it or should be dismissed, the absent person being thus regarded as indispensable. The factors to be considered by the court include:

(1) To what extent a judgment rendered in the person's absence might be prejudicial to him or to those already parties;

(2) The extent to which, by protective provisions in the judgment, by the shaping of relief, or by other measures, the prejudice can be lessened or avoided;

(3) Whether a judgment rendered in the person's absence will be adequate;

(4) Whether the plaintiff will have an adequate remedy if the action is dismissed for nonjoinder; and

(5) Whether and by whom prejudice might have been avoided or may, in the future, be avoided.

(c) Pleading reasons for nonjoinder. A pleading asserting a claim for relief shall state the names, if known to the pleader, of any persons, as described in paragraphs (1) and (2) of subsection (a) of this Code section, who are not joined and the reasons why they are not joined.

(d) Exception of class actions. This Code section shall be subject to Code Section 9-11-23. (Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 19; Ga. L. 1972, p. 689, § 7.)

ANALYSIS

REQUESTS FOR AND OBJECTIONS TO JOINDER INDISPENSABILITY

1. IN GENERAL
2. INDISPENSABLE PARTIES

JOINDER WARRANTED

General Consideration

Designation of joined parties. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-19 contemplates that the party joined should be designated as a plaintiff or a defendant. Spivey v. Rogers, 173 Ga. App. 233, 326 S.E.2d 227 (1984).

Failure to name the proper parties is an amendable defect, correctable by the parties or upon the court’s own motion. Hanson v. Wilson, 257 Ga. 5, 354 S.E.2d 126 (1987).

Failure to join indispensable parties. — Should it appear that indispensable parties were not joined, the remedy would not be dismissal but corrective action as provided by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-19. Applied Ecological Sys. v. Weskem, Inc., 212 Ga. App. 65, 441 S.E.2d 279 (1994).

Failure to join necessary parties. — Although a great aunt and great step-uncle claimed that the trial court failed to join necessary parties in a custody case, the record failed to reveal that this issue was properly presented to the trial court; therefore, this defense was waived. Wiepert v. Stover, 298 Ga. App. 683, 680 S.E.2d 707 (2009), overruled on other grounds, Artson, LLC v. Hudson, 322 Ga. App. 859, 747 S.E.2d 68 (2013) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28).

Failure to consider factors of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-19(b). — Trial court erred in dismissing a customer’s action against an organization on the ground that the customer failed to join a corporation as a party because the order did not show that the trial court considered the factors listed in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-19(b), and the corporation was doing business in the state sufficient to confer jurisdiction under O.C.G.A. § 9-10-91(1). Wright v. Safari Club Int’l, 307 Ga. App. 136, 706 S.E.2d 84 (2010).

Merger of legal identities. — Since there was a merger of the legal identity of the parties into one legal entity, a defense under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-19 was not available because there was no longer a bank to be an indispensable party or a real party in interest. NationsBank v. Tucker, 231 Ga. App. 622, 500 S.E.2d 378 (1998).

Right to elect defendant. — When complainant has right of election as to which defendants the complainant will proceed against, this section has no application. Smith v. Foster, 230 Ga. 207, 196 S.E.2d 431 (1973).

This section, which allows joinder of parties needed for just adjudication, has no application when there is a right of election as to which defendants a plaintiff will proceed against. Adcock v. First Nat’l Bank, 144 Ga. App. 394, 241 S.E.2d 289 (1977).

O.C.G.A. § 9-11-19 has no application when liability is joint and several and the plaintiff has a right of election as to which defendants a plaintiff will proceed against. Sloan v. Southern Floridabanc Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 197 Ga. App. 601, 398 S.E.2d 720 (1990).

Defendant was not estopped from asserting the improper party defense on grounds that the defendant did not comply with O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-9 and 9-11-19, since those sections, which govern the issue of legal capacity and joinder of parties, have no bearing on this matter. Benschoter v. Shapiro, 204 Ga. App. 56, 418 S.E.2d 381, cert. denied, 204 Ga. App. 921, 418 S.E.2d 381 (1992).

Defense similarity to real-party-in-interest objection. — Real-party-in-interest objection under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-17 is similar to the defense of failure to join an indispensable party under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-19. North Am. Life & Cas. Co. v. Riedl, 209 Ga. App. 883, 434 S.E.2d 820 (1993), rev'd on other grounds, 264 Ga. 395, 444 S.E.2d 736 (1994).

Section inapplicable to one not subject to court's jurisdiction. — In action at law for recovery of commissions due under contract, subsection (b) of this section had no application to an individual of another county, who was not subject to the jurisdiction of the court. Midland Nat'l Life Ins. Co. v. Emerson, 121 Ga. App. 427, 174 S.E.2d 211 (1970).

No provision to require person to maintain action. — While subsection (a) of this section permits a plaintiff, under proper circumstances, to require another person or persons to join with the plaintiff, the subsection makes no provision for a plaintiff to require another person to maintain an action vested solely in such other person, even though its maintenance might result in benefit to the plaintiff. Lawrence v. Whittle, 146 Ga. App. 686, 247 S.E.2d 212 (1978).

No obligation to assert claim. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-19 does not require a party who is joined as an indispensable party to assert a claim and submit that claim to the trial court for ruling on the merits. United Servs. Auto. Ass'n v. Millikan, 231 Ga. App. 327, 498 S.E.2d 171 (1998).

Addition of party on motion or by court. — When there has been a nonjoinder of a necessary party, such party may be added on motion of any party or by the court on the court's own initiative. Guhl v. Tuggle, 242 Ga. 412, 249 S.E.2d 219 (1978).

Joinder of uninsured motorist insurer. — Even though an uninsured motorist insurer could not bring a subrogation action in the insurer's own name, the insurer should have been permitted to join the action pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-17, or be joined or substituted in accordance with O.C.G.A. § 9-11-19. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Cox, 233 Ga. App. 296, 502 S.E.2d 778 (1998), aff'd, 271 Ga. 77, 515 S.E.2d 832 (1999).

When parties may be changed. — Parties may be dropped or added by order of court, on motion of any party, or of the court's own initiative, at any stage of the action, including appeal, and on such terms as are just. Guhl v. Tuggle, 242 Ga. 412, 249 S.E.2d 219 (1978); Zappa v. Automotive Precision Mach., Inc., 205 Ga. App. 584, 423 S.E.2d 286 (1992).

Joinder by appellate court. — Joinder of an indispensable party or real party in interest is so vital that an appellate court, sua sponte if necessary, may consider it, even though the point was not raised in the trial court; and if the indispensable party can be joined, the court should ordinarily permit joinder and not dismiss the action. S.D.H. Co. v. Stewart, 135 Ga. App. 505, 218 S.E.2d 268 (1975).

Failure to name party as cause for dismissal. — While failure to name a party might be the basis for corrective action as prescribed in this section, it is not cause for dismissal of the complaint under the grounds of failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted. Empire Banking Co. v. Martin, 133 Ga. App. 115, 210 S.E.2d 237 (1974).

Ordinarily, it is error to dismiss a complaint for failure to join an indispensable party; such party should be joined so the case can be considered on its merits. Dismuke v. Stynchcombe, 237 Ga. 420, 228 S.E.2d 817 (1976).

Tennessee Valley Authority (TVA) was an indispensable party in the landowner's action for equitable partition since the determination of where the lots began was a matter of great interest to TVA and any judgment rendered in the absence of TVA would have been inadequate and could have been prejudicial to TVA; thus, the fact that TVA was a wholly-owned corporate agency and instrumentality of the United States over which the federal district court had jurisdiction in civil actions precluded TVA from being joined and dismissal was proper. Dixon v. Cole, 277 Ga. 353, 589 S.E.2d 94 (2003).

Reasonable time to be allowed for joinder or substitution. — Before trial court can dismiss, based on motion, for failure to join an indispensable party, reasonable time must be allowed after motion is heard and before dismissal for joinder or substitution. Henry v. Moister, 155 Ga. App. 462, 271 S.E.2d 40 (1980).

Summary judgment in same order as adjudication of indispensability improper. — It is not proper for the trial court to grant summary judgment against a plaintiff for failure to join an individual as an indispensable party in the same order in which the court adjudicates that individual to be indispensable. Frady v. Irvin, 245 Ga. 307, 264 S.E.2d 866 (1980).

Motion to dismiss must be raised. — When not specifically raised, failure to name an indispensable party will not subject a claim to a motion to dismiss. Empire Banking Co. v. Martin, 133 Ga. App. 115, 210 S.E.2d 237 (1974).

Treatment of question of indispensable party on review. — When question of an indispensable party is expressly passed upon by the trial court, it will be held on review that the plaintiff had the necessary opportunity to seek the addition of such party, but in the absence of any disclosure by the record of an intent to raise or pass upon such question in the trial court, such defect will be deemed an amendable defect. Smith v. Merchants & Farmers Bank, 226 Ga. 715, 177 S.E.2d 249 (1970); King v. King, 228 Ga. 818, 188 S.E.2d 502 (1972); Gray v. Hall, 233 Ga. 244, 210 S.E.2d 766 (1974); Eder v. American Express Co., 138 Ga. App. 168, 225 S.E.2d 737 (1976); Guhl v. Tuggle, 242 Ga. 412, 249 S.E.2d 219 (1978).

Different statutes of limitation. — Joinder of causes of action having different statutes of limitation is not authorized. Stapleton v. Palmore, 162 Ga. App. 525, 291 S.E.2d 445, aff'd, 250 Ga. 259, 297 S.E.2d 270 (1982).

Joinder of separate personal injury and loss of consortium claims was properly granted by the trial court. Miller v. Crumbley, 249 Ga. App. 403, 548 S.E.2d 657 (2001).

Consolidation of wrongful death and survivors' actions. — Rule stated in Stapleton v. Palmore, 250 Ga. 259, 297 S.E.2d 270 (1982), requiring consolidation of wrongful death and survivors' actions arising out of the same accident, is limited to mandate joinder, on the defendant's motion, of all claims which derive from personal injuries sustained by a single individual. Stenger v. Grimes, 260 Ga. 838, 400 S.E.2d 318 (1991).

Joined party may contest venue. — If a motion to join is granted and a defendant-in-counterclaim is thereafter served, then the actually "joined [rather than potentially joinable] party" may contest venue by filing a motion to dismiss, which is to be treated by the trial court as a motion to transfer pursuant to Uniform Superior Court Rule 19. If venue is shown to be proper elsewhere, it would then be incumbent upon the trial court to enter an appropriate order. Such an appropriate order might sever the counterclaim for separate trial pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-42(b) and transfer only the severed counterclaim, while retaining jurisdiction and venue over the main action. McCabe v. Lundell, 199 Ga. App. 639, 405 S.E.2d 693 (1991).

Owners not indispensable parties in rezoning case. — Owners of property that was being rezoned were not indispensable parties under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-19. The owners were selling the property to the rezoning applicants, who were parties; thus, the case could be decided on the merits without prejudicing the rights of the owners. Stendahl v. Cobb County, 284 Ga. 525, 668 S.E.2d 723 (2008).

Requests for and Objections to Joinder

Defendant's duty to request joinder. — Action by spouse for loss of consortium will not be dismissed for failure to join with other spouse's prior negligence action arising out of the same occurrence when the defendant did not request joinder in the earlier action. Stapleton v. Palmore, 250 Ga. 259, 297 S.E.2d 270 (1982), cert. denied, 467 U.S. 1226, 104 S. Ct. 2679, 81 L. Ed. 2d 874 (1984).

Despite the claim by the owners of a corporation that the trial court erred in refusing to allow the owners to intervene in the case as the true owners of the property in question, because the owners never properly filed or asserted a motion to intervene, no error resulted; moreover, the owners' argument that the trial court erred in refusing to allow the owners to file the owners' motion to intervene also provided no basis for relief. Rice v. Champion Bldgs., Inc., 288 Ga. App. 597, 654 S.E.2d 390 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 326 (Ga. 2008).

Time for bringing objection. — Defense of failure to join an indispensable party may be made at any time up to and including a trial on the merits. Rigdon v. Walker Sales & Serv., Inc., 161 Ga. App. 459, 288 S.E.2d 711 (1982).

Reasonable time allowed for joinder. — Parties are entitled to a reasonable opportunity to join the indispensable party after the trial court made the court's determination that the party was indispensable. Coe v. Greenville Credit & Inv. Co., 164 Ga. App. 521, 298 S.E.2d 36 (1982).

Joinder not required. — Trial court did not err in denying a motion for joinder in that, to the extent that the addition of the principals of a real estate developer to the movant's counterclaim was sought because the principals were joint tortfeasors with the developer, no joinder was required. Chaney v. Harrison & Lynam, LLC, 308 Ga. App. 808, 708 S.E.2d 672 (2011).

Indispensability

1. In General

Test as to whether party indispensable. — There are two essential tests of an indispensable party: (1) Can relief be afforded the plaintiff without the presence of the other party? (2) Can the case be decided on its merits without prejudicing the rights of the other party? Pickett v. Paine, 230 Ga. 786, 199 S.E.2d 223 (1973).

Adequacy of judgment as primary consideration. — Primary consideration concerning joinder or nonjoinder is whether any judgment that might be rendered will be adequate in the absence of the parties sought to be joined. Peoples Bank v. North Carolina Nat'l Bank, 230 Ga. 389, 197 S.E.2d 352 (1973).

Interest in controversy. — Principles applicable to determination of whether party is merely proper or should be joined as a necessary or indispensable party are comparatively simple, and revolve around the question of interest in the controversy. North Carolina Nat'l Bank v. Peoples Bank, 127 Ga. App. 372, 193 S.E.2d 571 (1972), aff'd, 230 Ga. 389, 197 S.E.2d 352 (1973).

Co-executors of a husband's deceased parents were improperly joined in a wife's action for alimony, and the wife's reliance on the concept of complete relief as a basis for joinder was misplaced, because: (1) even if the wife were to be awarded some interest in the estate, whether the wife would have to enforce that right by litigation was entirely speculative; and (2) if further litigation were to prove necessary, the issues and subject matter of litigation attempting to force a distribution from the estate would not be the same as the issues and subject matter in the wife's present action, which involved the entitlement, as a consequence of the marriage, to support from the husband; thus, the absence of the co-executors from the present litigation would not render the relief afforded the wife partial or hollow because the wife would obtain an interest as full and complete as that presently held by the husband. Searcy v. Searcy, 280 Ga. 311, 627 S.E.2d 572 (2006).

If there are no compelling reasons for joinder of third parties, the third parties are not indispensable to the action, and it is not necessary to join the third parties as parties defendant for a just adjudication of the merits of the action between the original parties. Peoples Bank v. North Carolina Nat'l Bank, 230 Ga. 389, 197 S.E.2d 352 (1973).

Appellate court, upon remand, ordered trial court to address indispensability of party in motion to dismiss. — Although dismissal of a complaint was reversed on appeal, because the appeals court was unable to determine whether the trial court had considered the remaining ground of the motion to dismiss for failure to join an indispensable party, the trial court was ordered on remand to make the appropriate findings, if any, with regard to that ground. OFC Capital v. Schmidlein Elec., Inc., 289 Ga. App. 143, 656 S.E.2d 272 (2008).

Finding as to whether a second responsible party was necessary party in tax refund action was required. — In an assessment action under O.C.G.A. § 48-2-52, the Georgia Court of Appeals erred by concluding that because the Georgia Department of Revenue voluntarily refunded a tax payment made by a majority owner of a restaurant, the Department could not seek payment from a second responsible party as the voluntary payment doctrine applied to contracts, not tax indebtedness; it was necessary to remand the case to see if the second responsible party was a necessary party to the majority owner's refund action. Ga. Dep't of Revenue v. Moore, 294 Ga. 20, 751 S.E.2d 57 (2013).

2. Indispensable Parties

When additional defendant is essential for just adjudication among existing parties to the original suit, and the additional defendant could have been joined originally, upon proper motion the trial court should grant joinder. Smith v. Foster, 230 Ga. 207, 196 S.E.2d 431 (1973).

Dismissal for failure to add indispensable party. — Trial court erred in dismissing the siblings' action for failure to add an indispensable party pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-19(a) because the court did not engage in the analysis required pursuant to § 9-11-19; nothing in the record established that even with the siblings, who were already in the case, at least one of the three identified in the trial court's order, the spouse of a deceased sibling, a duly appointed representative of the spouse's estate, or all of the spouse's proven heirs at law, was in fact indispensable under § 9-11-19. Wilcher v. Way Acceptance Co., 316 Ga. App. 862, 730 S.E.2d 577 (2012).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by dismissing a suit for failure to join indispensable parties because the trial court could not exercise personal jurisdiction over the limited liability company members not joined, and after considering all five factors set forth in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-19(b), the trial court concluded that the case involved a dispute between all the members of the company and that the company could not be afforded complete relief in the absence of the other members. Artson, LLC v. Hudson, 322 Ga. App. 859, 747 S.E.2d 68 (2013).

Joint tortfeasors are not indispensable or necessary to an action against one of their number because their liability is both joint and several. North Carolina Nat'l Bank v. Peoples Bank, 127 Ga. App. 372, 193 S.E.2d 571 (1972), aff'd, 230 Ga. 389, 197 S.E.2d 352 (1973).

Joint tortfeasors are not indispensable parties in action against one of them because their liability is both joint and several. Freeman v. Low X-Ray Corp., 130 Ga. App. 856, 204 S.E.2d 803 (1974).

It is not required that all joint tortfeasors be joined together in an action against one, their liability being joint and several. Sheet Metal Workers Int'l Ass'n v. Carter, 144 Ga. App. 48, 240 S.E.2d 569 (1977), rev'd on other grounds, 241 Ga. 220, 244 S.E.2d 860 (1978).

When the plaintiff sued a billboard company for fraud the plaintiff's motion to join the company's president under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-19(a)(1)(A) was properly denied. If, as the plaintiff alleged, the president acted fraudulently, the president could, at most, be held liable as a joint tortfeasor with the company and thus was not an indispensable party. Merritt v. Marlin Outdoor Adver., LTD., 298 Ga. App. 87, 679 S.E.2d 97 (2009).

Persons who may be joined because of an interest in question of law or fact are proper parties, but they are not necessary or indispensable. North Carolina Nat'l Bank v. Peoples Bank, 127 Ga. App. 372, 193 S.E.2d 571 (1972), aff'd, 230 Ga. 389, 197 S.E.2d 352 (1973).

dant against which substantial relief is prayed, and the successful rezoning applicant as a party defendant. Riverhill Community Ass'n v. Cobb County Bd. of Comm'rs, 236 Ga. 856, 226 S.E.2d 54 (1976).

Successful rezoning applicant in a zoning contest is a proper, even indispensable, party, and should be joined to obtain complete relief in equity. Riverhill Community Ass'n v. Cobb County Bd. of Comm'rs, 236 Ga. 856, 226 S.E.2d 54 (1976).

Fact that suit for declaratory judgment might be maintained against zoning authority without making rezoning applicant a party does not overcome due process requirement that successful rezoning applicant be afforded notice and opportunity to be heard in a suit contesting the rezoning. Riverhill Community Ass'n v. Cobb County Bd. of Comm'rs, 236 Ga. 856, 226 S.E.2d 54 (1976).

Action to enforce zoning provision.

— County was not indispensable party to landowner's action against neighboring landowner seeking removal of two manufactured homes from commercially zoned land, plus damages; moreover, even if the county were indispensable, a court is to allow reasonable time for joinder before dismissing for nonjoinder, so the court properly denied the defendant's motion for dismissal based on failure to join the county as an indispensable party. Hall v. Trubey, 269 Ga. 197, 498 S.E.2d 258 (1998).

Assignee of interest in note. — When the holder of a note assigned the holder's entire interest therein to a third person to secure a lesser indebtedness, the assignee held full legal title to the chose in action and was the proper party to bring suit on the note; thus, the assignee's executor was an indispensable party in a suit on note brought by the assignor's trustee in bankruptcy. Henry v. Moister, 155 Ga. App. 462, 271 S.E.2d 40 (1980).

In action for breach of warranty of title brought by last grantee in chain of title against a remote grantor, it is improper to require joinder of intermediate warrantors as parties defendant or as involuntary plaintiffs. Smith v. Smith, 129 Ga. App. 618, 200 S.E.2d 504 (1973).

In a dispute between adjoining landowners over title to approximately six acres of land, the trial court properly denied the adjoining neighbors' motion to implead additional third parties, and motion to add those parties as indispensable third parties under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-19(a), because those individuals had no legal interest in the disputed property at the time the neighbors sought to add them. Pirkle v. Turner, 281 Ga. 846, 642 S.E.2d 849 (2007).

In an action by a tenant against a sublessee, the tenant's landlord should have been joined as a party with an interest relating to the subject of the action. RJV Corp. v. SuperValu, Inc., 223 Ga. App. 585, 478 S.E.2d 592 (1996).

Reformation of deed. — For purposes of this section, an action to reform a deed is a very different thing from a breach of warranty action, and in such action all who are interested adversely in the reformation should be joined as parties. Smith v. Smith, 29 Ga. App. 618, 200 S.E.2d 504 (1973).

Home-buyer was not an indispensable party in an action by the home builder seeking to enjoin a home inspector from trespassing on the builder's properties. Pope v. Pulte Home Corp., 246 Ga. App. 120, 539 S.E.2d 842 (2000).

Holder of interest in property not indispensable. — In a declaratory judgment action by a city against the owner of an undivided interest in property, and the sole occupant thereof, seeking access to the property in order to conduct a pre-condemnation survey and appraisal, a party holding an interest in the property at issue was not an indispensable party defendant. Aponte v. City of Columbus, 246 Ga. App. 646, 540 S.E.2d 617 (2000).

In action by grantee of junior security deed for surplus funds held by the defendant after exercise of the power of sale under a superior security deed, it was not reversible error for the court to deny the plaintiff judgment on the pleadings, sustain the defense that the grantor was a necessary party, and require the plaintiff to make the grantor a party to the action.

Leon Inv. Co. v. Independent Life & Accident Ins. Co., 123 Ga. App. 668, 182 S.E.2d 151 (1971).

Relief from foreclosure. — To the extent a property owner sought relief from foreclosure, the property owner was obligated to bring such claims against the security deed holder rather than the law firm that handled the foreclosure, and thus the holder was an indispensable party in any dispute concerning sums awarded during the foreclosure. McCalla, Raymer, Padrick, Cobb, Nichols & Clark v. C.I.T. Fin. Servs., Inc., 235 Ga. App. 95, 508 S.E.2d 471 (1998).

Holders of a purported security deed on property that was the subject of an action for equitable partition of real property were appropriate parties to the lawsuit. Blanton v. Duru, 247 Ga. App. 175, 543 S.E.2d 448 (2000).

Executor indispensable in suit against estate. — Executor of an estate is an indispensable party in a suit against the estate. Estate of Thurman v. Dodaro, 169 Ga. App. 531, 313 S.E.2d 722 (1984).

Distribution of estate. — Heirs at law, while the heirs might be proper parties, were not necessary or indispensable parties to an action on the distribution of a decedent's estate since there was an administrator selected under former Code 1933, § 113-1202 (see now O.C.G.A. § 53-6-24) and since there were no compelling reasons to join them as parties defendant. Davenport v. Idlett, 234 Ga. 864, 218 S.E.2d 577 (1975).

When heirs who possessed two unprobated wills sued in a dispute over land, the court had authority to determine that an executor was a party necessary for a just adjudication of the case. Morrison v. Stewart, 243 Ga. 456, 254 S.E.2d 840 (1979).

Tax commissioner is indispensable party to action challenging tax statute when, in the commissioner's absence, the remaining defendants would be subject to a substantial risk of incurring inconsistent obligations because of the commissioner's authority to enforce the challenged statute. State v. Golia, 235 Ga. 791, 222 S.E.2d 27 (1976).

Party not indispensable. — Trial court did not err in adjudicating the validity of a memorandum of agreement on the ground that a county board of tax assessors was an indispensable party to the litigation under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-19(a) because the board did not seek an interest in the action and was not so situated that the disposition of the proceeding, in its absence, could impair or impede the board's ability to protect its interest or leave any of the other parties subject to substantial risk of incurring multiple or inconsistent obligations. Sherman v. Dev. Auth., No. A12A0587, 2012 Ga. App. LEXIS 624 (July 5, 2012).

County indispensable party in case claiming improper abandonment of public road because only county had standing to challenge claim. — Because a landowner dismissed all the claims alleged against a county, a claim that the county improperly abandoned a public road due to the county's failure to comply with O.C.G.A. § 32-7-4 had also been relinquished. Moreover, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-19, the trial court properly recognized that this issue could not be justly adjudicated without the county's participation as a party because only the county had standing to challenge the landowner's claim that the road was a public road. McRae v. SSI Dev., LLC, 283 Ga. 92, 656 S.E.2d 138 (2008).

Agent of defendant insurance company was an indispensable party since the agent was the agent with whom the plaintiff dealt and was the initiating agent on all policies issued to the plaintiff. Southern Farm Bureau Life Ins. Co. v. Douglas, 193 Ga. App. 476, 388 S.E.2d 67 (1989).

In a shareholder derivative action, the trial court erred in dismissing the stockholder's complaint for failing to join the corporation as an indispensable party without allowing a reasonable time for joinder. Kilburn v. Young, 244 Ga. App. 743, 536 S.E.2d 769 (2000).

Joinder Warranted

Corporations and stockholders. — When the defendant alleged she and former husband had formed a business in which they were to be partners, a significant portion of the business capital came from her separate property and that former husband and stockholder fraudulently caused all stock to be issued in their names, the defendant was entitled to have the stockholder and corporation added as parties in order that complete relief might be afforded and the trial court's failure to add these parties was error. DeGarmo v. DeGarmo, 269 Ga. 480, 499 S.E.2d 317 (1998).

In an action for divorce pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 19-5-1, the trial court properly granted the wife's motion pursuant to O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-13(h) and 9-11-19(a)(1) to join two corporations as defendants by counterclaim because, by the husband's own design, any property that could be determined to be marital property was inextricably commingled with the property of the corporations and, thus, joinder of the corporations was proper to ensure a just division of marital assets. Gardner v. Gardner, 276 Ga. 189, 576 S.E.2d 857 (2003).

Grantor and first taker of stock not indispensable parties. — In a fraudulent conveyance action against the grantee of stock brought by a divorced wife who was awarded the stock in the divorce proceeding, the grantor, husband, and first taker, a corporation, were not indispensable parties since neither was necessary for a just adjudication of the merits of the action, and neither was required for complete relief. Halta v. Bailey, 219 Ga. App. 178, 464 S.E.2d 614 (1995).

Failure to join indispensable party is defense which may be raised by motion. Guhl v. Tuggle, 242 Ga. 412, 249 S.E.2d 219 (1978).

Joint obligors. — Joint obligor is an indispensable party to a suit based on breach of contract, and when joint obligors to a contract are not joined, the case must be dismissed. Turner Outdoor Adv., Ltd. v. Old S. Corp., 185 Ga. App. 582, 365 S.E.2d 149 (1988).

If for lack of jurisdiction, or any other reason, the joint obligor cannot be joined as a party to the action, then the trial court must determine, by considering the factors set forth in subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-19, if the necessary party is also an indispensable party without whom the action should not proceed. Turner Outdoor Adv., Ltd. v. Old S. Corp., 185 Ga. App. 582, 365 S.E.2d 149 (1988).

Cosureties who had set forth in different instruments their separate promises to pay the debt of their principal were not joint contractors or obligors, and one cosurety was not a necessary party in a creditor's action against the other cosurety to recover a debt. Floyd Davis Sales, Inc. v. Central Mtg. Corp., 197 Ga. App. 532, 398 S.E.2d 820 (1990).

Attorney could not be held solely liable to a court reporting service for $851.10, representing court reporting fees owed as the clients the attorney was representing at the time the services were rendered should have been joined in the litigation, pursuant to both O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-14(a) and 9-11-19(a), given that: (1) the clients could have been liable to the attorney for all or part of the court reporting fees; and (2) the attorney's claim that the clients made partial payment for the court reporting services also rendered the clients necessary parties for adjudication of this dispute. Free v. Lankford & Assocs., Inc., 284 Ga. App. 328, 643 S.E.2d 771 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 560 (Ga. 2007).

In action to enjoin expenditure of public funds, the entity or official appropriating the funds is an indispensable party. Peacock v. Georgia Mun. Ass'n, 247 Ga. 740, 279 S.E.2d 434 (1981).

Mother indispensable in action for wrongful death of child. — In a wrongful death action brought by a father for the death of his child, the mother was an indispensable party so that issues concerning her negligent supervision of the child could be litigated. Winding River Village Condominium Ass'n v. Barnett, 218 Ga. App. 35, 459 S.E.2d 569 (1995).

Insured parent was not an indispensable party in a declaratory judgment action by an insurer against the parent and other insureds to determine a coverage question since relief could be afforded to the current parties, dismissal would leave the insurer with uncertainty regarding its obligations to other insureds, and the parent could have avoided prejudice from nonjoinder by allowing service to be perfected. Glover v. Allstate Ins.

9-11-20. Permissive joinder of parties.

(a) Permissive joinder. All persons may join in one action as plaintiffs if they assert any right to relief jointly, severally, or in the alternative in respect of or arising out of the same transaction, occurrence, or series of transactions or occurrences and if any question of law or fact common to all of them will arise in the action. All persons may be joined in one action as defendants if there is asserted against them jointly, severally, or in the alternative any right to relief in respect of or arising out of the same transaction, occurrence, or series of transactions or occurrences and if any question of law or fact common to all of them will arise in the action. A plaintiff or defendant need not be interested in obtaining or defending against all the relief demanded. Judgment may be given for one or more of the plaintiffs according to their respective rights to relief and against one or more of the defendants according to their respective liabilities.

(b) Separate trials. The court may make such orders as will prevent a party from being embarrassed, delayed, or put to expense by the inclusion of a party against whom he asserts no claim and who asserts no claim against him and may order separate trials or make other orders to prevent delay or prejudice. (Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 20.)

Law reviews. — For comment advocating joinder of insured and insurer in the same action in Georgia, in light of Shingleton v. Bussey, 223 So. 2d 713 (Fla. 1969), see 21 Mercer L. Rev. 351 (1969).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-20 has little significance, aside from emphasizing the availability of separate trials, inasmuch as the power granted the court therein also is provided by the much broader grant of discretion set forth in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-42(b). Vitner v. Funk, 182 Ga. App. 39, 354 S.E.2d 666 (1987).

Constitutional venue provisions may not be altered or changed by the legislature or the courts; hence, adoption of procedural devices for adjudicating claims of various parties in the same action does not effect a change in the venue requirements of the Constitution. Haley v. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank, 141 Ga. App. 13, 232 S.E.2d 362 (1977).

Essentially independent claim must satisfy venue requirements. — If claim asserted against the codefendants or the third parties is essentially independent, rather than one ancillary to the main action, it must satisfy within itself the constitutional venue requirements. Southern Guar. Ins. Co. v. Johnson, 126 Ga. App. 134, 190 S.E.2d 136 (1972).

Indispensable prerequisite to joining a nonresident in an equity suit is a prayer for substantial equitable relief which is common to the resident and non-resident defendants. Madray v. Ogden, 225 Ga. 806, 171 S.E.2d 560 (1969).

Joinder is at plaintiff's option; joinder cannot be demanded as a matter of right by the defendant. North Carolina Nat'l Bank v. Peoples Bank, 127 Ga. App. 372, 193 S.E.2d 571 (1972), aff'd, 230 Ga. 389, 197 S.E.2d 352 (1973).

One is not required to join all joint tortfeasors in one suit to recover the damage sustained, and there is no right on the part of one joint tortfeasor who is sued for the joint tort to compel the plaintiff to bring in other tortfeasors. North Carolina Nat'l Bank v. Peoples Bank, 127 Ga. App. 372, 193 S.E.2d 571 (1972), aff'd, 230 Ga. 389, 197 S.E.2d 352 (1973).

Permissive joinder rule will not allow defendant tortfeasor to join joint tortfeasor without plaintiff's consent when the alleged joint tortfeasor objects to joinder. Freeman v. Low X-Ray Corp., 130 Ga. App. 856, 204 S.E.2d 803 (1974).

Joinder of successive tortfeasors not permitted. — After the plaintiff was injured in two separate motor vehicle accidents four months apart, joinder in one action of the owners of the vehicles involved was improper since the defendants were not joint, but successive tortfeasors; the two accidents were insufficiently connected to constitute a "series of occurrences" giving rise to the plaintiff's claims. Brinks, Inc. v. Robinson, 215 Ga. App. 865, 452 S.E.2d 788 (1994); Ferguson v. Carver, 257 Ga. App. 849, 572 S.E.2d 700 (2002).

Joinder of claims arising out of "similar" transactions not authorized. — Fact that evidence of a similar transaction is admissible does not authorize joinder of claims involving the similar transaction. Howard Motor Co. v. Swint, 214 Ga. App. 682, 448 S.E.2d 713 (1994).

Because the numerous claims involving the various plaintiffs did not arise out of the same transaction, occurrence, or series of transactions or occurrences, but the claims were merely similar, involving common questions of law and fact, and thus could have been consolidated in accordance with O.C.G.A. § 9-11-42(a), the trial court erred in denying the defendants' motion to sever those claims. Lincoln Elec. Co. v. Gaither, 286 Ga. App. 558, 649 S.E.2d 823 (2007).

Rule against apportionment of damages among tortfeasors. — Georgia follows common-law rule against apportionment of damages among joint and several tortfeasors, notwithstanding the language of subsection (a) of this section, except when the statute law sanctions such apportionment in cases involving trespasses. Craven v. Allen, 118 Ga. App. 462, 164 S.E.2d 358 (1968).

Joinder of tort and contract actions permitted. — There is now no inhibition to the joinder of actions ex contractu and those ex delicto. Continental Ins. Co. v. Mercer, 130 Ga. App. 339, 203 S.E.2d 297 (1973).

Fraudulent misjoinder did not occur. — In a removed action seeking a declaration by former distributors as to the enforceability of non-compete and non-solicitation provisions in their respective distributorship agreements, a non-diverse corporation was not fraudulently misjoined under Fed. R. Civ. P. 20 or O.C.G.A. § 9-11-20(a), warranting a remand pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1447, because the court could not say with certainty that its claims did not arise out of the same series of transactions. Campbell v. Quixtar, Inc., No. 2:08-CV-0045-RWS, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 46507 (N.D. Ga. June 13, 2008).

Right of defendant in action for personal injury or death to bring in a joint tort-feasor not made a party by plaintiff, 78 ALR 580; 132 ALR 1424.

May acts of independent tort-feasors, each of which alone causes or tends to produce some damage, be combined to create a joint liability, 91 ALR 759.

Intervention or subsequent joinder of parties as affecting jurisdiction of federal court based upon diversity of citizenship, 134 ALR 335.

Joinder or representation of several claimants in action against carrier or utility to recover overcharge, 1 ALR2d 160.

Joinder as defendants, in tort action based on condition of sidewalk or highway, of municipal corporation and abutting property owner or occupant, 15 ALR2d 1293.

Appealability of order with respect to motion for joinder of additional parties, 16 ALR2d 1023.

Joinder of insurer and insured under policy of compulsory indemnity or liability insurance in action by injured third person, 20 ALR2d 1097.

Necessary parties defendant to action to set aside conveyance in fraud of creditors, 24 ALR2d 395.

Right of retailer sued by consumer for breach of implied warranty of wholesomeness or fitness of food or drink, to bring in as a party defendant the wholesaler or manufacturer from whom article was procured, 24 ALR2d 913.

Necessary parties defendant to suit to prevent or remove obstruction or interference with easement of way, 28 ALR2d 409.

Joinder of cause of action for pain and suffering of decedent with cause of action for wrongful death, 35 ALR2d 1377.

Joinder, in injunction action to restrain or abate nuisance, of persons contributing thereto through separate and independent acts, 45 ALR2d 1284.

Diversity of citizenship, for purposes of federal jurisdiction, in stockholders' derivative action, 68 ALR2d 824.

Intervenor's right to disqualify judge, 92 ALR2d 1110.

Right of plaintiff suing jointly with others to separate trial or order of severance, 99 ALR2d 670.

Contribution or indemnity between joint tort-feasors on basis of relative fault, 53 ALR3d 184.

Propriety of consideration of, and disposition as to, third persons' property claims in divorce litigation, 63 ALR3d 373.

Appealability of state court order granting or denying consolidation, severance, or separate trials, 77 ALR3d 1082.

9-11-21. Misjoinder and nonjoinder of parties.

Misjoinder of parties is not ground for dismissal of an action. Parties may be dropped or added by order of the court on motion of any party or of its own initiative at any stage of the action and on such terms as are just. Any claim against a party may be severed and proceeded with separately. (Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 21.)

ANALYSIS

ADDING OR DROPPING PARTIES
MISNOMERS

General Consideration

Purpose of this section is to give relief to a plaintiff who sues too many or too few parties; the statute was not intended to correct the mistake of suing the wrong party. Lamas Co. v. Baldwin, 120 Ga. App. 149, 169 S.E.2d 638 (1969), later appeal, 140 Ga. App. 37, 230 S.E.2d 13 (1976).

Procedural nature of section. —

This section concerns misjoinder and nonjoinder of parties, and merely provides a procedural method to cure joinder errors. Freeman v. Low X-Ray Corp., 130 Ga. App. 856, 204 S.E.2d 803 (1974).

Substantive correctness of joinder is to be tested under other pertinent rules including Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 19 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-19). Freeman v.

Low X-Ray Corp., 130 Ga. App. 856, 204 S.E.2d 803 (1974).

Discretion to realign parties. — Trial court has the discretion, “at any stage of the action and on such terms as are just,” to realign the parties. Cawthon v. Waco Fire & Cas. Ins. Co., 259 Ga. 632, 386 S.E.2d 32 (1989).

Trial court did not abuse the court’s broad discretion in realigning two parties, plaintiffs in the consolidated third-party action as parties plaintiff for the purpose of allocating peremptory challenges. Naimat v. Shelbyville Bottling Co., 240 Ga. App. 693, 524 S.E.2d 749 (1999).

Trial court did not err under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-21 in realigning the parties to cause the husband, who initially filed the divorce action, to be the defendant and to cause the wife to be the plaintiff; the wife’s burden of proof was significantly heavier than the husband’s, as the wife had the burden on a claim of fraudulent transfers and on requests for alimony, adultery, and attorney’s fees, so the wife was entitled to the procedural rights of a plaintiff, such as those rights to opening and closing statements granted under O.C.G.A. § 9-10-186. Moore v. Moore, 281 Ga. 81, 635 S.E.2d 107 (2006).

Distinction between O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-21 and 9-11-42(b). — Severance under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-21 may be principally directed to the separation of claims within multicclaim litigation because of the peculiar relationship or status of parties with respect to particular claims. O.C.G.A. § 9-11-42(b), on the other hand, appears to be devoted to the convenience of adjudication, the avoidance of prejudice and the interests of expedition and economy as dictated by the characteristics and elements of proof of the claims themselves. Vitner v. Funk, 182 Ga. App. 39, 354 S.E.2d 666 (1987).

Statute makes no distinction as to parties plaintiff and parties defendant. Paine v. Thomas, 228 Ga. 519, 186 S.E.2d 737 (1972).

Substitution of parties not authorized by statute. — Substitution of a party is not authorized by provisions of Ga. L. 1969, p. 979, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A.

§ 9-11-14) regarding bringing in a third party, or by provisions of Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 21 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-21) regarding adding or dropping of parties. Nelson v. Sing Oil Co., 122 Ga. App. 19, 176 S.E.2d 227 (1970).

Improper joinder of joint tort-feasor not authorized hereunder.

— Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 21 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-21) provides no authority for a court’s order that another party be joined as a joint tort-feasor when such joinder is incorrect under Ga. L., p. 689, § 7 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-19). Freeman v. Low X-Ray Corp., 130 Ga. App. 856, 204 S.E.2d 803 (1974).

Failure to name the proper parties is an amendable defect, correctable by the parties or upon the court’s own motion. Hanson v. Wilson, 257 Ga. 5, 354 S.E.2d 126 (1987).

When the individual members of a city board of education were purportedly parties to an action by amendment and by acknowledgment of service, a trial court’s order of substitution was required to make the proper defendant, a city school district, a party substituted in their place; accordingly, the plaintiff’s attempt to name the school district a defendant by mere amendment was ineffective and the school district was therefore never served as required by statute. Foskey v. Vidalia City Sch., 258 Ga. App. 298, 574 S.E.2d 367 (2002).

New defendant must be served. — While O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15(a), in conjunction with O.C.G.A. § 9-11-21, is authority for a trial court to grant a motion to add a party to a pending action, the granting of such a motion does not dispense with the requirement that a new defendant be served. Gaskins v. A.B.C. Drug Co., 183 Ga. App. 518, 359 S.E.2d 364 (1987).

Party added for limited purposes not governed by cross-claim provisions. — When a party is added by the court for limited purposes (such as to protect certain funds) and has not been designated a plaintiff or defendant by the court, the provisions of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-13 governing cross-claims do not apply to that party. Spivey v. Rogers, 173 Ga. App. 233, 326 S.E.2d 227 (1984).

When a third-party defendant had not been served as a party to the main action, there could be no judgment entered in the main action by the trial court against the third-party defendant. Stone Mountain Aviation, Inc. v. Rollins Leasing Corp., 174 Ga. App. 35, 329 S.E.2d 247 (1985); CMT Inv. Co. v. Automated Graphics Unlimited, Inc., 175 Ga. App. 353, 333 S.E.2d 196 (1985).

Order of service in habeas corpus proceeding. — In a habeas corpus proceeding in which a father seeks to regain custody of the minor children, who had previously been awarded to the mother in a divorce action, in which the writ is directed against the mother's parents, when no service has been had on the mother, the trial judge has the authority to pass an order for service upon her. Nichols v. Love, 227 Ga. 659, 182 S.E.2d 439 (1971).

Adding or Dropping Parties

Section 9-11-15(a) in pari materia with this section. — When a party seeks to add a new party by amendment, Ga. L. 1972, p. 689, § 6 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15(a)) must be read in pari materia with Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 21 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-21), which allows dropping and adding of parties only by order of the court on motion of any party. Clover

Adding or Dropping Parties (Cont'd)

Realty Co. v. Todd, 237 Ga. 821, 229 S.E.2d 649 (1976), cert. denied, 198 Ga. App. 898, 400 S.E.2d 388 (1991); Slater v. Brigadier Homes, Inc., 198 Ga. App. 67, 400 S.E.2d 338 (1990).

Court order is required to add or drop parties under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-21, and even the liberal amendment provisions of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15 are limited by this requirement. Young v. Rider, 208 Ga. App. 147, 430 S.E.2d 117 (1993).

In a personal injury action, and by reading O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15(a) in pari materia with O.C.G.A. § 9-11-21, because a plaintiff sued two parties, but substituted only one, the partnership originally sued was not required to file an answer absent an order from the court to do so, and hence could not be found in default; as a result, the trial court correctly found a proper case was made for the default to be opened. Marwede v. EQR/Lincoln L.P., 284 Ga. App. 404, 643 S.E.2d 766 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 504 (Ga. 2007).

Subsequently-named corporation lacked standing to appeal from orders against the previously-named corporation as that corporation was not a party to the litigation, was not granted or denied intervention pursuant to a motion to amend with leave of court, and an attempted substitution by the predecessor was more than an attempt to correct a misnomer. Degussa Wall Sys. v. Sharp, 286 Ga. App. 349, 648 S.E.2d 687 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 701 (Ga. 2007).

Section inapplicable when substitutions named defendant for “John Doe.” — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-21 does not apply when the plaintiff seeks to substitute a named defendant for a “John Doe”; the applicable procedure is that set forth in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15(c), by which the trial court determines whether the amended complaint relates back to a filing within the statute of limitations. Bishop v. Farhat, 227 Ga. App. 201, 489 S.E.2d 323 (1997).

Although a borrower failed to obtain the state court’s leave before filing a third amended complaint, as required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-21, the amended complaint was not ineffective to add a non-diverse attorney and law firm, and the federal district court was able to consider the attorney and law firm in determining the existence of diversity jurisdiction for purposes of the borrower’s motion for remand under 28 U.S.C. § 1447; because the attorney and law firm were substituted for John Does named in the original complaint, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-21 did not apply; rather, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15(c), which allowed for the substitution by amendment of a John Doe without the state court’s leave applied. Peachtree/Stratford, L.P. v. Phoenix Home Life Ins. Co., No. 1:06-CV-0514-RWS, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 28840 (N.D. Ga. May 2, 2006).

Parties may be dropped or added by order of court, on motion of any party or of the court’s own initiative, at any stage of the action and on such terms as are just. This includes appeal. Guhl v. Tuggle, 242 Ga. 412, 249 S.E.2d 219 (1978); Zappa v. Automotive Precision Mach., Inc., 205 Ga. App. 584, 423 S.E.2d 286 (1992); Altama Delta Corp. v. Howell, 225 Ga. App. 78, 483 S.E.2d 127 (1997).

In order for an additional party to be added to an existing suit by amendment pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15, leave of court must first be sought and obtained pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-21. Among the factors to be considered by the trial court in determining whether to allow the amendment are whether the new party will be prejudiced thereby and whether the movant has some excuse or justification for having failed to name and serve the new party previously. Aircraft Radio Systems, Inc. v. Von Schlegell, 168 Ga. App. 109, 308 S.E.2d 211 (1983).

O.C.G.A. § 9-11-21 permits the court to add parties on the court’s own initiative, and this may be done at any stage in the proceedings. Black & White Constr. Co. v. Bolden Contractors, 187 Ga. App. 805, 371 S.E.2d 421 (1988).

Misjoinder of parties may be cured by amendment, by dropping or adding parties on motion of any party or on the court’s own motion. McCreary v. Wright, 132 Ga. App. 500, 208 S.E.2d 373 (1974).

Adding or dropping of parties requires exercise of discretion by the court. Humble Oil & Ref. Co. v. Fulcher, 128 Ga. App. 606, 197 S.E.2d 416 (1973); Cartin v. Boles, 155 Ga. App. 248, 270 S.E.2d 799 (1980).

When the court had not approved the dropping of certain defendants in a multi-party case before other defendants filed amendments to their answer asserting cross-claims against the former, the trial court erred by finding that the case had been dismissed as to the former defendants before the cross-claims were filed. Manning v. Robertson, 223 Ga. App. 139, 476 S.E.2d 889 (1996), overruling Smithloff v. Benson, 173 Ga. App. 870, 328 S.E.2d 759 (1985).

Plaintiff's attempted dismissal of one defendant was ineffective in the absence of a ruling by the trial court. Flemister v. Hopko, 230 Ga. App. 93, 495 S.E.2d 342 (1998).

Addition of party or change of status must be by leave of court. — Plaintiff may add a new party or change the status of one who is a third-party defendant by making one a party to the original complaint only by leave of court. Robinson v. Bomar, 122 Ga. App. 564, 177 S.E.2d 815 (1970), overruled on other grounds, Leggett v. Benton Bros. Drayage & Storage Co., 138 Ga. App. 761, 227 S.E.2d 397 (1976).

Plaintiff must obtain leave of court for filing an amendment seeking to make a new party defendant, and obtain an order to that effect. Pascoe Steel Corp. v. Turner County Bd. of Educ., 139 Ga. App. 87, 227 S.E.2d 887 (1976).

Trial court's denial of summary judgment to a hotel limited liability corporation (LLC) in a personal injury action by an injured patron was error as the action was originally brought against a different entity, the patron attempted to add the LLC and then dismissed that action and brought a new action after expiration of the limitations period under O.C.G.A. § 9-3-33 against the LLC based on the renewal statute pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-2-61, but the patron never sought or obtained court permission to add the LLC as a party, as required by O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-15(a) and 9-11-21; as the amendment to add the LLC was more than a correction of a misnomer because the two named defendants were separate entities,

O.C.G.A. § 9-11-10(a) was inapplicable and leave of court was required in order to add the LLC. Valdosta Hotel Props., LLC v. White, 278 Ga. App. 206, 628 S.E.2d 642 (2006).

Marketing network properly removed the distributors' action under 28 U.S.C. §§ 1332 and 1441 because the case was not removable until a first amended complaint was filed adding substantially different claims and causing the likely amount in controversy to surpass the jurisdictional amount. Thus, removal was timely under 28 U.S.C. § 1446(b), and the adding of a non-diverse distributor as plaintiff was improper without a court order pursuant to O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-15 and 9-11-21, making the matter completely diverse. Campbell v. Quixtar, Inc., No. 2:08-CV-0044-RWS, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 46567 (N.D. Ga. June 13, 2008).

Because the claimants never sought leave of court to add a former county commissioner as a party in the commissioner's individual capacity, any unilateral attempt by the claimants to amend the claimants' complaint in this regard through allegations in an appellate brief was ineffective under O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-15 and 9-11-21. Bd. of Comm'rs v. Johnson, 311 Ga. App. 867, 717 S.E.2d 272 (2011).

Trial court properly dismissed certain parties because no motion was filed pursuant to O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-15 and 9-11-21 to add the parties and no leave of court was granted to add the parties. Odion v. Varon, 312 Ga. App. 242, 718 S.E.2d 23 (2011), cert. denied, No. S12C0399, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 561 (Ga. 2012).

Trial court abuses the court's discretion to add a party if the party denies the addition of a party based on delay alone. Shiver v. Norfolk-Southern Ry., 220 Ga. App. 483, 469 S.E.2d 769 (1996).

Because no mistake as to identity was demonstrated and since neither of two defendants was added prior to the expiration of the statute of limitation for malpractice, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the motion to add parties or in denying reconsideration of that motion. Deleo v. Mid-Towne Home Infusion, Inc., 244 Ga. App. 683, 536 S.E.2d 569 (2000).

Adding or Dropping Parties (Cont'd)

Addition of party authorized. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in granting plaintiffs' eleventh-hour motion to amend and add the defendant as a party. Little Tree, Inc. v. Fields, 240 Ga. App. 12, 522 S.E.2d 509 (1999).

Addition of party not authorized. — In an injured party's direct action against an insurer, because the injured party failed to seek leave of court to add the insurer's insured as a party, and the relation back doctrine did not apply, the insurer and the insured were properly dismissed from the injured party's lawsuit. Crane v. State Farm Ins. Co., 278 Ga. App. 655, 629 S.E.2d 424, cert. denied, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 544 (2006).

In an action for declaratory judgment filed by co-administrators and another against an individual who made a claim against an estate, the co-administrators' motion to add three new defendants was properly denied. Granting the motion would result in prejudice to the potential new defendants, who were not related to the individual and who had no reason to know that the defendants would be brought in as parties to the action; moreover, the co-administrators had been aware of the three and the potential claims against those three for many months. Ellison v. Hill, 288 Ga. App. 415, 654 S.E.2d 158 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 282 (Ga. 2008).

In a suit by appellants, a company and the company's president, against a law firm, the trial court properly denied a motion to add a partner as a party defendant under O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-15(c) and 9-11-21 when the appellants claimed that the partner had violated the attorney-client privilege. Appellants did not assert that the partner ever personally represented the appellants or any related entities; accordingly, any attorney-privilege implicated in the fax would be that between the appellants and the law firm, and not between the appellants and the partner individually. Smith v. Morris, Manning & Martin, LLP, 293 Ga. App. 153, 666 S.E.2d 683 (2008).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by denying a plaintiff's motion for leave to amend the complaint to substitute parties under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-21 as the plaintiff did not offer an acceptable excuse or justification for failing to name the proper parties that would warrant the conclusion that the trial court ruled inappropriately. Riding v. Ellis, 297 Ga. App. 740, 678 S.E.2d 178 (2009).

Trial court did not err in denying a motion to substitute parties made by plaintiffs in their negligence suit against a defendant for fire damage because the plaintiffs had known of the existence and potential liability of the corporation the plaintiffs sought to add as a party for more than five years, and the statute of limitations had run. Barrs v. Acree, 302 Ga. App. 521, 691 S.E.2d 575 (2010).

Intervention distinguished. — Intervention involves not a mistake in pleading but the injection of a third person uncontrolled by the parties; should an intervenor seek to litigate issues different from those already pending between the parties, to claim additional damages, or to raise additional defenses, the ability to raise these matters would be controlled by O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-15(c) and 9-11-21. AC Corp. v. Myree, 221 Ga. App. 513, 471 S.E.2d 922 (1996).

Motion to add or drop parties must be timely; otherwise, there is no abuse of discretion to deny the motion. Cartin v. Boles, 155 Ga. App. 248, 270 S.E.2d 799 (1980).

Reasonable opportunity should be given to add any essential party in a case before that case is dismissed with prejudice for nonjoinder. Gray v. Hall, 233 Ga. 244, 210 S.E.2d 766 (1974).

Statute does not require that proposed new party be given notice of hearing to rule on motion for addition of such party. Humble Oil & Ref. Co. v. Fulcher, 128 Ga. App. 606, 197 S.E.2d 416 (1973).

Since statute of limitation had not run at the time plaintiffs filed the plaintiffs' first amendments adding a new party defendant it was within the trial court's discretion to grant later motions to amend, although filed after the statute of limitations had run, and have the amendments relate back to the date the original complaints were filed since the occurrence, conduct, or transaction in the original pleadings were the same as that set forth in the amendments; the added party would not be prejudiced in maintaining its defense on the merits; and the added party knew or should have known that the actions would have been brought against it. Bil-Jax, Inc. v. Scott, 183 Ga. App. 516, 359 S.E.2d 362, cert. denied, 183 Ga. App. 905, 359 S.E.2d 362 (1987).

Answer to amendment adding party not required. — Construing the pertinent provisions of O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-7, 9-11-8, 9-11-12, 9-11-15, and 9-11-21 in pari materia, it is clear that the Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9, authorizes the addition of parties, by order of the court, and that an “amended complaint” effecting such an addition does not require a responsive pleading, unless the trial court orders a reply thereto. Chan v. W-East Trading Corp., 199 Ga. App. 76, 403 S.E.2d 840, cert. denied, 199 Ga. App. 905, 403 S.E.2d 840 (1991).

Voluntary dismissal without prejudice. — Claim did not remain pending after the plaintiff filed a voluntary dismissal without prejudice under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41, although the party failed to move the court to drop the party pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-21. Smith v. Memorial Medical Ctr., Inc., 208 Ga. App. 26, 430 S.E.2d 57 (1993).

Minor appellants who dropped out of an action, thereby dismissing the only claims the appellants had, took a voluntary dismissal of their actions which was effective without court order pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41(a), rather than a dropping of parties requiring a court order pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-21 and thus their attempt to reinstate their actions could have been dismissed. Young v. Rider, 208 Ga. App. 147, 430 S.E.2d 117 (1993).

Plaintiff’s renewal action brought under the renewal statute, O.C.G.A. § 9-2-61(a), was timely because the six-month period was calculated not from the time the plaintiff dismissed some of the defendants, but from the date of the trial court’s order granting the voluntary dismissal without prejudice as to all but one of the defendants. Had the plaintiff dismissed all the defendants, no court order would have been required, and the voluntary dismissal would have been effective. Gresham v. Harris, 329 Ga. App. 465, 765 S.E.2d 400 (2014).

Denial of summary judgment as implicit approval of amendment. — Although personal injury plaintiff never sought leave of court to add defendants, the trial court’s denial of patron-defendant’s motion for summary judgment, made on the ground that no motion for leave to amend was filed, amounted to an implicit approval of plaintiff’s amendment. Good Ol’ Days Downtown, Inc. v. Yancey, 209 Ga. App. 696, 434 S.E.2d 740 (1993).

Dismissal of party proper after settlement with plaintiff. — When plaintiffs, a worker and his wife, sued defendants, the owner, designer, and builder of a staircase and platform which fell on the worker, for personal injuries, and intervenors, the worker’s employer and its insurer, intervened to enforce a subrogation lien, the trial court did not abuse the court’s discretion by giving the court’s approval under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-21 to the plaintiffs’ dismissals of the builder and the designer over the intervenors’ objections after the plaintiffs settled with the builder and the designer because, although O.C.G.A. § 34-9-11.1(b) gave the employer and the insurer the right to intervene to enforce a subrogation lien, the statute did not allow them to take away plaintiffs’ power to direct their own lawsuit against the defendants or to settle with one or more of the defendants. Int’l Maint. Corp. v. Inland Paper Bd. & Packaging, Inc., 256 Ga. App. 752, 569 S.E.2d 865 (2002).

Trial court did not err in not voluntarily dismissing the motorist and the passenger’s action, initially against the second possible driver and then against the first possible driver, as a motion to dismiss less than all the parties from an action, even while the case was on appeal, required that such action be done by order of the court, and the motorist and the passenger did not obtain such an order that would have made the attempted voluntary dismissals effective; accordingly, the first possible motorist and second possible motorist’s appeal of the denial of their summary judgment motion was not moot. Rosales v. Davis, 260 Ga. App. 709, 580 S.E.2d 662 (2003).

Filing of duplicate complaint not an amendment adding a party. — Trial court erred in concluding that the filing of a duplicate complaint was an amendment to add a new party requiring the purchaser to file a motion under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-21 of the Georgia Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9, because the filing was not an amendment adding the home inspector as a party to the lawsuit; the inspector was named a defendant in the original filing and, at most, the duplicate filing was a vehicle for obtaining a summons for the home inspector. Strickland v. Leake, 311 Ga. App. 298, 715 S.E.2d 676 (2011).

Misnomers

Correction of misnomer. — When the real defendant has been properly served, the plaintiff has the right to amend in order to correct a misnomer in the description of the defendant contained in the complaint; correction of a misnomer involves no substitution of parties and does not add a new and distinct party. London Iron & Metal Co. v. Logan, 133 Ga. App. 692, 212 S.E.2d 21 (1975).

Erroneous name of defendant may be amended to correct the defendant's name, even after the statute of limitations has run. London Iron & Metal Co. v. Logan, 133 Ga. App. 692, 212 S.E.2d 21 (1975).

Allowing the substitution of a corporation's correct name was not an abuse of discretion when opposing parties showed no harm to themselves. Kelley v. R S & H of N.C., Inc., 197 Ga. App. 236, 398 S.E.2d 213 (1990).

Correction of a misnomer involves no substitution of parties and does not add a new and distinct party. Abbott v. Gill, 197 Ga. App. 245, 398 S.E.2d 225 (1990).

9-11-22. Interpleader.

(a) Persons having claims against the plaintiff may be joined as defendants and required to interplead when their claims are such that the plaintiff is or may be exposed to double or multiple liability. It is not ground for objection to the joinder that the claims of the several claimants or the titles on which their claims depend do not have a common origin or are not identical but are adverse to and independent of one another or that the plaintiff avers that he is not liable in whole or in part to any or all of the claimants. A defendant exposed to similar liability may obtain such interpleader by way of cross-claim or counterclaim. This Code section supplements and does not in any way limit the joinder of parties permitted in Code Section 9-11-20.

(b) The remedy provided in this Code section is in addition to and in no way supersedes or limits the remedy of equitable interpleader provided for in Code Sections 23-3-90 through 23-3-92. (Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 22; Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 11.)

ANALYSIS

GENERAL CONSIDERATION MERIT OF CLAIMS

General Consideration

Purpose. — Only purpose of this section is to provide for the bringing in of additional parties in a law action in the one instance when there is a possibility of double liability as to a party defendant or plaintiff who is made a party to an already pending law action. Alder v. Ormond, 117 Ga. App. 600, 161 S.E.2d 435 (1968).

Purpose of this section is to bring in additional parties in an action at law in the one instance when there is a possibility of double liability as to a party plaintiff or defendant. Midland Nat'l Life Ins. Co. v. Emerson, 121 Ga. App. 427, 174 S.E.2d 211 (1970).

Technical rules no longer applicable. — Statute has broadened and liberalized rules relating to interpleader so as to render the technicalities formerly associated with the equitable remedy of a strict bill of interpleader no longer applicable to complaints tried hereunder. Algernon Blair, Inc. v. Trust Co., 224 Ga. 118, 160 S.E.2d 395 (1968); Stone v. Davis, 242 Ga. 17, 247 S.E.2d 756 (1978).

Liberal construction. — Interpleader provisions are remedial in nature and should therefore be liberally construed in order that the provisions' utilitarian purposes may be best effectuated. Algernon Blair, Inc. v. Trust Co., 224 Ga. 118, 160 S.E.2d 395 (1968).

Equitable interpleader is available as well as interpleader under former Code 1933, § 37-1503 et seq. (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-22). Interpleader actions may be instituted in this state in either strict equity practice under former Code 1933, § 37-1503 et seq. (see now O.C.G.A. § 23-3-90 et seq.) or under Ga. L. 1967, p. 266, § 11 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-22). Stone v. Davis, 242 Ga. 17, 247 S.E.2d 756 (1978).

In order to invoke remedy of interpleader, stakeholder need only show that it is or may be exposed to double or multiple liability. Kelly v. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank, 160 Ga. App. 405, 287 S.E.2d 343 (1981).

Stakeholder's good-faith fear of adverse claims determinative. — Right to interpleader should depend merely upon the stakeholder's good-faith fear of adverse claims, regardless of the merits of those claims on what the stakeholder bona fide believes the merits to be. Algernon Blair, Inc. v. Trust Co., 224 Ga. 118, 160 S.E.2d 395 (1968); Insurance Co. of N. Am. v. Citizens Bank, 225 Ga. 347, 168 S.E.2d 578 (1969); Gill v. Myrick, 228 Ga. 253, 185 S.E.2d 72 (1971); Kelly v. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank, 160 Ga. App. 405, 287 S.E.2d 343 (1981).

Summary judgment denied when claims were not adverse. — Successor trustee that brought an interpleader action against the original trustee and a broker, involving $60,000 in compensation which the original trustee was entitled to under a court order, was not entitled to summary judgment. The claims of the two interpled parties were not adverse or competing. The original trustee only claimed compensation under the court order as a trustee, not in any other capacity, while the broker only claimed a fee as a broker. Trust Co. Bank v. Citizens & S. Trust Co., 260 Ga. 124, 390 S.E.2d 589 (1990).

Use of interpleader does not affect constitutional venue provisions. — Use of interpleader does not effect a change of the provisions of the Constitution (Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. II) relating to the venue of civil cases. Kelly v. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank, 160 Ga. App. 405, 287 S.E.2d 343 (1981).

Venue in an action where there is counterclaim, cross-claim, or third-party claim for interpleader is proper only in the county of residence where one of the claimants resides. Kelly v. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank, 160 Ga. App. 405, 287 S.E.2d 343 (1981).

Extent that authorization of interpleader effects discharge from liability. — See Thompson v. Bank of S., 172 Ga. App. 579, 323 S.E.2d 877 (1984).

When claims asserted against a broker were not based on the broker's status as a mere stakeholder of the funds in question, but on the broker's allegedly improper actions in transferring such funds out of the plaintiff's account without permission, the mere fact that the broker, after creating the controversy, disclaimed any personal interest in the funds and sought to interplead the funds in the broker's possession did not relieve the broker from liability for the broker's allegedly wrongful actions in transferring the funds without permission. Glisson v. Freeman, 243 Ga. App. 92, 532 S.E.2d 442 (2000).

Appealability of order. — An order which holds that interpleader is a viable remedy and which dismisses the instigating stakeholder is not directly appealable unless the trial court clearly directs the entry of final judgment under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-54(b). Custom One-Hour Photo of

Ga., Inc. v. Citizens & S. Bank, 179 Ga. App. 70, 345 S.E.2d 147 (1986).

Motion for judgment on pleadings properly treated as motion for summary judgment. — In an interpleader action involving a dispute over the payment of health insurance benefits, the trial court properly granted the hospital's motion for a judgment on the pleadings as there was no genuine issue of fact that the hospital was owed the amount for the medical expenses at issue and the trial court found that a purported settlement agreement between the employee's counsel and the hospital for less than the full amount was unenforceable as the agreement lacked consideration. The employee agreed to waive oral argument on all motions pending before the trial court and, therefore, acquiesced in the trial court's procedure of treating the hospital's motion for judgment on the pleadings as one for summary judgment, therefore, the trial court did not err in treating the hospital's motion as such without providing formal notice or in failing to hold a hearing on that motion. Lamb v. Fulton-DeKalb Hosp. Auth., 297 Ga. App. 529, 677 S.E.2d 328 (2009).

MacGinnitie*, 294 Ga. 657, 755 S.E.2d 683 (2014).

Merit of Claims

Relative merit of claims not determinative. — In the very nature of interpleader, when the total claims presented to the stakeholder exceed the amount of the fund, some claims will be found either to be lacking in merit or to be subordinate, but the fact that this appears on the face of the stakeholder's petition should not operate to deny the stakeholder the relief the stakeholder seeks, that is, relief from the threat of vexatious multiple litigation. Algernon Blair, Inc. v. Trust Co., 224 Ga. 118, 160 S.E.2d 395 (1968); Insurance Co. of N. Am. v. Citizens Bank, 225 Ga. 347, 168 S.E.2d 578 (1969); Gill v. Myrick, 228 Ga. 253, 185 S.E.2d 72 (1971).

While the assertions of one or more of the claimants will be lacking in merit, that fact alone does not relieve a stakeholder of the substantial risk of vexatious litigation. Algernon Blair, Inc. v. Trust Co., 224 Ga. 118, 160 S.E.2d 395 (1968).

Complainant's offer to deposit disputed fund into the registry of the court and to be discharged from the litigation should not be denied merely because claim advanced by one of the claimants is weak or rests on tenuous grounds. Algernon Blair, Inc. v. Trust Co., 224 Ga. 118, 160 S.E.2d 395 (1968).

Sufficiency of a counterclaim for interpleader does not turn on whether there is any merit in the claims asserted against the stakeholder. Insurance Co. of N. Am. v. Citizens Bank, 225 Ga. 347, 168 S.E.2d 578 (1969).

Right to interpleader depends upon the stakeholder's good faith fear of adverse claims, regardless of the merits of those claims or what the stakeholder in good faith believes the merits to be; thus, a stakeholder's offer to deposit disputed funds into the registry of the court in order to be discharged from potential litigation should not be denied merely because a claimant's case is weak or rests on tenuous grounds. Gilbert v. Montlick & Assocs., P.C., 248 Ga. App. 535, 546 S.E.2d 895 (2001).

9-11-23. Class actions.

(a) One or more members of a class may sue or be sued as representative parties on behalf of all only if:

- (1) The class is so numerous that joinder of all members is impracticable;
- (2) There are questions of law or fact common to the class;
- (3) The claims or defenses of the representative parties are typical of the claims or defenses of the class; and
- (4) The representative parties will fairly and adequately protect the interests of the class.

(b) An action may be maintained as a class action if the prerequisites of subsection (a) of this Code section are satisfied, and, in addition:

- (1) The prosecution of separate actions by or against individual members of the class would create a risk of:

(A) Inconsistent or varying adjudications with respect to individual members of the class which would establish incompatible standards of conduct for the party opposing the class; or

(B) Adjudications with respect to individual members of the class which would as a practical matter be dispositive of the interests of the other members not parties to the adjudications or substantially impair or impede their ability to protect their interests;

- (2) The party opposing the class has acted or refused to act on grounds generally applicable to the class, thereby making appropriate final injunctive relief or corresponding declaratory relief with respect to the class as a whole; or

- (3) The court finds that the questions of law or fact common to the members of the class predominate over any questions affecting only individual members, and that a class action is superior to other available methods for the fair and efficient adjudication of the controversy. The matters pertinent to the findings include:

(A) The interest of members of the class in individually controlling the prosecution or defense of separate actions;

(B) The extent and nature of any litigation concerning the controversy already commenced by or against members of the class;

(C) The desirability or undesirability of concentrating the litigation of the claims in the particular forum; and

(D) The difficulties likely to be encountered in the management of a class action.

(c)(1) As soon as practicable after the commencement of an action brought as a class action, the court shall determine by order whether it is to be so maintained. An order under this subsection may be conditional, and may be altered or amended before the decision on the merits.

(2) In any class action maintained under paragraph (3) of subsection (b) of this Code section, the court shall direct to the members of the class the best notice practicable under the circumstances, including individual notice to all members who can be identified through reasonable effort. The notice shall advise each member that:

(A) The court will exclude the member from the class if the member so requests by a specified date;

(B) The judgment, whether favorable or not, will include all members who do not request exclusion; and

(C) Any member who does not request exclusion may, if the member desires, enter an appearance through counsel.

(3) The judgment in an action maintained as a class action under paragraph (1) or (2) of subsection (b) of this Code section, whether or not favorable to the class, shall include and describe those whom the court finds to be members of the class. The judgment in an action maintained as a class action under paragraph (3) of subsection (b) of this Code section, whether or not favorable to the class, shall include and specify or describe those to whom the notice provided in paragraph (2) of subsection (b) of this Code section was directed, and who have not requested exclusion, and whom the court finds to be members of the class.

(4) When appropriate:

(A) An action may be brought or maintained as a class action with respect to particular issues; or

(B) A class may be divided into subclasses and each subclass treated as a class, and the provisions of this rule shall then be construed and applied accordingly.

(d) In the conduct of actions to which this rule applies, the court may make appropriate orders:

(1) Determining the course of proceedings or prescribing measures to prevent undue repetition or complication in the presentation of evidence or argument;

(2) Requiring, for the protection of the members of the class or otherwise for the fair conduct of the action, that notice be given in such manner as the court may direct to some or all of the members of any step in the action, or of the proposed extent of the judgment, or of the opportunity of members to signify whether they consider the representation fair and adequate, to intervene and present claims or defenses, or otherwise to come into the action;

(3) Imposing conditions on the representative parties or on intervenors; and

(4) Requiring that the pleadings be amended to eliminate therefrom allegations as to representation of absent persons, and that the action proceed accordingly.

The orders may be combined with other orders, and may be altered or amended by the court as may be desirable from time to time.

(e) A class action shall not be dismissed or compromised without the approval of the court, and notice of the proposed dismissal or compromise shall be given to all members of the class in such manner as the court directs.

(f)(1) After the commencement of an action in which claims or defenses are purported to be asserted on behalf of or against a class, the court shall hold a conference among all named parties to the action for the purpose of establishing a schedule for any discovery germane to the issue of whether the requested class should or should not be certified. At this conference, the court shall set a date for a hearing on the issue of class certification. Except for good cause shown, such hearing may not be set sooner than 90 days nor later than 180 days after the date on which the court issues its scheduling order pursuant to the conference. If evidence is presented by affidavit, the parties shall have an opportunity to cross-examine affiants as to such testimony offered by affidavit.

(2) Except for good cause shown, the court shall stay all discovery directed solely to the merits of the claims or defenses in the action until the court has issued its written decision regarding certification of the class.

(3) When deciding whether a requested class is to be certified, the court shall enter a written order addressing whether the factors required by this Code section for certification of a class have been met and specifying the findings of fact and conclusions of law on which the court has based its decision with regard to whether each such factor has been established. In so doing, the court may treat a factor as having been established if all parties to the action have so stipulated on the record.

(4) Nothing in this Code section shall affect, or be construed to affect, any provision of Code Section 9-11-12 or Code Section 9-11-56.

(g) A court's order certifying a class or refusing to certify a class shall be appealable in the same manner as a final order to the appellate court which would otherwise have jurisdiction over the appeal from a final order in the action. The appellate courts shall expedite resolution of any appeals taken under this Code section. Such appeal may only be filed within 30 days of the order certifying or refusing to certify the class. During the pendency of any such appeal, the action in the trial court shall be stayed in all respects. (Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 23; Ga. L. 1989, p. 946, § 75; Ga. L. 1996, p. 1203, § 1; Ga. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

 REPRESENTATION AND CERTIFICATION
 SECONDARY ACTION BY SHAREHOLDERS
 DISMISSAL OR COMPROMISE

General Consideration

Construed with other statutes. — Fact that class actions were authorized for identity fraud claims under O.C.G.A. § 16-9-130(a) did not obviate the need to comply with the requirements of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-23(b), such that class certification was properly denied in a former employee's suit alleging identity fraud and other matters due to the former employer's submission of subagent license applications without employee authorization; individualized issues regarding employee signatures and authorizations predominated over common issues. Perez v. Atlanta Check Cashers, Inc., 302 Ga. App. 864, 692 S.E.2d 670 (2010).

Applicability to federal Class Action Fairness Act of 2005. — Remand was required because a customer sought certification under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-23(b)(2) of a class of Georgia customers of a bank that purchased benefits for which the customers were ineligible. Thus, the bank failed to meet the bank's burden under the Class Action Fairness Act of 2005 and 28 U.S.C. §§ 1332(d) and 1446 to show the amount in controversy satisfied the jurisdictional requirements, and there was no other basis for jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. § 1453. Thomas v. Bank of Am. Corp., No. 3:08-CV-68 (CDL), 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5404 (M.D. Ga. Jan. 12, 2009), aff'd, 570 F.3d 1280 (11th Cir. 2009).

Class actions at law or in equity. — Statute provides for class actions when the statute's requirements are met either at law or in equity depending upon the type of relief sought. Herring v. Ferrell, 234 Ga. 620, 216 S.E.2d 862 (1975).

Georgia insured, who had been specifically excluded from an Alabama class action, lacked standing to challenge the Alabama settlement, either in an individual capacity or a representative capacity; an injunction that was granted at the insured's request was invalid as the insured lacked a legal right to relief and the insurers could not be held in contempt for violating the injunction. Am. Med. Sec., Inc. v. Parker, 279 Ga. 201, 612 S.E.2d 261 (2005).

Particularity required in specification of parties injured. — When, in an action brought by the plaintiffs for themselves and other condominium unit owners against the developers, contractors, and architects for the project, the trial court was faced with a failure of plaintiffs' counsel to obey an order of the court to furnish sufficient particularity in pleading in order to allow the court to determine if only particular unit owners were injured, how those owners were injured, and to what apparent extent were those owners injured, or whether indeed an entire class had suffered damages of a determinable and specific nature, the trial court was warranted in concluding that the pleaders could prove no set of facts in support of the pleaders' claim either as a class or as individuals which would entitle the pleaders to relief. Graham v. Development Specialists, Inc., 180 Ga. App. 758, 350 S.E.2d 294 (1986).

Trial court erred in denying class certification to a facsimile machine owner who alleged a violation of the Telephone Consumer Protection Act, 47 U.S.C. § 227, in the transmission of an unsolicited advertisement since the potential class included 73,500 members. Hammond v. Carnett's, Inc., 266 Ga. App. 242, 596 S.E.2d 729 (2004).

Court's discretion in determining common issues among parties. — Trial court's decision that the landowners would not share common issues with other putative class members who voted for the amendment or did not protest the transfer fee at closing, and that litigation of the claims of other proposed class members would involve other issues not relevant to the landowners' claim, was within the trial court's discretion. Duffy v. Landings Ass'n, 254 Ga. App. 506, 563 S.E.2d 174 (2002).

Judgment failed to describe class members. — In a class action litigation by a facsimile recipient against the sender, the trial court judgment in favor of the recipient did not comply with the statutory requirements because the judgment did not describe the members of the class; recipients who were excluded from the class had to be determined and excluded. Am. Home Servs. v. A Fast Sign Co., 322 Ga. App. 791, 747 S.E.2d 205 (2013).

Court's failure to specify conditions met. — Despite the fact that it appeared from the record that a group of landowners raised several issues of fact common to all to support a nuisance claim, the trial court's order of certification was vacated, as the court failed to specify, either orally or in writing, whether each of the five prerequisites under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-23 was presented. Griffin Indus., Inc. v. Green, 280 Ga. App. 858, 635 S.E.2d 231 (2006).

Reliance on deposition excerpts in considering class certification motion proper. — In considering a motion for class certification, the trial court did not err in relying upon excerpts of deposition testimony attached to the motion; after asking the plaintiff to file the depositions, the defendant had not objected below to the plaintiff's failure to do so and had made no further effort to have them added to the record before the trial court issued the certification order, and case law specifically allowed a trial court to rely on deposition excerpts filed by a party in support of a motion. Village Auto Ins. Co. v. Rush, 286 Ga. App. 688, 649 S.E.2d 862 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 72 (Ga. 2008).

Fraud. — If fraud based upon oral misrepresentations, as opposed to written misrepresentations, is the gravamen of the complaint, the matter is not appropriate for class action treatment. This is so because of the necessity for individual proof of detrimental reliance. Stevens v. Thomas, 257 Ga. 645, 361 S.E.2d 800 (1987).

Addition of intervenor plaintiffs after entry of default judgment. — In a class action, when discovery of all persons in the class is required to be made of defendant and discovery is unduly delayed by failure of the defendant to comply with an order of the court, addition to intervenor plaintiffs, after imposition of authorized sanction of default judgment, is authorized in the discretion of the trial court. Sta-Power Indus., Inc. v. Avant, 134 Ga. App. 952, 216 S.E.2d 897 (1975).

Jurisdiction of appeals in class actions brought pursuant to this section is to be determined by the nature of the relief sought and the questions raised on appeal. Herring v. Ferrell, 234 Ga. 620, 216 S.E.2d 862 (1975).

Exhaustion of administrative remedies. — In a tax refund class action under O.C.G.A. § 48-5-380, the named attorneys satisfied the administrative exhaustion requirement for an entire class of attorneys; the named attorneys acted for the entire class pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 9-11-23 by giving the City of Atlanta notice of the tax constitutionality claim by filing administrative and civil actions, and permitting recovery only to those attorneys with the foresight to have demanded a refund was untenable in a case such as the instant one that involved a matter of constitutional import and an unconstitutional ordinance that had been relied upon to improperly collect taxes. Barnes v. City of Atlanta, 281 Ga. 256, 637 S.E.2d 4 (2006).

Actions to validate and confirm hospital revenue anticipation certificates. — Statutory right, created in O.C.G.A. § 31-7-81(b), of private citizens to intervene in actions to validate and confirm hospital revenue anticipation certificates does not create a statutory class action. Cheely v. State, 165 Ga. App. 755, 302 S.E.2d 435 (1983).

Attorney fees. — Because the delay in giving the opt-out notice in the class action tax refund case was not prohibited by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-23 and did not prejudice the attorneys who were class members, requiring the attorneys to pay for the work of class counsel for the common benefit did not unduly burden the right to opt out. Barnes v. City of Atlanta, 281 Ga.

Challenge to certification order untimely. — Any challenge to the trial court's certification order was barred as untimely because, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-23(g), if a private water system owner believed the order certifying the class was legally deficient, the owner had to file a separate appeal within 30 days after that order was entered; the owner could not wait until after entry of final judgment in the underlying case to raise such a challenge. Jones v. Forest Lake Vill. Homeowners Ass'n, 304 Ga. App. 495, 696 S.E.2d 453 (2010).

Appellate review. — As a trial court certified a class of area residents who were evacuated after an accidental chemical release upon finding that the requirements of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-23(a) and (b)(3) were satisfied, rather than based upon a letter agreement regarding certification that the parties had previously entered into, review of the agreement was not warranted on appeal. Brenntag Mid South, Inc. v. Smart, 308 Ga. App. 899, 710 S.E.2d 569 (2011).

Representation and Certification

Factors as to certification. — Factors which the trial court must take into account in determining whether to certify a class action include: the number of class members; the financial ability of the plaintiff; and whether individual questions of law or fact as between the defendant and the individual class plaintiffs would yet predominate. Ford Motor Credit Co. v. London, 175 Ga. App. 33, 332 S.E.2d 345 (1985).

Class action is inappropriate when the resolution of individual questions plays too integral a part in the determination of liability, such as a suit on behalf of hospital patients to recover damages for the hospital's alleged failure to refund overpayments made by the patients for medical expenses incurred at the hospital, since resolution would be made only by examining each patient's account. Winfrey v. Southwest Community Hosp., 184 Ga. App. 383, 361 S.E.2d 522, cert. denied, 184 Ga. App. 911, 361 S.E.2d 522 (1987).

Trial court abused the court's discretion in certifying a class without holding a hearing on a motion requesting a hearing as the court failed to comply with O.C.G.A. § 9-11-23, requiring the court to make findings of fact and conclusions of law that the prerequisites supporting class certification were met. McDonald Oil Co. v. Cianocchi, 285 Ga. App. 829, 648 S.E.2d 154 (2007).

Because the trial court erred in finding that the requirements of class certification under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-23 were moot, concluding that there was no merit to the action, the finding was reversed; further, the case was remanded based on the court's failure to satisfy the specific provisions of § 9-11-23(f)(3) and due to an improper reference to a pending motion for attorney fees under O.C.G.A. § 9-15-14 and unspecified potential conflicts of interest. Gay v. B. H. Transfer Co., 287 Ga. App. 610, 652 S.E.2d 200 (2007).

In a suit challenging private probation services, the trial court's orders conditionally certifying class actions on behalf of misdemeanor probationers were reversed and the cases remanded to the trial court for reconsideration of the class certification issues in light of the Georgia Supreme Court's opinion and its requirement that the trial court carefully consider issues of justiciability with respect to the scope of any class certified and the relief available to potential class members. Sentinel Offender Services, LLC v. Glover, 296 Ga. 315, 766 S.E.2d 456 (2014).

Former paragraph (a)(1) merely stated the rule of procedure that a class action may be brought when the right sought to be enforced is secondary; whether such a derivative right exists is a matter of substantive law. Backus v. Chilivis, 236 Ga. 500, 224 S.E.2d 370 (1976).

First issue is not merits of claim. — In determining propriety of a class action, first issue to be resolved is not whether plaintiffs have stated a cause of action or may ultimately prevail on the merits, but whether requirements of this section have been met. Sta-Power Indus., Inc. v. Avant, 134 Ga. App. 952, 216 S.E.2d 897 (1975); IBM v. Kemp, 244 Ga. App. 638, 536 S.E.2d 303 (2000).

Common character of right to be enforced. — Class action may be filed when character of right to be enforced is common, even though such right is neither joint, nor derivative, nor several and the object of the litigation is not the adjudication of claims which do or may affect specific property involved in the action. Burnham v. Department of Pub. Health, 349 F. Supp. 1335 (N.D. Ga. 1972), rev'd on other grounds, 503 F.2d 1319 (5th Cir. 1974), cert. denied, 422 U.S. 1057, 95 S. Ct. 2680, 45 L. Ed. 2d 709 (1975).

Common questions involved and common relief sought. — Statute permits class actions when the rights of the alleged class are not derivative or joint rights, but are merely common in that there are common questions of law or fact involved and common relief is sought. Georgia Inv. Co. v. Norman, 229 Ga. 160, 190 S.E.2d 48 (1972).

When common questions of law and fact predominate, action is on behalf of purchasers from a common source, and common relief is sought, a class action is authorized. Sta-Power Indus., Inc. v. Avant, 134 Ga. App. 952, 216 S.E.2d 897 (1975).

Trial court properly certified a class consisting of all similarly situated bankrupt mortgagors who had been assessed inspection and attorney fees by a mortgagee without prior notice or approval by the bankruptcy court. Common questions of law—whether the mortgagee's security agreements gave it the right to engage in the conduct at issue—predominated over individual questions, the class members were similarly situated, and the members' claims were typical as the plaintiff mortgagor alleged that the mortgagee's conduct constituted breach of contract, fraud, theft, and conversion. Liberty Lending Servs. v. Canada, 293 Ga. App. 731, 668 S.E.2d 3 (2008).

Common facts make class certification possible. — Appellate court found that class certification was proper because common issues predominated over individual issues since the operation of a computer program concerning post-mortem interest was a common fact applicable to the entire class. UNUM Life Ins. Co. of Am. v. Crutchfield, 256 Ga. App. 582, 568 S.E.2d 767 (2002).

Trial court properly certified a group of faculty members, who were under contract, suing over the arbitrariness of the Board of Regents' differing classification of similar faculty, when there were common factual circumstances, legal issues, and factors relevant to each class member's damage claim. Bd. of Regents of the Univ. Sys. v. Rux, 260 Ga. App. 760, 580 S.E.2d 559 (2003).

As the trial court found on an undisputed record that every insurance policy issued by an insurer to a class of insureds in its credit insurance policies provided that the insurer would return the unearned premium if the debt was paid off before the policy period expired, an individual insured's claim for premiums, and the like claims of the represented class, were one and the same, and the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in finding that the proposed class met the typicality requirement. J.M.I.C. Life Ins. Co. v. Toole, 280 Ga. App. 372, 634 S.E.2d 123 (2006).

Commonality requirement met. — In an action filed under the Telephone Consumer Protection Act of 1991, specifically 47 U.S.C. § 227, when the proposed class explicitly excluded all parties with whom an advertiser had any records or knowledge of having an “established business relationship,” and in addition should the advertiser obtain records or knowledge of having an established business relationship with additional parties, the trial court explicitly noted that the court retained the right to modify or amend the class; thus, the trial court did not abuse the court’s discretion in rejecting a claim that the proposed certified class failed to satisfy the commonality requirement under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-23(a)(2). Am. Home Servs. v. A Fast Sign Co., 287 Ga. App. 161, 651 S.E.2d 119 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 825 (Ga. 2007).

In a suit brought by various insureds, alleging that an insurance company and the company’s related entities engaged in fraud with regard to allegedly fraudulently representing that the insureds were being provided group medical insurance coverage, the trial court did not abuse the court’s discretion by certifying the insureds as a class as the reliance of the insureds was based on a uniform renewal document all received, which satisfied the commonality requirement, and differing defenses that they may have did not defeat certification since common questions of law predominated. The reviewing court was satisfied that the trial court exercised the court’s discretion in ruling that the computation of individual damages would not be so complex or fact-specific so as to bar certification. Fortis Ins. Co. v. Kahn, 299 Ga. App. 319, 683 S.E.2d 4 (2009), cert. denied, No. S09C1992, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 48 (Ga. 2010).

Property owners filed a class action alleging that a county had improperly recalculated property taxes without affording taxpayers the notice required by O.C.G.A. § 48-5-306 and the opportunity to appeal as provided in O.C.G.A. § 48-5-311. Since the class of taxpayers was certified solely to consider a common procedural issue—whether the county had to provide class members with statutory notice of and the right to appeal the recalculations—the trial court properly found commonality under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-23(a)(2). Fulton County Bd. of Tax Assessors v. Marani, 299 Ga. App. 580, 683 S.E.2d 136 (2009), cert. denied, No. S09C2072, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 18 (Ga. 2010).

Commonality requirement not met.

— Trial court’s grant of class certification was not authorized since the court erred by determining that New York law applied to the fraud and contract claims of all potential class members. IBM v. Kemp, 244 Ga. App. 638, 536 S.E.2d 303 (2000).

Trial court did not err in denying a motion for class certification relying on the ground that the commonality requirement of Georgia’s class action statute, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-23, had not been met; federal regulations regarding the Telephone Consumer Protection Act, 47 U.S.C. § 227 (TCPA), allowed unsolicited faxes to be sent to a person or entity without violating the TCPA if the sender and the person or entity had an “established business relationship,” but the proposed class representative did not meet the representative’s burden of showing how many proposed class members qualified under that exception. Carnett’s, Inc. v. Hammond, 279 Ga. 125, 610 S.E.2d 529 (2005).

Trial court abused the court’s discretion in granting class certification to an insured in a breach of contract and fraud action against an insurer as the common questions of law and fact did not predominate over the class members’ individual questions, the insured’s claims were not typical of other members, and the insured was not an adequate representative; the other class members had different types of coverage and in different locations, which made each claim unique as to the individual facts and circumstances for purposes of the statutory requirements under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-23(a). Life Ins. Co. v. Meeks, 274 Ga. App. 212, 617 S.E.2d 179 (2005).

Trial court did not abuse the court’s discretion in determining that an alleged class representative’s claims were not suitable for class certification as individual fact issues predominated over any common issues shared by the putative class. R.S.W. v. Emory Healthcare, Inc., 290 Ga. App. 284, 659 S.E.2d 680 (2008).

Trial court did not err in denying a homeowner’s motion for class certification in the homeowner's action seeking a declaratory judgment that adjacent lot owners had an irrevocable easement or implied covenant in a golf club's golf course and an injunction restricting the use of the property to golf course purposes only because there was evidence that a homeowner failed to show commonality, i.e., questions of law and fact common to the class members, as required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-23(a)(2); the trial court was authorized to find that resolution of the issues would require individual determinations and an analysis of the representations made to each homeowner and the extent to which each homeowner relied upon the representations because the lots purchased by the prospective class members were not developed and sold in a single, comprehensive subdivision but arose out of multiple projects by different developers and resulted in different subdivisions with separate sections, and different realtors had been involved in the subdivision sales. Peck v. Lanier Golf Club, Inc., 304 Ga. App. 868, 697 S.E.2d 922 (2010).

Trial court abused the court's discretion in granting a motion for class certification because many individual suits would be necessary even if the one or two common issues were resolved class-wide; the qualitative analysis necessary to show liability for injuries such as loss of consortium, anxiety, and emotional distress demonstrated that common questions vital to proving causation had to be answered on a highly individualized basis, and proving causation for claims based on injuries such as anxiety, loss of consortium, and emotional distress was inherently specific to the individuals affected. Doctors Hosp. Surgery Ctr., LP v. Webb, 307 Ga. App. 44, 704 S.E.2d 185 (2010).

Because proof in the customers' misrepresentation action against a funeral home would require an inquiry of every class member to determine whether the members were told that an obituary fee included a logo charge and/or whether the class would have declined to include the logo if given such information, the proposed class failed to meet the commonality requirement of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-23(a)(2) for certification. Ardis v. Fairhaven Funeral Home & Crematory,

Inc., 312 Ga. App. 482, 718 S.E.2d 843 (2011).

Trial court erred in finding that a customer and the proposed class shared common questions of law and fact and that the customer was a sufficiently typical representative of that class under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-23(a)(2) and (a)(3) because the customer did not suffer any actual financial or physical injury as a result of a pharmacy's sale of the customer's medication information to another pharmacy; there was no evidence of any "public" disclosure of the customer's data, and such cases were bound to turn on individual rather than common questions. Rite Aid of Ga., Inc. v. Peacock, 315 Ga. App. 573, 726 S.E.2d 577 (2012).

Minor variations in amount of damages or location within state does not destroy class when legal issues are common. Sta-Power Indus., Inc. v. Avant, 134 Ga. App. 952, 216 S.E.2d 897 (1975).

Denial of certification when individual questions predominate. — Although class actions are permissible when the right sought to be enforced is "common" to the members of the class, albeit neither joint, nor derivative, nor one affecting specific property, the trial court may deny certification when granted a common right, individual questions of law or fact as between the defendant and individual class plaintiffs would yet predominate. Hill v. General Fin. Corp., 144 Ga. App. 434, 241 S.E.2d 282 (1977).

Because individual factual issues predominated over issues common to all class members, it was error to grant class certification as to damages to customers claiming that companies had improperly provided termite inspections. The action would require individualized inquiries as to what inspectors did at particular properties, whether individual customer signatures were forged, and whether individual customers had met affirmative contractual duties; furthermore, resolution of the class representatives' claims would not necessarily prove one or more elements of the other class members' claims. Rollins, Inc. v. Warren, 288 Ga. App. 184, 653 S.E.2d 794 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 216 (Ga. 2008).

Trial court properly denied class certification requested by a plaintiff in a suit asserting breach of contract and other claims involving the purchase of a truck that was equipped with a base radiator instead of an upgrade version because the plaintiff failed to establish even one of the factors required of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-23(f)(3) in that there were too many individual issues existing for each purported class member with regard to each purchase made. Individual issues existed as to whether a purported class member actually paid for an upgraded radiator not received; whether each class member gave the defendant, the manufacturer, a reasonable opportunity to repair the defect; and whether injury was caused by such a defect. Roland v. Ford Motor Co., 288 Ga. App. 625, 655 S.E.2d 259 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 270 (Ga. 2008).

Class certification under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-23(b)(3) was properly denied in a former employee's suit alleging that the former employer submitted subagent license applications without employee authorization because individual issues regarding whether employee signatures were forged and whether employee authorizations were obtained predominated over common issues. Perez v. Atlanta Check Cashers, Inc., 302 Ga. App. 864, 692 S.E.2d 670 (2010).

Cases involving franchises have been approved as class actions when the same licensing agreement was used. Sta-Power Indus., Inc. v. Avant, 134 Ga. App. 952, 216 S.E.2d 897 (1975).

Actions on behalf of defrauded securities purchasers present a particularly desirable situation for a class action. Sta-Power Indus., Inc. v. Avant, 134 Ga. App. 952, 216 S.E.2d 897 (1975).

Class action on behalf of purchasers of securities, alleged to have been defrauded by a common course of dealing on the part of the defendants, satisfies requisites of the statute. Sta-Power Indus., Inc. v. Avant, 134 Ga. App. 952, 216 S.E.2d 897 (1975).

Purchasers of unregistered securities were properly certified as a class even though the purchasers asserted causes of action based on fraud in addition to those based on violations of securities laws. Trend Star Continental, Ltd. v. Branham, 220 Ga. App. 781, 469 S.E.2d 750 (1996).

Discretion of trial judge in certifying or refusing to certify a class action is to be respected upon appeal in all cases when not abused. Hill v. General Fin. Corp., 144 Ga. App. 434, 241 S.E.2d 282 (1977).

Whether to allow a case to proceed as a class action in Georgia is a matter of discretion with the trial judge. Ford Motor Credit Co. v. London, 175 Ga. App. 33, 332 S.E.2d 345 (1985).

Refusal to certify not grounds for dismissal of complaint. — Determination by court that action brought as a class action should not be so maintained did not afford a basis for dismissing the complaint, but rather, would mean that the action would be stripped of its character as a class action and would proceed as a nonclass action. Dillingham v. Doctors Clinic, 138 Ga. App. 41, 225 S.E.2d 500 (1976).

Refusal to certify proper when no motion filed. — Trial court does not abuse the court's discretion in failing to certify, as a class action, a cause of action in which the plaintiffs do not file a motion to have the action so certified. Estate of Seamans v. True, 247 Ga. 721, 279 S.E.2d 447 (1981).

No error in bifurcating issues. — When automobile insurance policyholders sought damages and declaratory and injunctive relief in a dispute over the scope of physical damage coverage, the trial court did not err in bifurcating the issues and certifying a class for declaratory and injunctive relief only. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Mabry, 274 Ga. 498, 556 S.E.2d 114 (2001).

Class member had standing to represent class. — In subscribers' class action suit against an Internet access provider, one of the subscribers did not lack standing to represent the class due to the subscriber's failure to pay the provider an allegedly illegal early termination fee, which was the gravamen of the lawsuit. The provider charged the fee to the subscriber's credit card, and refused to disclaim the right to collect the fee from the subscriber. EarthLink, Inc. v. Eaves, 293 Ga. App. 75, 666 S.E.2d 420 (2008).

Litigants and trial court share obligation to ensure that certification question timely resolved. — Trial court erred in denying a motion for class certification because the court did not engage in the required analysis in determining whether the motion had to be denied as untimely or make any factual findings supporting the court's decision; O.C.G.A. § 9-11-23 places a shared obligation upon the litigants and the court to ensure that the question of class certification is timely resolved, and it neither directs a plaintiff to move for class certification within a specified time, nor does it prevent a defendant from requesting an order denying class certification or a court from acting on the court's own initiative. Fuller v. Heartwood 11, LLC, 301 Ga. App. 309, 687 S.E.2d 287 (2009), cert. denied, No. S10C0573, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 361 (Ga. 2010).

Failure to describe members of class. — Order of final judgment was vacated and a class action was remanded for entry of an order that included a description of the class members as identified in the trial court's order naming the class. The order of final judgment failed to comply with O.C.G.A. § 9-11-23(c)(3) since the order did not describe the members of the class as previously identified by the trial court in the court's order naming the class. Jones v. Forest Lake Vill. Homeowners Ass'n, 304 Ga. App. 495, 696 S.E.2d 453 (2010).

Failure to consider factors. — Order denying a homeowner's petition for class certification of a declaratory judgment action was improper because the trial court erred in addressing only the merits of the underlying claim and not making the required findings and conclusions with regard to whether each factor required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-23 had been established; contrary to the trial court's order which assumed that the homeowner was traveling under § 9-11-23(b)(3), the homeowner was asking for a declaratory judgment and proceeding under § 9-11-23(b)(2). The trial court's order did not analyze all of the factors under § 9-11-23(a) and those the court did discuss were dealt with solely under the guise of the substantive claim. Peck v. Lanier Golf Club, Inc., 298 Ga. App. 555, 680 S.E.2d 595 (2009).

Requirements for deciding whether motion for class certification is untimely. — When deciding whether to deny a motion for class certification as untimely, the trial court, in the exercise of the court's sound discretion, must consider the purposes served by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-23, balancing any actual prejudice to the litigants or the class against any legitimate reasons for the delay, and in the absence of a local rule governing the timely filing of a motion for class certification, a trial court may not deny an otherwise proper motion solely on the basis that the motion was untimely; rather, the trial court must determine, considering the relevant factors, whether the delay resulted in any actual prejudice to the litigants or to the class. Then, in the court's order on the motion for class certification, the trial court shall set forth in writing factual findings supporting the court's decision. Fuller v. Heartwood 11, LLC, 301 Ga. App. 309, 687 S.E.2d 287 (2009), cert. denied, No. S10C0573, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 361 (Ga. 2010).

Because district courts are required to conduct a "rigorous analysis" into whether the prerequisites of Fed. R. Civ. P. 23 are met before certifying a class, that rigorous analysis should also apply to a trial court's decision under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-23(f)(1)(3) concerning whether the parties or the class have been prejudiced by an untimely motion for class certification. Fuller v. Heartwood 11, LLC, 301 Ga. App. 309, 687 S.E.2d 287 (2009), cert. denied, No. S10C0573, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 361 (Ga. 2010).

Interpretation of a form agreement proper for class action. — Trial court properly certified a class of individuals who purchased credit life or credit disability insurance from an insurer and who may be owed a refund from the insurer for unearned premiums on those policies. The interpretation of a form agreement presented a classic case of a common question of law appropriate for class adjudication. Res. Life Ins. Co. v. Buckner, 304 Ga. App. 719, 698 S.E.2d 19 (2010).

Class certification held proper. — Trial court properly granted class certification in an action after an insurance company customer alleged that the customers and others had been inappropriately charged premiums and billing fees related to the defendant's "automobile club"; the claims involved standard sales methods and practices common to class members, the customer as a recent "past insured" was not an inadequate representative, and it was not appropriate at the certification stage to consider whether the customer could prevail on the customer's claims. Village Auto Ins. Co. v. Rush, 286 Ga. App. 688, 649 S.E.2d 862 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 72 (Ga. 2008).

Subscribers sued an internet access provider alleging an early termination fee provision in their contracts was unenforceable. The need for individual damage calculations did not defeat class certification under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-23 since the subscribers sought remedies that would be standard and formulaic: a refund for those who paid the fee, and an injunction against enforcing the fee for those who did not. EarthLink, Inc. v. Eaves, 293 Ga. App. 75, 666 S.E.2d 420 (2008).

Trial court properly certified a class consisting of all similarly situated bankrupt mortgagors who had been assessed inspection and attorney fees by a mortgagee without prior notice or approval by the bankruptcy court. The claims of theft by conversion, theft by deception, and violations of Georgia RICO (O.C.G.A. § 16-14-4) did not require proof of reliance by each class member, thus making a class action unmanageable; as similar written representations were common to all the security agreements at issue, circumstantial evidence could be used to show that reliance was also common to the whole class. Liberty Lending Servs. v. Canada, 293 Ga. App. 731, 668 S.E.2d 3 (2008).

Trial court did not err in failing to ensure that a class notice included the information specified in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-23(b)(3) because the trial court's order certifying the class showed that the court found class certification appropriate under § 9-11-23(b)(2); the notice to potential class members was not subject to the requirements of § 9-11-23(c)(2). Jones v. Forest Lake Vill. Homeowners Ass'n, 304 Ga. App. 495, 696 S.E.2d 453 (2010).

Denial of class certification proper.

— Trial court properly denied a motion for class certification that was filed by a Florida resident who claimed that a Georgia limited liability company (LLC) violated the Telephone Consumer Protection Act of 1991, 47 U.S.C. § 227, when the LLC authorized another company to send unsolicited fax transmissions because the resident received a transmission from a residence located in the same area code, and not from a telephone number that belonged to the Georgia LLC or the LLC's agents, and because the Florida resident had a prior business relationship with the LLC. McGarry v. Cingular Wireless, L.L.C., No. A03A2575, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 423 (Mar. 24, 2004).

Students were not entitled to class certification in a suit alleging fraud by a university and the university's parent company because the students failed to establish the O.C.G.A. § 9-11-23(b)(3) requirement of predominance since individualized proof was required to show if class members had relied to their detriment on the alleged fraud. Diallo v. Am. Intercontinental Univ., Inc., 301 Ga. App. 299, 687 S.E.2d 278 (2009).

Trial court abused the court's discretion in granting certification under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-23(b)(2) based on a claim for medical monitoring because the recovery of monetary damages was at the core of the dispute between a patient, the patient's spouse, and a hospital; the trial court's order bifurcating the liability and damages phases, trying damages separately to a jury if necessary, demonstrated that the damages claims in the complaint overwhelmed the injunctive relief sought and were not merely incidental thereto. Doctors Hosp. Surgery Ctr., LP v. Webb, 307 Ga. App. 44, 704 S.E.2d 185 (2010).

Typicality. — Trial court properly adopted a special master's determination that certification of a class of evacuated residents following an accidental chemical release was warranted under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-23(a) as to all but one representative as the prerequisites of numerosity, commonality, typicality, and adequacy of representation were satisfied; however, as one class representative had settled that representative's claims against the chemical company, although the representative disputed whether the settlement was fair, the representative did not satisfy the typicality requirement. Brenntag Mid South, Inc. v. Smart, 308 Ga. App. 899, 710 S.E.2d 569 (2011).

Trial court erred in finding that a customer and the proposed class shared common questions of law and fact and that the customer was a sufficiently typical representative of that class under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-23(a)(2) and (a)(3) because the customer failed to prove that the response to the closing of the pharmacy was shared by other members of the class; given the customer's lack of actual injury, the customer was unlikely to vigorously litigate the action on behalf of the class. Rite Aid of Ga., Inc. v. Peacock, 315 Ga. App. 573, 726 S.E.2d 577 (2012).

Number requirement not met. — Trial court erred in granting the customer's request for class certification because the class of nine was insufficient to meet the requirements of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-23(a)(1), and the customer failed to show the existence of other significant factors to warrant satisfaction of that requirement when, inter alia, the customer was capable of identifying all putative class members and there were no geographic constraints. Am. Debt Found., Inc. v. Hodzic, 312 Ga. App. 806, 720 S.E.2d 283 (2011).

Secondary Action by Shareholders

Allegation of status as shareholder at time of amendment insufficient. — Amended complaint in a derivative action alleging merely that the plaintiff was a shareholder at the time the amended complaint was filed did not meet requirements of law, and absent a substantial allegation that the plaintiff was a shareholder at the time the alleged transgressions occurred, the plaintiff could not maintain such an action. Haldi v. Continental Inv. Corp., 50 F.R.D. 275 (N.D. Ga. 1970).

Dismissal or Compromise

Proposed amendment which would compromise claim. — General rule permitting amendment as a matter of course and without leave of court before the entry of a pretrial order has no application in respect to a class action if the proposed amendment is one which would have the effect of compromising the claim. Murphy v. Hope, 229 Ga. 836, 195 S.E.2d 24 (1972).

Voluntary dismissal without leave of court ineffective. — Voluntary dismissal of a class action, without leave of court, is ineffectual. State v. Golia, 235 Ga. 791, 222 S.E.2d 27 (1976).

Showing of absence of harm before voluntary withdrawal. — Voluntary withdrawal of one count without a showing of absence of harm raises doubt that the rights of some or all of the absentees would be protected adequately in a class action. Graham v. Development Specialists, Inc., 180 Ga. App. 758, 350 S.E.2d 294 (1986).

Interlocutory order certifying class was directly appealable. — Employee's motion to dismiss an appeal for lack of jurisdiction was denied as the trial court's interlocutory order certifying the class was directly appealable pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-23(g). McDonald Oil Co. v. Cianocchi, 285 Ga. App. 829, 648 S.E.2d 154 (2007).

Removal improper. — Because a customer's class action complaint brought pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-23 provided no information indicating the amount in controversy or the number of individuals in alternative classes, a bank and an affiliated credit card service improperly removed the action pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d) of the Class Action Fairness Act of 2005 and 28 U.S.C. § 1446. Thomas v. Bank of Am. Corp., 570 F.3d 1280 (11th Cir. 2009).

Dismissal of complaint erroneous. — Trial court's dismissal of a homeowner's complaint seeking a declaratory judgment that adjacent lot owners had an irrevocable easement or implied covenant in a golf club's golf course and an injunction restricting the use of the property to golf course purposes only was erroneous because after denying the homeowner's motion for class certification, the trial court was required to allow a reasonable time for joinder of the proper plaintiffs before dismissing the action. Peck v. Lanier Golf Club, Inc., 304 Ga. App. 868, 697 S.E.2d 922 (2010).

9-11-24. Intervention.

(a) Intervention of right. Upon timely application anyone shall be permitted to intervene in an action:

(1) When a statute confers an unconditional right to intervene; or

(2) When the applicant claims an interest relating to the property or transaction which is the subject matter of the action and he is so situated that the disposition of the action may as a practical matter impair or impede his ability to protect that interest, unless the applicant's interest is adequately represented by existing parties.

(b) Permissive intervention. Upon timely application anyone may be permitted to intervene in an action:

(1) When a statute confers a conditional right to intervene; or

(2) When an applicant's claim or defense and the main action have a question of law or fact in common.

In exercising its discretion the court shall consider whether the intervention will unduly delay or prejudice the adjudication of the rights of the original parties.

(c) Procedure. A person desiring to intervene shall serve a motion to intervene upon the parties as provided in Code Section 9-11-5. The motion shall state the grounds therefor and shall be accompanied by a pleading setting forth the claim or defense for which intervention is sought. The same procedure shall be followed when a statute gives a right to intervene. (Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 24; Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 12; Ga. L. 1968, p. 1104, § 8.)

General Consideration

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code 1933, Title 81 are included in the annotations for this Code section.

Construction with other law. — Because the Georgia Business Corporation Code, O.C.G.A. Ch. 2, T. 14, does not provide any specific mechanism concerning the intervention of parties in derivative actions, courts apply the general intervention statute, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-24, to motions to intervene in that context. Stephens v. McGarrity, 290 Ga. App. 755, 660 S.E.2d 770 (2008).

It is not the right of a stranger to a pending cause to intervene therein, unless it is necessary to the stranger's protection that the stranger be allowed to become a party to the litigation, and thus be afforded an opportunity to resist the rendition of a judgment which would operate to the stranger's prejudice. Clark v. Harrison, 182 Ga. 56, 184 S.E. 620 (1936); Walker v. Hartford Accident & Indem. Co., 196 Ga. 361, 26 S.E.2d 695 (1943) (decided under former Code 1933, T. 81).

Criteria for exceptions to general rule precluding intervention at common law. — General rule at common law is that persons who are not parties to a suit cannot file an intervention therein; however, there are some exceptions to this rule as when an intervenor sets up some right that would be directly affected by the judgment, but in such a case the interest of the intervenor must be of such a direct and immediate character that the intervenor will either gain or lose by the direct effect of the judgment, and such interest must be created by the claim in suit, or a claim to a lien upon the property, or some part thereof, which is the subject matter of the litigation. Walker v. Hartford Accident & Indem. Co., 196 Ga. 361, 26 S.E.2d 695 (1943) (decided under former Code 1933, T. 81).

While the general rule is that intervenors pro interesse suo (according to his interest) are not known in common-law suits, an exception to the general rule is when the intervenor sets up some right which would be directly affected by the judgment; to come within such exception the interest of the intervenor must be of such a direct and immediate character that the intervenor will either gain or lose by the direct effect of the judgment, and must be created by the claim in suit, or a claim to a lien upon the property, or some part thereof, which is the subject matter of the litigation. Sampson v. Vann, 203 Ga. 612, 48 S.E.2d 293 (1948) (decided under former Code 1933, § 81-1303).

One who had full knowledge of the pendency of a case in which one had a direct pecuniary interest, and neither sought to become a party thereto nor made any effort to intervene therein so as to protect one's rights, could not, after rendition of a judgment in plaintiff's favor, maintain an equitable petition to set such judgment aside or restrain the judgment's enforcement. Hurt Bldg., Inc. v. Atlanta Trust Co., 181 Ga. 274, 182 S.E. 187 (1935) (decided under former Code 1933, T. 81).

Compliance with § 9-11-5 required. — Intervenor attempting to intervene pursuant to the right of intervention must comply with O.C.G.A. § 9-11-5. State v. Shearson Lehman Bros., 188 Ga. App. 120, 372 S.E.2d 276 (1988).

Intervention procedure not required. — O.C.G.A. § 36-82-23, relating to bond validation hearings, does not provide for intervention by third parties; thus, becoming a party does not require mandatory compliance with the procedure of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-24. Hay v. Development Auth., 239 Ga. App. 803, 521 S.E.2d 912 (1999), appeal dismissed sub nom. Hay v. Newton County, 246 Ga. App. 44, 538 S.E.2d 181 (2000).

Intervention in receivership case not required. — Order assigning a case to another judge pursuant to Ga. Unif. Super. Ct. R. 3.3 did not violate O.C.G.A. §§ 9-8-1, 9-8-5, and 9-11-24 as: (1) neither O.C.G.A. § 9-11-24 nor O.C.G.A. § 9-8-1 applied to the assignment; (2) the receiver transferred the property to a corporation before the property was sold to a limited liability company (LLC), and the receiver was not named as a defendant; (3) the appellate court was unable to determine the extent that the property remained subject to orders in the receiver case, and equitable remedies affected the rights of the receiver; (4) the LLC's action was against the corporation and the LLC's managing declarant, not the receiver, and included claims for monetary damages; and (5) the managing declarant failed to show a legal or factual basis for questioning the assigned judge's staffing to support the complex litigation. Leventhal v. Cumberland Dev., LLC, 267 Ga. App. 886, 600 S.E.2d 616 (2004).

When right to pursue independent remedy remains, no interest needs protecting by intervention. — If individual who seeks to intervene will still be left with right to pursue the individual's own independent remedy against the parties, regardless of the outcome of the pending case, the individual has no interest that needs protecting by intervention, and should not be allowed to intervene over objection. Gregory v. Tench, 138 Ga. App. 219, 225 S.E.2d 753 (1976).

County soil and water conservation district could not intervene as of right in an action by a landowner against a construction company, even though it had an interest in the action, when the district failed to make any argument or showing with respect to the potential of the ultimate disposition of the action to impair or impede its prosecution of an independent cause of action against the company. Ste- phens County Soil & Water Conservation Dist. v. Wright Bros. Constr. Co., 215 Ga. App. 352, 451 S.E.2d 802 (1994).

Third party is not prohibited from intervention in probate court guardianship proceeding. Kipp v. Rawson, 193 Ga. App. 532, 388 S.E.2d 409 (1989).

Motion not required in guardianship proceeding. — It was not error for the probate court to permit the Department of Human Resources to intervene in guardianship proceedings without requiring the Department to file a motion to intervene. In re Martin, 218 Ga. App. 79, 460 S.E.2d 304 (1995).

Order allowing intervention required. — Implicit in the requirements of this section is the requirement of an order allowing intervention. Thomas v. Jackson, 238 Ga. 90, 231 S.E.2d 50 (1976).

Motion to intervene may not be allowed ex parte. Gregory v. Tench, 138 Ga. App. 219, 225 S.E.2d 753 (1976).

Status of intervenors. — When intervenors have been allowed by order of the court to file intervention and to become parties defendant under this section, the intervenors thereafter, for all intents and purposes, original parties, and may file any pleading in the case that original parties could have filed, just as though the intervenors had been named parties defendant in the complaint. Woodward v. Lawson, 225 Ga. 261, 167 S.E.2d 660, cert. denied, 396 U.S. 889, 90 S. Ct. 175, 24 L. Ed. 2d 163 (1969).

In an action by a wife against her former husband seeking permanent injunction of the husband's assignment of receivables owned by his employer, after the trial court had determined that the wife's lien was superior to any alleged interest by the husband's assignee and that a conveyance to the assignee was null and void, the court erred in granting the assignee's motion to intervene. Zinser v. Tormenta, 213 Ga. App. 824, 446 S.E.2d 249 (1994).

Grandparents' intervention in custody proceeding. — Since the intervention of grandparents into a custody proceeding and an order granting the grandparents temporary custody had already occurred, the later adult adoption of the child's father did not extinguish the legal status that the grandparents held; the trial court's subsequent order dismissing the intervention of the grandparents and setting aside the award of temporary custody to the grandparents was reversed. Walls v. Walls, 278 Ga. 206, 599 S.E.2d 173 (2004).

Appeal. — Denial of a motion to intervene is not a final judgment and, thus, is reviewable under the interlocutory appeal procedure. Morman v. Board of Regents, 198 Ga. App. 544, 402 S.E.2d 320 (1991).

Although an appeal from the denial of a motion to intervene usually requires an application for interlocutory appeal, when the denial of a party's motion to intervene was a final judgment, direct appeal was therefore proper. Burruss v. Ferdinand, 245 Ga. App. 203, 536 S.E.2d 555 (2000).

Appellate court denied a corporation and board of directors' motion to dismiss a shareholder's appeal of the trial court's denial of a motion to intervene in an underlying shareholder derivative action, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-24, as the shareholder had standing to appeal that denial even if the denial was based on a lack of standing to become a party to the underlying action. Leventhal v. Post Props., 276 Ga. App. 742, 624 S.E.2d 223 (2005).

Interventions of Right

Requirements for intervention. — Individual will not be permitted to intervene in an action unless the individual can establish: (1) an interest relating to the property or transaction which is the subject matter of the action; (2) an impairment of the individual's interest which may result from an unfavorable disposition of the lawsuit; and (3) inadequate representation of this interest by the parties already involved. Brown v. Truluck, 239 Ga. 105, 236 S.E.2d 60 (1977).

Issue of adequacy of representation is a question of fact, which must be ruled on by the trial court in considering an application for intervention. Southwest Ga. Prod. Credit Ass'n v. Wainwright, 241 Ga. 355, 245 S.E.2d 306 (1978).

Generally no right to intervene in action at law. — As a general rule, there is no right to intervene in an ordinary action at law. Gregory v. Tench, 138 Ga. App. 219, 225 S.E.2d 753 (1976).

Error to refuse intervention prior to judgment by necessary party. — When, prior to judgment, intervention is sought by a necessary party who should have been named and served in the original complaint, such intervention should be allowed, and failure to do so amounts to an abuse of discretion. State v. Bruce, 231 Ga. 783, 204 S.E.2d 106 (1974).

When interests of intervenor and governmental body or officer who is a named party are identical, it will be assumed that the intervenor's interests are adequately represented, absent a concrete showing of circumstances in the particular case that make representation inadequate. DeKalb County v. Post Properties, Inc., 245 Ga. 214, 263 S.E.2d 905 (1980).

In a derivative action wherein a settlement was proposed for approval. — In a derivative action suit, a trial court abused the court's discretion by denying a minority shareholder's motion to intervene since the motion was timely and the minority shareholder established that the minority shareholder's interests were not adequately represented by the suing shareholder based on the large investment the minority shareholder had in the corporation and the fact that the settlement reached in the action would impact the minority shareholder's direct claims against the corporation. Further, the minority shareholder was entitled to a determination that the suing shareholder had adequately represented the corporation's interests up to and including the reaching of the settlement. Stephens v. McGarrity, 290 Ga. App. 755, 660 S.E.2d 770 (2008).

In an action against a nonprofit corporation that operated a school and its president, a director of the corporation and its president established a right of intervention based on evidence that the interests of the corporation and the state were not adequately represented. Ebon Found., Inc. v. Oatman, 269 Ga. 340, 498 S.E.2d 728 (1998).

In divorce against husband when creditor bank filed action claiming equitable interest in property titled in husband, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in allowing the wife's intervention and consolidating the two cases as the bank's equitable lien prejudiced the wife's potential interest in the marital estate. First Nat'l Bank v. Blackburn, 254 Ga. 379, 329 S.E.2d 897 (1985).

No interest in child's adoption by relatives when parent alive. — Relatives of child may not file objections to the child's adoption as long as one natural parent is living and has consented, nor may the relatives intervene in the action, as the relatives lack the required interest therein. Lockey v. Bennett, 244 Ga. 339, 260 S.E.2d 56 (1979).

Agency and adoptive parents had interest, as legal custodians of child, in petition for father to legitimate the child and when their rights were not represented, the agency and adoptive parents had a right to intervene. In re Ashmore, 163 Ga. App. 194, 293 S.E.2d 457 (1982).

In an adoption proceeding, the trial court erred in allowing the Georgia Department of Human Resources to intervene since, even if it had an interest as temporary custodian of the child, there was no evidence that such interest would be impaired by the disposition of the case. In re Stroh, 240 Ga. App. 835, 523 S.E.2d 887 (1999).

County Department of Family and Children Services was properly permitted to intervene with regard to a couple's petition seeking to adopt a child as the child was adjudicated deprived and placed in the temporary custody of the Department. While the biological parents' surrenders of their parental rights was the basis for the adoption petition in the superior court, the Department remained the temporary legal custodian of the child pursuant to the juvenile court's deprivation order and, given that the Department's interest in the child as the temporary legal custodian was unrepresented in the adoption proceedings and at risk of impairment, the juvenile court did not err by allowing the Department to intervene through its objection to the adoption. Sastre v. McDaniel, 293 Ga. App. 671, 667 S.E.2d 896 (2008).

Garnishment proceedings. — Secured creditor's claim to commissions and fees at issue in garnishment proceeding provided interest in subject matter of proceeding sufficient to grant the creditors motion to intervene. Perry v. Freeman, 163 Ga. App. 186, 293 S.E.2d 381 (1982).

Workers' compensation insurer. — Both O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-24 and 34-9-11.1, creating a subrogation lien on behalf of workers' compensation employers and insurers, granted a workers' compensation insurer the right to intervene in a personal injury case against third parties and their insurers brought by a claimant to whom the insurer had paid benefits. Department of Admin. Servs. v. Brown, 219 Ga. App. 27, 464 S.E.2d 7 (1995).

Settlement extinguished subrogation rights in workers' compensation case. — Since an employee settled the employee's lawsuit and released third-party tortfeasors prior to receiving workers' compensation payment, the settlement and release extinguished subrogation rights asserted by the employer and the employer's insurer. It was irrelevant that the tortfeasors settled with the employee after receiving notice of the pending workers' compensation claim. Georgia Star Plumbing, Inc. v. Bowen, 225 Ga. App. 379, 484 S.E.2d 26 (1997).

No interest in tax foreclosure proceeding. — Party whose interest in property derived from a deed under power from a party who was the holder of a deed to secure debt from the record owner of the property was not an "interested party" under O.C.G.A. § 48-4-77(1) and that party had no right under subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-24 to intervene in an in rem judicial tax foreclosure proceeding. Burruss v. Ferdinand, 245 Ga. App. 203, 536 S.E.2d 555 (2000).

Judgment creditor had no right to intervene in action for reformation of a deed. — Trial court abused the court's discretion in allowing a borrower's judgment creditor to intervene as a matter of right pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-24 in the borrower's action against the lender for reformation of a deed pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 23-2-25. The creditor had no interest directly relating to the subject matter of the suit and had other remedies. Potter's Props., LLC v. VNS Corp., 306 Ga. App. 621, 703 S.E.2d 79 (2010).

Intervention in bond validation proceeding. — Challenger in an action validating and confirming taxable revenue bonds lacked standing to intervene in the action as a result of failing to comply with the intervention procedures set forth in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-24(c); and, because the challenger lacked standing to become a party in the trial court, the challenger also lacked standing to appeal the trial court's judgment, therefore, the appeal was dismissed. Sherman v. Dev. Auth., 324 Ga. App. 23, 749 S.E.2d 29 (2013).

County boundary dispute action. — Trial court abused the court's discretion by denying a county's motion to intervene in a boundary dispute action that effected the county's boundary since the county was not provided notice of the mandamus action and it promptly sought intervention upon discovery of the action. Bibb County v. Monroe County, 294 Ga. 730, 755 S.E.2d 760 (2014).

Permissive Intervention

Most important factor is whether intervention will prejudice existing parties in the case. Sta-Power Indus., Inc. v. Avant, 134 Ga. App. 952, 216 S.E.2d 897 (1975).

Determination of undue delay or prejudice crucial. — When intervention is permissive, the crucial determination to be made by the trial court, in the court's discretion, is whether the counterclaim will unduly delay or prejudice the existing parties. Ryder Truck Rental, Inc. v. Mayo, 120 Ga. App. 495, 171 S.E.2d 542 (1969).

When a trial court is exercising the court's discretion in determining whether to allow intervention, the court shall consider whether the intervention will unduly delay or prejudice the adjudication of the rights of the original parties, and other relevant circumstances such as the degree to which the intervenor would be affected by the outcome in the underlying case. Branch v. Maxwell, 203 Ga. App. 553, 417 S.E.2d 176, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 905, 417 S.E.2d 176 (1992).

Undue delay or prejudice not only factors. — While trial court must consider whether intervention will unduly delay or prejudice adjudication of the rights of the original parties, the court is not limited to considering these factors alone. Allgood v. Georgia Marble Co., 239 Ga. 858, 239 S.E.2d 31 (1977).

Common question not an automatic entitlement to intervention. — Fact that intervenor meets requirements of a common question of law or fact does not automatically entitle the intervenor to be made a party. Ryder Truck Rental, Inc. v. Mayo, 120 Ga. App. 495, 171 S.E.2d 542 (1969).

Intervention in legitimation proceeding. — Trial court erred in granting a putative biological father's legitimation petition while a husband's timely, meritorious motion to intervene of right under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-24(a) was pending because when the husband moved to intervene in the legitimation proceeding he was the child's legal father and had parental and custodial rights to the child, and the husband clearly had an interest in the legitimation proceeding; the husband's interest as the child's legal father would be impaired by a decision of the trial court that was unfavorable to him, and his interest was not adequately represented by the parties to the action since the child's mother consented to the legitimation action. Baker v. Lankford, 306 Ga. App. 327, 702 S.E.2d 666 (2010).

Discretion of court. — Whether permissive intervention should be granted is a question addressed to the sound discretion of the trial court. Allgood v. Georgia Marble Co., 239 Ga. 858, 239 S.E.2d 31 (1977).

Whether permissive intervention is granted is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial judge, and a decision on this issue will not be reversed unless there is an abuse of discretion. Sloan v. Southern Floridabanc Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 197 Ga. App. 601, 398 S.E.2d 720 (1990).

If there is intervention before final judgment, if the rights of the intervening parties have not been protected, and if the denial of intervention would dispose of the intervening parties' cause of action, intervention should be allowed and the failure to do so amounts to an abuse of discretion. Payne v. Dundee Mills, Inc., 235 Ga. App. 514, 510 S.E.2d 67 (1998).

Intervention was properly allowed when the intervenor filed a motion to intervene and served the parties as required by subsection (c) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-24, and when the motion sought no further relief than that which the plaintiff already sought against the defendants. AC Corp. v. Myree, 221 Ga. App. 513, 471 S.E.2d 922 (1996).

When signatories to contribution agreement sought a judgment declaring the rights and obligations of the parties to the agreement, the bank president was properly allowed to intervene under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-24(b)(2) to claim unpaid salary; as the bank was to be organized under the agreement, signatories of which also guaranteed employment contract, there were questions of law or fact in common, and no undue delay or prejudice to rights of original parties had been shown. Ervin v. Turner, 291 Ga. App. 719, 662 S.E.2d 721 (2008), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 773, 774, 794 (Ga. 2008).

Because the trial court applied the correct legal standard in O.C.G.A. § 19-7-1(b.1) in finding that the natural parent presumption was rebutted and that awarding custody to the grandparents was in the child's best interests, and because the grandparents were properly permitted to intervene under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-24(a)(2), the mother was not entitled to appellate relief. Trotter v. Ayres, 315 Ga. App. 7, 726 S.E.2d 424 (2012),

cert. denied, No. S12C1206, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 666 (Ga. 2012).

Grant or denial of intervention not reversed absent abuse. — Appellate court will not reverse grant or denial of permissive intervention unless there is an abuse of discretion. Allgood v. Georgia Marble Co., 239 Ga. 858, 239 S.E.2d 31 (1977); Branch v. Maxwell, 203 Ga. App. 553, 417 S.E.2d 176, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 905, 417 S.E.2d 176 (1992).

When permissive intervention is sought, subsection (b) of this section confers discretion upon the trial court, and such discretion will not be controlled unless the discretion is manifestly abused. Barber & Barber, Inc. v. Board of Comm'rs, 231 Ga. 574, 203 S.E.2d 192 (1974); Mt. Paran Area Civic Ass'n v. Cates, 240 Ga. 191, 240 S.E.2d 7 (1977).

Absent clear showing that the trial judge acted arbitrarily, the appellate court should not control the trial judge's discretion in determining whether a permissive motion to intervene would unduly delay or prejudice the adjudication of rights of the original parties. Ryder Truck Rental, Inc. v. Mayo, 120 Ga. App. 495, 171 S.E.2d 542 (1969).

Grandson did not have the right to intervene in proceedings by children for the appointment of a guardian for their mother. White v. Heard, 225 Ga. App. 351, 484 S.E.2d 12 (1997).

Party not allowed to appear in caption effectively denied motion to intervene. — Trial court's order allowing an insurer to intervene under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-24(a)(2) in the insured homeowner's action against a vehicle manufacturer for fire damage to the insured's home when the vehicle spontaneously caught fire was contradictory because the order did not allow the insurer to appear in the caption of the action or participate in the main action, amounting to a denial of the motion. Therefore, remand was required. Andrews v. Ford Motor Co., 310 Ga. App. 449, 713 S.E.2d 474 (2011).

Law firm not entitled to intervene in former client's case. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying a law firm's motion under

O.C.G.A. § 9-11-24(a)(2) to intervene in a former client's case because the firm was discharged from the case and filed the firm's lien pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 15-19-14(b) before the settlement, and the firm knew when the client had reached a settlement agreement but did not move to intervene as a party until over a month later; the firm was allowed to prosecute the firm's fee lien to the jury as a party, making opening statements, calling witnesses, introducing evidence, and arguing in closing. Jones, Martin, Parriz & Tessener Law Offices, PLLC v. Westrex Corp., 310 Ga. App. 192, 712 S.E.2d 603 (2011).

Employer was entitled to intervene in a workers' compensation action pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-24(a)(2) because the employer claimed an interest in the property or transaction that was the subject to the suit because the employer's subrogation rights were not protected by the existing parties to the employee's suit, and because the trial court's denial of the employer's motion to intervene disposed of the only legal remedy for that claim. Kroger v. Taylor, 320 Ga. App. 298, 739 S.E.2d 767 (2013).

Intervention by subsequently named corporation denied. — Subsequently-named corporation lacked standing to appeal from orders against the previously-named corporation as that corporation was not a party to the litigation, was not granted or denied intervention pursuant to a motion to amend with leave of court, and an attempted substitution by the predecessor was more than an attempt to correct a misnomer. Degussa Wall Sys. v. Sharp, 286 Ga. App. 349, 648 S.E.2d 687 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 701 (Ga. 2007).

Intervention denied. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying a shareholder's motion to intervene, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-24, in pending shareholder derivative actions that had been consolidated as the shareholder lacked standing to assert derivative claims in the shareholder's own non-consolidated action without the representation of counsel, and the claims that the shareholder asserted belonged to the corporation; there was no showing that the shareholder had an interest relating to the property or transaction that was the subject matter of the pending action, pursuant to the requirement of § 9-11-24(2). Leventhal v. Post Props., 276 Ga. App. 742, 624 S.E.2d 223 (2005).

Despite the claim by the owners of a corporation that the trial court erred in refusing to allow the owners to intervene in the case as the true owners of the property in question because the owners never properly filed or asserted a motion to intervene, no error resulted; moreover, the owners' argument that the trial court erred in refusing to allow the owners to file the owners' motion to intervene also provided no basis for relief. Rice v. Champion Bldgs., Inc., 288 Ga. App. 597, 654 S.E.2d 390 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 326 (Ga. 2008).

Time of Intervention

Order granting intervention ex parte and without timely notice properly vacated. — Under Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, §§ 5 and 6 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-6(d)), written motions, other than one which may be heard ex parte, and notice of the hearing, shall be served not later than five days before the time specified for the hearing, and if service is by mail, three extra days shall be added; hence, an order granting intervention ex parte, albeit subject to objection of the parties, without the giving of timely notice, was properly vacated by the trial court. Gregory v. Tench, 138 Ga. App. 219, 225 S.E.2d 753 (1976).

Intervention must be timely, whether asserted as a right or as a matter of discretion. Sta-Power Indus., Inc. v. Avant, 134 Ga. App. 952, 216 S.E.2d 897 (1975).

Timeliness and sufficiency of showing within discretion of court. — Decision whether application for intervention is timely and the showing sufficient are matters within the sound discretion of the trial court. Sta-Power Indus., Inc. v. Avant, 134 Ga. App. 952, 216 S.E.2d 897 (1975).

Decisions whether intervention is timely and the showing sufficient are matters within the sound discretion of the trial court and will not be controlled absent an abuse of discretion. Doe v. Garcia, 177 Ga. App. 61, 338 S.E.2d 710 (1985).

Whether an intervention is timely is a matter within the sound discretion of the court, and that decision will not be controlled absent an abuse of discretion. Wigley v. Hambrick, 193 Ga. App. 903, 389 S.E.2d 763, cert. denied, 193 Ga. App. 911, 389 S.E.2d 763 (1989).

Motion to intervene not timely. — When notice of the motion to intervene is personally served two days prior to a confirmation hearing, the plaintiff's objection to such motion for lack of proper notice is well taken since the motion to intervene is not timely; such motion cannot, in view of the objection, be taken up until a day subsequent to the confirmation hearing date. Greer v. Federal Land Bank, 158 Ga. App. 60, 279 S.E.2d 308 (1981).

Intervention after judgment is not usually permitted, and to justify intervention requires a strong showing. Sta-Power Indus., Inc. v. Avant, 134 Ga. App. 952, 216 S.E.2d 897 (1975).

Intervention may be allowed after final judgment to preserve some right which cannot otherwise be protected. Sta-Power Indus., Inc. v. Avant, 134 Ga. App. 952, 216 S.E.2d 897 (1975).

Addition of intervenor plaintiffs after judgment when not properly represented. — When intervenor plaintiffs have not been properly represented in an original action, the intervenors may be added after the judgment. Sta-Power Indus., Inc. v. Avant, 134 Ga. App. 952, 216 S.E.2d 897 (1975).

In a class action when discovery of all persons in the class is required to be made of the defendant and discovery is unduly delayed by failure of the defendant to comply with an order of the court, addition of intervenor plaintiffs, after imposition of authorized sanction of default judgment, is authorized in the discretion of the trial court. Sta-Power Indus., Inc. v. Avant, 134 Ga. App. 952, 216 S.E.2d 897 (1975).

9-11-25. Substitution of parties.(a) Death.

(1) If a party dies and the claim is not thereby extinguished, the court may order substitution of the proper parties. The motion for substitution may be made by any party or by the successors or representative of the deceased party and, together with the notice of the hearing, shall be served on the parties as provided in Code Section 9-11-5 and upon persons not parties in the manner provided in Code Section 9-11-4 for the service of a summons. Unless the motion for substitution is made not later than 180 days after the death is suggested upon the record by service of a statement of the fact of the death, the action shall be dismissed as to the deceased party.

(2) In the event of the death of one or more of the plaintiffs or of one or more of the defendants in an action in which the right sought to be enforced survives only to the surviving plaintiffs or only against the surviving defendants, the action does not abate. The death shall be suggested upon the record and the action shall proceed in favor of or against the surviving parties.

(b) Incompetency. If a party becomes incompetent, the court, upon motion served as provided in subsection (a) of this Code section, may allow the action to be continued by or against his representative.

(c) Transfer of interest. In case of any transfer of interest, the action may be continued by or against the original party unless the court, upon motion, directs the person to whom the interest is transferred to be substituted in the action or joined with the original party. Service of the motion shall be made as provided in subsection (a) of this Code section.

(d) Public officers; death or separation from office.

(1) When a public officer is a party to an action in his official capacity and during its pendency dies, resigns, or otherwise ceases to hold office, the action does not abate, and his successor is automatically substituted as a party. Proceedings following the substitution shall be in the name of the substituted party, but any misnomer not affecting the substantial rights of the parties shall be disregarded. An order of substitution may be entered at any time, but the omission to enter such an order shall not affect the substitution.

(2) When a public officer brings or defends an action in his official capacity, he may be described as a party by his official title rather than by name; but the court may require his name to be added. (Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 25.)

ANALYSIS

GENERAL CONSIDERATION
 DEATH OF PARTY
 TRANSFER OF INTEREST
 PUBLIC OFFICERS

General Consideration

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code 1933, § 3-402 are included in the annotations for this Code section.

Substitution of parties under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-25 is not limited to those instances listed herein. Franklyn Gesner Fine Paintings, Inc. v. Ketcham, 252 Ga. 537, 314 S.E.2d 903 (1984).

Substitution accomplished on motion and notice. — Substitution of parties upon the parties' death or when there is a transfer of interest is accomplished upon proper motion and notice to the parties. Franklin v. Sea Island Bank, 120 Ga. App. 654, 171 S.E.2d 866 (1969).

Valid substitution from voluntary appearance and acquiescence. — When executor of a deceased party appears voluntarily and pleads as a party in the case, and the opposite party indicates in any manner of record the party's acquiescence to the substitution, a valid substitution will take place. Eubank v. Barber-Colman Co., 115 Ga. App. 217, 154 S.E.2d 638 (1967) (decided under former Code 1933, § 3-402).

Trial court did not err in dismissing a passenger's O.C.G.A. § 9-2-61 renewal action entirely as being void ab initio and in denying the passenger's request to substitute parties under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-25 because the passenger's renewed complaint was filed after the driver's death, and the passenger never attempted to substitute a new defendant before a hearing on a motion to dismiss. Cox v. Progressive Bayside Ins. Co., 316 Ga. App. 50, 728 S.E.2d 726 (2012).

Failure to challenge substitution. — Trial court did not err by finding a bank had the power to enforce a note because the defendants did not object or respond to the motion to substitute the bank as the real party in interest; thus, the issue was waived. HWA Props., Inc. v. Cmty. & S. Bank, 322 Ga. App. 877, 746 S.E.2d 609 (2013).

Substitution on consent could not be challenged on appeal. — Debtor could not challenge a judgment entered on remittitur by raising arguments regarding an assignee's payment of consideration for a judgment entered against the debtor, although the issue was not within the scope of the prior appeal as the debtor had consented to the assignee's substitution into the action in place of the bank as well as the assignment of the judgment to it. Martin v. Hamilton State Bank, 323 Ga. App. 185, 746 S.E.2d 750 (2013).

Invited error precluded objection on appeal. — Former director's putative transferee could not argue on appeal that it was error to substitute an assignee in place of a creditor in the creditor's fraudulent transfer action as the transferee advised the trial court that the transferee had no objection to the substitution at the time. Am. Nat'l Holding Corp. v. EMM Credit, LLC, 323 Ga. App. 655, 748 S.E.2d 683 (2013).

MacGinnitie, 294 Ga. 657, 755 S.E.2d 683 (2014); State ex rel. Hudgens v. Sun States Insurance Group, Inc., 770 S.E.2d 43, No. A14A2120, 2015 Ga. App. LEXIS 214 (2015).

Death of Party

Substitution of personal representatives. — Substitution of personal representatives of decedent pursuant to subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-25 in an action involving the decedent's negligence claim against the defendant did not result in addition of a new party or a new cause of action to the litigation. Pope v. GoodGame, 223 Ga. App. 672, 478 S.E.2d 636 (1996).

Order denying substitution was not a final appealable order. — Trial court's order denying substitution of the decedent's administrator as a party, in place of the decedent, was not a final appealable order and as such did not dismiss the complaint, but left issues remaining to be resolved. Williams v. City of Atlanta, 263 Ga. App. 113, 587 S.E.2d 261 (2003).

Substitution does not divest court of venue. — Because the executor stands in the shoes of the decedent, in essence keeping the suit and claims against the decedent alive, the substitution of a non-resident executor is, for purposes of venue, qualitatively the same as when a resident defendant moves out of the county; therefore, a party's death and the substitution of executors did not divest the superior court of venue. Abrams v. Massell, 262 Ga. App. 761, 586 S.E.2d 435 (2003).

Order making administrator of defendant who died before being served a defendant is not a substitution but the commencement of a new suit. Rowe v. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank, 129 Ga. App. 251, 199 S.E.2d 319 (1973).

Procedure for suggestion of death is for protection of prospective respondent to motion for substitution of parties, and is for the purpose of enabling the respondent to place a limitation upon the period of time during which the movant may seek substitution of the parties. Anderson v. Southeastern Capital Corp., 243 Ga. 498, 255 S.E.2d 12 (1979); Berry v. Morton, 152 Ga. App. 117, 262 S.E.2d 263 (1979); Binns v. Binns, 193 Ga. App. 554, 388 S.E.2d 385 (1989).

Statement sufficient to suggest death. — Statement of fact of death, which includes name of deceased and date of death, is a sufficient suggestion of death as contemplated by paragraph (a)(1) of this section to trigger the 180-day period allowed for filing a motion for substitution. Mullis v. Bone, 143 Ga. App. 407, 238 S.E.2d 748 (1977).

Movant seeking substitution not required to suggest death. — Nothing in the Civil Practice Act (see O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) requires movant seeking substitution of a party to make a suggestion of death as a prerequisite or condition to filing motion for substitution. Anderson v. Southeastern Capital Corp., 243 Ga. 498, 255 S.E.2d 12 (1979).

Movant seeking to substitute proper party is not required to make the suggestion of death, although the movant is permitted to do so; the movant's making of suggestion of death is anomalous, unnecessary, and gratuitous, since the effect of its filing is to limit time within which the motion for substitution could be made. Berry v. Morton, 152 Ga. App. 117, 262 S.E.2d 263 (1979).

If executor of deceased party desires protection of the 180-day limitation period, the executor can file a suggestion of death on the record and serve it on the other party's counsel. Having failed to so act, the executor cannot complain of lack of diligence on the part of the other party. Dubberly v. Nail, 166 Ga. App. 378, 304 S.E.2d 504 (1983).

Limitation period does not run until suggestion of death personally served. — The 180 day limitation contained in paragraph (a)(1) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-25 is not triggered when the surviving party to an action initiates the suggestion of death until personal service of the suggestion of death is made upon the nonparty representative of the deceased litigant's estate. Dubberly v. Nail, 166 Ga. App. 378, 304 S.E.2d 504 (1983);

Death of Party (Cont'd)

Ridley v. Polk Bros. Constr. Co., 170 Ga. App. 349, 317 S.E.2d 326 (1984).

When the plaintiff brought a medical malpractice action against the defendants and thereafter the plaintiff's attorney notified the court and all parties that the plaintiff had died but no motion for substitution of parties was made within the next 180 days, since the record showed no personal service of the suggestion of death upon the nonparty representative of the plaintiff's estate, the 180-day limitation of paragraph (a)(1) never commenced, and the trial court erred in dismissing the action. Ludy v. Giddens, 182 Ga. App. 111, 354 S.E.2d 703 (1987).

The 180-day limitation of paragraph (a)(1) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-25 does not commence until the non-party representative of the estate has been served with the suggestion of death. Binns v. Binns, 193 Ga. App. 554, 388 S.E.2d 385 (1989).

Burden is upon representative of the deceased, not upon movant, to invoke limitation within which motion for substitution of parties may be made. Berry v. Morton, 152 Ga. App. 117, 262 S.E.2d 263 (1979).

No time limit for substitution until notice of death given. — There is no time limit for substitution for death of a party until notice has been given, and even this time limit is subject to enlargement for good cause shown, in the discretion of the court. Jernigan v. Collier, 131 Ga. App. 162, 205 S.E.2d 450 (1974).

Service of suggestion of death on non-party as prerequisite to running.

— O.C.G.A. § 9-11-25 requires that the record reflect that the suggestion of death has been served upon all necessary parties, including the non-party representative of the estate, before the 180-day limitation begins to run. Until the record as to service is perfected, there is no duty to substitute; an acknowledgment of service for this purpose does not relate back to the day of service but starts the limitation period when the acknowledgment is filed. Northside Corp. v. Mosby, 214 Ga. App. 806, 449 S.E.2d 6 (1994).

Substitution to be within 180 days of suggestion of death. — Time restriction provided in paragraph (a)(1) of this section is merely that if there is a suggestion of death in the record, then the movant who wishes to substitute must do so within 180 days of service of suggestion of death upon the movant. Berry v. Morton, 152 Ga. App. 117, 262 S.E.2d 263 (1979).

Action on a contract was properly dismissed when the pro se plaintiff failed to make a valid substitution of parties within 180 days after a suggestion of death was filed. Maddox v. Wilson, 219 Ga. App. 158, 464 S.E.2d 226 (1995).

Extension of period for substitution. — Court may extend period for substitution if request is made before expiration of 180-day period. Jernigan v. Collier, 131 Ga. App. 162, 205 S.E.2d 450 (1974).

Right of court to dismiss for failure to timely move for substitution. — Court has the right to dismiss under paragraph (a)(1) of this section, regardless of whether or not counsel for the deceased would be authorized to make a motion to dismiss. Jernigan v. Collier, 134 Ga. App. 137, 213 S.E.2d 495, aff'd, 234 Ga. 837, 218 S.E.2d 556 (1975).

Dismissal not mandatory. — Even if no motion for substitution is made within the 180-day period, dismissal of the action is not mandatory, despite the use of the word "shall" in paragraph (a)(1) of this section. Jernigan v. Collier, 131 Ga. App. 162, 205 S.E.2d 450 (1974).

Entry of order required. — Dismissal is not automatic under paragraph (a)(1) of this section, and entry of an order is required before dismissal can be effected. Jernigan v. Collier, 131 Ga. App. 162, 205 S.E.2d 450 (1974); Jernigan v. Collier, 234 Ga. 837, 218 S.E.2d 556 (1975).

No dismissal when no service of suggestion of death. — When there was no personal service of the suggestion of death upon the nonparty representative of the decedent's estate, the 180-day limitation of paragraph (a)(1) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-25 was never commenced, and the trial court erred in dismissing the action. Bledsoe v. Sutton, 174 Ga. App. 248, 329 S.E.2d 589 (1985).

Late substitution within discretion of court on showing of excusable neglect. — Court may in the court's discretion permit motion for substitution made more than 180 days after death is suggested of record when failure to file such motion was the result of excusable neglect. Jernigan v. Collier, 234 Ga. 837, 218 S.E.2d 556 (1975); Anderson v. Southeastern Capital Corp., 243 Ga. 498, 255 S.E.2d 12 (1979).

Absent showing of excusable neglect dismissal proper. — When the plaintiff fails to make a timely motion for substitution, as required by paragraph (a)(1) of Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 25 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-25), a motion to dismiss pursuant to Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 41 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41(b)) is in order, at the hearing of which motion the plaintiff may show excusable neglect under Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 6 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-6(b)(2)), but upon the plaintiff's failure to satisfy requirements of that section, a motion to dismiss should be granted. Jernigan v. Collier, 234 Ga. 837, 218 S.E.2d 556 (1975).

Dismissal for untimely motion to substitute operates on the merits. — Dismissal for failure to make timely substitution operates as a dismissal on the merits. Jernigan v. Collier, 131 Ga. App. 162, 205 S.E.2d 450 (1974).

When the plaintiff has failed to timely move for substitution, and has had a hearing and adverse determination on the issue of excusable neglect, a dismissal is, as it should be, upon the merits. Jernigan v. Collier, 234 Ga. 837, 218 S.E.2d 556 (1975).

Absent specification to the contrary. — When no notice of substitution is made within 180 days after service of suggestion of death and defendant moves for dismissal on this ground, dismissal of the petition under Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 41 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41) by the trial judge after notice and hearing, without specifying that it is "without prejudice," would bar any subsequent suit. Jernigan v. Collier, 131 Ga. App. 162, 205 S.E.2d 450 (1974).

Dismissal for want of prosecution distinguished. — Dismissal under paragraph (a)(1) of Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 25 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-25) is different from dismissal under Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 41 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41(e)) for want of prosecution, which is automatically obtained and does not operate as an adjudication on the merits. Jernigan v. Collier, 131 Ga. App. 162, 205 S.E.2d 450 (1974).

Right of voluntary dismissal not abridged by motion to dismiss hereunder. — Plaintiff may voluntarily dismiss the plaintiff's suit at any time before the verdict or oral announcement of judgment by the trial court under Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 41 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41(a)), and this right is not abridged by filing a motion to dismiss based upon the plaintiff's failure to comply with Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 25 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-25(a)(1)). Wofford v. Central Mut. Ins. Co., 242 Ga. 338, 249 S.E.2d 21 (1978).

Executor substituted after death of defendant not individually a party. — When pending an action, the defendant dies, and the defendant's executor is substituted as party defendant, as provided by this section, the executor is not individually a party to the action and may not appeal in an individual capacity from an adverse judgment. Coogler v. Berry, 117 Ga. App. 614, 161 S.E.2d 428 (1968).

Death of defendant does not create "lack of an indispensable party" within the meaning of Ga. L. 1972, p. 689, § 7 or Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 41 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-19 or O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41(b)). Jernigan v. Collier, 234 Ga. 837, 218 S.E.2d 556 (1975).

Deceased person cannot be party to legal proceedings. Mathews v. Cleveland, 159 Ga. App. 616, 284 S.E.2d 634 (1981).

Action commenced in name of deceased person is not brought in name of a "natural person," because a deceased person has no capacity to be a "proper" litigant in the courts of this state. If no legal party plaintiff was named in the pleadings and shown to exist, the action is a mere nullity. Mathews v. Cleveland, 159 Ga. App. 616, 284 S.E.2d 634 (1981).

When an action is brought in name of plaintiff who is dead, complaint may not be amended by substituting a plaintiff having capacity to sue. Mathews v. Cleveland, 159 Ga. App. 616, 284 S.E.2d 634 (1981).

Death of Party (Cont'd)

Second, untimely, motion for substitution of the temporary administrator of a decedent's estate should have been treated either as the equivalent of a meritorious motion for reconsideration of the denial of a timely filed first motion, based on the probate court's correction of its clerical error identifying the decedent, or as a permissible late filing based on excusable neglect. Harvey v. Oliver, 178 Ga. App. 63, 341 S.E.2d 917 (1986).

When an estate's representative dies during the pendency of the litigation, the successor representative must be substituted as a party; substitution of parties does not occur by operation of law but must be effected under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-25. McCarley v. McCarley, 246 Ga. App. 171, 539 S.E.2d 871 (2000).

Failure timely to seek substitution held not excusable neglect. — When there was no evidence from which the trial court could find excusable neglect as a matter of fact and, as a matter of law, plaintiff's explanation that counsel was confused as to the law in Georgia regarding substitution of an executor of a decedent's estate in place of a deceased defendant did not constitute excusable neglect, the trial court abused the court's discretion in denying the executor's motion to dismiss the plaintiff's suit for their failure to seek substitution of parties within the 180-day limitation period in paragraph (a)(1) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-25. King v. Green, 189 Ga. App. 105, 375 S.E.2d 53, cert. denied, 189 Ga. App. 912, 375 S.E.2d 53 (1988).

Plaintiff's failure to make a timely substitution of parties was not excused based on the fact that a guardian was representing the decedent's interests in the case prior to the decedent's death. Stephenson v. Ingram, 239 Ga. App. 892, 522 S.E.2d 500 (1999).

Judgment obtained against a deceased defendant is void, and the trial court does not err in vacating the judgment, setting the judgment aside, and dismissing the action, when no party has been substituted since the suggestion of death and no reason has been shown that the failure to act was the result of excusable neglect so as to allow an extension of time. Franklin v. Collins, 167 Ga. App. 596, 307 S.E.2d 66 (1983).

Judgment pending substitution void. — Summary judgment for the defendant, granted after the plaintiff's death and prior to substitution for the decedent, was void as to the decedent. Allen v. City of Moultrie, 162 Ga. App. 188, 290 S.E.2d 529 (1982).

Transfer of Interest

O.C.G.A. § 9-11-25 does not determine what actions shall survive transfer of interest by a party; the statute deals only with the mechanics of substitution in an action which does survive under the applicable substantive law. Goodyear v. Trust Co. Bank, 248 Ga. 407, 284 S.E.2d 6 (1981).

Transfer of interest during course of litigation contemplated. — Subsection (c) of this section, providing for substitution of the transferee of interest in the action, applies only when the transfer is made pending or during the course of litigation. Employers' Liab. Assurance Corp. v. Keelin, 132 Ga. App. 459, 208 S.E.2d 328 (1974).

Subsection (c) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-25 vests discretion in the trial judge to allow the original plaintiff to continue suit either alone or joined by the interest transferee when the transfer of interest occurred after the filing of the suit. Gene Thompson Lumber Co. v. Davis Parmer Lumber Co., 189 Ga. App. 573, 377 S.E.2d 15, cert. denied, 189 Ga. App. 912, 377 S.E.2d 15 (1988).

In an action for default on certain promissory notes in relation to a condominium investment, the trial court did not err in permitting the intervention of the FSLIC as a real party in interest, even though the FSLIC was abolished by a federal act reorganizing the savings and loan system. The trial court can substitute FSLIC's successor, the Resolution Trust Corporation, at any time. Stovall v. FSLIC, 260 Ga. 475, 396 S.E.2d 484 (1990).

From party to nonparty. — Subsection (c) of this section contemplates a transfer of interest, during litigation, from one who is a party to the case to one who is not, not a purported transfer from one who is not a party to the litigation to one who is. Commercial Union Ins. Co. v. Ed. V. Collins Contracting, Inc., 147 Ga. App. 183, 248 S.E.2d 220 (1978).

In an action for conversion, the trial court did not err in failing to direct a verdict in the defendant's favor on grounds that the plaintiff had assigned the plaintiff's interests in accounts receivable to another corporation, and thus was not the proper party to bring suit, when, for all this record showed, the plaintiff was the damaged party; the defendant did not prove otherwise, nor was the defendant the proper party to complain on behalf of the other corporation. Privitera v. Addison, 190 Ga. App. 102, 378 S.E.2d 312, cert. denied, 190 Ga. App. 898, 378 S.E.2d 312 (1989).

Continuance of original action not automatically authorized. — Subsection (c) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-25, when operative, does not automatically authorize the continuance of an original action in all cases following the transfer of an interest. If a cause of action does not survive a subsequent transfer of interest, subsection (c), standing alone, would not revive the action. Gene Thompson Lumber Co. v. Davis Parmer Lumber Co., 189 Ga. App. 573, 377 S.E.2d 15, cert. denied, 189 Ga. App. 912, 377 S.E.2d 15 (1988).

When transfer of interest, such as assignment, takes place prior to commencement of action, Ga. L. 1968, p. 1104, § 6, (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-17) controls and requires that the action shall be prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest. Employers' Liab. Assurance Corp. v. Keelin, 132 Ga. App. 459, 208 S.E.2d 328 (1974).

Action not surviving transfer of interest. — Action which sought to compel a party to do an affirmative act in regard to property in which the party no longer held an interest could not be continued, absent substitution of parties as provided in subsection (c) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-25. Georgia Power Co. v. Hunt, 266 Ga. 331, 466 S.E.2d 846 (1996).

Effect of dissolution, merger, or consolidation of corporation. — After dissolution of a corporation in any manner other than by court decree, or the corporation's merger or consolidation with another corporation, any pending actions by such a corporation can proceed as if the dissolution, merger, or consolidation had never taken place. Rosing v. Dwoskin Decorating Co., 141 Ga. App. 617, 234 S.E.2d 128 (1977).

Merging banks. — In a suit brought by mortgagors against the mortgagor bank that was taken over by a successor bank, the appellate court erred in dismissing the successor bank's appeal under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-25 for lack of standing based on the trial court's failure to add or substitute it as the defendant because the two corporations were deemed the same entity under federal and state law by virtue of their merger, thus, the claims originally filed by and against the mortgagee bank could continue. Nat'l City Mortg. Co. v. Tidwell, 293 Ga. 697, 749 S.E.2d 730 (2013).

Public Officers

Failure of complaint to show names of defendant public officers does not subject the complaint to dismissal. McDowell v. Judges Ex Officio, 235 Ga. 364, 219 S.E.2d 713 (1975).

Change of name of board after filing of complaint. — When action was filed by board under correct name provided by statute then in effect, fact that no motion was made in writing to substitute new name of the board when changed by the legislature did not subject the action to dismissal because subsection (c) of this section provides that such an action may be continued by the original party. Clark v. Board of Dental Exmrs., 240 Ga. 289, 240 S.E.2d 250 (1977).

9-11-26. General provisions governing discovery.

(a) Discovery methods. Parties may obtain discovery by one or more of the following methods: depositions upon oral examination or written questions; written interrogatories; production of documents or things or permission to enter upon land or other property for inspection and other purposes; physical and mental examinations; and requests for admission. Unless the court orders otherwise under subsection (c) of this Code section, the frequency of use of these methods is not limited.

(b) Scope of discovery. Unless otherwise limited by order of the court in accordance with this chapter, the scope of discovery is as follows:

(1) In general. Parties may obtain discovery regarding any matter, not privileged, which is relevant to the subject matter involved in the pending action, whether it relates to the claim or defense of the party seeking discovery or to the claim or defense of any other party, including the existence, description, nature, custody, condition, and location of any books, documents, or other tangible things and the identity and location of persons having knowledge of any discoverable matter. It is not ground for objection that the information sought will be inadmissible at the trial if the information sought appears reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence;

(2) Insurance agreements. A party may obtain discovery of the existence and contents of any insurance agreement under which any person carrying on an insurance business may be liable to satisfy part or all of a judgment which may be entered in the action or to indemnify or reimburse for payments made to satisfy the judgment. Information concerning the insurance agreement is not by reason of disclosure admissible in evidence at trial. For purposes of this paragraph, an application for insurance shall not be treated as part of an insurance agreement;

(3) Trial preparation; materials. Subject to paragraph (4) of this subsection, a party may obtain discovery of documents and tangible things otherwise discoverable under paragraph (1) of this subsection and prepared in anticipation of litigation or for trial by or for another party or by or for that other party's representative (including his attorney, consultant, surety, indemnitor, insurer, or agent) only upon a showing that the party seeking discovery has substantial need of the materials in the preparation of his case and that he is unable without undue hardship to obtain the substantial equivalent of the materials by other means. In ordering discovery of such materials when the required showing has been made, the court shall protect against disclosure of the mental impressions, conclusions, opinions, or legal theories of an attorney or other representative of a party concerning the litigation. A party may obtain, without the required showing, a statement concerning the action or its subject matter previously made by that party. Upon request, a person not a party may obtain, without the required showing, a statement concerning the action or its subject matter previously made by that person. If the request is refused, the person may move for a court order. Paragraph (4) of subsection (a) of Code Section 9-11-37 applies to the award of expenses incurred in relation to the motion. For purposes of this paragraph, a "statement previously made" is (A) a written statement signed or otherwise adopted or approved by the person making it, or (B) a stenographic, mechanical, electrical, or other recording, or a transcription thereof, which is a substantially verbatim recital of an oral statement by the person making it and contemporaneously recorded; and

(4) Trial preparation; experts. Discovery of facts known and opinions held by experts, otherwise discoverable under paragraph (1) of this subsection and acquired or developed in anticipation of litigation or for trial, may be obtained only as follows:

(A)(i) A party may, through interrogatories, require any other party to identify each person whom the other party expects to call as an expert witness at trial, to state the subject matter on which the expert is expected to testify, and to state the substance of the facts and opinions to which the expert is expected to testify and a summary of the grounds for each opinion.

(ii) A party may obtain discovery under Code Section 9-11-30, 9-11-31, or 9-11-34 from any expert described in this paragraph, the same as any other witness, but the party obtaining discovery of an expert hereunder must pay a reasonable fee for the time spent in responding to discovery by that expert, subject to the right of the expert or any party to obtain a determination by the court as to the reasonableness of the fee so incurred;

(B) A party may discover facts known or opinions held by an expert who has been retained or specially employed by another party in anticipation of litigation or preparation for trial and who is not expected to be called as a witness at trial, only as provided in subsection (b) of Code Section 9-11-35 or upon a showing of exceptional circumstances under which it is impracticable for the party seeking discovery to obtain facts or opinions on the same subject by other means; and

(C) Unless manifest injustice would result:

(i) The court shall require the party seeking discovery to pay the expert a reasonable fee for time spent in responding to discovery under subparagraph (B) of this paragraph; and

(ii) With respect to discovery obtained under division (ii) of subparagraph (A) of this paragraph, the court may require, and with respect to discovery obtained under subparagraph (B) of this paragraph the court shall require, the party seeking discovery to pay the other party a fair portion of the fees and expenses reasonably incurred by the latter party in obtaining facts and opinions from the expert.

(c) Protective orders. Upon motion by a party or by the person from whom discovery is sought and for good cause shown, the court in which the action is pending or, alternatively, on matters relating to a deposition, the court in the county where the deposition is to be taken may make any order which justice requires to protect a party or person from annoyance, embarrassment, oppression, or undue burden or expense, including one or more of the following:

(1) That the discovery not be had;

(2) That the discovery may be had only on specified terms and conditions, including a designation of the time or place;

(3) That the discovery may be had only by a method of discovery other than that selected by the party seeking discovery;

(4) That certain matters not be inquired into or that the scope of the discovery be limited to certain matters;

(5) That discovery be conducted with no one present except persons designated by the court;

(6) That a deposition, after being sealed, be opened only by order of the court;

(7) That a trade secret or other confidential research, development, or commercial information not be disclosed or be disclosed only in a designated way; or

(8) That the parties simultaneously file specified documents or information enclosed in sealed envelopes to be opened as directed by the court.

If the motion for a protective order is denied in whole or in part, the court may, on such terms and conditions as are just, order that any party or person provide or permit discovery. Paragraph (4) of subsection (a) of Code Section 9-11-37 applies to the award of expenses incurred in relation to the motion.

(d) Sequence and timing of discovery. Unless the court, upon motion, for the convenience of parties and witnesses and in the interests of justice, orders otherwise, methods of discovery may be used in any sequence; and the fact that a party is conducting discovery, whether by deposition or otherwise, shall not operate to delay any other party's discovery.

(e) Supplementation of responses. A party who has responded to a request for discovery with a response that was complete when made is under no duty to supplement his response to include information thereafter acquired, except as follows:

(1) A party is under a duty seasonably to supplement his response with respect to any question directly addressed to:

(A) The identity and location of persons having knowledge of discoverable matters; and

(B) The identity of each person expected to be called as an expert witness at trial, the subject matter on which he is expected to testify, and the substance of his testimony.

(2) A party is under a duty seasonably to amend a prior response if he obtains information upon the basis of which:

(A) He knows that the response was incorrect when made; or

(B) He knows that the response, though correct when made, is no longer true and the circumstances are such that a failure to amend the response is, in substance, a knowing concealment.

(3) A duty to supplement responses may be imposed by order of the court, agreement of the parties, or at any time prior to trial through new requests for supplementation of prior responses. (Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 26; Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 13; Ga. L. 1972, p. 510, § 1; Ga. L. 1984, p. 22, § 9; Ga. L. 1987, p. 3, § 9; Ga. L. 1993, p. 91, § 9.)

General Consideration

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code 1933, § 38-1101, and former Code 1933, Ch. 21, T. 38 are included in the annotations for this Code section.

Georgia Laws 1972, p. 510, made substantial revisions to certain sections of this chapter dealing with discovery. Prior to the 1972 amendment, this section was substantially the same as former Code 1933, § 38-2101. Hence, decisions based on this Code section prior to its 1972 amendment should be consulted with care.

For additional cases decided under this Code section prior to its amendment by Ga. L. 1972, p. 510, § 1, relating to the use of depositions, see annotations under § 9-11-32.

Georgia Laws 1972, p. 510, entirely superseded the former version of this section, the purpose being to conform the discovery provisions of the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) to the 1970 amendments to the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. Georgia Int'l Life Ins. Co. v. Boney, 139 Ga. App. 575, 228 S.E.2d 731 (1976).

Purpose of discovery. — Purpose of deposition-discovery procedure is not only to ascertain facts, but also to determine what the adverse party contends they are and what purpose they will serve so that the issues may be narrowed, the trial simplified, and time and expense conserved. Setzers Super Stores of Ga., Inc. v. Higgins, 104 Ga. App. 116, 121 S.E.2d 305 (1961) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 21, T. 38); Atlantic Coast Line R.R. v. Daugherty, 111 Ga. App. 144, 141 S.E.2d 112 (1965) (decided under former Code 1933, § 38-2109).

Discovery is specifically designed to fulfill a two-fold purpose: issue formulation and factual revelation. Travis Meat & Seafood Co. v. Ashworth, 127 Ga. App. 284, 193 S.E.2d 166 (1972); International Serv. Ins. Co. v. Bowen, 130 Ga. App. 140, 202 S.E.2d 540 (1973); Clarkson Indus., Inc. v. Price, 135 Ga. App. 787, 218 S.E.2d 921 (1975), overruled on other grounds, Tobacco Rd., Inc. v. Callaghan, 174 Ga. App. 539, 330 S.E.2d 768 (1985).

Broad purpose of discovery rules is to enable parties to prepare for trial so that each party will know the issues and be fully prepared on the facts. Travis Meat & Seafood Co. v. Ashworth, 127 Ga. App. 284, 193 S.E.2d 166 (1972); International Serv. Ins. Co. v. Bowen, 130 Ga. App. 140, 202 S.E.2d 540 (1973); Clarkson Indus., Inc. v. Price, 135 Ga. App. 787, 218 S.E.2d 921 (1975).

Rules of discovery under the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) are designed to narrow and clarify the issues and to remove the potential for secrecy and hiding of material that existed under the previous system; in particular, such rules are designed to provide parties with the opportunity to obtain material knowledge of all relevant facts thereby reducing the element of surprise at trial. Hanna Creative Enters., Inc. v. Alterman Foods, Inc., 156 Ga. App. 376, 274 S.E.2d 761 (1980).

Broad construction of use of discovery. — Use of the discovery process has been held to be broadly construed. Travis Meat & Seafood Co. v. Ashworth, 127 Ga. App. 284, 193 S.E.2d 166 (1972); International Serv. Ins. Co. v. Bowen, 130 Ga. App. 140, 202 S.E.2d 540 (1973).

Broad use of discovery favors supplying a party with the facts underlying the opponent's case, without reference to whether the facts sought are admissible at trial. Setzers Super Stores of Ga., Inc. v. Higgins, 104 Ga. App. 116, 121 S.E.2d 305 (1961) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 21, T. 38).

In a hospital lien case, the trial court erred by granting a patient's motion to compel seeking discovery from a medical center as to the center's rate-setting agreements with insurers and the center's revenue and other information because the patient was uninsured and such discovery was not relevant nor reasonably calculated to lead to admissible evidence. Med. Ctr., Inc. v. Bowden, 327 Ga. App. 714, 761 S.E.2d 116 (2014).

Discovery by driver in default. — Even though the issue of liability was resolved by a driver's default, the question of damages remained; the driver was entitled to introduce evidence as to damages and the driver had the right to engage in discovery. Russaw v. Burden, 272 Ga. App. 632, 612 S.E.2d 913 (2005).

Failure to initiate discovery. — Trial court did not err in dismissing the shareholder's derivative action filed by the shareholder as it was within the trial court's discretion to dismiss the action once the shareholder failed to initiate discovery to determine whether the report filed by the special litigation committee that responded to the shareholder's claims of corporate improprieties and which concluded that the shareholder's claims were meritless was made in good faith and properly concluded that pursuing a lawsuit against the corporation was not in the corporation's best interests. Thompson v. Scientific Atlanta, Inc., 275 Ga. App. 680, 621 S.E.2d 796 (2005).

Denial of motion to compel proper. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by denying a motion to compel discovery before ruling on an investor's motion for summary judgment because, although no express order was entered by the trial court denying the motion to compel discovery, it was not presumed that the trial court failed to consider the motion to compel before ruling on summary judgment, but rather, it was presumed that the trial court implicitly denied the motions to compel upon entering summary judgment; assuming the trial court properly exercised the court's discretion to delay the hearing on the motion for summary judgment and extend the time allowing a financial advisor to take depositions, there is no evidence that the advisor made any effort to schedule the depositions before the trial court rescheduled the hearing. Tyler v. Thompson, 308 Ga. App. 221, 707 S.E.2d 137 (2011).

Denial of motion to reopen discovery. — There was no abuse of discretion in the trial court's denial of a client's motion to reopen discovery given the length of time the case had been pending and the client's failure to specify the evidence the client hoped to obtain during discovery; the client did not detail any discovery the client needed to obtain. Quarterman v. Cullum, 311 Ga. App. 800, 717 S.E.2d 267 (2011), cert. denied, No. S12C0297, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 179 (Ga. 2012); cert. dismissed, U.S. , 133 S. Ct. 388, 184 L. Ed. 2d 10 (2012).

There is no territorial limitation in the discovery statutes as to location of witnesses, documents, assets, etc. Thrift v. Vi-Vin Prods., Inc., 134 Ga. App. 717, 215 S.E.2d 709 (1975).

Nonresident who files a lawsuit in Georgia may, in the court's discretion, be compelled to give a deposition in Georgia. Warehouse Home Furn. Distrib., Inc. v. Davenport, 261 Ga. 853, 413 S.E.2d 195 (1992).

Wide latitude is given to make complete discovery possible. Travis Meat & Seafood Co. v. Ashworth, 127 Ga. App. 284, 193 S.E.2d 166 (1972).

Powers of trial court as to depositions. — Trial court has the power under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-26 to control the details of time, place, scope, and financing of a deposition for the protection of the deponents and parties. Bicknell v. CBT Factors Corp., 171 Ga. App. 897, 321 S.E.2d 383 (1984).

Attorney fees imposed. — Award of sanctions in the form of attorney fees against a heating system installer that failed to produce an officer for deposition, despite a court order, was proper under §§ 9-11-37(b)(2), as the sanctions were proper despite the fact that there was no order under § 9-11-37(a) or O.C.G.A. § 9-11-26(c), the failure to appear was not substantially justified, and the amount awarded was not excessive. Carrier Corp. v. Rollins, Inc., 316 Ga. App. 630, 730 S.E.2d 103 (2012).

Discretion of trial judge not interfered with. — Policy of the appellate courts of this state is not to interfere with trial judge's broad discretion granted under the discovery provisions of this section. Vaughn & Co. v. Saul, 143 Ga. App. 74, 237 S.E.2d 622 (1977).

Absent clear abuse. — Supreme Court will not reverse a trial court's decision on discovery matters absent a clear abuse of discretion. Ambassador College v. Goetzke, 244 Ga. 322, 260 S.E.2d 27 (1979), cert. denied, 444 U.S. 1079, 100 S. Ct. 1029, 62 L. Ed. 2d 762 (1980).

Availability of discovery in contempt case. — Discovery is available to the parties litigant in a contempt of court case. Hill v. Bartlett, 124 Ga. App. 56, 183 S.E.2d 80 (1971), overruled on other grounds, In re Crane, 253 Ga. 667, 324 S.E.2d 443 (1985).

Workers' compensation claims. — Statute is not applicable to workers' compensation claims unless made so by the statute pertaining specifically to workers' compensation claims. National Biscuit Co. v. Martin, 225 Ga. 198, 167 S.E.2d 140 (1969). But see § 34-9-102(d)(1), now providing that discovery procedures in hearings of such claims be governed by this chapter.

Surprise witness. — When testimony of purported "surprise" witness not named in discovery process was merely cumulative of other testimony adduced at trial, any error in allowing the witness to testify was harmless. Glennville Hatchery, Inc. v. Thompson, 164 Ga. App. 819, 298 S.E.2d 512 (1982).

Privilege against self-incrimination. — When a party asserts the privilege against self-incrimination concerning matters sought to be discovered, the party must respond to each question asked, asserting the privilege to those questions the party deems necessary. Axson v. National Sur. Corp., 254 Ga. 248, 327 S.E.2d 732 (1985).

Defendant was properly held in civil contempt for violating a consent interlocutory injunction by failing to answer questions under oath in discovery proceedings because the defendant could not, by invoking the privilege against self-incrimination, prevent enforcement of the very order to which the defendant consented. In re Purohit, 213 Ga. App. 182, 444 S.E.2d 133 (1994).

Production of tape of sexual assault in civil suit was not criminalized. — In a civil premises liability action arising from a sexual assault on a minor, in which a manager sought production of a videotape of the assault made by the assailants, O.C.G.A. § 16-12-100(b)(5) did not criminalize the act of producing the tape in response to a court order or a request for discovery, and the trial court erred in holding otherwise. Alexander Props. Group, Inc. v. Doe, 280 Ga. 306, 626 S.E.2d 497 (2006).

Waiver of work product protection. — Record supported the trial court's judgment that a corporation waived work product protection when the corporation shared documents with the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) during the SEC's investigation of allegations involving securities fraud, and the trial court did not err when the court granted a motion to compel discovery which was filed by parties who owned shares in the corporation, even though the corporation and the SEC had signed a confidentiality agreement. McKesson Corp. v. Green, 266 Ga. App. 157, 597 S.E.2d 447 (2004).

Majority of jurisdictions that have considered the issue have determined that the burden of proving a waiver of work-product protection lies on the party asserting the waiver; however, in an action by shareholders based on stock losses following corporate acquisition of another company, the trial court neither explicitly or implicitly placed the burden of showing non-waiver of the work-product protection on a buyer. McKesson Corp. v. Green, 279 Ga. 95, 610 S.E.2d 54 (2005).

Personnel records not privileged. — Asserted need to protect the privacy of the internally generated personnel records and evaluations of allegedly negligent employees is not sufficient to render the material privileged from discovery as a matter of law. DeLoitte Haskins & Sells v. Green, 187 Ga. App. 376, 370 S.E.2d 194, cert. denied, 187 Ga. App. 907, 370 S.E.2d 194 (1988).

Claims file of liability insurer. — Order requiring a liability insurer to produce the insurer's entire claims file was proper when privileged information was specifically excluded and the insurer did not contest the relevancy of the material. International Indem. Co. v. Saia Motor Freight Line, 223 Ga. App. 544, 478 S.E.2d 776 (1996).

Out-of-state order prohibiting unprivileged testimony. — Michigan order, by facially prohibiting former corporate litigation consultant from testifying as to matters outside the scope of any privilege, violated Georgia public policy; therefore, the full faith and credit clause did not require the federal district court in Georgia to give full effect to the Michigan Court order. Williams v. GMC, 147 F.R.D. 270 (S.D. Ga. 1993).

Out-of-state confidential settlement statement. — Trial court erred in concluding that a confidential settlement agreement, even if incorporated as another court's final order, can operate to preclude discovery by Georgia litigants of the parties to that confidential settlement agreement. Barger v. Garden Way, Inc., 231 Ga. App. 723, 499 S.E.2d 737 (1998).

Parties not obliged to confer about discovery plan. — Motorist's suit was properly dismissed under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37(d), as the motorist failed to attend any of three scheduled depositions that were properly noticed under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-30(b)(1), defense counsel was not required to address the motorist's proposed discovery plan, and counsel's failure to do so did not excuse the motorist's failure to attend the depositions. Pascal v. Prescod, 296 Ga. App. 359, 674 S.E.2d 623 (2009).

Scope of Discovery

Discovery is available under the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) to any party, in any court, regarding any matter, not privileged, which is relevant to the subject matter involved in the pending action. Morton v. Gardner, 242 Ga. 852, 252 S.E.2d 413 (1979).

Discovery may be had from the opposite party in any case, legal or equitable, pending in any court; this is even more true today since the adoption of the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9). Morton v. Gardner, 242 Ga. 852, 252 S.E.2d 413 (1979).

Liberal allowance of discovery. — Rule that discovery is not limited to matters that are admissible in evidence at the trial if the information sought appears reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence is to be given a liberal construction in favor of supplying a party with the facts underlying the opponent's case, without reference to whether the facts sought are admissible upon trial of the action. Bridges v. 20th Century Travel, Inc., 149 Ga. App. 837, 256 S.E.2d 102 (1979).

Discovery procedure is to be given a liberal construction in favor of supplying a party with the facts without reference to whether the facts sought are admissible upon the trial of the action. Bullard v. Ewing, 158 Ga. App. 287, 279 S.E.2d 737 (1981).

It is not ground for objection that information sought will be inadmissible at trial if the information sought appears reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. Bullard v. Ewing, 158 Ga. App. 287, 279 S.E.2d 737 (1981).

Matters sought to be discovered need not be incapable of proof otherwise in order to maintain a bill of discovery. Farmers Bank v. Harrison, 182 Ga. 623, 186 S.E. 687 (1936) (decided under former Code 1933, § 38-1101).

Certain matters not discoverable. — Bill for discovery will not lie to determine matters not necessary, material, or relevant to the issue, or when it would seriously injure the party's business and the chance of benefit to the other party is small. Farmers Bank v. Harrison, 182 Ga. 623, 186 S.E. 687 (1936) (decided under former Code 1933, § 38-1101).

Overly broad requests not allowed. — Grant of requests for "all correspondence between the Internal Revenue Service and the defendant concerning the defendant's recent audit, and a copy of the IRS's audit result and/or report," and a "copy of the defendant's most current balance sheet with supporting schedules, ledgers, etc.," was an abuse of discretion. Southern Outdoor Promotions, Inc. v. National Banner Co., 215 Ga. App. 133, 449 S.E.2d 684 (1994).

Request for production of "all other documents" intended for use at trial. — Production of "all other documents" intended for use at trial is outside the scope of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-34(a), delineated under paragraph (b)(1) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-26 as "any matter . . . which is relevant to the subject matter involved in the pending action," without regard to whether or not that "matter" will be used as evidence at the trial of the action. E.H. Siler Realty & Bus. Broker, Inc. v. Sanderlin, 158 Ga. App. 796, 282 S.E.2d 381 (1981).

Scope of discovery under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-33 (interrogatories) is as broad as the scope of examination under subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-26. Armstrong v. Strand, 167 Ga. App. 723, 307 S.E.2d 528 (1983).

When information sought appears reasonably calculated to lead to discovery of admissible evidence, and does not fall within any of the guidelines for entry of protective orders, it is not error to compel its discovery and to grant sanction for noncompliance therewith, even if such evidence might be inadmissible at trial. Ambassador College v. Goetzke, 244 Ga. 322, 260 S.E.2d 27 (1979), cert. denied, 444 U.S. 1079, 100 S.Ct. 1029, 62 L. Ed. 2d 762 (1980).

Any question calling for an answer may be asked any deponent regardless of the question being hearsay, immaterial, incompetent, or irrelevant, so long as the question is reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. Travis Meat & Seafood Co. v. Ashworth, 127 Ga. App. 284, 193 S.E.2d 166 (1972).

Inquiring into the content of relevant documents is within the scope of discovery. Clarkson Indus., Inc. v. Price, 135 Ga. App. 787, 218 S.E.2d 921 (1975), overruled on other grounds, Tobacco Rd., Inc. v. Callaghan, 174 Ga. App. 539, 330 S.E.2d 768 (1985).

Discoverability of statements or reports obtained in regular course of business. — Discovery of statements or reports of objective facts obtained by a party during the course of an investigation conducted as a regular practice or as a normal part of the party's business should be allowed. Atlantic Coast Line R.R. v. Daugherty, 111 Ga. App. 144, 141 S.E.2d 112 (1965) (decided under former Code 1933, § 38-2109).

Spouse's records. — There was some evidence in the record to support the conclusion that the wife's records were relevant to the subject matter of the husband's litigation or reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. In re Callaway, 212 Ga. App. 500, 442 S.E.2d 309 (1994).

Attorney's records. — Document an attorney creates is owned by the client and should be produced upon the client's request unless the attorney can cite "good cause" that would justify the attorney's refusal to turn over the document to the client, such as when the disclosure would violate an attorney's duty to a third party, when the document assesses the client personally, or when the document includes tentative preliminary impressions of the legal or factual issues presented in the representation recorded primarily for the purpose of giving internal direction to facilitate performance of legal services entailed in that representation. Swift, Currie, McGhee & Hiers v. Henry, 276 Ga. 571, 581 S.E.2d 37 (2003).

Names and addresses of clinic patients were discoverable in an action by a clinic against a rival alleging a scheme by the latter to divert current and potential patients. Gazelah v. Rome Gen. Practice, Inc., 232 Ga. App. 343, 502 S.E.2d 251 (1998).

Identity of witnesses not generally privileged. — Identity of witnesses or probable witnesses in a case is not, with certain exceptions, considered privileged, even in the hands of an attorney, and particularly when the facts were obtained by someone other than the attorney. Jaynes v. Blake, 119 Ga. App. 748, 168 S.E.2d 832 (1969) (decided under former Code 1933, § 38-2101).

Names and addresses of witnesses must be furnished. — Party must furnish information as to names and addresses of witnesses known to the party or to the party's attorney; this information is not a part of the work product. Jaynes v. Blake, 119 Ga. App. 748, 168 S.E.2d 832 (1969) (decided under former Code 1933, § 38-2101).

Designation of proposed witnesses not necessary. — While names of all witnesses as to matter to which interrogatory is addressed must be given, there is no requirement that the names of those who are to be called and sworn as witnesses be singled out; in answering it is simply required that the names, addresses, etc., of all having knowledge of any specific matters to which the interrogatory may be directed, be given, without designating which of them will be sworn as witnesses. Nathan v. Duncan, 113 Ga. App. 630, 149 S.E.2d 383 (1966) (decided under former Code 1933, § 38-2108).

While plaintiff is entitled to names and addresses of defendant's witnesses who have knowledge of relevant facts, the defendant is not required to state the specific names of those persons whom the defendant proposes to call as witnesses. Grant v. Huff, 122 Ga. App.

Scope of Discovery (Cont'd)

783, 178 S.E.2d 734 (1970).

Plaintiff was not entitled to discover information concerning defendant's personal financial resources absent an evidentiary showing (by affidavit, discovery responses, or otherwise) that a factual basis existed for the plaintiff's punitive damage claim. Holman v. Burgess, 199 Ga. App. 61, 404 S.E.2d 144, cert. denied, 199 Ga. App. 906, 404 S.E.2d 144 (1991).

Income tax returns are not privileged and are subject to discovery. Bailey v. Bruce, 132 Ga. App. 782, 209 S.E.2d 135 (1974).

Income tax returns require more than de minimis showing of relevancy. — While income tax returns are not privileged, more than a de minimis showing of relevancy is required for discovery thereof. Borenstein v. Blumenfeld, 151 Ga. App. 420, 260 S.E.2d 377 (1979).

Although income tax returns are not privileged, the returns are not automatically discoverable upon a de minimis showing of relevancy. Snellings v. Sheppard, 229 Ga. App. 753, 494 S.E.2d 583 (1998).

Communications between psychiatrist and patient are privileged. Bogges v. Aetna Life Ins. Co., 128 Ga. App. 190, 196 S.E.2d 172 (1973).

Trial court erred in requiring a passenger to produce any confidential communications made between the passenger and the passenger's mental-health-care providers because the passenger's handling of discovery, albeit troublesome, did not amount to a decisive and unequivocal waiver of the passenger's mental-health privilege as the law required; the passenger's arguably misleading responses to opposing counsel's questions regarding a previous diagnosis of depression did not amount to a "decisive" and "unequivocal" waiver of the mental-health privilege, and the passenger's decision to answer the deposition question posed to the passenger (whether the passenger suffered from a history of depression), rather than object to the question at the time the issue of depression was raised, did not constitute an explicit waiver of the privilege. Mincey

v. Ga. Dep't of Cmty. Affairs, 308 Ga. App. 740, 708 S.E.2d 644 (2011).

Names and addresses of similar patients. — Plaintiff's interrogatories seeking the names and addresses of patients upon whom the defendants had performed the same surgical procedure were not limited to those surgeries which had presented problems of any kind and the trial court, therefore, properly granted the defendants' motion for an order protecting them. Reece v. Selmonosky, 179 Ga. App. 718, 347 S.E.2d 649 (1986).

Deletion of privileged matter from document. — When any document sought to be produced contains a mixture of privileged and nonprivileged communication or information, ample remedy is provided to delete privileged matter, and this also would be within the inherent power of the court. Cranford v. Cranford, 120 Ga. App. 470, 170 S.E.2d 844 (1969).

O.C.G.A. § 45-9-1(c) does not prohibit discovery by tort plaintiff of liability insurance policies purchased by a government agency for the agency's employees. Pate v. Caballero, 253 Ga. 787, 325 S.E.2d 375 (1985).

Disclosure of insurance contract in negligence case grounds for mistrial. — In an ordinary negligence case, not only is a liability insurance policy of a litigant not admissible in evidence, but disclosure to the jury of the mere existence of such contract is ground for mistrial. City Council v. Lee, 153 Ga. App. 94, 264 S.E.2d 683 (1980).

Unless relevant for some acceptable reason. — While evidence of liability insurance for the benefit of one charged with negligence is usually refused on the rationale that it is irrelevant and prejudicial because it suggests to the jury that the wealth of the insurer is available to assuage the tort, nevertheless, when the existence of insurance becomes relevant for some other reason, evidence thereof should be admitted. Sasser v. Lester, 153 Ga. App. 220, 264 S.E.2d 728 (1980).

Objection to interrogations regarding defendant's ability to pay potential judgment properly sustained. — Interrogatories seeking information pertaining to gross pay, income, ownership of property, limits of liability insurance policy, and financial ability of the defendant to pay a possible judgment against the defendant did not appear to be reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence, and sustaining of the defendant's objections thereto was not error. Grant v. Huff, 122 Ga. App. 783, 178 S.E.2d 734 (1970).

Inquiry whether foreign judgment paid or released. — Inquiry as to whether or not the plaintiff's judgment against the defendant had been paid, in part or in whole, or if one of the tort-feasors had been released, or if one of the defendants had concluded an agreement to pay the judgment in whole or in part was relevant to an action for execution of a foreign judgment attempted to be domesticated in Georgia. Armstrong v. Strand, 167 Ga. App. 723, 307 S.E.2d 528 (1983).

Loan documents. — Trial court erred in denying plaintiffs' discovery request that sought the discovery of documents pertaining to a development loan in a lawsuit involving a dispute between joint venturers as the trial court should have applied the proper standard of relevancy set forth in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-26, as opposed to ruling that the plaintiffs simply had enough documents. Hampton Island Founders v. Liberty Capital, 283 Ga. 289, 658 S.E.2d 619 (2008).

Confidential sources in defamation cases. — Trial court is obligated under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-26 to balance a defamation plaintiff's need for identities of confidential informants against the defendant newspaper's interest in protecting the privacy of the confidential informants and the freedom of the press in general. The trial court must require the plaintiff to specifically identify each and every purported statement asserted as libelous, determine whether the plaintiff can prove the statements were untrue, taking into account all the other available evidentiary sources, including the plaintiff's own admissions, and determine whether the statements can be proven false through the use of other evidence, thus eliminating the plaintiff's necessity for the requested discovery. If a plaintiff cannot succeed on a specific allegation of libel as a matter of law, or if the plaintiff is able to prove a specific allegation through the use of available alternative means, then the trial court's balancing test should favor non-disclosure of confidential sources; however, if a specific allegation of libel is determined to be legally viable, or if it cannot be determined whether the allegation is legally viable given the current state of the record, and if the identity of the sources is either relevant and material in and of itself, or is the only available avenue to other admissible evidence, then the trial court's balancing test should favor disclosure of the confidential sources. Atlanta Journal-Constitution v. Jewell, 251 Ga. App. 808, 555 S.E.2d 175 (2001).

Workers' compensation cases. — There was no error in denying a workers' compensation claimant's motion to compel production of certain documents and correspondence from an employer's claims adjuster because the employer met the employer's burden of showing that the documents were prepared in anticipation of litigation and thus were not discoverable; the claimant failed to establish the claimant's substantial need for the material. S&B Eng'rs & Constructors Ltd. v. Bolden, 304 Ga. App. 534, 697 S.E.2d 260, cert. dismissed, No. S10C1789, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 912 (Ga. 2010).

Party seeking to examine jury regarding disqualifying ties must be permitted to pose questions before verdict. — Party seeking to examine the jury regarding disqualifying ties to insurance companies must be permitted to pose the questions before the verdict, and an error in that regard cannot be cured or deemed harmless after the verdict. Ford Motor Co. v. Conley, 294 Ga. 530, 757 S.E.2d 20 (2014).

Trial court did not abuse discretion in granting extraordinary motion for new trial based on misleading discovery responses. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in granting the plaintiffs' extraordinary motion for new trial based on an auto company's misleading discovery responses with regard to liability insurance because the plaintiffs acted with due diligence to raise the plaintiffs' claim that the jury should have been qualified as to the auto company's insurers and the failure to do so raised an un rebutted presumption that the plaintiffs were materially harmed. Ford Motor Co. v. Conley, 294 Ga. 530, 757 S.E.2d 20 (2014).

Trial Preparation MaterialsScope of work product exception.

— Statute extends work product exception to parties and their representatives, such as attorneys, consultants, sureties, indemnitors, insurers, or agents. Clarkson Indus., Inc. v. Price, 135 Ga. App. 787, 218 S.E.2d 921 (1975), overruled on other grounds, Tobacco Rd., Inc. v. Callaghan, 174 Ga. App. 539, 330 S.E.2d 768 (1985).

Anticipation of litigation. — Material obtained or collected by a party is protected from discovery as work product even “before claim is instituted” if “reasonable grounds exist to believe that litigation is probable.” Department of Transp. v. Hardaway Co., 216 Ga. App. 262, 454 S.E.2d 167 (1995).

Attorney-client privilege to be narrowly construed. — In determining whether statements are to have protection under the attorney-client privilege, such privilege should be confined to its narrowest permissible limits under the statute of its creation, for it is only in that way that discovery provisions can be afforded the liberal construction and interpretation that will enable them to accomplish the purpose for which they were intended. Atlantic Coast Line R.R. v. Daugherty, 111 Ga. App. 144, 141 S.E.2d 112 (1965) (decided under former Code 1933, § 38-2109).

As with the attorney-client privilege, the work-product doctrine is not absolute, and attorneys cannot cloak themselves in its mantle when their mental impressions and opinions are directly at issue. Accordingly, the doctrine should not apply when a client, as opposed to some other party, seeks to discover an attorney's mental impressions because it cannot shield a lawyer's papers from discovery in a conflict of interest context anymore than can the attorney-client privilege. Hunter, Maclean, Exley & Dunn, P.C. v. St. Simons

Waterfront, LLC, 317 Ga. App. 1, 730 S.E.2d 608 (2012).

Discovery of an attorney's work product will generally be withheld. Atlantic Coast Line R.R. v. Daugherty, 111 Ga. App. 144, 141 S.E.2d 112 (1965) (decided under former Code 1933, § 38-2109).

No basis for refusal to appear for deposition. — Work product privilege contained in subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-26 pertains to “documents and tangible things” and provides no basis for a party, even a party exercising self-representation, to refuse to appear for a deposition. Jarallah v. Pickett Suite Hotel, 193 Ga. App. 325, 388 S.E.2d 333 (1989), cert. denied, 495 U.S. 936, 110 S. Ct. 2183, 109 L. Ed. 2d 512 (1990).

Purpose of doctrine of “work product” is to protect attorney's preparation for trial from discovery. Atlantic Coast Line R.R. v. Daugherty, 111 Ga. App. 144, 141 S.E.2d 112 (1965) (decided under former Code 1933, § 38-2109).

Real purpose of the work product exception to the general broad scope of discovery is protection of the mental impressions, conclusions, and theories of persons engaged in preparing litigation. Clarkson Indus., Inc. v. Price, 135 Ga. App. 787, 218 S.E.2d 921 (1975), overruled on other grounds, Tobacco Rd., Inc. v. Callaghan, 174 Ga. App. 539, 330 S.E.2d 768 (1985).

Requirements necessary to constitute work product. — In order to escape discovery under paragraph (b)(3) of this section, documents and tangible things must have been prepared in anticipation of litigation or for trial by or for a party or by or for that party's representative and the materials must contain the mental impressions, conclusions, opinions, or legal theories of the person preparing them; if the items sought do not satisfy both requirements, they do not constitute work products, and may be freely discovered. Clarkson Indus., Inc. v. Price, 135 Ga. App. 787, 218 S.E.2d 921 (1975), overruled on other grounds, Tobacco Rd., Inc. v. Callaghan, 174 Ga. App. 539, 330 S.E.2d 768 (1985).

Work product exception cannot be proved by a general objection that interrogatories seek information concerning efforts to prepare for trial. Clarkson Indus., Inc. v. Price, 135 Ga. App. 787, 218 S.E.2d 921 (1975), overruled on other grounds, Tobacco Rd., Inc. v. Callaghan, 174 Ga. App. 539, 330 S.E.2d 768 (1985).

Transcript of misdemeanor trial not work product. — Even though an accurate transcript of the testimony adduced at a misdemeanor trial may be available only because of the foresightedness of plaintiff's counsel, who hired the reporter with future civil litigation in mind or for other reasons, including an appeal in the event of conviction, it is nonetheless merely a record of the proceedings of a public trial, which is sought from the reporter, not the attorney, and is not privileged as the attorney's work product. Robinson v. J.C. Penney Co., 124 Ga. App. 221, 183 S.E.2d 782 (1971).

Audit documents provided to SEC. — In an action in which the shareholders sued because of stock losses following corporate acquisition of another company, the trial court neither explicitly or implicitly placed the burden of showing non-waiver of the work-product protection on a buyer; the buyer waived work-product protection when the buyer provided certain audit documents to the United States Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) because the buyer and the SEC were actual or potential adversaries when the documents were disclosed, and a confidentiality agreement did not ensure that the audit documents would remain confidential since it allowed the SEC to give the documents to others if it deemed that course of action to be in furtherance of its duties and responsibilities. McKesson Corp. v. Green, 279 Ga. 95, 610 S.E.2d 54 (2005).

Company's revenues and profits relevant. — Trial court erred in denying a partner's motion to compel the discovery of the financial records of a company a copartner formed because the revenues and profits of the company could very well have some relevance to the proper measure of damages; the trial court erred in concluding that the revenues and profits that the company earned from business opportunities lost by the partnership could not possibly be probative of the damages that the partner could be entitled to recover and that the partner could not have any discovery of the finances of the company because some reasonable person could say that the revenues and profits the company earned from the same business opportunities could be a fair approximation of the revenues that the partnership would have earned from the opportunities and were, therefore, probative of the lost revenue and profit of the partnership. McMillian v. McMillian, 310 Ga. App. 735, 713 S.E.2d 920 (2011).

Investigations made and statements taken under attorney's supervision. — Once the attorney-client relationship obtains as to a particular matter, an attorney may have investigations made or statements taken under the attorney's direct instruction and supervision, and these may be deemed a part of what the attorney has done, and thus a part of the attorney's work product. Atlantic Coast Line R.R. v. Daugherty, 111 Ga. App. 144, 141 S.E.2d 112 (1965) (decided under former Code 1933, § 38-2109).

Investigator's report to attorney. — Report of an investigator hired by the husband's attorney subsequent to the filing of an action for divorce and alimony by the wife, made directly to the attorney, is attorney's work product, and absent a showing of necessity and justification by wife, her discovery thereof must fail. Smith v. Smith, 223 Ga. 551, 156 S.E.2d 916 (1967) (decided under former Code 1933, § 38-2109).

Statement taken by insurer. — Statement of a party or other witness to an accident, if taken by an insurer in anticipation of a claim being filed against its insured, is considered a work product, even if taken before litigation is filed. Copher v. Mackey, 220 Ga. App. 43, 467 S.E.2d 362 (1996).

Not all statements taken by attorneys are work product. Clarkson Indus., Inc. v. Price, 135 Ga. App. 787, 218 S.E.2d 921 (1975), overruled on other grounds, Tobacco Rd., Inc. v. Callaghan, 174 Ga. App. 539, 330 S.E.2d 768 (1985).

Mere fact that statement is taken with an eye toward litigation does not automatically insulate the statement from discovery as work product. Clarkson Indus., Inc. v. Price, 135 Ga.

Trial Preparation Materials (Cont'd)

App. 787, 218 S.E.2d 921 (1975), overruled on other grounds, Tobacco Rd., Inc. v. Callaghan, 174 Ga. App. 539, 330 S.E.2d 768 (1985).

Attorney-client privilege does not cover the identity of documents a party reviews to prepare for a deposition. McKinnon v. Smock, 264 Ga. 375, 445 S.E.2d 526 (1994).

Disclosure of document to testify-ing expert. — When a document is prepared in anticipation of litigation by a party's counsel and then disclosed to that party's testifying expert, the disclosure does not waive the work product protection that should be accorded the document and the document may only be discovered upon the showing of substantial need and of undue hardship to obtain the materials by other means. McKinnon v. Smock, 209 Ga. App. 647, 434 S.E.2d 92 (1993).

Witness statements. — In order for the statement of a witness to be exempt from the general scope of discovery, the statement must have been orally given to a party or the party's representative, who records the statement in anticipation of litigation or trial. Clarkson Indus., Inc. v. Price, 135 Ga. App. 787, 218 S.E.2d 921 (1975), overruled on other grounds, Tobacco Rd., Inc. v. Callaghan, 174 Ga. App. 539, 330 S.E.2d 768 (1985).

Written statement of witness own impressions and observations. — Written statement of a witness, whether prepared by the witness and later delivered to the party or the party's representative, or drafted by the party or the party's representative and adopted by the witness, is not properly considered the work product of a party or the party's representative as the statement records the mental impressions and observations of the witness personally and not those of the party or the party's representative. Clarkson Indus., Inc. v. Price, 135 Ga. App. 787, 218 S.E.2d 921 (1975), overruled on other grounds, Tobacco Rd., Inc. v. Callaghan, 174 Ga. App. 539, 330 S.E.2d 768 (1985).

Recordation of witness statement as part of work product. — Recordation made by a party or the party's representative of the oral statement of a witness is normally a part of the work product for it will include the party's analysis and impression of what the witness has told the party. Clarkson Indus., Inc. v. Price, 135 Ga. App. 787, 218 S.E.2d 921 (1975), overruled on other grounds, Tobacco Rd., Inc. v. Callaghan, 174 Ga. App. 539, 330 S.E.2d 768 (1985).

Since federal law under which an action was brought protected the plaintiff's access to co-employees for information relating to it, an attorney did not violate Standard 47 of the state bar rules by obtaining the recorded statements of co-employees; the statements were protected from discovery by paragraph (b)(3) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-26. Norfolk S. Ry. v. Thompson, 208 Ga. App. 240, 430 S.E.2d 371 (1993).

Witness statement generated by plaintiff's and attorney's joint interview. — When an attorney and the plaintiff jointly interviewed a witness shortly before suit was filed and in contemplation of the litigation, the statement generated thereby comes within the definition of work product. McMillan v. GMC, 122 Ga. App. 855, 179 S.E.2d 99 (1970).

Written statements and memoranda in attorney's files. — Party is not entitled to discovery of written statements in the files of the attorney for the adverse party and of memoranda made by that attorney in anticipation of the litigation, absent a showing of necessity for production of such material or a demonstration that denial of production would cause hardship or injustice. Setzers Super Stores of Ga., Inc. v. Higgins, 104 Ga. App. 116, 121 S.E.2d 305 (1961) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 21, T. 38).

Failure to make proper inquiry on transcripts. — In a medical malpractice suit, the trial court erred by summarily determining that witness interview transcripts were not statutorily protected work product and ordered their production because the court failed to make any inquiry into the content of the transcripts and made no findings or conclusions with regard to the husband's need or hardship as required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-26(b)(3). Wellstar Health Sys. v. Jordan, 293 Ga. 12, 743 S.E.2d 375 (2013).

Accident investigation. — Work product immunity is not extended to statements obtained by claim agents or investigators, even though obtained under supervision of the defendant's counsel, when such statements are routinely obtained as a standard practice of investigating accidents in which it or its servants and agents may be involved while performing its functions. Atlantic Coast Line R.R. v. Gause, 116 Ga. App. 216, 156 S.E.2d 476 (1967) (decided under former Code 1933, § 38-2109).

In a suit based on an explosion and fire in a cold storage warehouse facility during the installation of a compressor engine, a contractor was entitled to disclosure of the facility owner's accident report, which was prepared after an accident investigation conducted by the owner's personnel because the report was not protected by the work-product doctrine under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-26(b)(3) since the report was not prepared in anticipation of litigation, but in the regular course of business in accordance with internal policies and applicable government regulations. Alta Refrigeration, Inc. v. AmeriCold Logistics, LLC, 301 Ga. App. 738, 688 S.E.2d 658 (2009).

Crash test documents from prior litigation. — In a negligence suit involving the death of an individual in an automobile collision, a trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by ordering the production of crash-test documents relating to prior litigation from an auto manufacturer as the plaintiff showed a substantial need for the requested documents since the requested evidence documented past car-to-car crash tests conducted by the auto manufacturer on a line of vehicles that included similar fuel tank locations and performance as the vehicle that was being driven by the decedent; the trial court properly concluded that the plaintiff could not obtain the substantial equivalent of the crash tests absent undue hardship since the plaintiff could not generate rear car-to-car crash tests that would have established the auto manufacturer's knowledge of dangers presented by the manufacturer's vehicle in rear car-to-car crashes; and the trial court ordered an in camera review of the documents with which the auto manufacturer refused to comply. Ford Motor Co. v. Gibson, 283 Ga. 398, 659 S.E.2d 346 (2008).

Substantial and undue hardship. — In order to discover documents, statements, and other tangible items of evidence developed by one party in preparation for litigation, the moving party must show affirmatively that the moving party has a substantial need for such evidence in the preparation of the case and that it would cause an undue hardship upon the moving party to develop that evidence by means other than extraction from the files of the opposing party; if the trial court is satisfied that the required showing has been made, the court may order the production, after an in-camera examination (or other acceptable agreement between the parties) with a view toward protecting against the disclosure of mental impressions, conclusions, opinions, or legal theories. Georgia Int'l Life Ins. Co. v. Boney, 139 Ga. App. 575, 228 S.E.2d 731 (1976).

Documents, statements, and other tangible items of evidence developed by one party in preparation for litigation are discoverable by the other party only in carefully limited circumstances; the moving party must show affirmatively that the moving party has a substantial need for such evidence in the preparation of the case and that it would cause an undue hardship upon the moving party to develop that evidence by means other than extraction from the files of the opposing party. Tobacco Rd., Inc. v. Callaghan, 174 Ga. App. 539, 330 S.E.2d 768 (1985).

In order to compel the production of trial preparation material developed in anticipation of litigation, the movant must show affirmatively that the movant has a substantial need for such evidence in the preparation of the movant's case and that it would cause an undue hardship upon the movant to develop that evidence by means other than extraction from the files of the opposing party. Lowe's of Ga., Inc. v. Webb, 180 Ga. App. 755, 350 S.E.2d 292 (1986).

Necessity must be shown. — Without some showing of necessity therefor, an attorney is not required to produce and make available to the attorney for the adverse party the attorney's "work product," including statements that the attorney may have obtained from witnesses or memoranda that the attorney may have made in anticipation of the litigation. Setzers Super Stores of Ga., Inc. v. Higgins, 104 Ga. App. 116, 121 S.E.2d 305 (1961) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 21, T. 38).

Party seeking discovery of work product must then show necessity or justification before being entitled to discovery. Atlantic Coast Line R.R. v. Daugherty, 111 Ga. App. 144, 141 S.E.2d 112 (1965) (decided under former Code 1933, § 38-2109).

Burden on movant to make requisite showing. — In order to require production of a work product item, there must be a showing of more than “good cause”; a showing of “necessity and justification,” which is of a higher order than the good cause requirement, must be made, and the burden is on the movant to do so. McMillan v. GMC, 122 Ga. App. 855, 179 S.E.2d 99 (1970).

Burden on party claiming privilege. — Party wishing to claim protection of the work-product privilege has the burden of showing the document or other item was prepared in anticipation of litigation. GMC v. Conkle, 226 Ga. App. 34, 486 S.E.2d 180 (1997).

To avoid injustice or hardship. — Showing required for discovering any portion of attorney’s work product is of a higher order than that of “good cause” required in other instances, and should be such as to lead the court to conclude that only by allowing discovery may manifest injustice be averted or an intolerable hardship prevented. Atlantic Coast Line R.R. v. Daugherty, 111 Ga. App. 144, 141 S.E.2d 112 (1965) (decided under former Code 1933, § 38-2109).

In order to require production of a work product item, a movant must demonstrate that a denial of the movant’s motion will result in manifest injustice or intolerable hardship. McMillan v. GMC, 122 Ga. App. 855, 179 S.E.2d 99 (1970).

Failure of court to require establishment of substantial need and undue hardship. — When a party has carried the party’s burden of showing material sought was obtained in anticipation of litigation, it becomes incumbent upon the trial court to require the other party to satisfy the second test established by the discovery statute; i.e., to show a substantial need and undue hardship in the development of the information sought. If the trial court does not do so, the judgment will be reversed and the record remanded to the trial court to add in the court’s order the court’s finding as to the second phase of the discovery of protected trial preparation material. Lowe’s of Ga., Inc. v. Webb, 180 Ga. App. 755, 350 S.E.2d 292 (1986).

Failure of court to decide whether work product doctrine applied. — In a discovery dispute with a corporation claiming that the work-product doctrine barred discovery of information, the trial court erred under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-26(b)(3) in ordering the corporation to provide information without first deciding whether the work-product doctrine or waiver applied. McKesson HBOC, Inc. v. Adler, 254 Ga. App. 500, 562 S.E.2d 809 (2002).

Transcript of prior traffic court proceedings discoverable. — Personal injury action defendants were entitled to discovery of the transcript of prior traffic court proceedings in which the defendants testified and were cross-examined as to issues bearing vitally upon their alleged liability in the subsequent civil case. Truitt v. Mason, 189 Ga. App. 24, 374 S.E.2d 771, cert. denied, 189 Ga. App. 913, 374 S.E.2d 771 (1988).

Statements of employees to supervisor and insurance adjuster. — When a store owner showed that from the very beginning the owner was aware that an adversarial action was forthcoming, in the face of hotly disputed fault, it substantially established that the statements given by the owner’s employees to their supervisor and an insurance adjuster before suit was filed met the statutory criteria of having been taken in contemplation of litigation or trial. Lowe’s of Ga., Inc. v. Webb, 180 Ga. App. 755, 350 S.E.2d 292 (1986).

Conflict over availability of document. — When parties are unable to resolve a conflict concerning what portions of a document containing both facts and legal theories should be made available to an adverse party, the parties shall submit the disputed document to the trial court along with their argument concerning which portions should be made available to the adverse party. The trial court shall then conduct an in camera inspection of the document and instruct the attorney claiming work product protection how the document should be altered for disclosure to the adverse party. McKinnon v. Smock, 209 Ga. App. 647, 434 S.E.2d 92 (1993).

Creation of issues. — Written claim and demand for payment outside the terms of the contract in response to a claim created the materials at issue. Department of Transp. v. Hardaway Co., 216 Ga. App. 262, 454 S.E.2d 167 (1995).

Discovery of material through use of deposition barred. — In an action arising from an automobile accident, when the defendant failed to demonstrate that the defendant had a substantial need for a statement of the plaintiff taken by an adjuster for the plaintiff's insurance carrier and would face undue hardship in obtaining substantially equivalent information elsewhere, the defendant could not require production of the statement at a deposition, nor require the adjuster to testify during deposition as to the content of the statement. Sturgill v. Garrison, 219 Ga. App. 306, 464 S.E.2d 902 (1995).

File of previous attorney. — Attorney's contention that a former client's attorney's attempt to obtain documents directly related to the pending divorce action and prepared in anticipation thereof should have been brought in a separate legal action was rejected under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-26(b) as the file was sought for purposes of the same pending divorce action for which the file was compiled in the first place; the trial court made an express finding that the client and the client's new attorney needed possession of the file in order to adequately present the client's claim, which was ongoing and still within the jurisdiction of the trial court. Mary A. Stearns, P.C. v. Williams-Murphy, 263 Ga. App. 239, 587 S.E.2d 247 (2003).

Attorney's defense to the trial court's order holding the attorney in contempt for the attorney's refusal to turn over a client's file challenging the underlying validity of the prior order requiring the attorney to turn over the file was a collateral attack that could be sustained under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(a) only if the prior order was void on the order's face. However, the trial court's prior order was not void on the order's face since: (1) the attorney was served with a motion to compel prior to the entry of the prior order; (2) the trial court had jurisdiction to issue an order to compel a nonparty to release necessary non-privileged documents specifically prepared in anticipation of a divorce action pending before the trial court under O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-26(b), 9-11-34(c)(1), and 9-11-37(a); (3) the attorney willfully disregarded the prior order; and (4) the prior order was entered in a matter over which the trial court had subject matter jurisdiction, making disobedience of the order contempt of court. Mary A. Stearns, P.C. v. Williams-Murphy, 263 Ga. App. 239, 587 S.E.2d 247 (2003).

Experts

Only general description of experts, not actors or observers, required. — As to expert witnesses who were not actors or observers, a very general summary of scientific or professional grounds is sufficient under subdivision (b)(4)(A)(i) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-26, since the opponent has further discovery through full depositions and cross-examinations. Candler Gen. Hosp. v. Joiner, 180 Ga. App. 455, 349 S.E.2d 756 (1986).

In a medical malpractice action, subdivision (b)(4)(A)(i) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-26 did not apply to physician witnesses whose knowledge and opinions arose from personal involvement with the decedent. McNabb v. Landis, 223 Ga. App. 894, 479 S.E.2d 194 (1996).

Applicability of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-26(b)(4)(A)(i). — In a medical malpractice case, when an expert's opinions arose from the expert's involvement as one of the patient's treating physicians, and not in anticipation of litigation, the expert's testimony did not fall within the ambit of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-26(b)(4)(A)(i). Yang v. Smith, 316 Ga. App. 458, 728 S.E.2d 794 (2012).

Experts (Cont'd)

Applicability of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-26(b)(4)(A)(ii). — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-26(b)(4)(A)(ii), relating to payment of fees for obtaining discovery from witnesses, applies to all discovery obtained from an expert in anticipation of litigation or trial. Polston v. Levine, 171 Ga. App. 893, 321 S.E.2d 350 (1984).

Deposing party to pay fees unless manifest injustice would result. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-26(b)(4)(A)(ii) and (b)(4)(C)(ii), when read together, require that a party pay the reasonable fees of any expert it deposes or redeposes, unless doing so would create manifest injustice; in other words, a trial court is not entitled to shift the payment of the expert's fees to the other party unless the deposing party demonstrates that shifting the fees is necessary to avoid a manifest injustice. In order to determine whether the party seeking to shift fees has met the party's burden on this issue, the trial court needs to consider and weigh factors including the possible hardships imposed on the respective parties, the need for doing justice on the merits between the parties, whether a party is indigent, and the need for maintaining orderly and efficient procedural arrangements. Barnum v. Coastal Health Servs., 288 Ga. App. 209, 653 S.E.2d 816 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 227 (Ga. 2008).

Continuing jurisdiction over fee controversies. — Controversies concerning expert-witness fees will be resolved by the trial court in proceedings ancillary to the litigation in which the fees arise, and the dismissal of the main action does not divest the trial court of jurisdiction to rule on a motion to compel payment. Polston v. Levine, 171 Ga. App. 893, 321 S.E.2d 350 (1984).

Accident investigator was not an "expert" with regard to the investigator's observations of the plaintiff in an automobile negligence case. Jones v. Scarborough, 194 Ga. App. 468, 390 S.E.2d 674 (1990).

Expert appraisal of condemned land not discoverable. — Discovery is not designed in land condemnation cases to force production of information relating to a party's expert appraisal of the property to be condemned. Thornton v. State Hwy. Dep't, 113 Ga. App. 351, 148 S.E.2d 66 (1966) (decided under former Code 1933, §§ 38-2105 and 38-2108).

In a land condemnation case, a transportation department could not compel discovery from a landowner's former expert because the expert had withdrawn from the case, the landowner stipulated that the landowner would not use the expert's information, and the transportation department showed no exceptional circumstances warranting an order compelling discovery of the expert's information. DOT v. Bacon Farms, L.P., 270 Ga. App. 862, 608 S.E.2d 305 (2004).

Statements of employee to city appraiser. — In a condemnation proceeding, when a city's witness not only directly supported the city's main contention, that a landowner's property could not be developed or removed from the flood plain, but the city's appraiser based a valuation on the witness's representations to that effect, the witness's testimony was critical, and the landowner had a right to interview the witness, check the facts to which the witness would testify, and, if indicated, arrange to secure rebuttal evidence or impeach the witness. Shepherd Interiors v. City of Atlanta, 263 Ga. App. 869, 589 S.E.2d 640 (2003).

Expert's testimony excluded for rules' violation. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion to impose the sanction of exclusion of an expert's testimony for the violation of the rules of discovery. Heyde v. Xtraman, Inc., 199 Ga. App. 303, 404 S.E.2d 607, cert. denied, 199 Ga. App. 906, 404 S.E.2d 607 (1991).

Refusal to allow expert to testify when notice not given. — When defendants did not give the plaintiffs prior notice that an accident reconstruction expert would testify concerning the use of seat belts, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by refusing to allow the defendants' expert to testify concerning a subject matter not revealed to the plaintiffs. Jones v. Livingston, 203 Ga. App. 99, 416 S.E.2d 142 (1992).

Expert testimony admitted when on "may call" list. — In a medical malpractice action against a pediatrician and a hospital, when the pediatrician settled and the hospital did not, experts subpoenaed to testify on behalf of the pediatrician could be called to testify on behalf of the hospital because the experts were listed by the hospital as “may call” witnesses on the pretrial order, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-26(b)(4)(A)(i), there were no hard and fast rules about the discovery period in the case, and, having deposed these witnesses, the party objecting to the witnesses being called could not claim surprise from the witnesses’ testimony. Gill v. Spivey, 264 Ga. App. 723, 592 S.E.2d 132 (2003).

Correspondence from attorney to expert protected. — One seeking discovery of facts known and opinions held by an expert acquired or developed in anticipation of litigation or for trial may do so without exhibiting a substantial need for the material and without establishing that undue hardship will result should the seeker have to employ other means to develop the evidence. McKinnon v. Smock, 264 Ga. 375, 445 S.E.2d 526 (1994).

Discovery seeking facts known and opinions held by an expert is subject to the provision of subsection (b)(3) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-26 against disclosure of mental impressions, conclusions, opinion, or legal theories of an attorney or other representative of a party concerning the litigation. Thus, correspondence from an attorney to an expert is protected from disclosure to the extent the correspondence contains the opinion work product of the attorney. McKinnon v. Smock, 264 Ga. 375, 445 S.E.2d 526 (1994).

Experts previously identified as fact witnesses. — Trial court did not err by admitting the testimony of four expert witnesses because the witnesses were previously identified as fact witnesses and the supplemental responses in discovery were in compliance with the express terms of the discovery requests, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-26, and a pretrial order. LN West Paces Ferry Assocs., LLC v. McDonald, 306 Ga. App. 641, 703 S.E.2d 85 (2010).

Expert testimony properly excluded. — Trial court did not err in excluding the testimony of a medical examiner because the testimony a decedent’s relatives sought to elicit went beyond the matters the medical examiner personally performed or observed and into the area of opinion testimony based upon a hypothetical posed by the questioner; the relatives failed to disclose the proffered expert testimony in pretrial discovery, and the disputed expert testimony was cumulative of the opinion testimony of another expert witness. Hewell v. Trover, 314 Ga. App. 738, 725 S.E.2d 853 (2012).

Protective Orders

Protective orders may be obtained to avoid disclosure of trade secrets, prevent harassment, embarrassment, oppression, or limit the scope of discovery. Atlantic Coast Line R.R. v. Daugherty, 111 Ga. App. 144, 141 S.E.2d 112 (1965) (decided under former Code 1933, § 38-2101).

Protective orders are intended to be protective, not prohibitive, and until such time as the court is satisfied by substantial evidence that bad faith or harassment motivates the discoverer’s action, the court should not intervene to limit or prohibit the scope of pretrial discovery. International Serv. Ins. Co. v. Bowen, 130 Ga. App. 140, 202 S.E.2d 540 (1973); Bridges v. 20th Century Travel, Inc., 149 Ga. App. 837, 256 S.E.2d 102 (1979).

Protective orders should not be entered to frustrate legitimate discovery. — Protective orders should not be entered when the effect is to frustrate and prevent legitimate discovery. Snead v. Pay-Less Rentals, Inc., 134 Ga. App. 325, 214 S.E.2d 412 (1975); Bridges v. 20th Century Travel, Inc., 149 Ga. App. 837, 256 S.E.2d 102 (1979).

Issuance of order as recognition of need to protect. — Issuance of a protective order is a recognition of the fact that in some circumstances the interest in gathering information must yield to the interest in protecting a party or person from annoyance, embarrassment, oppression, or undue burden. Borenstein v. Blumenfeld, 151 Ga. App. 420, 260 S.E.2d 377 (1979).

Good cause prerequisite to protective order. — Good cause required for grant of protective order must be clearly and specifically demonstrated; it will not appear from stereotyped and conclusory statements. Millholland v. Oglesby, 115 Ga. App. 715, 155 S.E.2d 672 (1967) (decided under former Code 1933, § 38-2105).

Good cause for the issuance of a protective order designed to frustrate discovery must be clearly demonstrated; such cause is not established by stereotyped or conclusory statements, bereft of facts. Young v. Jones, 149 Ga. App. 819, 256 S.E.2d 58 (1979).

Issuance of a protective order must be based on something other than a conclusory allegation by the state's attorney to the effect that any and all requested discovery would prejudice a criminal investigation. Christopher v. State, 185 Ga. App. 532, 364 S.E.2d 905 (1988).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in determining that the defendants provided good cause entitling the defendants to a qualified protective order by arguing that the defendants should be granted the right to conduct ex parte interviews with the decedent's health care providers since the defendants were entitled to equal access to potential trial witnesses, the defendants would protect the attorney work-product, and would be more efficient and less costly than formal depositions or joint meetings with plaintiffs' counsel. Harris v. Tenet Healthsystem Spalding, Inc., 322 Ga. App. 894, 746 S.E.2d 618 (2013).

Failure to obtain protective order. — Defendants' discovery violations were willful when the defendants withheld certain documents in order to "test their position," and as the defendants had not sought a protective order under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-26, but instead violated the trial court's orders compelling discovery by withholding the documents the defendants claimed were objectionable, the defendants' failure to comply with discovery orders was not excused; thus, it was a proper sanction under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37 to strike the defendants' arbitration defenses. Ga. Cash Am., Inc. v. Strong, 286 Ga. App. 405, 649 S.E.2d 548 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 709 (Ga. 2007).

Duty to attend deposition despite request for protective order. — Merely filing motions for a protective order did not relieve the plaintiffs from the duty to appear at the plaintiffs' depositions. Moreover, even if the plaintiffs could have prevailed on motions to compel more complete responses to their discovery efforts, this did not excuse the plaintiffs from the duty to attend the plaintiffs' depositions. It follows that the trial court correctly concluded that nothing the plaintiffs asserted in the plaintiffs' motions for a protective order provided a legal basis for the court to exercise the court's discretion to relieve the plaintiffs from the duty to appear at the plaintiffs' depositions. Rice v. Cannon, 283 Ga. App. 438, 641 S.E.2d 562 (2007).

Fifth Amendment claim denied. — Denial of an accused's motion for a protective order under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-26(c) was affirmed as the Fifth Amendment could not be used to justify a protective order to stay all discovery in the accused's civil forfeiture proceeding under O.C.G.A. § 16-14-7 pending the conclusion of the accused's criminal Georgia Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act, O.C.G.A. § 16-14-1 et seq., case; while the privilege against self-incrimination extends to answers creating a "real and appreciable" danger of establishing a link in the chain of evidence needed to prosecute, the trial court has to determine if the answers could incriminate the witness, and if the trial court determines that the answers could not incriminate the witness, the witness has to testify or be subject to the court's sanction. Chumley v. State of Ga., 282 Ga. App. 117, 637 S.E.2d 828 (2006).

Relevant records not subject to protection. — In an action against a personal care home alleging negligent supervision of a resident of the home, records of incidents and accidents involving other residents were relevant and the trial court properly denied the defendant's motion for a protective order covering the records. Apple Inv. Properties, Inc. v. Watts, 220 Ga. App. 226, 469 S.E.2d 356 (1996).

In a personal injury case, a trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by compelling a railway company to provide discovery of information on an event data recorder because the information was relevant under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-26(b)(1), and a producing party could have been required to translate information into a reasonably usable form. The trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by failing to grant the protective order since there was no undue burden or expense given the crucial nature of the evidence; moreover, the cost of a license required to view the information was minor compared to the amount at stake in the lawsuit, and it was the railway company's decision to install the device. Norfolk S. Ry. v. Hartry, 316 Ga. App. 532, 729 S.E.2d 656 (2012).

Protective order under Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act. — Trial court did not err in granting a hospital's motion for a qualified protective order under the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act of 1996 (HIPAA), to conduct ex parte interviews with a patient's health care providers because the hospital complied with 45 C.F.R. § 164.512(e)(1)(ii)(B), and any ex parte interviews conducted pursuant to the qualified protective order would be permitted under HIPAA; because the order prohibited the use or disclosure of the patient's health information for purposes other than the litigation and required the return or destruction thereof at the conclusion of the proceedings, it constituted a qualified protective order as defined in § 164.512(e)(1)(v). Baker v. Wellstar Health Sys., 288 Ga. 336, 703 S.E.2d 601 (2010).

Protective order permitting a hospital to conduct ex parte interviews with a patient's health care providers was too broad regarding the scope of information that could be disclosed because the order should have limited the hospital's inquiry to matters relevant to the medical condition the patient had placed at issue; under former O.C.G.A. § 24-9-40(a) (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-12-1), a litigant can waive the right to medical privacy under Georgia law only to the extent such information was relevant to the medical condition the litigant had placed in issue in the legal proceeding. Baker v. Wellstar Health Sys., 288 Ga. 336, 703 S.E.2d 601 (2010).

Habeas proceeding. — To protect a habeas petitioner's constitutional right to effective assistance of counsel and against compelled self-incrimination, the petitioner was entitled to a protective order limiting disclosure of the former counsel's files in the proceeding to persons needed to assist in rebutting the petitioner's claim of ineffectiveness. Waldrip v. Head, 272 Ga. 572, 532 S.E.2d 380 (2000).

Absent showing of need to protect witness from annoyance, embarrassment, or oppression, a trial court abuses the court's discretion in restricting the broad use of discovery. Europa Hair, Inc. v. Browning, 133 Ga. App. 753, 212 S.E.2d 862 (1975).

Burden is on party served with interrogatories to show why the interrogatories should not be answered. Clarkson Indus., Inc. v. Price, 135 Ga. App. 787, 218 S.E.2d 921 (1975), overruled on other grounds, Tobacco Rd., Inc. v. Callaghan, 174 Ga. App. 539, 330 S.E.2d 768 (1985).

Application for protective order to avoid sanctions for failure to respond. — In order to avoid sanctions for not responding to interrogatories, one must apply for a protective order under subsection (c) of this section. Sneider v. English, 129 Ga. App. 638, 200 S.E.2d 469 (1973).

Expense and trouble not sufficient to avoid answering. — Fact that answering interrogatories will entail expense and trouble to witness or the witness's employer is not sufficient to escape the requirement of making answer; it is only when the court is satisfied that an undue burden will result that objections should be sustained on that basis. Sorrells v. Cole, 111 Ga. App. 136, 141 S.E.2d 193 (1965) (decided under former Code 1933, § 38-2106).

Extent of discovery and use of protective orders is generally within discretion of trial judge. Bullard v. Ewing, 158 Ga. App. 287, 279 S.E.2d 737 (1981).

Discretion of court. — Trial court has wide discretion in entering orders to prevent discovery which is oppressive, unreasonable, unduly burdensome or expensive, harassing, harsh, insulting, annoying, embarrassing, incriminating, or directed to wholly irrelevant and immaterial or privileged matter, or as to matter concerning which full information is already at hand. Snead v. Pay-Less Rentals, Inc., 134 Ga. App. 325, 214 S.E.2d 412 (1975); Young v. Jones, 149 Ga. App. 819, 256 S.E.2d 58 (1979).

Trial court has wide discretion in entering orders to prevent oppressive, unreasonably and unduly burdensome, or harassing discovery by interrogatories. Travis Meat & Seafood Co. v. Ashworth, 127 Ga. App. 284, 193 S.E.2d 166 (1972); International Serv. Ins. Co. v. Bowen, 130 Ga. App. 140, 202 S.E.2d 540 (1973).

Trial judge should exercise sound and legal discretion in the grant or denial of protective orders under subsection (c) of this section. International Serv. Ins. Co. v. Bowen, 130 Ga. App. 140, 202 S.E.2d 540 (1973); Bridges v. 20th Century Travel, Inc., 149 Ga. App. 837, 256 S.E.2d 102 (1979).

Discretion to be based on evidence and good cause. — Extent of discovery and use of protective orders is generally with the discretion of the trial judge but this must be a sound and legal discretion based on evidence and a showing of good cause. Bridges v. 20th Century Travel, Inc., 149 Ga. App. 837, 256 S.E.2d 102 (1979).

Court must be satisfied by substantial evidence. — Until such time as the court is satisfied by substantial evidence that bad faith or harassment motivates the discoverer's action, the court should not intervene to limit or prohibit the scope of pretrial discovery. Bullard v. Ewing, 158 Ga. App. 287, 279 S.E.2d 737 (1981).

When trial court passed upon merits of motion for protective order at a hearing, denying the motion, it must be assumed, in the absence of a transcript of that hearing, that the court properly exercised the court's discretion in refusing to issue the protective order. Young v. Jones, 149 Ga. App. 819, 256 S.E.2d 58 (1979).

Grant of protective order abuse of discretion. — Trial court abused the court's discretion in granting the mother's motion for a protective order, thereby prohibiting the father from taking the deposition of a female child the father was accused of molesting, under any circumstance because the child's testimony was clearly relevant to the father's efforts to defend against the mother's motion for modification of custody. Galbreath v. Braley, 318 Ga. App. 111, 733 S.E.2d 412 (2012).

Interests of justice do not require production of tax returns, in the face of a motion for a protective order, when other discovery methods are available to obtain the same information. Borenstein v. Blumenfeld, 151 Ga. App. 420, 260 S.E.2d 377 (1979).

Protective order against state agency. — Trial court did not err in finding that the APA governed a declaratory judgment action filed against a state agency, and that sovereign immunity barred any further discovery, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 50-13-10; hence, as a result, when plaintiff consultant failed to comply with § 50-13-10, the trial court could do no more than to grant the agency a protective order, and could not take any action beyond that, including declaring that the Department of Community Health's rules regarding health benefits could not be challenged. Live Oak Consulting, Inc. v. Dep't of Cmty. Health, 281 Ga. App. 791, 637 S.E.2d 455 (2006).

Time for applying for order. — Application or motion for a relieving or modifying order should be presented as soon as the party or deponent learns that such an order is needed. Millholland v. Oglesby, 115 Ga. App. 715, 155 S.E.2d 672 (1967) (decided under former Code 1933 § 38-2105).

Repetition of order unnecessary prior to imposing sanctions. — When a court orders one party to permit discovery pursuant to subsection (c) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-26, upon that party's willful failure to comply with the court's order, the party seeking sanctions need not move the court pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37(a) to repeat the court's order before proceeding to move the court pursuant to § 9-11-37(b) for the imposition of sanctions. Joel v. Duet Holdings, Inc., 181 Ga. App. 705, 353 S.E.2d 548 (1987).

Motion improper for quashing or enforcement of notice to produce. — Motions pursuant to O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-26, 9-11-34, and 9-11-37 for a protective order or sanctions were not proper vehicles for the quashing or the enforcement of a notice to produce under former O.C.G.A. § 24-10-26 (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-13-27). Joel v. Duet Holdings, Inc., 181 Ga. App. 705, 353 S.E.2d 548 (1987).

Ex parte order without showing of cause unauthorized. — Court order that a deposition shall not be taken, entered without motion seasonably made, without notice, and without any cause shown by the plaintiff or the plaintiff's counsel, is an unauthorized order prejudicial to the preparation of the defendant's defense. Reynolds v. Reynolds, 217 Ga. 234, 123 S.E.2d 115 (1961) (decided under former Code 1933, § 38-2105).

Trial court's refusal to enter a protective order was proper because the opponent of the discovery did not show any of the grounds for such a motion specified in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-26(c), but merely objected that the discovery was untimely. Simmons v. Cmty. Renewal & Redemption, LLC, 286 Ga. 6, 685 S.E.2d 75 (2009).

Appeal from denial of motion not to be made by one not involved in case below. — When appeal from denial of a motion for a protective order in regard to answering certain interrogatories and taking of a deposition in a civil suit is pursued by one who was neither a party to the case below nor the person from whom discovery was sought, the appeal is properly dismissed for lack of standing. State v. Upton, 160 Ga. App. 442, 287 S.E.2d 263 (1981).

Supplementation of Responses

Failure to claim surprise from late supplemental response waives tardiness. — When an amended response to the condemnee's interrogatories was hand-delivered to the condemnee on the date of the trial, in which the condemnor updated the appraisal, surprising the condemnee, but the condemnee did not claim surprise at trial, but, instead, proceeded with the case, pointing out this last-minute change to the jury in opening remarks and vigorously and thoroughly cross-examined witnesses as to this updated appraisal, there was no reversible error. Morrison v. DOT, 166 Ga. App. 144, 303 S.E.2d 501 (1983).

Expert not required to supplement responses in deposition. — Defendant's expert in a products liability case was not required to supplement responses to question given in a deposition prior to trial since the expert had not been asked the specific discovery questions that were covered by the expert's testimony at the trial. Murphy v. Concrete Placement Sys., 215 Ga. App. 284, 450 S.E.2d 312 (1994).

9-11-27. Depositions before action or pending appeal.

(a) Before action.

(1) Petition. A person who desires to perpetuate such person's own testimony or that of another person regarding any matter that may be cognizable in any court may file a verified petition in the superior court of the county where the witness resides. The petition shall be entitled in the name of the petitioner and shall show that the petitioner expects to be a party to litigation but is presently unable to bring it or cause it to be brought, the subject matter of the expected action and the petitioner's interest therein, the facts which the petitioner desires to establish by the proposed testimony and the petitioner's reasons for desiring to perpetuate it, the names or a description of the persons the petitioner expects will be adverse parties and their addresses so far as known, and the names and addresses of the persons to be examined and the substance of the testimony which the petitioner expects to elicit from each, and shall ask for an order authorizing the petitioner to take the depositions of the persons to be examined named in the petition, for the purpose of perpetuating their testimony.

(2) Notice and service. The petitioner shall thereafter serve a notice upon each person named in the petition as an expected adverse party, together with a copy of the petition, stating that the petitioner will apply to the court at a time and place named therein for the order described in the petition. At least 20 days before the date of hearing the notice shall be served either within or outside the county in the manner provided for service of summons; but, if such service cannot with due diligence be made upon any expected adverse party named in the petition, the court may make such order as is just for service by publication or otherwise and shall appoint, for persons not served, an attorney who shall represent them and, in case they are not otherwise represented, shall cross-examine the deponent. The court may make such order as is just requiring the petitioner to pay a reasonable fee to an attorney so appointed. If any expected adverse party is a minor or an incompetent person and does not have a general guardian, the court shall appoint a guardian ad litem.

(3) Order and examination. If the court is satisfied that the perpetuation of the testimony may prevent a failure or delay of justice, it shall make an order designating or describing the persons whose depositions may be taken and specifying the subject matter of the examination and whether the depositions shall be taken upon oral examination or written interrogatories. The depositions may then be taken by a certified court reporter, or as otherwise provided by the rules of the Board of Court Reporting, in accordance with this chapter; and the court may make orders of the character provided for by Code Sections 9-11-34 and 9-11-35. For the purpose of applying this chapter to depositions for perpetuating testimony, each reference therein to the court in which the action is pending shall be deemed to refer to the court in which the petition for such deposition was filed.

(4) Use of deposition. If a deposition to perpetuate testimony is taken under this Code section or if, although not so taken, it would be otherwise admissible under the laws of this state, it may be used in any action involving the same parties and the same subject matter subsequently brought.

(b) Pending appeal. If an appeal has been taken from a judgment of a trial court or before the taking of an appeal if the time therefor has not expired, the court in which the judgment was rendered may allow the taking of the depositions of witnesses to perpetuate their testimony for use in the event of further proceedings in the trial court. In such case the party who desires to perpetuate the testimony may make a motion in the trial court for leave to take the depositions, upon the same notice and service thereof as if the action were pending in the court. The motion shall show the names and addresses of persons to be examined, the substance of the testimony which the movant expects to elicit from each, and the reasons for perpetuating their testimony. If the court finds that the perpetuation of the testimony is proper to avoid a failure or delay of justice, it may make an order allowing the depositions to be taken and may make orders of the character provided for by Code Sections 9-11-34 and 9-11-35; and thereupon the depositions may be taken before a certified court reporter, or as otherwise provided by the rules of the Board of Court Reporting, and used in the same manner and under the same conditions as are prescribed in this chapter for depositions taken in actions pending in court.

(c) Perpetuation by action. This Code section does not limit the power of a court to entertain an action to perpetuate testimony. (Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 27; Ga. L. 1993, p. 1315, § 2.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Purpose of subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-27 is to provide for perpetuation of testimony in situations where, for one reason or another, testimony might be lost to a prospective litigant unless steps are taken immediately to preserve and protect such testimony. Worley v. Worley, 161 Ga. App. 44, 288 S.E.2d 854 (1982).

Precomplaint deposition not authorized. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-27 does not authorize the grant of a petition to take a precomplaint deposition to acquire information for preparation of an affidavit required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1. St. Joseph Hosp. v. Black, 225 Ga. App. 139, 483 S.E.2d 290 (1997).

9-11-28. Persons before whom depositions may be taken; disqualification for interest; consent of parties.

(a) Within the United States and its possessions. Within the United States or within a territory or insular possession subject to the dominion of the United States, depositions shall be taken before an officer authorized to administer oaths by the laws of the United States or by the laws of the place where the examination is held or before a court reporter appointed by the court in which the action is pending or, if within this state, before a certified court reporter or as otherwise provided by the rules of the Board of Court Reporting. A person so appointed has power to administer oaths and take testimony.

(b) In foreign countries. In a foreign state or country depositions shall be taken on notice before a secretary of embassy or legation, consul general, consul, vice-consul, or consular agent of the United States, or before such person or officer as may be appointed by commission or under letters rogatory. A commission or letters rogatory shall be issued only when necessary or convenient, on application and notice, and on such terms and with such directions as are just and appropriate. Officers may be designated in notices or commissions either by name or by descriptive title and letters rogatory may be addressed "To the Appropriate Judicial Authority in (here name the country)."

(c) Disqualification for interest. No deposition shall be taken before a court reporter who is a relative, employee, attorney, or counsel of any of the parties, or who is a relative or employee of such attorney or counsel, or who is financially interested in the action, excepting that a deposition may be taken before a court reporter who is a relative of a party or of an attorney or counsel of a party if all parties represented at the deposition enter their explicit consent to the same upon the record of the deposition. OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Contracts for reporting depositions. — Court reporter may enter into contracts for reporting depositions so long as the contract does not render the reporter an “employee” or “financially interested in the action”; however, charging different rates to various participants in a single deposition may constitute the charging of “unreasonable” fees and court reporters may not provide kickbacks to a party. 1993 Op. Att’y Gen. No. 93-18.

9-11-29. Stipulations regarding discovery procedure.

Unless the court orders otherwise, the parties may, by written stipulation:

(1) Provide that depositions may be taken before any person, at any time or place, upon any notice, and in any manner and, when so taken, may be used like other depositions; and

(2) Modify the procedures provided by this chapter for other methods of discovery. (Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 29; Ga. L. 1972, p. 510, § 2.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Waiver of objection to videotape of deposition. — Objection based on lack of court order allowing videotaping of deposition was waived since no objection to the videotaping was raised prior to trial. Even if the objection was timely made at trial, any error in the admission of the videotaped deposition was harmless since the videotaping was conducted in substantial compliance with required technical conditions and procedures. DuBois v. Ray, 177 Ga. App. 349, 339 S.E.2d 605 (1985).

Modification of discovery procedures. — Trial court did not err in granting summary judgment to a mortgagee on the mortgagors' claims for wrongful eviction and trespass because the mortgagors failed to adhere to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-36(a)(2) since the mortgagors never answered or objected to the mortgagees' requests for admission within the statutory time period, and thus, the requests were deemed admitted by the mortgagors; the mortgagor's reliance upon § 9-11-36(b) was misplaced under the circumstances because the parties modified the statutory discovery procedures by stipulation pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-29(2). Ikomoni v. Exec. Asset Mgmt., LLC, 309 Ga. App. 81, 709 S.E.2d 282 (2011).

9-11-29.1. When depositions and other discovery material must be filed with court; custodian until filing; retention of depositions and other discovery materials.

(a) Depositions and other discovery material otherwise required to be filed with the court under this chapter shall not be required to be so filed unless:

- (1) Required by local rule of court;
- (2) Ordered by the court;
- (3) Requested by any party to the action;

(4) Relief relating to discovery material is sought under this chapter and said material has not previously been filed under some other provision of this chapter, in which event copies of the material in dispute shall be filed by the movant contemporaneously with the motion for relief; or

(5) Such material is to be used at trial or is necessary to a pretrial or posttrial motion and said material has not previously been filed under some other provision of this chapter, in which event the portions to be used shall be filed with the clerk of court at the outset of the trial or at the filing of the motion, insofar as their use can be reasonably anticipated by the parties having custody thereof, but a party attempting to file and use such material which was not filed with the clerk at the outset of the trial or at the filing of the motion shall show to the satisfaction of the court, before the court may authorize such filing and use, that sufficient reasons exist to justify that late filing and use and that the late filing and use will not constitute surprise or manifest injustice to any other party in the proceedings.

(b) Until such time as discovery material is filed under paragraphs (1) through (5) of subsection (a) of this Code section, the original of all depositions shall be retained by the party taking the deposition and the original of all other discovery material shall be retained by the party requesting such material, and the person thus retaining the deposition or other discovery material shall be the custodian thereof.

(c) When depositions and other discovery material are filed with the clerk of court as provided in subsection (a) of this Code section, the clerk of court shall retain such original documents and materials until final disposition, either by verdict or appeal, of the action in which such materials were filed. The clerk of court shall be authorized thereafter to destroy such materials upon microfilming or digitally imaging such materials and maintaining such materials in a manner that facilitates retrieval and reproduction, so long as the microfilm and digital images meet the standards established by the Division of Archives and History of the University System of Georgia; provided, however, that the clerk of court shall not be required to microfilm or digitally image depositions that are not used for evidentiary purposes during the trial of the issues of the case in which such depositions were filed. (Code 1981, § 9-11-29.1, enacted by Ga. L. 1982, p. 2374, § 1; Ga. L. 2012, p. 599, § 1-1/HB 665; Ga. L. 2013, p. 594, § 2-1/HB 287.)

The 2013 amendment, effective July 1, 2013, substituted “Division of Archives and History of the University System of Georgia” for “Georgia Department of Archives and History” near the middle of the second sentence of subsection (c).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Burden of timely filing deposition. and other discovery material with the trial court lies with the party which intends to rely upon the materials. Sheffield v. Zilis, 170 Ga. App. 62, 316 S.E.2d 493 (1984); Whisenant v. Fulton Fed. Sav. &

Loan Ass'n, 194 Ga. App. 192, 390 S.E.2d 100 (1990).

Because depositions relied upon by a husband and wife in their personal injury and loss of consortium action were not filed prior to the time a motion for summary judgment was ruled upon, their reference to the testimony contained therein could not be considered, and their brief in opposition to the summary judgment motion citing the testimony was not proper evidence for opposing the motion. Parker v. Silviano, 284 Ga. App. 278, 643 S.E.2d 819 (2007).

Paragraph (a)(5) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-29.1 does not make certification a prerequisite to the use of discovery material in support of a motion. Rather, it is O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(e) which requires sworn or certified copies of all papers or parts thereof referred to in an affidavit filed in support of or in opposition to a motion for summary judgment. Jacobsen v. Muller, 181 Ga. App. 382, 352 S.E.2d 604 (1986).

Excerpts from personnel file do not need to be certified. — Excerpts from plaintiff's personnel file did not have to be certified or be part of a sworn affidavit to be considered in support of the defendant's summary judgment motion since these excerpts were produced in response to the plaintiff's request for production of documents in accordance with O.C.G.A. § 9-11-34. Glisson v. Morton, 203 Ga. App. 77, 416 S.E.2d 134 (1992).

Untimeliness of filing discovery materials excused. — Plaintiff's filing of discovery materials at the summary judgment hearing, pursuant to Ga. Super. Ct. R. 6.5, was allowed although untimely under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-29.1, as it was within the trial court's discretion when it was shown that sufficient reasons existed to justify the lateness and that there was no surprise or manifest injustice caused to the defendant; the plaintiff had notified the defendant that the plaintiff was relying on the discovery materials in the plaintiff's summary judgment motion and the defendant did not complain that the documents had not been filed with the court in the defendant's summary judgment response.

Order denying an employer's motion for summary judgment as to a security guard's assault and battery claims was vacated, and the case was remanded with direction that the trial court consider a messenger's depositions in deciding the summary judgment motion as to the assault and battery claim issues regarding whether the messenger was an independent contractor or an employee and whether the messenger was acting within the scope of employment at the time the messenger attacked the guard; at the time the trial court held the court's hearing and signed the court's summary judgment order, the employer failed to comply with the employer's obligation under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-29.1(a)(3) to file the original deposition transcripts in the employer's custody as the guard requested. The trial court, which relied on the briefs that cited to and quoted from the depositions, could not review that deposition testimony when the guard cited to the depositions in the guard's trial court briefs, making a formal request that the employer, as custodian, file the original depositions, but the employer did not file the guard's deposition until after the trial court had signed the court's order and did not file the messenger's deposition until months after the appeal was filed. Ga. Messenger Serv. v. Bradley, 302 Ga. App. 247, 690 S.E.2d 888 (2010).

Filing of admissions as exhibits sufficient. — Since the guest filed the admissions as an exhibit to the guest's opposition to the defendants' motion for summary judgment, the guest was in compliance with O.C.G.A. § 9-11-29.1(a)(5) and the guest was not required to file the admissions again at trial. Vis v. Harris, 329 Ga. App. 129, 764 S.E.2d 156 (2014).

9-11-30. Depositions upon oral examination.

(a) When depositions may be taken. After commencement of the action, any party may take the testimony of any person, including a party, by deposition upon oral examination. Leave of court, granted with or without notice, must be obtained only if the plaintiff seeks to take a deposition prior to the expiration of 30 days after service of the summons and complaint upon any defendant or service made under subsection (f) of Code Section 9-11-4, except that leave is not required if a defendant has served a notice of taking deposition or otherwise sought discovery or if special notice is given as provided in paragraph (2) of subsection (b) of this Code section. The attendance of witnesses may be compelled by subpoena as provided in Code Section 9-11-45. The deposition of a person confined in a penal institution may be taken only by leave of court on such terms as the court prescribes.

(b) Notice of examination.

(1) General requirements. A party desiring to take the deposition of any person upon oral examination shall give reasonable notice in writing to every other party to the action. The notice shall state the time and place for taking the deposition, the means by which the testimony shall be recorded, and the name and address of each person to be examined, if known, and, if the name is not known, a general description sufficient to identify the person to be examined or the particular class or group to which he or she belongs. If a subpoena for the production of documentary and tangible evidence is to be served on the person to be examined, the designation of the materials to be produced, as set forth in the subpoena, shall be attached to, or included in, the notice.

(2) Special notice. Leave of court is not required for the taking of a deposition by plaintiff if the notice:

(A) States that the person to be examined is about to go out of the county where the action is pending and more than 150 miles from the place of trial, or is about to go out of the United States, or is bound on a voyage to sea, and will be unavailable for examination unless the deposition is taken before expiration of the 30 day period; and

(B) Sets forth facts to support the statement.

The plaintiff's attorney shall sign the notice, and said attorney's signature constitutes a certification by him or her that, to the best of his or her knowledge, information, and belief, the statement and supporting facts are true. If a party shows that, when he or she was served with notice under this paragraph, he or she was unable through the exercise of diligence to obtain counsel to represent him or her at the taking of the deposition, the deposition may not be used against such party.

(3) Time requirements. The court may, for cause shown, enlarge or shorten the time for taking the deposition.

(4) Recording of deposition. Unless the court orders otherwise, the testimony at a deposition must be recorded by stenographic means, and may also be recorded by sound or sound and visual means in addition to stenographic means, and the party taking the deposition shall bear the costs of the recording. A deposition shall be conducted before an officer appointed or designated under Code Section 9-11-28. Upon motion of a party or upon its own motion, the court may issue an order designating the manner of recording, preserving, and filing of a deposition taken by nonstenographic means, which order may include other provisions to assure that the recorded testimony will be accurate and trustworthy. Any party may arrange for a transcription to be made from the recording of a deposition taken by nonstenographic means. With prior notice to the deponent and other parties, any party may designate another method to record the deponent's testimony in addition to the methods specified by the person taking the deposition. The additional record or transcript shall be made at that party's expense unless the court otherwise orders. The appearance or demeanor of deponents or attorneys shall not be distorted through camera or sound-recording techniques. Notwithstanding the foregoing provisions of this paragraph, a deposition may be taken by telephone or other remote electronic means only upon the stipulation of the parties or by order of the court. For purposes of the requirements of this chapter, a deposition taken by telephone or other remote electronic means is taken in the state and at the place where the deponent is to answer questions.

(5) Production of documents and things. The notice to a party deponent may be accompanied by a request made in compliance with Code Section 9-11-34 for the production of documents and tangible things at the taking of the deposition. The procedure of Code Section 9-11-34 shall apply to the request.

(6) Deposition of organization. A party may, in his or her notice, name as the deponent a public or private corporation or a partnership or association or a governmental agency and designate with reasonable particularity the matters on which examination is requested. The organization so named shall designate one or more officers, directors, or managing agents, or other persons who consent to testify on its behalf, and may set forth, for each person designated, the matters on which he or she will testify. The persons so designated shall testify as to matters known or reasonably available to the organization. This paragraph does not preclude taking a deposition by any other procedure authorized in this chapter.

(c) Examination and cross-examination; record of examination; oath; objections.

(1) Examination and cross-examination of witnesses may proceed as permitted at the trial under the rules of evidence. The authorized officer or court reporter before whom the deposition is to be taken shall put the witness on oath and shall personally, or by someone acting under the direction and in the presence of the authorized officer or court reporter, record the testimony of the witness.

(2) All objections made at the time of the examination to the qualifications of the officer taking the deposition, or to the manner of taking it, or to the evidence presented, or to the conduct of any party, and any other objection to the proceedings shall be noted by the officer upon the deposition. Evidence objected to shall be taken subject to the objections. In lieu of participating in the oral examination, parties may serve written questions in a sealed envelope on the party taking the deposition, and said party shall transmit them to the officer, who shall propound them to the witness and record the answers verbatim.

(3) Unless otherwise ordered by the court or agreed by the parties, the officer shall retain the record of each deposition until the later of (A) five years after the date on which the deposition was taken, or (B) two years after the date of final disposition of the action for which the deposition was taken and any appeals of such action. The officer may preserve the record through storage of the original paper, notes, or recordings or an electronic copy of the notes, recordings, or the transcript on computer disks, cassettes, backup tape systems, optical or laser disk systems, or other retrieval systems.

(d) Motion to terminate or limit examination. At any time during the taking of the deposition, on motion of a party or of the deponent and upon a showing that the examination is being conducted in bad faith or in such manner as unreasonably to annoy, embarrass, or oppress the deponent or party, the court in which the action is pending or the court in the county where the deposition is being taken may order the officer conducting the examination to cease forthwith from taking the deposition or may limit the scope and manner of the taking of the deposition as provided in subsection (c) of Code Section 9-11-26. If the order made terminates the examination, it shall be resumed thereafter only upon the order of the court in which the action is pending. Upon demand of the objecting party or deponent, the taking of the deposition shall be suspended for the time necessary to make a motion for an order. Paragraph (4) of subsection (a) of Code Section 9-11-37 applies to the award of expenses incurred in relation to the motion.

(e) Review by witness; changes; signing. If requested by the deponent or a party before completion of the deposition, the deponent shall have 30 days after being notified by the officer that the transcript or recording is available in which to review the transcript or recording and, if there are changes in form or substance, to sign a statement reciting such changes and the reasons given by the deponent for making them. The officer shall indicate in the certificate prescribed by paragraph (1) of subsection (f) of this Code section whether any review was requested and, if so, shall append any changes made by the deponent during the period allowed. If the deposition is not reviewed and signed by the witness within 30 days of its submission to him or her, the officer shall sign it and state on the record that the deposition was not reviewed and signed by the deponent within 30 days. The deposition may then be used as fully as though signed unless, on a motion to suppress under paragraph (4) of subsection (d) of Code Section 9-11-32, the court holds that the reasons given for the refusal to sign require rejection of the deposition in whole or in part.

(f) Certification and filing by officer; inspection and copying of exhibits; copy of deposition.

(1)(A) The officer shall certify that the witness was duly sworn by the officer and that the deposition is a true record of the testimony given by the witness. This certificate shall be in writing and accompany the record of the deposition. The officer shall then securely seal the deposition in an envelope marked with the title of the action, the court reporter certification number, and "Deposition of (here insert name of witness)" and shall promptly file it with the court in which the action is pending or deliver it to the party taking the deposition, as the case may be, in accordance with Code Section 9-11-29.1.

(B) Documents and things produced for inspection during the examination of the witness shall, upon the request of a party, be marked for identification and annexed to and returned with the deposition and may be inspected and copied by any party, except that the person producing the materials may substitute copies to be marked for identification, if he or she affords to all parties fair opportunity to verify the copies by comparison with the originals; and, if the person producing the materials requests their return, the officer shall mark them, give each party an opportunity to inspect and copy them, and return them to the person producing them, and the materials may then be used in the same manner as if annexed to and returned with the deposition. Any party may move for an order that the original be annexed to and returned with the deposition to the court, pending final disposition of the case.

(2) Upon payment of reasonable charges therefor, the officer shall furnish a copy of the deposition to any party or to the deponent.

(g) Failure to attend or to serve subpoena; expenses.

(1) If the party giving the notice of the taking of a deposition fails to attend and proceed therewith and another party attends in person or by attorney pursuant to the notice, the court may order the party giving the notice to pay to such other party the reasonable expenses incurred by him and his attorney in attending, including reasonable attorney's fees.

(2) If the party giving the notice of the taking of a deposition of a witness fails to serve a subpoena upon him and the witness, because of such failure, does not attend and if another party attends in person or by attorney because he expects the deposition of that witness to be taken, the court may order the party giving the notice to pay to such other party the reasonable expenses incurred by him and his attorney in attending, including reasonable attorney's fees.

(h) Form of presentation. Except as otherwise directed by the court, a party offering deposition testimony may offer it in stenographic or nonstenographic form, but if in nonstenographic form, the party shall also provide the court with a transcript of the portions so offered. On request of any party in a case tried before a jury, deposition testimony offered other than for impeachment purposes shall be presented in nonstenographic form, if available, unless the court for good cause orders otherwise. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Editor's note. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code 1933, Ch. 21, T. 38 are included in the annotations for this Code section.

Georgia Laws 1972, p. 510, made substantial revisions to certain sections of this chapter dealing with discovery. Prior to the 1972 amendment, this section was substantially the same as former Code 1933, § 38-2105. Hence, decisions based on this section prior to its 1972 amendment should be consulted with care.

Powers of trial court. — Trial court has the power under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-30 to control the details of time, place, scope, and financing of a deposition for the protection of the deponents and parties. Bicknell v. CBT Factors Corp., 171 Ga. App. 897, 321 S.E.2d 383 (1984).

Deposition of witness in opposing party's absence void. — When a physician in a worker's compensation case refused to give a deposition in front of the appellee, the appellant's election to proceed in the appellee's absence voided an otherwise valid procedure, and therefore the deposition was not erroneously excluded from consideration in making the award to the appellee. Georgia Power Co. v. Brown, 169 Ga. App. 45, 311 S.E.2d 236 (1983).

Videotaping of deposition permitted. — Under subsection (b)(4) of this section, the taking of a deposition by videotaping, when otherwise permitted by the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9), is proper. Mayor of Savannah v. Palmerio, 135 Ga. App. 147, 217 S.E.2d 430 (1975).

Testimony of a witness by videotape is a better substitute for actual live testimony than the reading of a stenographic transcript provided by a court reporter. Mayor of Savannah v. Palmerio, 135 Ga. App. 147, 217 S.E.2d 430 (1975).

Testimony by department's representative improperly excluded. — Georgia Department of Transportation (DOT) was permitted to present evidence through the department's representative of its breach of contract damages under O.C.G.A. § 13-6-2 on its counterclaim because an asphalt company's argument, that the damages calculations were too speculative because the DOT was unable to show the exact amount of hydrated lime in each lot of asphalt, was asserting an insufficiency in the evidence that was not appropriately resolved on the company's motion in limine. State, DOT v. Douglas Asphalt Co., 297 Ga. App. 470, 677 S.E.2d 699 (2009), appeal dismissed, 297 Ga. App. 511, 677 S.E.2d 728 (2009).

Waiver of objection to videotape of deposition. — Objection based on lack of court order allowing videotaping of deposition was waived since no objection to the videotaping was raised prior to trial. Even if the objection was timely made at trial, any error in the admission of the videotaped deposition was harmless because the videotaping was conducted in substantial compliance with required technical conditions and procedures. DuBois v. Ray, 177 Ga. App. 349, 339 S.E.2d 605 (1985).

Protective order barring video conference deposition proper. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in granting an assistant professor's motion for a protective order to bar a video conference deposition because the Board of Regents of the University System of Georgia (BOR) did not seek a court order, and the professor did not stipulate to the taking of the deposition; the BOR did not demonstrate any harm as a result of the trial court's action. Bd. of Regents of the Univ. Sys. of Ga. v. Ambati, 299 Ga. App. 804, 685 S.E.2d 719 (2009), cert. denied, No. S10C0086, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 34 (Ga. 2010).

As between parties, no subpoena is required or necessary for the taking of a deposition. Millholland v. Oglesby, 114 Ga. App. 745, 152 S.E.2d 761 (1966), rev'd on other grounds, 223 Ga. 230, 154 S.E.2d 194 (1967) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 21, T. 38).

Prompt notification of defect in notice required. — While proper notice is required for taking of a deposition, the opposing party must promptly notify the party giving the notice if the notice is technically deficient in any manner. Republic Nat'l Bank v. Hodgson, 124 Ga. App. 11, 183 S.E.2d 4 (1971).

Rationale for prompt objection to deficient notice. — Rationale of requirement that written objection to a deficient notice of deposition be made promptly, failing which the error or irregularity in the notice is deemed to have been waived, is the same as that for the requirement that objection to the evidence be made at the time of taking depositions. Republic Nat'l Bank v. Hodgson, 124 Ga. App. 11, 183 S.E.2d 4 (1971).

Tardy demand that deposition be signed. — When a deposition is taken for the express purpose of being used as evidence at trial the next day, and the opposing party is well aware that by the time the transcript is prepared the witness will be unavailable to sign the transcript, but makes no demand for the witness's signature until it is clear that compliance will be impossible, and when there is no contention or indication that any of the testimony in the deposition is improperly transcribed, the trial court acts within the court's discretion in allowing the deposition to be used as evidence. Spector v. Lankford, 151 Ga. App. 397, 259 S.E.2d 654 (1979).

Deposition erroneously admitted because deponent not permitted to read and sign. — Because a former homeowner testified by affidavit that the former homeowner was never notified by the officer that a deposition transcript was available for examination and signature, and the defendants in the wrongful eviction action offered no testimony or evidence to rebut the former owner's affidavit, the trial court erred by admitting the former owner's deposition for purposes of summary judgment. However, admission of the deposition was harmless error because the operative evidence came in through the homeowner's and others' affidavits. Steed v. Fed. Nat'l Mortg. Corp., 301 Ga. App. 801, 689 S.E.2d 843 (2009).

Harmless error to exclude deposition testimony. — Although the deposition of the former employer's agent in response to the former employee's request for a deposition under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-30(b)(6) was admissible under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-32(a), because the agent had no direct personal knowledge of the employee's contract or the contract's termination, the agent's deposition testimony had no probative value as to the matters for which the testimony was proffered, specifically for rebuttal and impeachment purposes; thus, it was harmless error to exclude the testimony. Griffin v. Greene County Hosp. Auth., 260 Ga. App. 122, 578 S.E.2d 913 (2003).

Discretion of trial court. — Trial judge has broad control over the use and limitations of discovery procedures, and unless there is a clear abuse of this discretion the appellate courts will not interfere. Jackson v. Gordon, 122 Ga. App. 657, 178 S.E.2d 310 (1970).

Direct examination of deposed witness. — What constitutes the direct examination of a witness whose testimony was initially taken for discovery cannot be determined until the trial, when one of the parties elects to use the testimony on one's own behalf; at that time, rules governing direct and cross-examination would apply. Travis Meat & Seafood Co. v. Ashworth, 127 Ga. App. 284, 193 S.E.2d 166 (1972).

Transcription and copies. — Nondeposing party is entitled to have a deposition of the witness transcribed and to have a copy of the transcript, provided that the nondeposing party pays for the transcript, even though the deposing party decided, after taking the deposition, not to have the deposition transcribed, but merely to acquire the take-down notes from the reporter. Sams v. Champion, 184 Ga. App. 444, 361 S.E.2d 852 (1987).

Changes to deposition. — Witness may make any changes in form or substance which the witness desires, even if the changes contradict the original answers or even if the reasons for making the changes are unconvincing. J.H. Harvey Co. v. Reddick, 240 Ga. App. 466, 522 S.E.2d 749 (1999).

Errata sheet. — Because the certificate of an officer before whom a deposition was taken did not reflect when the deposition was submitted to the appellant and did not contain a statement that the appellant waived or otherwise failed to sign the deposition, the record did not positively reflect that the errata and the signature sheets were not part of the appellant's deposition and, therefore, the errata sheet was considered. Young v. YMCA of Metro. Atlanta, Inc., 204 Ga. App. 224, 419 S.E.2d 97 (1992).

Attorney fees and expenses for non-attendance at a deposition are available only in the instance of the failure of the party taking the deposition to appear. Ingram v. Star Touch Communications, Inc., 215 Ga. App. 329, 450 S.E.2d 334 (1994).

Suit properly dismissed due to party's failure to attend scheduled depositions that were properly noticed. — Motorist's suit was properly dismissed under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37(d) as the motorist failed to attend any of three scheduled depositions that were properly noticed under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-30(b)(1), defense counsel was not required to address the motorist's proposed discovery plan, and counsel's failure to do so did not excuse the motorist's failure to attend the depositions. Pascal v. Prescod, 296 Ga. App. 359, 674 S.E.2d 623 (2009).

Deposition improperly excluded because it was an unsigned copy. — In a parents' action against a care home arising out of the death of their adult son, the trial court erred in refusing to consider a copy of the deposition of the parents' expert because the deposition was not an original and had not been signed by the deponent; the copy contained the court reporter's signed certification that the transcript was a true and complete record of the evidence given by the expert. Blake v. KES, Inc., 329 Ga. App. 742, 766 S.E.2d 138 (2014).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Editor's notes. — Georgia Laws 1972, p. 510, made substantial revisions to certain sections of this chapter dealing with discovery. Prior to the 1972 amendment, this section was substantially the same as former Code 1933, § 38-2105. Hence, material based on this section prior to its 1972 amendment should be consulted with care.

Changes made under subsection (e) not limited. — Subsection (e) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-30 places no limitations on the type of changes that may be made by a witness before signing a deposition. 1987 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 87-17.

No permanent record is required for depositions and interrogatories; while depositions and interrogatories are required to be filed with the clerk, being evidence, depositions and interrogatories are not considered part of the permanent record of the trial court. 1970 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U70-232.

No filing or recording fee can be charged for depositions or interrogatories. 1970 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U70-232.

Contracts for reporting depositions. — Court reporter may enter into contracts for reporting depositions so long as the contract does not render the reporter an "employee" or "financially interested in the action"; however, charging different rates to various participants in a single deposition may constitute the charging of “unreasonable” fees and court reporters may not provide kickbacks to a party. 1993 Op. Att’y Gen. No. 93-18.

ADVISORY OPINIONS OF THE STATE BAR

Notice of deposition required. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-45 provides that a subpoena shall issue for persons sought to be deposed and may command the person to produce documents. O.C.G.A. § 9-11-30(b)(1) requires notice to every other party of all depositions. Reading §§ 9-11-30 and 9-11-45 together, it is obvious that before a subpoena can be issued, notice of the deposition must be given to all parties. Adv. Op. No. 84-40 (September 21, 1984).

9-11-31. Depositions upon written questions.

(a) Serving questions; notice.

(1) After commencement of the action, any party may take the testimony of any person, including a party, by deposition upon written questions. The attendance of witnesses may be compelled by the use of subpoena as provided in Code Section 9-11-45. The deposition of a person confined in a penal institution may be taken only by leave of court on such terms as the court prescribes.

(2) A party desiring to take a deposition upon written questions shall serve them upon every other party with a notice stating the name and address of the person who is to answer them, if known, and, if the name is not known, a general description sufficient to identify him or the particular class or group to which he belongs and the name or descriptive title and address of the officer before whom the deposition is to be taken. A deposition upon written questions may be taken of a public or private corporation or a partnership or association or governmental agency in accordance with paragraph (6) of subsection (b) of Code Section 9-11-30.

(3) Within 30 days after the notice and written questions are served, a party may serve cross-questions upon all other parties. Within ten days after being served with cross-questions, a party may serve redirect questions upon all other parties. Within ten days after being served with redirect questions, a party may serve recross-questions upon all other parties. The court may, for cause shown, enlarge or shorten the time.

(b) Officer to take responses and prepare record. A copy of the notice and copies of all questions served shall be delivered by the party taking the deposition to the officer designated in the notice, who shall proceed promptly, in the manner provided by subsections (c), (e), and (f) of Code Section 9-11-30, to take the testimony of the witness in response to the questions and to prepare, certify, and file or mail the deposition, attaching thereto the copy of the notice and the questions received by him. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Editor's notes. — Georgia Laws 1972, p. 510, made substantial revisions to certain sections of this chapter dealing with discovery. Prior to the 1972 amendment, this section was substantially the same as former Code 1933, § 38-2106. Hence, decisions based on this Code section prior to its 1972 amendment should be consulted with care.

In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code 1933, Ch. 21, T. 38, are included in the annotations for this Code section.

As between parties, no subpoena is required or necessary for the taking of a deposition. Millholland v. Oglesby, 114 Ga. App. 745, 152 S.E.2d 761 (1966), rev'd on other grounds, 223 Ga. 230, 154 S.E.2d 194 (1967) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 21, T. 38).

Right to be present at taking of deposition. — When a deposition is taken upon written interrogatories, the opposing party or the opposing party's counsel have the right to be present, and their exclusion would void the procedure, even if otherwise valid. Reynolds v. Reynolds, 217 Ga. 234, 123 S.E.2d 115 (1961), overruled on other grounds, Scherer v.

Scherer, 249 Ga. 635, 292 S.E.2d 662 (1982) (decided under former Code 1933, § 38-2105).

9-11-32. Use of depositions in court proceedings; effect of errors and irregularities in depositions.

(a) Use of depositions. At the trial or upon the hearing of a motion or an interlocutory proceeding, any part or all of a deposition, so far as admissible under the rules of evidence applied as though the witness were then present and testifying, may be used against any party who was present or represented at the taking of the deposition or who had reasonable notice thereof, in accordance with any of the following provisions:

(1) Any deposition may be used by any party for the purpose of contradicting or impeaching the testimony of the deponent as a witness;

(2) The deposition of a party or of anyone who, at the time of taking the deposition, was an officer, director, or managing agent or a person designated under paragraph (6) of subsection (b) of Code Section 9-11-30 or subsection (a) of Code Section 9-11-31 to testify on behalf of a public or private corporation, a partnership or association, or a governmental agency which is a party may be used by an adverse party for any purpose;

(3) The deposition of a witness, whether or not a party, may be used by any party for any purpose if the court finds:

(A) That the witness is dead;

(B) That the witness is out of the county, unless it appears that the absence of the witness was procured by a party offering the deposition;

(C) That the witness is unable to attend or testify because of age, illness, infirmity, or imprisonment;

(D) That the party offering the deposition has been unable to procure the attendance of the witness by subpoena;

(E) That because of the nature of the business or occupation of the witness it is not possible to secure his personal attendance without manifest inconvenience to the public or third persons; or

(F) That the witness will be a member of the General Assembly and that the session of the General Assembly will conflict with the session of the court in which the case is to be tried;

(4) The deposition of a witness, whether or not a party, taken upon oral examination, may be used in the discretion of the trial judge, even though the witness is available to testify in person at the trial. The use of the deposition shall not be a ground for excluding the witness from testifying orally in open court; or

(5) If only part of a deposition is offered in evidence by a party, an adverse party may require him to introduce all of it which is relevant to the part introduced, and any party may introduce any other parts. Substitution of parties does not affect the right to use depositions previously taken; and, when an action in any court of the United States or of any state has been dismissed and another action involving the same subject matter is afterward brought between the same parties or their representatives or successors in interest, all depositions lawfully taken and duly filed in the former action may be used in the latter as if originally taken therefor.

(b) Objections to admissibility. Subject to paragraph (3) of subsection (d) of this Code section, objection may be made at the trial or hearing to receiving in evidence any deposition or part thereof for any reason which would require the exclusion of the evidence if the witness were then present and testifying.

(c) Effect of taking or using depositions. A party does not make a person his own witness for any purpose by taking his deposition. The introduction in evidence of the deposition or any part thereof for any purpose other than that of contradicting or impeaching the deponent makes the deponent the witness of the party introducing the deposition; but this shall not apply to the use by an adverse party of a deposition under paragraph (2) of subsection (a) of this Code section. At the trial or hearing any party may rebut any relevant evidence contained in a deposition whether introduced by him or by any other party.

(d) Effect of errors and irregularities in depositions.

(1) As to notice. All errors and irregularities in the notice for taking a deposition are waived unless written objection is promptly served upon the party giving the notice.

(2) As to disqualification of officer. Objection to taking a deposition because of disqualification of the officer before whom it is to be taken is waived unless made before the taking of the deposition begins or as soon thereafter as the disqualification becomes known or could be discovered with reasonable diligence.

(3) As to taking of deposition.

(A) Objections to the competency of a witness or to the competency, relevancy, or materiality of testimony are not waived by failure to make them before or during the taking of the deposition, unless the ground of the objection is one which might have been obviated or removed if presented at that time.

(B) Errors and irregularities occurring at the oral examination in the manner of taking the deposition, in the form of the questions or answers, in the oath or affirmation, or in the conduct of parties, and errors of any kind which might be obviated, removed, or cured if promptly presented are waived unless seasonable objection thereto is made at the taking of the deposition.

(C) Objections to the form of written questions submitted under Code Section 9-11-31 are waived unless served in writing upon the party propounding them within the time allowed for serving the succeeding cross or other questions and within five days after service of the last questions authorized.

(4) As to completion and return of deposition. Errors and irregularities in the manner in which the testimony is transcribed or the deposition is prepared, signed, certified, sealed, endorsed, transmitted, filed, or otherwise dealt with by the officer under Code Sections 9-11-30 and 9-11-31 are waived unless a motion to suppress the deposition or some part thereof is made with reasonable promptness after such defect is, or with due diligence might have been, ascertained. General Consideration

Editor's notes. — Georgia Laws 1972, p. 510, made substantial revisions to certain sections of this chapter dealing with discovery. Prior to the 1972 amendment, this section was substantially the same as former Code 1933, § 38-2107. Subsections (a) through (c) of this section, added by the 1972 amendment, now read substantially the same as did subsections (d) through (f) of § 9-11-26 prior to enactment of Ga. L. 1972, p. 510; hence, decisions under § 9-11-26 prior to its 1972 amendment relating to subject matter now covered by this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section.

In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code 1910, §§ 5910 and 5913 and former Code 1933, Ch. 21, T. 38 are included in the annotations for this Code section.

Federal interpretation not adopted. — Theory of representative cross-examination implicit in federal interpretation of Fed. R. Civ. P. Rule 32 is not adopted in Georgia. Transamerica Ins. Co. v. Thrift-Mart, Inc., 159 Ga. App. 874, 285 S.E.2d 566 (1981).

Relevant portions to be admitted together. — Fairness demands that no less than all portions relevant to that interrogated about be introduced at the same time as a statement out of context and without accompanying explanatory matter may be unfairly damaging. Wells v. Alderman, 117 Ga. App. 724, 162 S.E.2d 18 (1968); City Council v. Youngblood, 120 Ga. App. 616, 171 S.E.2d 766 (1969); Brown v. Macheers, 249 Ga. App. 418, 547 S.E.2d 759 (2001).

Right to introduce remainder of deposition when portion admitted. —

When an attorney for the appellant introduces a portion of a deposition into evidence, the opposing party is entitled to introduce the remainder, or such portion thereof as was pertinent. Reeves v. Morgan, 121 Ga. App. 481, 174 S.E.2d 460, rev'd on other grounds, 226 Ga. 697, 177 S.E.2d 68 (1970).

Correctness of admission or exclusion of deposition is predicated on harmful error rule. North Ga. Deed & Poultry Co. v. Ultra-Life Labs., 118 Ga. App. 149, 162 S.E.2d 803 (1968).

Requiring reading of full deposition not tantamount to introducing evidence. — Defendants, who rested the defendants' case without introducing any evidence, did not waive the defendants' right to make both opening and concluding arguments to the jury by exercising the defendants' right to require the introduction of the remaining relevant portions of the depositions from which the plaintiffs' counsel had read selected excerpts. Thico Plan, Inc. v. Ashkouti, 171 Ga. App. 536, 320 S.E.2d 604 (1984).

Loss of right to present opening and closing arguments. — In a personal injury case, when the defense read into the record portions of a deposition, parts of which the plaintiff previously read into the record, the defense lost the right to present opening and concluding closing argument because the parts of the deposition the defendant read into the record were not relevant to the parts of the deposition the plaintiff read into the record, so the defense made the deponent the defendant's witness and presented evidence under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-32(c). Rouse v. Polott, 274 Ga. App. 226, 617 S.E.2d 185 (2005).

Although physicians may not have appeared to testify in person, the physicians' deposition testimony was certainly not of a "weaker and inferior nature." Meacham v. Barber, 183 Ga. App. 533, 359 S.E.2d 424 (1987).

App. 879, 380 S.E.2d 314 (1989); Medlin v. Boyston Lumber & Bldg. Supply, Inc., 193 Ga. App. 608, 388 S.E.2d 861 (1989); T.J. Morris Co. v. Dykes, 197 Ga. App. 392, 398 S.E.2d 403 (1990); Brand Banking Co. v. Roosman, 199 Ga. App. 58, 404 S.E.2d 286 (1991); Renew v. Edenfield, 200 Ga. App. 484, 408 S.E.2d 499 (1991); Morrison v. Koornick, 201 Ga. App. 367, 411 S.E.2d 105 (1991); James v. Tyler, 215 Ga. App. 479, 451 S.E.2d 506 (1994).

Use of Depositions

Discretion of court. — Use of deposition of witness taken after notice to opposite party and with counsel for both parties present lies within the sound discretion of the court, and this remains true even if the witness may be present in court. Pembroke Mgt., Inc. v. Cossaboon, 157 Ga. App. 675, 278 S.E.2d 100 (1981); Smoky, Inc. v. McCray, 196 Ga. App. 650, 396 S.E.2d 794, cert. denied, 196 Ga. App. 650, 396 S.E.2d 794 (1990).

There was no abuse of discretion in admitting into evidence the deposition of a witness who was available to testify at trial, but had expected to be out of state for a new employer until after the trial, since the circumstances surrounding the taking of the deposition showed that the notice was not unreasonable and the plaintiff did not show how the plaintiff was harmed by admission of the deposition. American Aluminum Prods. Co. v.

Use of Depositions (Cont'd)

After an individual's deposition was taken in Florida, where the individual resided, and the individual walked out before the deposition was completed in an action by an estate administratrix, alleging negligent entrustment against a company, but the administratrix did not attempt to complete the deposition or take any other steps to obtain the discovery before the trial court ruled on a summary judgment motion, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in considering the deposition, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-32. Scott v. LaRosa & LaRosa, Inc., 275 Ga. App. 96, 619 S.E.2d 787 (2005).

Use of deposition under paragraph (a)(1). — Evidence of a witness's testimony at the witness's deposition was properly admissible under paragraph (a)(1) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-32, particularly as the witness had difficulty with memory at the time of trial and conceded the deposition was closer in time to the events in question. Lawson v. Athens Auto Supply & Elec., Inc., 200 Ga. App. 609, 409 S.E.2d 60, cert. denied, 200 Ga. App. 895, 409 S.E.2d 60 (1991).

Relationship of paragraphs (a)(2) and (a)(3). — Paragraph (a)(2) of this section clearly applies to the deposition of an adverse party, while paragraph (a)(3) of this section does not; hence, paragraph (a)(3) is an expansion of the provisions of paragraph (a)(2), rather than a contradictory restriction. Head v. H.J. Russell Constr. Co., 152 Ga. App. 864, 264 S.E.2d 313 (1980).

Right to use deposition not absolute. — Right to use the deposition in place of a witness or party who is present in court is not absolute. Millholland v. Neal, 118 Ga. App. 566, 164 S.E.2d 451 (1968).

Against whom deposition may be used. — Deposition, to the extent admissible under the rules of evidence, may be used against any party present or represented at the taking or having due notice thereof, in accordance with any one of the enumerated provisions. Colbert Co. v. Newsom, 125 Ga. App. 571, 188 S.E.2d 266 (1972).

Use of deposition under paragraph (a)(4) in discretion of court.

— When the deposition of a witness was taken after notice to the defendants and with counsel of record for all parties present, the use thereof was in the discretion of the trial judge. Ricketts v. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co., 127 Ga. App. 483, 194 S.E.2d 311 (1972).

Deposition of a witness, whether or not a party, taken upon oral examination, may be used in the discretion of the trial judge, even though the witness is available to testify in person at the trial. Smith v. Davis, 121 Ga. App. 704, 175 S.E.2d 28 (1970).

Decision by the trial court to admit into evidence a deposition taken upon oral examination when the witness is available shall be reversed only when the party objecting to admission of the deposition shows that the trial court abused the court's discretion. Atlanta Coca-Cola Bottling Co. v. Rosser, 250 Ga. 52, 295 S.E.2d 827 (1982).

Use of deposition of witness present during trial but later excused without the knowledge of the other party is a matter within the sound discretion of the trial court. Watson v. Elberton-Elbert County Hosp. Auth., 229 Ga. 26, 189 S.E.2d 66 (1972).

Showing that deposition was taken in connection with former litigation on the same subject matter between the same parties, as well as others, in the same court, supported the trial judge in allowing the plaintiff to use the deposition. Colbert Co. v. Newsom, 125 Ga. App. 571, 188 S.E.2d 266 (1972).

Use of deposition from prior action on motion for summary judgment. — Trial court's consideration, on motion for summary judgment, of deposition given by moving party in a prior action between the same parties and concerning substantially the same issues, offered in the present action by the adverse party, was proper; there is no requirement that the deponent needed to be unavailable before the court could examine such deposition. Clover Realty Co. v. J.L. Todd Auction Co., 146 Ga. App. 576, 246 S.E.2d 695 (1978); Mitchell v. Southern Gen. Ins. Co., 194 Ga. App. 218, 390 S.E.2d 79 (1990), cert.

denied, 194 Ga. App. 912, 390 S.E.2d 79 (1990).

Physician's deposition. — Rule as to admissibility is the same when a deposition of a physician is offered as when the physician testifies upon a trial. Sapp v. Kitchens, 124 Ga. App. 764, 186 S.E.2d 121 (1971).

Attorney as unavailable witness. — When a witness subpoenaed by the plaintiffs was an attorney who, at the time of this trial, was compelled to attend the trial of the attorney's own client's case in another county, the trial court did not err in ruling that the witness was unavailable to appear at trial and in permitting the attorney's testimony to be presented by deposition. Jet Air, Inc. v. EPPS Air Serv., Inc., 194 Ga. App. 829, 392 S.E.2d 245, cert. denied, 194 Ga. App. 911, 392 S.E.2d 245 (1990).

Statement of attorney of witness' unavailability. — As an attorney is an officer of the court, whose statement to the court in the attorney's place is considered prima facie true and needs no further verification unless required by the court or the opposing party, use of the deposition based on the statement of an attorney in the attorney's place that the witness was unavailable for testimony was proper. Sheffield v. Lockhart, 151 Ga. App. 551, 260 S.E.2d 416 (1979); Wright v. Millines, 217 Ga. App. 464, 458 S.E.2d 488 (1995).

There was no error in allowing the use of a caveator's deposition at trial in place of the caveator's testimony as counsel had made a statement as to the caveator's unavailability due to a medical condition. Odom v. Hughes, 293 Ga. 447, 748 S.E.2d 839 (2013).

Out-of-state witness. — Trial court could properly admit the deposition of a witness who was out-of-state. Lil Champ Food Stores, Inc. v. DOT, 230 Ga. App. 715, 498 S.E.2d 94 (1998).

In a medical malpractice action against a pediatrician and a hospital, when the pediatrician settled and the hospital did not, the deposition of an out of state expert on the pediatrician's witness list was properly admitted by the trial court, even though the deposition was taken for discovery purposes only, as the witness was unavailable, under O.C.G.A.

§ 9-11-32(a)(3)(B), because the witness resided out of state, and the admission of the witness's deposition was within the trial court's discretion. Gill v. Spivey, 264 Ga. App. 723, 592 S.E.2d 132 (2003).

Physician as unavailable witness. — Refusal of the probate court to find that the nature of a physician's occupation would cause manifest inconvenience to others if the physician's attendance as a witness was required was not error; even though the evidence would have authorized such finding, it was not required. Collins v. Kiah, 218 Ga. App. 484, 462 S.E.2d 158 (1995).

New trial for improper ruling on admission of deposition. — When a ruling of the trial court on the introduction of a deposition showed that no discretion was exercised and the judgment rendered was based upon an erroneous view of the law, a new trial would be granted. Watson v. Elberton-Elbert County Hosp. Auth., 229 Ga. 26, 189 S.E.2d 66 (1972).

Adoption of deponent's testimony by introduction at trial. — Testimony of deponent obtained through discovery does not belong to or bind either party until such testimony is introduced in evidence at the trial of the case, whereupon the party introducing the testimony adopts the testimony and is bound by the testimony. Travis Meat & Seafood Co. v. Ashworth, 127 Ga. App. 284, 193 S.E.2d 166 (1972).

Admission in subsequent trial. — Specific and limited provision for admission into evidence in subsequent trial of depositions taken in prior action was made by paragraph (a)(5) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-32. All other issues relating to the admission into evidence in a subsequent trial of testimony taken in connection with a prior action must be resolved under former O.C.G.A. § 24-3-10 (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-8-804). Transamerica Ins. Co. v. Thrift-Mart, Inc., 159 Ga. App. 874, 285 S.E.2d 566 (1981).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in excluding the deposition testimony from two prior unrelated proceedings because it was clear that the prior actions did not involve the same parties and the property owner failed to point to any evidence demonstrating that those cases involved the same subject matter. Tharp v. Vesta Holdings I, LLC, 276 Ga. App. 901, 625 S.E.2d 46 (2005).

Use of deposition absent a finding of witness's unavailability. — Although O.C.G.A. § 9-11-32 plainly requires a finding of unavailability before the deposition of a witness, whether or not a party, may be used for any purpose, the violation of this mandate does not demand reversal if the testimony of the witness is not material to the verdict rendered by the jury. Elder v. Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Auth., 160 Ga. App. 78, 286 S.E.2d 315 (1981), overruled on other grounds, Chadwick v. Miller, 169 Ga. App. 338, 312 S.E.2d 835 (1983).

Objection to use of party's deposition after party's voluntary absence. — It would be a fraud on the court to permit a party to voluntarily absent oneself from the party's own trial and then for any reason claim the party's deposition could not be used. Fisher Scientific Co. v. McCorkle, 163 Ga. App. 613, 295 S.E.2d 366 (1982).

Use of portion of videotaped deposition. — Trial court did not err in allowing only a portion of a video deposition to be used because under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-32 the individual who gave the deposition was both an adverse party and an officer of the corporation named in the promissory estoppel lawsuit. Rental Equip. Group, LLC v. Maci, LLC, 263 Ga. App. 155, 587 S.E.2d 364 (2003).

Recent tonsillectomy was "illness or infirmity." — Witness's deposition testimony that as a result of a recent tonsillectomy the witness was very weak and physically unable to attend the trial was sufficient to show that the witness was unavailable due to illness or infirmity under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-32, and the trial court did not err in admitting the witness's deposition at trial. Rescigno v. Vesali, 306 Ga. App. 610, 703 S.E.2d 65 (2010).

It is within the discretion of the court to allow a deposition to be read even though the party is present and testifies. Parker & Co. v. Glenn, 90 Ga. App. 500, 83 S.E.2d 263 (1954) (decided under former Code 1933, § 38-2103).

Reading of deposition during trial. — When depositions of a witness are taken for use in a cause then pending, at trial the deposition so taken may, in the discretion of the court, be read in evidence notwithstanding the presence of the witness at the trial. Western & A.R.R. v. Bussey, 95 Ga. 584, 23 S.E. 207 (1894); Southern Ry. v. Dickson, 138 Ga. 371, 75 S.E. 462 (1912).

Harmless error to exclude deposition testimony. — Although the deposition of the former employer's agent in response to the former employee's request for a deposition under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-30(b)(6) was admissible under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-32(a), because the agent had no direct personal knowledge of the employee's contract or the contract's termination, the agent's deposition testimony had no probative value as to the matters for which the testimony was proffered, specifically for rebuttal and impeachment purposes; thus, it was harmless error to exclude the testimony. Griffin v. Greene County Hosp. Auth., 260 Ga. App. 122, 578 S.E.2d 913 (2003).

Taking of discovery documents into jury room. — Rule that interrogatories and depositions should not be taken into the jury room does not apply to documents which are introduced as documents and not orally, under the best evidence rule. Dunagan v. Elder, 154 Ga. App. 728, 270 S.E.2d 18 (1980) (decided under former Code 1933, § 38-2101).

Imprisonment of deponent. — Trial court did not err pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-32 by admitting the testimony of a plumbing contractor by way of deposition because the contractor was imprisoned at the time of the trial. Furthermore, the opposing party had the opportunity to cross-examine the contractor at the deposition. LN West Paces Ferry Assocs., LLC v. McDonald, 306 Ga. App. 641, 703 S.E.2d 85 (2010).

Cross-Examination

Excluding deposition testimony adduced on cross-examination. — There is no specific basis for excluding deposition testimony adduced on cross-examination. Colbert Co. v.

Newsom, 125 Ga. App. 571, 188 S.E.2d 266 (1972).

Right to cross-examine not abridged. — Allowing plaintiff's attorney to read into evidence, along with the attorney's own examination of deponent, those portions of proffered deposition consisting of examination of the witness by the defendant's attorney did not abridge the defendant's right to cross-examine. Kamman v. Seabolt, 149 Ga. App. 167, 253 S.E.2d 842 (1979).

Refusal to admit deposition harmless when deponent cross-examined extensively. — When deponent spent considerable time on the witness stand and was cross-examined extensively and thoroughly by opposing counsel, including the use of the deponent's deposition for impeachment purposes, the court's refusal to admit the deposition as evidence constituted at most harmless error. Marathon Oil Co. v. Hollis, 167 Ga. App. 48, 305 S.E.2d 864 (1983).

Admission of depositions for impeachment purposes. — When the defendant was cross-examined by deposition and later testified on the trial, the deposition was admissible for impeachment purposes, there being some variance between the testimony contained in the deposition and that delivered on the trial. Parker & Co. v. Glenn, 90 Ga. App. 500, 83 S.E.2d 263 (1954) (decided under former Code 1933, § 38-2103).

When it appears that the witness was questioned about the depositions while the witness was on the stand, and that the witness testified, as to certain matters, somewhat at variance from the depositions, it was not an abuse of discretion for the court to allow the depositions in evidence for the purpose of impeachment. Parker & Co. v. Glenn, 90 Ga. App. 500, 83 S.E.2d 263 (1954) (decided under former Code 1933, § 38-2103).

Making witness one's own. — Trial court was authorized to find that, by insisting that a part of a deposition which contained a reference to the supposed excellence of the former employee of the defendant be read to the jury, the defendant had made the witness the defendant's own, when the portion of the deposition was not relevant to those parts of the deposition submitted by the plaintiff. Orkin Exterminating Co. v. Carder, 258 Ga. App. 796, 575 S.E.2d 664 (2002) (Unpublished).

Errors and Objections

Prompt notification of defect in notice of deposition. — While proper notice is required for taking a deposition, the opposing party must promptly notify the party giving the notice if the notice is technically deficient in any manner. Republic Nat'l Bank v. Hodgson, 124 Ga. App. 11, 183 S.E.2d 4 (1971).

Rationale for requiring prompt notice. — Rationale of requiring that written objection to a deficient notice of a deposition be made promptly, failing which the error or irregularity in the notice is deemed to have been waived, is the same as that for the requirement that objections to the evidence be made as of the time of taking the deposition. Republic Nat'l Bank v. Hodgson, 124 Ga. App. 11, 183 S.E.2d 4 (1971).

Raising an issue on appeal is not "reasonable promptness" as required by paragraph (d)(4) of this section. Building Assocs. v. Crider, 141 Ga. App. 825, 234 S.E.2d 666 (1977).

Waiver of error which might have been obviated. — Error or irregularity in the taking of a deposition in connection with a workers' compensation claim which might have been obviated, removed, or cured is waived unless seasonable objection thereto is made at the taking of the deposition. Royal Globe Indem. Co. v. Thompson, 123 Ga. App. 268, 180 S.E.2d 576 (1971).

When no objection was made during the deposition to the form of the question or to the responsiveness of the answer, although any such alleged error could have been obviated, removed, or cured if promptly presented, failure to so object constitutes a waiver. Haynes v. McCambry, 203 Ga. App. 464, 416 S.E.2d 893 (1992).

Waiver of objections to use of depositions at trial. — In appeals filed by both former spouses from a trial court order modifying visitation and child support provisions in their final judgment and decree of divorce, they waived their claims that the trial court abused the court's discretion in conducting the final hearing by taking most testimony only by deposition and restricting the amount of time that each party could testify under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-32(a)(4); the record was devoid of objections by either party to the trial court's announced procedure for conducting the final hearing, either at the hearing or in response to the trial court's written orders setting forth the process. Facey v. Facey, 281 Ga. 367, 638 S.E.2d 273 (2006).

Objection of competency to testify properly sustained. — Trial court did not err in sustaining an objection raised at trial as to the competency of plaintiff husband to testify regarding an oral contract with the plaintiff's deceased wife, despite the plaintiff's contention that the issue of the plaintiff's competency to testify was waived by the defendants by the taking of a deposition since the deposition itself showed that the parties reserved the right to object to the evidence when presented at trial. Rigby v. Powell, 236 Ga. 687, 225 S.E.2d 48 (1976).

Defaulted case not reinstated by failure to object to notice of deposition. — Party's failure to object to notice of intent to take the party's deposition on the ground that the case was in default would not of itself be sufficient to reinstate the case. Minnesota Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Love, 120 Ga. App. 502, 171 S.E.2d 361 (1969).

Waiver of objection to competency of expert witness. — If the plaintiff had objected during the deposition to the absence of proof of the witness's competency to testify as an expert, defense counsel might have been able to cure this ground of objection by proof of the witness's qualifications; since the plaintiff did not, the plaintiff waived the right to raise this objection under subparagraph (d)(3)(A) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-32. Andean Motor Co. v. Mulkey, 251 Ga. 32, 302 S.E.2d 550 (1983); Jones v. Scarborough, 194 Ga. App. 468, 390 S.E.2d 674 (1990).

Waiver of objection to videotape of deposition. — Objection based on lack of court order allowing videotaping of deposition was waived since no objection to the videotaping was raised prior to trial. Even if the objection was timely made at trial, any error in the admission of the videotaped deposition was harmless because the videotaping was conducted in substantial compliance with required technical conditions and procedures. DuBois v. Ray, 177 Ga. App. 349, 339 S.E.2d 605 (1985).

No waiver of objection to deposition testimony. — In a medical malpractice case, the trial court committed reversible error by finding that the patient waived a hearsay objection as to a defense pathologist's deposition testimony because the patient had the right to object to the testimony at trial and the testimony was inadmissible hearsay entitling the patient to a new trial since it was not harmless error in that the evidence was critical in the case because the evidence directly addressed the core disputed issue of whether the clinic's neurosurgeon left an excessive amount of cotton in the patient's brain. Thomas v. Emory Clinic, Inc., 321 Ga. App. 457, 739 S.E.2d 138 (2013).

Waiver of objections affecting formal development of evidence. — Objections which must be made at the taking of depositions or will otherwise be considered to be waived are restricted to those affecting the formal development of the evidence. Hamilton v. Pulaski County, 86 Ga. App. 705, 72 S.E.2d 487 (1952) (decided under former Code 1933, § 38-2304).

Time for objections to competency and relevance. — Objections as to competency and relevance of evidence need not be made at the taking of depositions. Hamilton v. Pulaski County, 86 Ga. App. 705, 72 S.E.2d 487 (1952) (decided under former Code 1933, § 38-2304).

Objections which should be made at taking depositions are formal objections to the testimony or to the competency of the witness, so far as are then known to the objecting party, and the fact that at the taking of the deposition the party did not make objection to the testimony did not prevent the party at trial from objecting to the testimony upon substantial grounds, such as irrelevancy or incompetency, as to which the law does not require objection to be made at the time the witness is offered. Georgia Ry. & Elec. Co. v. Bailey, 9 Ga. App. 106, 70 S.E. 607 (1911).

When depositions of a witness were taken and certain objections to parts of the testimony were made and noted, this did not preclude the party against whom the evidence was offered from objecting, at trial, to certain parts of the testimony on the ground that they were hearsay and secondary in character, although such objections were not noted on the examination. Erk v. Simpson, 137 Ga. 608, 73 S.E. 1065 (1912).

9-11-33. Interrogatories to parties.

(a) Availability; procedures for use.

(1) Any party may serve upon any other party written interrogatories to be answered by the party served or, if the party served is a public or private corporation or a partnership or association or a governmental agency, by any officer or agent, who shall furnish such information as is available to the party. Interrogatories may, without leave of court, be served upon the plaintiff after commencement of the action and upon any other party with or after service of the summons and complaint upon that party; provided, however, that no party may serve interrogatories containing more than 50 interrogatories, including subparts, upon any other party without leave of court upon a showing of complex litigation or undue hardship incurred if such additional interrogatories are not permitted.

(2) Each interrogatory shall be answered separately and fully in writing under oath, unless it is objected to, in which event the reasons for objection shall be stated in lieu of an answer. The answers are to be signed by the person making them, and the objections signed by the attorney making them. The party upon whom the interrogatories have been served shall serve a copy of the answers, and objections if any, within 30 days after the service of the interrogatories, except that a defendant may serve answers or objections within 45 days after service of the summons and complaint upon that defendant. The court may allow a shorter or longer time. The party submitting the interrogatories may move for an order under subsection (a) of Code Section 9-11-37 with respect to any objection to or other failure to answer an interrogatory.

(b) Scope; use at trial.

(1) Interrogatories may relate to any matters which can be inquired into under subsection (b) of Code Section 9-11-26, and the answers may be used to the extent permitted by the rules of evidence.

(2) An interrogatory otherwise proper is not necessarily objectionable merely because an answer to the interrogatory involves an opinion or contention that relates to fact or to the application of law to fact; but the court may order that such an interrogatory need not be answered until after designated discovery has been completed or until a pretrial conference or other later time.

(c) Option to produce business records. Where the answer to an interrogatory may be derived or ascertained from the business records of the party upon whom the interrogatory has been served or from an examination, audit, or inspection of such business records, or from a compilation, abstract, or summary based thereon, and the burden of deriving or ascertaining the answer is substantially the same for the party serving the interrogatory as for the party served, it is a sufficient answer to the interrogatory to specify the records from which the answer may be derived or ascertained and to afford to the party serving the interrogatory reasonable opportunity to examine, audit, or inspect such records and to make copies, compilations, abstracts, or summaries. (Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 33; Ga. L. 1972, p. 510, § 6; Ga. L. 1980, p. 938, § 1.)

ANSWERS

OBJECTIONS

General Consideration

Editor’s notes. — Georgia Laws 1972, p. 510, made substantial revisions to certain sections of this chapter dealing with discovery. Prior to the 1972 amendment, this Code section was substantially the same as former Code 1933, § 38-2108. Hence, decisions based on this Code section prior to its 1972 amendment should be consulted with care.

In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code 1910, § 5886 and former Code 1933, Ch. 21, T. 38 are included in the annotations for this Code section.

Interrogatories serve two purposes: first, to ascertain facts and procure evidence or to secure information as to which it obtains; and, second, to narrow the issues. Thornton v. State Hwy. Dep’t, 113 Ga. App. 351, 148 S.E.2d 66 (1966) (decided under former Code 1933, §§ 38-2105 and 38-2108).

Scope of discovery as broad as general discovery provision. — Scope of discovery under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-33 is as broad as the scope of examination under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-26(b) (general discovery provision). Armstrong v. Strand, 167 Ga. App. 723, 307 S.E.2d 528 (1983).

Scope same as for request to produce. — Scope of permissible discovery by interrogatories under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-33 is the same as by request to produce under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-34(a). E.H. Siler Realty & Bus. Broker, Inc. v. Sanderlin, 158 Ga. App. 796, 282 S.E.2d 381 (1981).

Interrogatories are addressed to the opposite party, not to counsel, and counsel cannot be ineluctably bound to use all witnesses whose names are given, or precluded from the using of others whose existence may later be discovered.

Nathan v. Duncan, 113 Ga. App. 630, 149 S.E.2d 383 (1966) (decided under former Code 1933, § 38-2108).

Trial court is authorized to determine that the number of interrogatories, including subparts, is within the number authorized by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-33. Shannon v. Toronto-Dominion Bank, 168 Ga. App. 279, 308 S.E.2d 682 (1983).

Number of interrogatories allowed. — Without leave of court, a party may not serve a total of more than 50 interrogatories and such limit is a cumulative, not a “per set” limit. Copher v. Mackey, 220 Ga. App. 43, 467 S.E.2d 362 (1996).

Discretion of trial court. — Trial judge has broad control over the use and limitations of discovery procedures, and unless there is a clear abuse of this discretion, the appellate courts will not interfere. Jackson v. Gordon, 122 Ga. App. 657, 178 S.E.2d 310 (1970).

It is not necessary to cite authority for propounding of interrogatories in the instrument propounding them. Sparks Specialty Co. v. Moss, 110 Ga. App. 585, 139 S.E.2d 345 (1964) (decided under former Code 1933, § 38-2108).

Taking of discovery documents into jury room. — Rule that interrogatories and depositions should not be taken into the jury room does not apply to documents which are introduced as documents and not orally, under the best evidence rule. Dunagan v. Elder, 154 Ga. App. 728, 270 S.E.2d 18 (1980) (decided under former Code 1933, § 38-2101).

Appellate court will be slow to find error in requiring attendance of a witness instead of permitting the witness’s interrogatories to be read. Baker v. Lyman, 53 Ga. 339 (1874).

Taking of interrogatories is limited to service on an adverse party, to be answered by the party served, and cannot be construed as conferring on the plaintiff the absolute right to establish the plaintiff's case by the plaintiff's own written interrogatories. Reynolds v. Reynolds, 217 Ga. 234, 123 S.E.2d 115 (1961), overruled on other grounds, Scherer v. Scherer, 249 Ga. 635, 292 S.E.2d 662 (1982) (decided under former Code 1933, § 38-2108).

Interrogatories should be sufficiently specific as to require specific answer. Nathan v. Duncan, 113 Ga. App. 630, 149 S.E.2d 383 (1966) (decided under former Code 1933, § 38-2108).

Scope and usage of interrogatories formerly broader. — Prior to the 1972 amendment to this section, the scope and usage of interrogatories was much broader. Carter v. Tatum, 134 Ga. App. 345, 212 S.E.2d 439 (1975).

Request for "all documentary evidence to be introduced at trial" too broad. — Interrogatories requesting the listing of all documents relied upon to demonstrate and support facts relevant to the litigation would be within the permissible scope of discovery under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-33, but one requesting "all documentary evidence which will be introduced at trial" would not. E.H. Siler Realty & Bus. Broker, Inc. v. Sanderlin, 158 Ga. App. 796, 282 S.E.2d 381 (1981).

Dismissal or default judgment appropriate following failure to answer or object. — Failure of a party to file answers or objections to interrogatories within the statutory period may itself constitute justification for such harsh sanctions as dismissal of the offending party's pleadings or entry of default judgment in favor of the party seeking discovery. Ross v. White, 175 Ga. App. 791, 334 S.E.2d 371 (1985).

Trial court did not err in entering a default judgment against sellers pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37(b)(2) without conducting a hearing on willfulness because the sellers did not file answers to a broker's request for interrogatories and production of documents within the time period prescribed by O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-33(a)(2) and 9-11-34(b)(2), and the sellers only filed a response to the request after the trial court's grant of the broker's initial motion to compel and for sanctions. Cochran v. Kennelly, 306 Ga. App. 838, 703 S.E.2d 411 (2010).

Propounding party not entitled to names of those to be called as witnesses at trial. — While the party who propounds interrogatories is entitled to the names and addresses of the other party's witnesses who have knowledge of relevant facts, the party is not entitled to the specific names of those persons who will be called as witnesses at the trial of the case. E.H. Siler Realty & Bus. Broker, Inc. v. Sanderlin, 158 Ga. App. 796, 282 S.E.2d 381 (1981).

Sanctions proper. — In a negligence case, a trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by striking the defendants' joint answer and counterclaim as a sanction for discovery abuse because the evidence established that the defendants intentionally and in bad faith concealed damaging evidence by repairing the tractor trailer and destroying information from the computer units involved in the accident, provided false answers to interrogatories, and the plaintiff was prejudiced by the misconduct. Howard v. Alegria, 321 Ga. App. 178, 739 S.E.2d 95 (2013).

Answers

Full answer to question asked required. — In making an answer, the party to whom interrogatories are directed is required to go no further than is required in making a full answer to the questions asked. Nathan v. Duncan, 113 Ga. App. 630, 149 S.E.2d 383 (1966) (decided under former Code 1933, § 38-2108).

Party making answer is bound to give truthful answers to the interrogatories, and must see to it that its answers are truthful as of the time of trial as well as of the time of answering the interrogatories. Nathan v. Duncan, 113 Ga. App. 630, 149 S.E.2d 383 (1966) (decided under former Code 1933, § 38-2108).

Promptly supplement where necessary. — Subsequently acquired information that should be given in a supplemental answer should be supplied promptly, as the purpose and spirit of this discovery procedure is to eliminate the element of surprise. Nathan v. Duncan, 113 Ga. App. 630, 149 S.E.2d 383 (1966) (decided under former Code 1933, § 38-2108).

Supplementation of list of witnesses to occurrence. — Interrogatory may seek the names, addresses, occupations, places of employment, etc., of all witnesses to an occurrence, and if the party to whom this interrogatory is directed learns of other witnesses to the occurrence after making an answer, the party should promptly supply that information by way of a supplemental answer, regardless of whether the interrogatories are specifically made continuing. Nathan v. Duncan, 113 Ga. App. 630, 149 S.E.2d 383 (1966) (decided under former Code 1933, § 38-2108).

Compelling party to answer interrogatories and produce requested documents did not constitute an unauthorized commingling of discovery procedures since there was a clear delineation as to each discovery procedure and the law applicable to each procedure was cited. Whisenaut v. Gray, 189 Ga. App. 314, 375 S.E.2d 619, cert. denied, 189 Ga. App. 913, 375 S.E.2d 619 (1988).

Interrogatories are not pleadings, and counsel cannot answer the interrogatories. Gregory v. King Plumbing, Inc., 127 Ga. App. 512, 194 S.E.2d 271 (1972).

Personal answer under oath required. — Plain and unambiguous terms of this section require a party to answer personally a party opponent's interrogatories under oath. Gregory v. King Plumbing, Inc., 127 Ga. App. 512, 194 S.E.2d 271 (1972).

Separately and fully in writing. — Interrogatories served on a party must be answered by the party separately and fully in writing under oath. Gregory v. King Plumbing, Inc., 127 Ga. App. 512, 194 S.E.2d 271 (1972).

Unsworn writing by counsel does not constitute an answer to an interrogatory. Williamson v. Lunsford, 119 Ga. App. 240, 166 S.E.2d 622 (1969).

Stipulation for admission of answers without signature. — When defendant's attorney stipulated that answers to interrogatories signed by the attorney but not by the defendant were presented "for the reliance of all concerned," it was not error for the court to construe this as a stipulation that the answers could be used in evidence without the formality of the deponent's signature under oath. Woodson v. Burton, 241 Ga. 130, 243 S.E.2d 885 (1978).

Party may answer or object. — Party has the choice of answering an interrogatory or making objection in the manner set forth. Aetna Life Ins. Co. v. Greene, 116 Ga. App. 783, 159 S.E.2d 87 (1967) (decided under former Code 1933, § 38-2108).

Each interrogatory must be either answered or objected to, and the reason for the objection must be stated; a blanket statement referring without explanation to all questions indifferently is not a compliance with this requirement. Tennesco, Inc. v. Berger, 144 Ga. App. 45, 240 S.E.2d 586 (1977).

Answers to interrogatories are hearsay and inadmissible at the trial unless the answers fall within some recognized exception to the hearsay rule. Carter v. Tatum, 134 Ga. App. 345, 212 S.E.2d 439 (1975).

Answers to interrogatories are not evidence unless introduced. — Answers to interrogatories are not considered evidence unless introduced as such at the trial. Fender v. Colonial Stores, Inc., 138 Ga. App. 31, 225 S.E.2d 691 (1976).

When answers to interrogatories admissible. — Answers to interrogatories are admissible for purposes of impeaching the testimony of the person making them, or as an admission of the person making them (as interrogatories are always answered by a party) or as an admission of another party if the party making the answers is the party's agent or servant. Carter v. Tatum, 134 Ga. App. 345, 212 S.E.2d 439 (1975).

Admission of answers to establish loss impermissible. — Admission of plaintiff's answers to questions asked by third party defendant, offered in an attempt to establish the loss incurred by the plaintiff and a statement relating to what was told to the plaintiff by another person, when the plaintiff personally was not present at the trial, would violate both the purpose and intent of the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9). Carter v. Tatum, 134 Ga. App. 345, 212 S.E.2d 439 (1975).

Inconsistent testimony not barred. — Although the rules of evidence would allow use of answers to interrogatories for impeachment purposes, the rules would not necessarily estop introduction of inconsistent testimony. Benn v. McBride, 140 Ga. App. 698, 231 S.E.2d 438 (1976).

Position taken in an answer to an interrogatory should not be a bar to taking a different position at the trial. Benn v. McBride, 140 Ga. App. 698, 231 S.E.2d 438 (1976).

Fact that answers are in opinion form does not affect admissibility. — When the defendant did not object to the questions, as provided in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-33, but attempted to answer the questions, the answers are admissible as admissions of a party-opponent. The fact that the questions may be in opinion form does not change this result. Everson v. Franklin Dist. Co., 248 Ga. 811, 285 S.E.2d 530 (1982).

Signature at end of interrogatories sufficient. — Literal interpretation of paragraph (a)(2) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-33 mandates that each answer be signed, but the reasonable and logical interpretation suggests and practice demands only that the deponent sign at the end of the interrogatory. Atlanta Cas. Co. v. Flewellen, 164 Ga. App. 885, 300 S.E.2d 166 (1982), rev'd on other grounds, 250 Ga. 709, 300 S.E.2d 673 (1983).

Party may not give an evasive answer to an interrogatory and later, on motion by the adverse party to require a proper answer, raise an objection which the party should have earlier raised to the original interrogatory. Aetna Life Ins. Co. v. Greene, 116 Ga. App. 783, 159 S.E.2d 87 (1967) (decided under former Code 1933, § 38-2108).

No provision for striking of answers. — Rules on depositions and discovery contain no provision for striking answers to interrogatories prior to tender in evidence at trial. Harden v. Clarke, 123 Ga. App. 142, 179 S.E.2d 667 (1970).

Dismissal of action for plaintiff's failure to answer interrogatories within the requisite time limits was not an abuse of the trial court's discretion. Morton v. Retail Credit Co., 124 Ga. App. 728, 185 S.E.2d 777 (1971), later appeal, 128 Ga. App. 446, 196 S.E.2d 902 (1973).

Use of unverified responses in finding triable issue of fact. — Appellate court's reliance on the appellant's unverified fied responses to interrogatories to establish that a triable issue existed in an appeal of a summary judgment motion did not constitute error as a matter of law on the grounds that the invalid responses were inadmissible as evidence. An unverified response to interrogatories is not so evasive and incomplete as to be treated as a complete failure to enter. Therefore, a mere technical failure to comply with an order compelling discovery, or an inadequate discovery response after entry of such an order, does not justify the extreme sanction of default or dismissal of the complaint. Kemp v. Rouse-Atlanta, Inc., 207 Ga. App. 876, 429 S.E.2d 264 (1993).

Response to discovery requests inappropriate. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by granting the plaintiff's motion to compel because the court properly determined that the production of over 156,000 pages of documents with insufficient organization, coupled with the failure of the defendants to identify which documents were responsive to which of the plaintiff's requests for production of documents, was inconsistent with the defendants' discovery obligations. Hull v. WTI, Inc., 322 Ga. App. 304, 744 S.E.2d 825 (2013).

Objections

Factors to be considered on objections to interrogatories. — In exercising discretion on consideration of objections to interrogatories, the trial court may consider such factors as the relevancy of the questions propounded, whether or not the interrogatories are timely filed, whether prejudice would result, and whether such interrogatories were filed for purposes other than a bona fide effort of discovery. Jackson v. Gordon, 122 Ga. App. 657, 178 S.E.2d 310 (1970).

Mere duplication not grounds for objection. — Though repetitiousness and redundancy in interrogatories has been deemed objectionable, the fact that some questions are somewhat duplicative, without more, does not subject the questions to objection. Munn v. Munn, 116 Ga. App. 297, 157 S.E.2d 77 (1967) (decided under former Code 1933, § 38-1201).

Waiver for failure to object. — When timely objection is not made to interrogatories, right to object is waived. Aetna Life Ins. Co. v. Greene, 116 Ga. App. 783, 159 S.E.2d 87 (1967) (decided under former Code 1933, § 38-2108).

Failure to file timely objections to interrogatories constitutes waiver of the right to object. Drew v. Hagy, 134 Ga. App. 852, 216 S.E.2d 676 (1975).

When a party fails to file any answer or objection to interrogatories within the 30 days permitted for answering, the party waives the right to object to the interrogatories. Ale-8-One of Am., Inc. v. Graphicolor Servs., Inc., 166 Ga. App. 506, 305 S.E.2d 14 (1983).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Recording not required. — Interrogatories and answers to interrogatories are matters of proof or evidence and as such are not required to be recorded. 1981 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U81-50.

9-11-34. Production of documents and things and entry upon land for inspection and other purposes; applicability to nonparties; confidentiality.

(a) Scope. Any party may serve on any other party a request:

(1) To produce and permit the party making the request, or someone acting on his behalf, to inspect and copy any designated documents (including writings, drawings, graphs, charts, photographs, phono-records, and other data compilations from which information can be obtained, translated, if necessary, by the respondent through detection devices into reasonably usable form), or to inspect and copy, test, or sample any tangible things which constitute or contain matters within the scope of subsection (b) of Code Section 9-11-26 and which are in the possession, custody, or control of the party upon whom the request is served; or

(2) To permit entry upon designated land or other property in the possession or control of the party upon whom the request is served for the purpose of inspection and measuring, surveying, photographing, testing, or sampling the property or any designated object or operation thereon, within the scope of subsection (b) of Code Section 9-11-26.

(b) Procedure.

(1) The request may, without leave of court, be served upon the plaintiff after commencement of the action and upon any other party with or after service of the summons and complaint upon that party. The request shall set forth the items to be inspected, either by individual item or by category, and describe each item and category with reasonable particularity. The request shall specify a reasonable time, place, and manner of making the inspection and performing the related acts.

(2) The party upon whom the request is served shall serve a written response within 30 days after the service of the request, except that a defendant may serve a response within 45 days after service of the summons and complaint upon that defendant. The court may allow a shorter or longer time. The response shall state, with respect to each item or category, that inspection and related activities will be permitted as requested, unless the request is objected to, in which event the reasons for objection shall be stated. If objection is made to part of an item or category, the part shall be specified. The party submitting the request may move for an order under subsection (a) of Code Section 9-11-37 with respect to any objection to or other failure to respond to the request or any part thereof, or any failure to permit inspection as requested.

(c) Applicability to nonparties.

(1) This Code section shall also be applicable with respect to discovery against persons, firms, or corporations who are not parties, in which event a copy of the request shall be served upon all parties of record; or, upon notice, the party desiring such discovery may proceed by taking the deposition of the person, firm, or corporation on oral examination or upon written questions under Code Section 9-11-30 or 9-11-31. The nonparty or any party may file an objection as provided in subsection (b) of this Code section. If the party desiring such discovery moves for an order under subsection (a) of Code Section 9-11-37 to compel discovery, he or she shall make a showing of good cause to support his or her motion. The party making a request under this Code section shall, upon request from any other party to the action, make all reasonable efforts to cause all information produced in response to the nonparty request to be made available to all parties. A reasonable document copying charge may be required.

(2) This Code section shall also be applicable with respect to discovery against a nonparty who is a practitioner of the healing arts or a hospital or health care facility, including those operated by an agency or bureau of the state or other governmental unit. Where such a request is directed to such a nonparty, a copy of the request shall be served upon the person whose records are sought by certified mail or statutory overnight delivery, return receipt requested, or, if known, that person's counsel, and upon all other parties of record in compliance with Code Section 9-11-5; where such a request to a nonparty seeks the records of a person who is not a party, a copy of the request shall be served upon the person whose records are sought by certified mail or statutory overnight delivery, return receipt requested, or, if known, that person's counsel by certified mail or statutory overnight delivery, return receipt requested, and upon all parties of record in compliance with Code Section 9-11-5; or, upon notice, the party desiring such discovery may proceed by taking the deposition of the person, firm, or corporation on oral examination or upon written questions under Code Section 9-11-30 or 9-11-31. The nonparty, any party, or the person whose records are sought may file an objection with the court in which the action is pending within 20 days of service of the request and shall serve a copy of such objection on the nonparty to whom the request is directed, who shall not furnish the requested materials until further order of the court, and on all other parties to the action. Upon the filing of such objection, the party desiring such discovery may move for an order under subsection (a) of Code Section 9-11-37 to compel discovery and, if he or she shall make a showing of good cause to support his or her motion, discovery shall be allowed. If no objection is filed within 20 days of service of the request, the nonparty to whom the request is directed shall promptly comply therewith.

(3) For any discovery requested from a nonparty pursuant to paragraph (2) of this subsection or a subpoena requesting records from a nonparty pursuant to Code Section 9-11-45, when the nonparty to whom the discovery request is made is not served with an objection and the nonparty produces the requested records, the nonparty shall be immune from regulatory, civil, or criminal liability or damages notwithstanding that the produced documents contained confidential or privileged information.

(d) Confidentiality. The provisions of this Code section shall not be deemed to repeal the confidentiality provided by Code Sections 37-3-166 concerning mental illness treatment records, 37-4-125 concerning developmental disability treatment records, 37-7-166 concerning alcohol and drug treatment records, 24-12-20 concerning the confidential nature of AIDS information, and 24-12-21 concerning the disclosure of AIDS information; provided, however, that a person's failure to object to the production of documents as set forth in paragraph (2) of subsection (c) of this Code section shall waive any right of recovery for damages as to the nonparty for disclosure of the requested documents. (Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 34; Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 16; Ga. L. 1972, p. 510, § 7; Ga. L. 1979, p. 1041, § 1; Ga. L. 1986, p. 1277, § 1; Ga. L. 1988, p. 375, § 1; Ga. L. 1998, p. 152, § 1; Ga. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Editor’s notes. — Georgia Laws 1972, p. 510, made substantial revisions to certain sections of this chapter dealing with discovery. Prior to the 1972 amendment, this Code section was substantially the same as former Code 1933, § 38-2109. Hence, decisions based on this Code section prior to its 1972 amendment should be consulted with care.

In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code 1933, § 38-2109 are included in the annotations for this Code section.

Notice to produce may be served on the opposite party to any proceeding, requiring the production of records, documents, books, etc., which contain evidence pertinent to the cause in question. Horton v. Huie, 113 Ga. App. 166, 147 S.E.2d 669 (1966) (decided under former Code 1933, § 38-2109).

Scope of permissible discovery by interrogatories under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-33 is, in essence, the same as by request to produce under subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-34. E.H. Siler Realty & Bus. Broker, Inc. v. Sanderlin, 158 Ga. App. 796, 282 S.E.2d 381 (1981).

Access to workers’ compensation records limited. — In a suit to recover for personal injuries and property damage arising out of an automobile collision, the defendants served the State Board of Workers’ Compensation (board) with a request for the production of any and all claims by the plaintiff for workers’ compensation benefits including, but not limited to, all medical records, reports, and narratives. The trial court did not err in denying this motion as the board is not a general repository of discoverable material for defendants in civil actions, and access to the board’s records is properly limited to those parties who have a specific interest in the workers’ compensation claim in connection with which the records are maintained by the board. Insofar as the plaintiff’s actual medical records were concerned, the defendants could have pursued the usual means of discovery that were available to any defendant in a civil action. Farrell v. Dunn, 199 Ga. App. 631, 405 S.E.2d 731 (1991).

Discovery not a substitute for execution and levy. — Discovery procedures may be utilized to assist in the collection of judgments, but those procedures are not a substitute for execution and levy. Fagala v. Morrison, 161 Ga. App. 655, 289 S.E.2d 528 (1982).

Notice to produce should be specific enough in its demands to relate the documents sought to the questions at issue. Horton v. Huie, 113 Ga. App. 166, 147 S.E.2d 669 (1966) (decided under former Code 1933, § 38-2109).

Conversion of notice to produce into request for production improper. — Trial court did not have the discretion to hold that a notice to produce under former O.C.G.A. § 24-10-26 (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-13-27) had been converted into a request for production under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-34. Bergen v. Cardiopul Medical, Inc., 175 Ga. App. 700, 334 S.E.2d 28 (1985).

Compelling party to answer interrogatories and produce requested documents did not constitute an unauthorized commingling of discovery procedures since there was a clear delineation as to each discovery procedure and the law applicable to each procedure was cited. Whisenaut v. Gray, 189 Ga. App. 314, 375 S.E.2d 619, cert. denied, 189 Ga. App. 913, 375 S.E.2d 619 (1988).

Request for production of “all other documents” intended for use at trial. — Production of “all other documents” intended for use at trial is outside the scope of subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-34, delineated under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-26(b)(1) as “any matter . . . which is relevant to the subject matter involved in the pending action,” without regard to whether or not that “matter” will be used as evidence at the trial of the action. E.H. Siler Realty & Bus. Broker, Inc. v. Sanderlin, 158 Ga. App. 796, 282 S.E.2d 381 (1981).

Names of witnesses. — While the party who propounds interrogatories is entitled to the names and addresses of the other party’s witnesses who have knowledge of relevant facts, the propounding party is not entitled to the specific names of those persons who will be called as witnesses at the trial of the case. E.H. Siler Realty & Bus. Broker, Inc. v. Sanderlin, 158 Ga. App. 796, 282 S.E.2d 381 (1981).

Motion improper for quashing or enforcement of notice to produce. — Motions pursuant to O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-26, 9-11-34, and 9-11-37 for a protective order or sanctions were not proper vehicles for the quashing or the enforcement of a notice to produce under former O.C.G.A. § 24-10-26 (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-13-27). Joel v. Duet Holdings, Inc., 181 Ga. App. 705, 353 S.E.2d 548 (1987).

Unless plaintiff’s notice to produce was somehow converted into a request to produce, the trial court’s original order requiring the production of the documents and subsequent order imposing sanctions would be clearly erroneous, the trial court properly converted the notice when the notice to produce did set forth the time, place, and manner of making the inspection and thus fully complied with the statutory requirements of paragraph (b)(1) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-34. Joel v. Duet Holdings, Inc., 181 Ga. App. 705, 353 S.E.2d 548 (1987).

Indispensability of actual business records. — In cases involving production of business records in the sole possession of the opposing party, the actual record of figures and technical details of business transactions may well be indispensable because the necessary information cannot be satisfactorily discovered by interrogatories and depositions. Leonard Bros. Trucking Co. v. Crymes Transps., Inc., 123 Ga. App. 424, 181 S.E.2d 296, later appeal, 124 Ga. App. 341, 183 S.E.2d 773 (1971).

Privileged matter not discoverable. — Patient’s failure to object within 10 days to a request for nonprivileged matter under a nonparty document production request did not amount to an affirmative waiver of privileged communications with the patient’s psychiatrist. Hopson v. Kennestone Hosp., 241 Ga. App. 829, 526 S.E.2d 622 (1999), aff’d, 273 Ga. 145, 538 S.E.2d 742 (2000).

Cell phone records not discoverable. — Trial court did not abuse the court’s discretion in quashing a subpoena for the appellee’s cell phone records as those records were not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence under former O.C.G.A. § 24-10-22 (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-13-23) or information relevant to the intrusive nature of the behavior alleged to be tortious. Anderson v. Mergenhagen, 283 Ga. App. 546, 642 S.E.2d 105 (2007).

Financial records of law firm against which punitive damages sought. — When the trial court determined that jury issues remained as to a claim for punitive damages against a law firm, the trial court abused the court's discretion in denying production of any of the law firm's financial records until after the jury rendered the jury's verdict. Smith v. Morris, Manning & Martin, LLP, 293 Ga. App. 153, 666 S.E.2d 683 (2008).

No burden on movant to negate privilege. — There is no burden upon the movant to show that items sought under a motion to produce are not privileged or not within the attorney's work product. Gooch v. Seaboard Coast Line R.R., 121 Ga. App. 14, 172 S.E.2d 435 (1970).

Broad discretionary power is given to the judges by the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) to assure safeguards against oppressive and unfair questions and demands; conversely, very broad discretion is granted judges in applying sanctions against disobedient parties in order to assure compliance with orders of courts. Dean v. Gainesville Stone Co., 120 Ga. App. 315, 170 S.E.2d 348 (1969).

Deletion of privileged material. — When any document sought to be produced contains a mixture of privileged and nonprivileged communication or information, ample remedy is provided to delete privileged matter, and this also would be within the inherent power of the court. Cranford v. Cranford, 120 Ga. App. 470, 170 S.E.2d 844 (1969).

Application to criminal proceedings. — Motion by a criminal defendant under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-34 for the production of documents was not a proper method of obtaining the documents. Jackson v. State, 227 Ga. App. 847, 490 S.E.2d 430 (1997).

Application to divorce proceedings. — Attorney's defense to the trial court's order holding the attorney in contempt for the attorney's refusal to turn over a client's file challenging the underlying validity of the prior order requiring the attorney to turn over the file was a collateral attack that could be sustained under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(a) only if the prior order was void on its face. However, the trial court's prior order was not void on its face since: (1) the attorney was served with a motion to compel prior to the entry of the prior order; (2) the trial court had jurisdiction to issue an order to compel a nonparty to release necessary non-privileged documents specifically prepared in anticipation of a divorce action pending before the trial court under O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-26(b), 9-11-34(c)(1), and 9-11-37(a); (3) the attorney willfully disregarded the prior order; and (4) the prior order was entered in a matter over which the trial court had subject matter jurisdiction, making the order's disobedience contempt of court. Mary A. Stearns, P.C. v. Williams-Murphy, 263 Ga. App. 239, 587 S.E.2d 247 (2003).

Default judgment appropriate following failure to answer. — Trial court did not err in entering a default judgment against sellers pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37(b)(2) without conducting a hearing on willfulness because the sellers did not file answers to a broker's request for interrogatories and production of documents within the time period prescribed by O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-33(a)(2) and 9-11-34(b)(2), and the sellers only filed a response to the request after the trial court's grant of the broker's initial motion to compel and for sanctions. Cochran v. Kennelly, 306 Ga. App. 838, 703 S.E.2d 411 (2010).

Cost associated with production. — In a personal injury case, a trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by compelling a railway company to provide discovery of information on an event data recorder because the information was relevant under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-26(b)(1), and a producing party could have been required to translate information into a reasonably usable form. The trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by failing to grant the protective order since there was no undue burden or expense given the crucial nature of the evidence; moreover, the cost of a license required to view the information was minor compared to the amount at stake in the lawsuit, and it was the railway company's decision to install the device. Norfolk S. Ry. v. Hartry, 316 Ga. App. 532, 729 S.E.2d 656 (2012).

Denial of discovery based on grant of summary judgment improper. — In a case where the plaintiff alleged an ownership interest in and an employment agreement with the company, the defendants' summary judgment motion was improperly granted and the plaintiff's motion to compel was improperly denied as moot because the plaintiff's discovery requests from the accountant regarding the accountant's knowledge of the contract negotiations and all documents related to that process and from the company's president regarding all evidence relating to the plaintiff's association with the company appeared reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible, relevant evidence. Dodson v. Sykes Indus. Holdings, LLC, 324 Ga. App. 871, 752 S.E.2d 45 (2013).

Sanctions proper. — In a negligence case, a trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by striking the defendants' joint answer and counterclaim as a sanction for discovery abuse because the evidence established that the defendants intentionally and in bad faith concealed damaging evidence by repairing the tractor trailer and destroying information from the computer units involved in the accident, provided false answers to interrogatories, and the plaintiff was prejudiced by the misconduct. Howard v. Alegria, 321 Ga. App. 178, 739 S.E.2d 95 (2013).

9-11-34.1. Civil actions for evidence seized in criminal proceedings.

Notwithstanding the provisions of Code Section 9-11-34, in any civil action based upon evidence seized in a criminal proceeding involving any violation of Part 2 of Article 3 of Chapter 12 of Title 16, a party shall not be permitted to copy any books, papers, documents, photographs, tangible objects, audio and visual tapes, films and recordings, or copies or portions thereof. (Code 1981, § 9-11-34.1, enacted by Ga. L. 2008, p. 829, § 1/HB 1020.)

9-11-35. Physical and mental examination of persons.

(a) Order for examination. When the mental or physical condition (including the blood group) of a party, or of a person in the custody or under the legal control of a party, is in controversy, the court in which the action is pending may order the party to submit to a physical examination by a physician or to submit to a mental examination by a physician or a licensed psychologist or to produce for examination the person in his custody or legal control. The order may be made only on motion for good cause shown and upon notice to the person to be examined and to all parties and shall specify the time, place, manner, conditions, and scope of the examination and the person or persons by whom it is to be made.

(b) Report of examining physician or psychologist.

(1) If requested by the party against whom an order is made under subsection (a) of this Code section or by the person examined, the party causing the examination to be made shall deliver to him a copy of a detailed written report of the examining physician or psychologist setting out his findings, including results of all tests made, diagnoses, and conclusions, together with like reports of all earlier examinations of the same condition.

(2) Any party shall be entitled, upon request, to receive from the party whose physical or mental condition is in issue, or who is in control of, or has legal custody of, a person whose physical or mental condition is in issue, a report of any and every examination, previously or thereafter made, of the condition in issue, unless, in the case of a report of examination of a person not a party, the party shows that he is unable to obtain it.

(3) The court, on motion, may make an order against a party requiring delivery of a report under paragraph (1) or (2) of this subsection on such terms as are just; and, if a physician or psychologist fails or refuses to make a report, the court may exclude his testimony if offered at the trial.

(4) By requesting and obtaining a report of the examination so ordered or by taking the deposition of the examiner, the party examined waives any privilege he may have in that action, or any other action involving the same controversy, regarding the testimony of every other person who has examined or may thereafter examine him in respect to the same mental or physical condition.

(5) Paragraphs (1) through (4) of this subsection apply to examinations made by agreement of the parties, unless the agreement expressly provides otherwise. Paragraphs (1) through (4) of this subsection do not preclude discovery of a report of an examining physician or psychologist or the taking of a deposition of the physician or psychologist in accordance with any other Code section of this chapter. (Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 35; Ga. L. 1972, p. 510, § 8; Ga. L. 2001, p. 808, § 1.)

ANALYSIS

GENERAL CONSIDERATION GOOD CAUSE

General Consideration

Editor's notes. — Georgia Laws 1972, p. 510, made substantial revisions to certain Code sections of this chapter dealing with discovery. Prior to the 1972 amendment, this Code section was substantially the same as former Code 1933, § 38-2110. Hence, decisions based on this Code section prior to its 1972 amendment should be consulted with care.

In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code 1933, Ch. 21, T. 38 are included in the annotations for this Code section.

Condition placed in controversy by plaintiff in personal injury case. — Plaintiff in a negligence action who asserts mental or physical injury places that mental or physical injury clearly in controversy, and provides the defendant with good cause for examination to determine the existence and the extent of such asserted injury. Crider v. Sneider, 243 Ga. 642, 256 S.E.2d 335 (1979).

Defendant asserting condition as defense. — Defendant who asserts the defendant's mental or physical condition as a defense to a claim, such as, for example, asserting insanity as a defense to a divorce action, places the defendant's mental or physical condition in controversy, and provides the plaintiff with good cause for an examination. Crider v. Sneider, 243 Ga. 642, 256 S.E.2d 335 (1979).

Order is permissive, not mandatory. — Granting of order for physical examination is permissive, not mandatory, and may be entered only for "good cause shown." Bradford v. Parrish, 111 Ga. App. 167, 141 S.E.2d 125 (1965); Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Lehmann, 125 Ga. App. 539, 188 S.E.2d 393 (1972) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 21, T. 38).

No absolute right to order requiring examination. — Presence of discretionary power in trial court precludes the assumption that a party has an absolute right to secure an order requiring the opposite party to undergo a physical examination. Bradford v. Parrish, 111 Ga. App. 167, 141 S.E.2d 125 (1965) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 21, T. 38).

Discretion of trial court to grant or deny motion. — Grant or denial of a motion for mental and physical examination rests in the sound discretion of the trial court. Crider v. Sneider, 243 Ga. 642, 256 S.E.2d 335 (1979).

Trial court did not abuse the court's broad discretion in denying the defendant's motion for an order permitting one of the defendant's expert witnesses to examine the plaintiff since the order denying the defendant's motion showed that the order was based in part on a finding that the information sought under the motion for examination could be obtained from other available sources. Prevost v. Taylor, 196 Ga. App. 368, 396 S.E.2d 17 (1990), overruled on other grounds, Johnson v. Riverdale Anesthesia Assocs., P.C., 275 Ga. 240, 563 S.E.2d 431 (2002).

Relevant factors in determining whether to grant a motion for examination are the ability of the movant to obtain the desired information by other means, the timeliness of the motion and the events leading up to the motion. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Lehmann, 125 Ga. App. 539, 188 S.E.2d 393 (1972).

Failure to invoke procedure not subject to unfavorable inferences. — Use of physical examination procedure is discretionary with counsel, and its utilization is in no sense mandatory; hence, counsel's failure to invoke a physical examination subjects the counsel's cause to no unfavorable inferences. Bradford v.

Parrish, 111 Ga. App. 167, 141 S.E.2d 125 (1965), (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 21, T. 38).

Blood tests of mother and children in paternity suit. — When the defendant denies paternity in a suit by minors for upkeep, maintenance, and education and moves that court order minor plaintiffs and their mother to submit to a blood test to determine paternity, the trial judge is authorized in the judge's discretion to order a physical examination of the parties. Rider v. Rider, 110 Ga. App. 382, 138 S.E.2d 621 (1964). For comment, see 16 Mercer L. Rev. 461 (1965).

Defendant entitled to mental examination of plaintiff. — Because the plaintiff claimed mental injury as a result of an assault in the defendant hotel's parking lot, the defendant was entitled to conduct an independent mental examination of the plaintiff, and deposing the plaintiff's treating psychiatrist could not be deemed the equivalent of an independent evaluation. Roberts v. Forte Hotels, Inc., 227 Ga. App. 471, 489 S.E.2d 540 (1997).

Evaluation by psychologist. — Since a psychologist is not a physician, the trial court had no authority to order the plaintiff to submit to an examination by a psychologist. Roberts v. Forte Hotels, Inc., 227 Ga. App. 471, 489 S.E.2d 540 (1997).

Patient-psychiatrist privilege does not apply to a psychiatric examination under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-35. Roberts v.

Forte Hotels, Inc., 227 Ga. App. 471, 489 S.E.2d 540 (1997).

Good Cause

For meaning of "good cause," see Crider v. Sneider, 243 Ga. 642, 256 S.E.2d 335 (1979).

Greater showing of need required. — Good cause requirement indicates there must be a greater showing of need than under the other discovery rules. Sorrells v. Cole, 111 Ga. App. 136, 141 S.E.2d 193 (1965) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 21, T. 38).

Discretion of court. — What is sufficient to fulfill "good cause" criterion rests in the broad discretion of the trial judge. Bradford v. Parrish, 111 Ga. App. 167, 141 S.E.2d 125 (1965) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 21, T. 38); Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Lehmann, 125 Ga. App. 539, 188 S.E.2d 393 (1972); Sheffield v. Lockhart, 151 Ga. App. 551, 260 S.E.2d 416 (1979).

Burden of movant to establish good cause. — This section places the burden upon the movant to establish "good cause." Sheffield v. Lockhart, 151 Ga. App. 551, 260 S.E.2d 416 (1979).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Commission without authority to compel medical examination. — Neither the Professional Practices Commission nor a local board of education is a "court of record" for purposes of the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T.

9) and, therefore, such commission is without authority to compel a party to a proceeding before it to submit to a medical examination pursuant to this section. 1977 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 77-48.

9-11-36. Requests for admission.

(a) Scope; service; answer or objection; motion to determine sufficiency.

(1) A party may serve upon any other party a written request for the admission, for purposes of the pending action only, of the truth of any matters within the scope of subsection (b) of Code Section 9-11-26 which are set forth in the request and that relate to statements or opinions of fact or of the application of law to fact, including the genuineness of any documents described in the request. Copies of documents shall be served with the request unless they have been or are otherwise furnished or made available for inspection and copying.

The request may, without leave of court, be served upon the plaintiff after commencement of the action and upon any other party with or after service of the summons and complaint upon that party.

(2) Each matter of which an admission is requested shall be separately set forth. The matter is admitted unless, within 30 days after service of the request or within such shorter or longer time as the court may allow, the party to whom the request is directed serves upon the party requesting the admission a written answer or objection addressed to the matter, signed by the party or by his attorney; but unless the court shortens the time, a defendant shall not be required to serve answers or objections before the expiration of 45 days after service of the summons and complaint upon him. If objection is made, the reasons therefor shall be stated. The answer shall specifically deny the matter or set forth in detail the reasons why the answering party cannot truthfully admit or deny the matter. A denial shall fairly meet the substance of the requested admission; and, when good faith requires that a party qualify his answer or deny only a part of the matter of which an admission is requested, he shall specify so much of it as is true and qualify or deny the remainder. An answering party may not give lack of information or knowledge as a reason for failure to admit or deny unless he states that he has made reasonable inquiry and that the information known or readily obtainable by him is insufficient to enable him to admit or deny. A party who considers that a matter of which an admission has been requested presents a genuine issue for trial may not, on that ground alone, object to the request; he may, subject to subsection (c) of Code Section 9-11-37, deny the matter or set forth reasons why he cannot admit or deny it.

(3) The party who has requested the admissions may move to determine the sufficiency of the answers or objections. Unless the court determines that an objection is justified, it shall order that an answer be served. If the court determines that an answer does not comply with the requirements of this subsection, it may order either that the matter is admitted or that an amended answer be served. The court may, in lieu of these orders, determine that final disposition of the request be made at a pretrial conference or at a designated time prior to trial. Paragraph (4) of subsection (a) of Code Section 9-11-37 shall apply to the award of expenses incurred in relation to the motion.

(b) Effect of admission. Any matter admitted under this Code section is conclusively established unless the court, on motion, permits withdrawal or amendment of the admission. Subject to Code Section 9-11-16 governing amendment of a pretrial order, the court may permit withdrawal or amendment when the presentation of the merits of the action will be subserved thereby and the party who obtained the admission fails to satisfy the court that withdrawal or amendment will prejudice him in maintaining his action or defense on the merits. Any admission made by a party under this Code section is for the purpose of the pending action only and is not an admission by him for any other purpose, nor may it be used against him in any other proceeding. (Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 36; Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, §§ 17, 18A; Ga. L. 1972, p. 510, § 9.)

SUMMARY JUDGMENT

General Consideration

Editor's notes. — Georgia Laws 1972, p. 510, made substantial revisions to certain Code sections of this chapter dealing with discovery. Prior to the 1972 amendment, this Code section was substantially the same as Ga. L. 1953, p. 224, § 1, and Ga. L. 1959, p. 314, § 1. Hence, decisions based on this Code section prior to its 1972 amendment should be consulted with care.

In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under Ga. L. 1953, p. 224, § 1 and Ga. L. 1959, p. 314, § 1, are included in the annotations for this Code section.

Purpose. — Purpose of rule as to request for admissions is to expedite trial and to relieve the parties of the cost and labor of proving facts which will not be disputed on the trial and the truth of which can be ascertained by reasonable inquiry. Hobbs v. New England Ins. Co., 212 Ga. 513, 93 S.E.2d 653 (1956) (decided under Ga. L. 1953, p. 224, § 1).

Clear intent of this section is to give the trial court discretion to permit parties to respond accurately and truthfully to requests for admissions with a view toward establishing uncontested facts that go to the merits of the case. Mote v. Tomlin, 136 Ga. App. 616, 222 S.E.2d 57 (1975).

Purpose of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-36 is facilitation of proof at trial. Albitus v. F & M Bank, 159 Ga. App. 406, 283 S.E.2d 632 (1981).

Purpose of the 1972 amendment (Ga. L. 1972, p. 510, § 9) was to conform discovery provisions of the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) to the 1970 amendments to the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. Cielock v. Munn, 244 Ga.

810, 262 S.E.2d 114 (1979).

Strict and literal compliance with section necessary. — Party responding to a request for admissions must comply strictly and literally with the terms of this section, on peril of having the party's response construed to be an admission. Walker Enters. Inc. v. Mullis, 124 Ga. App. 305, 183 S.E.2d 534 (1971).

Admissions are not part of the pleadings but are in the nature of evidence relating to the proof, and must be introduced in evidence before the admissions can be considered by the trier of fact. Brooks v. Roley & Roley Eng'rs, Inc., 144 Ga. App. 101, 240 S.E.2d 596 (1977); National Bank v. Hill, 148 Ga. App. 688, 252 S.E.2d 192 (1979).

Requests for admissions and responses thereto are not pleadings. Ross & Ross Auctioneers v. Testa, 96 Ga. App. 821, 101 S.E.2d 767 (1958); Forsyth v. Peoples, Inc., 114 Ga. App. 726, 152 S.E.2d 713 (1966) (decided under Ga. L. 1953, p. 224, § 1).

Requests for admissions and responses thereto constitute matters of proof and of evidence, and before the admissions can be considered by the trier of fact the admissions must be introduced in evidence. Forsyth v. Peoples, Inc., 114 Ga. App. 726, 152 S.E.2d 713 (1966) (decided under Ga. L. 1959, p. 314, § 1).

Requests for admissions and responses thereto constitute matters of proof and of evidence. Brooks v. Roley & Roley Eng'rs, Inc., 144 Ga. App. 101, 240 S.E.2d 596 (1977).

In "notice pleading" plaintiff need not spread out the plaintiff's evidence in the plaintiff's complaint, but may wait and place the evidence into the record by discovery and other pretrial procedures. McDaniel v. Pass, 130 Ga. App. 614, 203 S.E.2d 903 (1974).

Party may not treat discovery request as nullity. — Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9, contains no provision whereby a party may treat a discovery request by the opposing party as a nullity. Under paragraph (a)(2) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-36, a party must either respond to or object to a request for admission within 30 days or the request is deemed admitted. Concert Promotions, Inc. v. Haas & Dodd, Inc., 167 Ga. App. 883, 307 S.E.2d 763 (1983).

Judicial rather than evidentiary admissions. — In form and substance admission under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-36 is comparable to admission in pleadings or stipulation of facts and as such is generally regarded as a judicial admission rather than an evidentiary admission of a party. Albitus v. F & M Bank, 159 Ga. App. 406, 283 S.E.2d 632 (1981); Williams v. Calhoun, 175 Ga. App. 332, 333 S.E.2d 408 (1985).

Admissions requiring opinions or conclusions of law. — Requests for admission under subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-36 are not objectionable even if the admissions require opinions or conclusions of law as long as the legal conclusions relate to the facts of the case. G.H. Bass & Co. v. Fulton County Bd. of Tax Assessors, 268 Ga. 327, 486 S.E.2d 810 (1997), reversing G.H. Bass & Co. v. Fulton County Bd. of Tax Assessors, 222 Ga. App. 118, 473 S.E.2d 253 (1996).

Admission in judicio against own interests. — Claimant's admission in judicio against the claimant's own interests was binding upon the claimant since a solemn admission in judicio is conclusive as a matter of law on the matter stated and cannot be contradicted by other evidence unless it is withdrawn or amended on formal motion. Piedmont Aviation, Inc. v. Washington, 181 Ga. App. 730, 353 S.E.2d 847 (1987); Britt v. West Coast Cycle, 198 Ga. App. 525, 402 S.E.2d 121 (1991); Pulte Home Corp. v. Woodland Nursery & Landscapes, Inc., 230 Ga. App. 455, 496 S.E.2d 546 (1998); McCoy v. West Bldg. Materials of Ga., Inc., 232 Ga. App. 620, 502 S.E.2d 559 (1998).

Admissions not binding on coparty. — Even though un-withdrawn or unamended admissions are conclusively established, such admissions are not binding on a coparty. Batchelor v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 240 Ga. App. 366, 526 S.E.2d 68 (1999); Ferguson v. Duron, Inc., 244 Ga. App. 19, 534 S.E.2d 142 (2000).

Discovery admission treated as judicial admission. — Admission under discovery procedure is generally regarded as a judicial admission (and thus conclusive unless allowed by the court to be withdrawn) rather than an evidentiary admission (which may be contradicted or explained). Stone v. Lenox Enters., Inc., 176 Ga. App. 696, 337 S.E.2d 451 (1985).

Discretion of court. — Court has discretion under subsection (a) of this section only when a party moves to determine the sufficiency of the answers or objections filed to the request. Mountain View Enters. Inc. v. Diversified Sys., 133 Ga. App. 249, 211 S.E.2d 186 (1974).

Form of request for admission. — Form of a request for admission should take on the appearance of a pleading as illustrated in Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 25 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-125). A & D Barrel & Drum Co. v. Fuqua, 132 Ga. App. 827, 209 S.E.2d 272 (1974).

Denial of overbroad request for admissions. — If proper objection is made to a request for admissions which is so broad that the admission covers the whole case, the request for admissions will not be permitted. Walker Enters. Inc. v. Mullis, 124 Ga. App. 305, 183 S.E.2d 534 (1971).

Requests for admission as evidence. — Requests for admissions and responses thereto constitute matters of proof and of evidence, and before they can be considered by the trier of fact they must be introduced in evidence. Moore v. Hanson, 224 Ga. 482, 162 S.E.2d 429 (1968).

Answers and Objections1. In General

Written answer or objection required addressed to the matter, signed by the party or by the party's attorney. Hilton Hotels Corp. v. Withrow Travel Serv., Inc., 150 Ga. App. 435, 258 S.E.2d 59 (1979).

Oath not required. — Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) does not require responses to requests for admission to be made under oath. Mundt v. Olson, 155 Ga. App. 145, 270 S.E.2d 344 (1980); as to necessity of sworn answers under this section prior to amendment by Ga. L. 1972, p. 510, § 9, see Abbott-Bridges Wood Prods., Inc. v. Argonaut Ins. Co., 131 Ga. App. 754, 206 S.E.2d 722 (1974) and Burge v. High, 147 Ga. App. 267, 248 S.E.2d 546 (1978), overruled on other grounds, Hilton Hotels Corp. v. Withrow Travel Serv., Inc., 150 Ga. App. 435, 258 S.E.2d 59 (1979).

Deposition is not response to request for admission. — Deposition of the defendant taken by the plaintiff and not placed in the record is not an objection or response to a request for an admission to avoid being bound by a failure to answer. Shepherd v. Shepherd, 164 Ga. App. 185, 296 S.E.2d 151 (1982).

Party may contradict the party's previous answer to an interrogatory. Albitus v. F & M Bank, 159 Ga. App. 406, 283 S.E.2d 632 (1981).

Subsequent answers to interrogatories do not affect matters previously admitted. — Party's late response to request for admission constituted conclusive admission of all matters contained in the request, regardless of fact of timely answering of interrogatories which tended to contradict the matters deemed admitted. Stone v. Lenox Enters., Inc., 176 Ga. App. 696, 337 S.E.2d 451 (1985).

2. Insufficient and Evasive Responses

General statement of inability to admit or deny. — General statement that the answering party can neither admit nor deny, unaccompanied by reasons, will be held an insufficient response, and the court may either take the matter as admitted or order a further answer. Gregory v. Vance Publishing Corp., 130 Ga. App. 118, 202 S.E.2d 515 (1973). But see Clements v. Toombs County Hosp. Auth., 175 Ga. App. 651, 334 S.E.2d 188 (1985).

Insufficient answer may be deemed an admission by the court only after the requesting party has questioned by motion the sufficiency of the answers and a hearing on the motion has been held. Clements v. Toombs County Hosp. Auth., 175 Ga. App. 651, 334 S.E.2d 188 (1985).

Corporation gave unresponsive answers to the requests for admission and thus admitted the matters therein; the husband made a proper request when asking the corporation to admit that the corporation had a duty to the public to provide health care providers who were duly licensed to render the particular level of health care provided. Wellstar Health Sys. v. Green, 258 Ga. App. 86, 572 S.E.2d 731 (2002).

Motion and hearing required prior to treating insufficient answer as admission. — Court overruled that portion of Gregory v. Vance Pub. Co. RP., 130 Ga. App. 118, 202 S.E.2d 515 (1973) which permits a trial court sua sponte to deem an insufficient answer to be an admission, and reaffirmed the holding in Smith v. Billings, 132 Ga. App. 201, 207 S.E.2d 683 (1974), to the effect that a motion to determine in a hearing the sufficiency of answers is necessary before responses to a request for admissions may be deemed insufficient and deemed admitted. Clements v. Toombs County Hosp. Auth., 175 Ga. App. 651, 334 S.E.2d 188 (1985).

“For want of sufficient information.” — It is not sufficient to limit answer to “for want of sufficient information.” Gregory v. Vance Publishing Corp., 130 Ga. App. 118, 202 S.E.2d 515 (1973). But see Clements v. Toombs County Hosp. Auth., 175 Ga. App. 651, 334 S.E.2d 188 (1985).

Evasive response. — Response which is ambiguous or evasive may be declared an unqualified admission if the opposing party makes a motion that a determination of sufficiency be made, but in the absence of such a motion, the trial court is not authorized to declare a response an unqualified admission. Match Point, Ltd. v. Adams, 148 Ga. App. 673, 252 S.E.2d 90 (1979), overruled on other grounds, Mock v. Canterbury Realty Co., 152 Ga. App. 872, 264 S.E.2d 489 (1980).

Answer denying liability is not evasive. — When the plaintiff contended that the defendant's answer to the complaint and to discovery was evasive and should be treated as an admission, the Court of Appeals did not agree, as the defendant's answers consistently denied any liability on the defendant's part, hardly an evasion under the circumstances. Johns v. Leaseway of Ga., Inc., 166 Ga. App. 472, 304 S.E.2d 555 (1983).

3. Failure to Answer or Object

Effect of failure to answer or object. — Request for admission to which the plaintiff makes no objection and does not otherwise answer within the time designated stands admitted; no order of court declaring this to be so is necessary. Hudgins & Co. v. Southland Ice Co., 104 Ga. App. 150, 121 S.E.2d 193 (1961) (decided under Ga. L. 1959, p. 314, § 1).

One who has not, within the time allowed for answering or objecting to requests for admissions, answered, objected to, or moved for and obtained an extension of time for responding to such requests, shall be deemed to have admitted the requests, subject only to such remedy as may be afforded to the person on motion under subsection (b) of this section. National Bank v. Merritt, 130 Ga. App. 85, 202 S.E.2d 193 (1973); Porter v. Murlas Bros. Commodities, 134 Ga. App. 96, 213 S.E.2d 190 (1975).

Unless a proper response to requests for admissions is timely filed, the requests are admitted as a matter of law. Hammett v. Bailey, 147 Ga. App. 105, 248 S.E.2d 180 (1978).

Absence of timely answers has effect of establishing conclusively facts and documents referred to in request for admissions, when no motion is made seeking permission for late filing of answers and no motion is made seeking permission to withdraw admissions resulting from failure to serve answers in the limited time. Burge v. High, 147 Ga. App. 267, 248 S.E.2d 546 (1978).

When requests for admission are filed and served, the opposite party must either answer or state an objection to the requests, upon penalty of being taken to admit the subject matter thereof. Thompson v. Berman, 147 Ga. App. 740, 250 S.E.2d 190 (1978).

When the defendant failed to answer requests for admissions, the matters contained in the requests were admitted to this section. National Bank v. Hill, 148 Ga. App. 688, 252 S.E.2d 192 (1979).

When a party served with a request for admission does not serve an answer or objection and does not move for an extension of time or to withdraw the admissions resulting from a failure to answer, the matter stands admitted. Albitus v. F & M Bank, 159 Ga. App. 406, 283 S.E.2d 632 (1981).

In an action which an insured filed against an insurance company, seeking recovery of excessive premiums and punitive damages based on a claim of fraud, the trial court correctly granted the insurance company's motion in limine to strike the insured's demand for punitive damages because the insured did not answer a request for admission which the company served on the insured. Vaughn v. Metro. Prop. & Cas. Ins. Co., 260 Ga. App. 573, 580 S.E.2d 323 (2003).

Because the pool installers failed to respond to a pool purchaser's request for admissions, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-36(a), those admissions were deemed admitted and were sufficient to establish the purchaser's claims of fraud and conspiracy to defraud, and accordingly, summary judgment was properly granted to the purchaser on those claims; however, summary judgment to the purchaser was error on the purchaser's claim that the installers violated the Fair Business Practices Act, O.C.G.A. § 10-1-390 et seq., as there was no evidence that the actions by the installers were introduced into the stream of commerce or were reasonably intended to impact on any market other than on the purchaser, and the commensurate awards of attorney fees and treble damages, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 10-1-399(c) and (d), were vacated. Brown v. Morton, 274 Ga. App. 208, 617 S.E.2d 198 (2005).

Trial court did not err when the court granted a landlord's summary judgment motion as to liability and damages in a conversion of collateral suit after a tenant failed to respond to the landlord's requests for admission; the landlord established the existence and enforceability of a security agreement, the value of the collateral described therein, and the tenant's conversion of that collateral. Von Tonder v. Payne, 275 Ga. App. 28, 619 S.E.2d 730 (2005).

Trial court erred in denying the relatives' motion for summary judgment against the uncle on the relatives' claims for ejectment and fraud in connection with real property once owned by the uncle because the uncle's failure to respond to the relatives' request for admissions had the effect of admitting the matters covered therein and the failure to respond to the relatives summary judgment motion meant that there were no remaining issues for trial against the uncle. Bowman v. Century Funding, Ltd., 277 Ga. App. 540, 627 S.E.2d 73 (2006).

In a finance corporation's suit to recover a deficiency balance on an installment sales contract for a log loader, the trial court properly granted the corporation summary judgment upon concluding that no genuine issues of material fact existed based on the defending trucking company and the company's president failing to answer the requests for admissions that were served simultaneously with the complaint. By failing to respond and never challenging the trial court's denial of the motion to withdraw the admissions filed by the trucking company and the company's president, the following allegations were deemed admitted: that true and correct copies of the relevant documents, including the demand for payment were received; that the president executed the installment sales contract and the guaranty; that the president failed to make payments thereunder; that the principal balance due under the contract and guaranty was $ 34,442.44 as of a certain date; and that the money was owed to the finance corporation. JJM Trucking, Inc. v. Caterpillar Fin. Servs. Corp., 295 Ga. App. 560, 672 S.E.2d 529 (2009).

Debtor's failure to respond to requests for admission served after the debtor objected to improper venue was not excused by the objection to venue and, after a transfer of venue, the transferee trial court properly granted summary judgment to the creditor based on the debtor's admissions in the transferor court, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-36. Jackson v. Nemdegelt, Inc., 302 Ga. App. 767, 691 S.E.2d 653 (2010).

Trial court did not err in granting summary judgment to a mortgagee on the mortgagors' claims for wrongful eviction and trespass because the mortgagors failed to adhere to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-36(a)(2) since the mortgagors never answered or objected to the mortgagees' requests for admission within the statutory time period, and thus, the requests were deemed admitted by the mortgagors; the mortgagor's reliance upon § 9-11-36(b) was misplaced under the circumstances because the parties modified the statutory discovery procedures by stipulation pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-29(2). Ikomoni v. Exec. Asset Mgmt., LLC, 309 Ga. App. 81, 709 S.E.2d 282 (2011).

In an employment dispute, the trial court was authorized to find that the employer was served with requests for admissions, based on the employee's counsel's assertion, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-5(b), and therefore partial summary judgment based on matters deemed admitted was proper. Am. Radiosurgery, Inc. v. Rakes, 325 Ga. App. 161, 751 S.E.2d 898 (2013).

Failure to admit or deny genuineness. — Failure of the defendant to reply to the plaintiff's request for an admission of the genuineness of documents established the documents' genuineness, but not the documents' accuracy. Stalvey v. Osceola Indus., Inc., 124 Ga. App. 708, 185 S.E.2d 629 (1971).

When a litigant relied upon the legal effect of failure to respond to requests for admission and the nonresponding party did not move to withdraw admissions or avail itself of any of the variety of responses available under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-36 and chose not to seek the liberal remedies afforded to parties under the statute to avoid the consequences of a failure to respond, the subject matter of the requests for admission stood admitted. Solis v. Lamb, 244 Ga. App. 8, 534 S.E.2d 582 (2000); Mays v. Ed Voyles Chrysler-Plymouth, Inc., 255 Ga. App. 357, 565 S.E.2d 515 (2002).

Facts admitted by failure to answer may not be controverted. — Facts admitted by failure to timely answer a request for admissions may not be controverted by statement of counsel at a summary judgment hearing. Eti Corp. v. Hammett, 140 Ga. App. 618, 231 S.E.2d 545 (1976).

Evidence is not admissible to controvert matters deemed to have been admitted by failure to answer requests for admission even though the substance of the matter deemed admitted has been denied in the answer to the complaint. Albitus v. F & M Bank, 159 Ga. App. 406, 283 S.E.2d 632 (1981).

Waiver of objections. — Failure to serve the opposing party with objections and failure to request a hearing on objections prior to the call of the case for the trial were sufficient grounds to authorize the trial court to find that the defendant waived the defendant's objections. Ehlers v. Butler, 127 Ga. App. 9, 192 S.E.2d 398 (1972).

Failure of general objection. — When a general objection is made to a pleading or evidence as a whole, part of which is not subject to the objection, the entire objection fails in its office as a critic. McDaniel v. Pass, 130 Ga. App. 614, 203 S.E.2d 903 (1974).

Pro se defendants did not fail to respond to requests for admission. —

It was error to find that pro se defendants failed to respond to requests for admission under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-36(b). Although the defendants stated that the defendants were answering the complaint, it was clear from the number and the content of the responses that the defendants were responding to the requests for admission rather than to the complaint; furthermore, a reasonable interpretation of the statement with which all three defendants' answers concluded was not that the defendants were not responding to any discovery requests, but that having responded to the requests for admission, the defendants would not be responding to the remaining discovery requests. Robinson v. Global Res., Inc., 300 Ga. App. 139, 684 S.E.2d 104 (2009).

4. Extension of Time

Authority of court to extend time for answering. — Trial judge has authority under Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, §§ 5 and 6 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-6(b)) to grant an extension of time for filing answers to a request for admissions of fact. National Bank v. Great S. Bus. Enters. Inc., 130 Ga. App. 221, 202 S.E.2d 848 (1973).

Pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-36(b), a trial court properly granted a bank a one-day extension to respond to a request to admit after the bank served the bank's response one day late because the trial court found excusable neglect based on the bank's counsel's mistaken belief that the opposing party's counsel had granted a one-day extension in which to respond. 131 Ralph McGill Blvd., LLC v. First Intercontinental Bank, 305 Ga. App. 493, 699 S.E.2d 823 (2010).

Because a party served the party's requests for admissions by mail, three days were added to the prescribed thirty-day response period pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-6(e). Patel v. Columbia Nat'l Ins.

Answers and Objections (Cont'd)4. Extension of Time (Cont'd)

Co., 315 Ga. App. 877, 729 S.E.2d 35 (2012).

Discretion of court. — Whether to allow responses to request for admissions after the statutory time for filing has passed is within the discretion of the trial judge, and the judge's decision will not be interfered with unless it clearly appears that this discretion has been abused. Davenport v. Smith, 157 Ga. App. 870, 278 S.E.2d 691 (1981).

Trial court did not err by granting summary judgment to an insurer on an insured's claim because the court was authorized to find that the facts were undisputed in that the insured's untimely response to requests for admissions which were submitted by the insurer constituted an admission of the facts and the insured did not seek to withdraw that admission in accordance with O.C.G.A. § 9-11-36(b). Patel v. Columbia Nat'l Ins. Co., 315 Ga. App. 877, 729 S.E.2d 35 (2012).

Motion required after time expired.

— Within the time allowed under subsection (a) of this section for filing answers to a request for admissions, the judge may grant an extension with or without a motion; however, if such time has expired, there must be a motion to allow late filing. National Bank v. Great S. Bus. Enters. Inc., 130 Ga. App. 221, 202 S.E.2d 848 (1973).

While the trial judge has authority to grant extensions of time for filing after the time for answering has expired, there must be a motion for withdrawal of the admissions under subsection (b) of Ga. L. 1972, p. 510, § 9 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-36) or a motion to allow late filing under Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, §§ 5 and 6 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-6(b)). Custom Farm Servs., Inc. v. Faulk, 130 Ga. App. 583, 203 S.E.2d 912 (1974).

Extension permitted for excusable neglect, absent prejudice to adverse party. — Court may allow additional time when the failure to respond is due to excusable neglect, and is not prejudicial to the party requesting admissions. Coolik v. Hawk, 133 Ga. App. 626, 212 S.E.2d 7 (1974).

Extension should not be allowed without reason.

— While this section places no restriction on the court's discretion to allow an extension after the time for reply has passed, such an extension should not be allowed without reason or when it will prejudice the opposing party. Taylor v. Hunnicutt, 129 Ga. App. 314, 199 S.E.2d 596 (1973).

Withdrawal or Amendment of Admission

Showing required. — Allowance of motion to withdraw admissions resulting from failure to answer request therefor should be decided by determination of whether preservation of the merits of the action would be subserved thereby; upon a determination that such will be the case, burden shifts to the opposite party to satisfy the court that depriving the party of the resulting default judgment will prejudice the party in maintaining an action on the merits. Alexander v. H.S.I. Mgt., Inc., 155 Ga. App. 116, 270 S.E.2d 325 (1980).

Consideration of a motion to withdraw admissions must be on the basis of whether the presentation of the merits of the action will be subserved thereby and whether the respondent can satisfy the court that withdrawal or amendment will prejudice the respondent in maintaining an action on the merits. Wells v. Whitemarsh Contractors, 160 Ga. App. 176, 286 S.E.2d 752 (1981), rev'd on other grounds, 249 Ga. 194, 288 S.E.2d 198 (1982).

An attempt to withdraw or amend admissions must be accompanied by a showing that the merits of the case will be subserved. Yarbrough v. Magbee Bros. Lumber & Supply Co., 189 Ga. App. 299, 375 S.E.2d 471 (1988).

In a negligence case, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by denying the defendants' motion to withdraw the defendants' admission that the defendants performed some repairs on the tractor trailer five days after the collision because the trial court concluded that the evidence produced by the defendants to support the defendant's motion to withdraw was not credible; thus, the defendants failed to meet the defendants' burden of showing that the defendants' admission would have been refuted at trial by admissible evidence having a modicum of credibility. Howard v. Alegria, 321 Ga. App. 178, 739 S.E.2d 95 (2013).

Merits of action subserved by withdrawal. — Trial court did not err in allowing the withdrawal of admissions when, although no parties presented evidence, a review of the record revealed that the admissions could be refuted by admissible evidence. Saleem v. Snow, 217 Ga. App. 883, 460 S.E.2d 104 (1995).

Burden of party moving to withdraw admission. — Party moving to withdraw must show that admitted request for admission either can be refuted by admissible evidence having a modicum of credibility or is incredible on its face, and that the denial is not offered solely for purposes of delay. Johnson v. City Wide Cab, Inc., 205 Ga. App. 502, 422 S.E.2d 912 (1992).

In a wrongful foreclosure proceeding, a motion to withdraw admissions instituted by a buyer and another was properly denied because they failed to meet their burden of demonstrating that the merits of the action would have been served by the withdrawal of the admissions since they did not provide even a slight showing that the denials were supported by admissible evidence. Ledford v. Darter, 260 Ga. App. 585, 580 S.E.2d 317 (2003).

Trial court committed no error in determining that a company's original responses to the requests for admission were defective and should be stricken and that the requests for admission were deemed admitted by operation of law because the company failed to move to withdraw or amend the admissions, which left no genuine issue of material fact in dispute and the creditor was entitled to judgment as a matter of law on the open account claim against the company. Brougham Casket & Vault Co., LLC v. DeLoach, 323 Ga. App. 701, 747 S.E.2d 707 (2013).

No showing of "providential cause" or "excusable neglect" required. — Applicant in a motion to withdraw admissions is not required to show "providential cause" or "excusable neglect," but the trial court should follow the language of the statute in making the court's determination. Moore Ventures Ltd. Partnership v. Stack, 153 Ga. App. 215, 264 S.E.2d 725 (1980); Whitemarsh Contractors v. Wells, 249 Ga. 194, 288 S.E.2d 198 (1982).

Presentation of merits of action subserved by withdrawal. — Denial of an individual's motion to withdraw admissions was error, and a summary judgment in favor of a lessor based on the admission was error, since presentation of the merits of the action by the lessor against the individual to recover on a lease would be subserved by permitting the individual to withdraw the admissions, and the lessor failed to show that withdrawal would prejudice the lessor in maintaining the lessor's action on the merits. Bailey v. Chase Third Century Leasing Co., 211 Ga. App. 60, 438 S.E.2d 172 (1993).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in allowing the defendant to withdraw admissions after the defendant produced evidence negating the admissions, including affidavits and depositions, and the court determined that the plaintiff would not be prejudiced in maintaining the action on the merits. Rowland v. Tsay, 213 Ga. App. 679, 445 S.E.2d 822 (1994); U.B. Vehicle Leasing, Inc. v. Vision Int'l, Inc., 224 Ga. App. 611, 481 S.E.2d 597 (1997).

Burden to move for withdrawal or amendment. — Under this section, the burden is on the one who has failed to answer to be bound by the resulting "admissions" unless the person takes the initiative and files a motion under subsection (b) of this section and succeeds in defeating such admissions. National Bank v. Merritt, 130 Ga. App. 85, 202 S.E.2d 193 (1973); Meadows v. Dalton, 153 Ga. App. 568, 266 S.E.2d 235 (1980); Taylor v. Cameron & Barkley Co., 161 Ga. App. 750, 289 S.E.2d 820 (1982); Atlanta Cas. Co. v. Goodwin, 205 Ga. App. 421, 422 S.E.2d 76 (1992).

Party who fails to answer within the required time may seek to withdraw the party's admissions, but the party must take the initiative and file a motion or otherwise the party is bound thereby. National Bank v. Great S. Bus. Enters. Inc., 130 Ga. App. 221, 202 S.E.2d 848 (1973).

Failure to object to or respond to re-

requests for admissions constitutes an admission of the requests, to avoid being bound by which the one who fails to answer must move to withdraw such admissions, and when such party makes no such motion, the admissions made by the failure to timely respond to the requests are binding. Tyson v. Automotive Controls Corp., 147 Ga. App. 409, 249 S.E.2d 99 (1978).

Burden is on the one failing to answer to take the initiative and file a motion under subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-36 to withdraw or amend the admissions. Karat Enters. v. Marriott Corp., 196 Ga. App. 769, 397 S.E.2d 44 (1990).

Burden of party opposing motion. — Party opposing motion to withdraw has burden of establishing prejudice in maintaining the party's action or defense on the merits from withdrawal or amendment to the answers. Moore Ventures Ltd. Partnership v. Stack, 153 Ga. App. 215, 264 S.E.2d 725 (1980); Dorfman v. Lederman, 154 Ga. App. 473, 268 S.E.2d 767 (1980).

Being compelled to try the merits of a case does not constitute the type of prejudice needed to warrant denial of a motion to withdraw admissions. Johnson v. City Wide Cab, Inc., 205 Ga. App. 502, 422 S.E.2d 912 (1992).

Trial on the merits. — By being forced to try a case rather than take a default, a party is not prejudiced in trying the merits of the case. Alexander v. H.S.I. Mgt., Inc., 155 Ga. App. 116, 270 S.E.2d 325 (1980).

Fact that a party's opponent relied on the admissions and expended time and resources on what appeared to be a well advised motion for summary judgment, and would have to try the case on the merits, was insufficient prejudice to warrant denying the party's motion to withdraw the admissions. Riberglass, Inc. v. ECO Chem. Specialties, Inc., 194 Ga. App. 417, 390 S.E.2d 616, cert. denied, 194 Ga. App. 912, 390 S.E.2d 616 (1990).

Deprivation of default judgment not "prejudice." — Depriving a party of a judgment by default is not the kind of prejudice envisioned by subsection (b) of this section. Moore Ventures Ltd. Partnership v. Stack, 153 Ga. App. 215, 264 S.E.2d 725 (1980); Dorfman v. Lederman, 154 Ga. App. 473, 268 S.E.2d 767 (1980); Hanson v. Farmer, 163 Ga. App. 561, 295 S.E.2d 343 (1982).

Since failure to move to have admissions withdrawn or amended forecloses remedial action requests for admission which were not answered or objected to are deemed admitted. Hammett v. Bailey, 147 Ga. App. 105, 248 S.E.2d 180 (1978); Drummond v. Brown, 149 Ga. App. 248, 253 S.E.2d 868 (1979).

Admission which would otherwise result from failure to make timely answer should be avoided when to do so will aid in the presentation of the merits of the action and will not prejudice the party who made the request. Franks v. Reid, 134 Ga. App. 94, 213 S.E.2d 193 (1975); Moore Ventures Ltd. Partnership v. Stack, 153 Ga. App. 215, 264 S.E.2d 725 (1980).

Failure to consider merits of motion to withdraw admissions. — When the trial court's order granting summary judgment to appellee and effectively denying the appellant's motion to withdraw admissions reflected that court's failure to consider the merits of the motion within the parameters of the two-pronged test of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-36, the case was reversed and remanded to the trial court for the presentation and consideration of evidence pertinent to the appellant's motion to withdraw admissions. Watson v. McDowell & Son, Inc., 204 Ga. App. 635, 420 S.E.2d 88 (1992).

Motion to withdraw proper. — Doctors' withdrawal of admissions and submission of responses to the patient's discovery requests was properly permitted after the doctors presented responses to the patient's requests for admissions, as well as affidavits to show that their responses were meritorious and not interposed solely for the purposes of delay, and when the record supported a finding that the merits would be subserved by allowing withdrawal, and that the patient would not be prejudiced by the withdrawal. Brankovic v. Snyder, 259 Ga. App. 579, 578 S.E.2d 203 (2003).

Trial court did not err in allowing the withdrawal of admissions made by operation of law pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-36(b) because O.C.G.A. § 9-11-16(b), governing pretrial orders, did not apply to limit the trial court's discretion to permit withdrawal of the disputed admissions after the trial court's June 5 scheduling order was not intended as a pretrial order. Velasco v. Chambliss, 295 Ga. App. 376, 671 S.E.2d 870 (2008).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in granting a lessee's motion to withdraw admissions that had been deemed admitted by virtue of the lessee's failure to respond to discovery because although the lessee's failure to respond to a lessor's request resulted in an admission that the lessee was jointly liable for the debts of a limited liability company (LLC), the lessee was not a party to nor a guarantor of the lease agreement, and that evidence was sufficient to refute the lessor's allegations that the lessee shared personal liability for the debts of the LLC and to further conclude that the lessee's denial of liability was not simply a delaying tactic; the lessor did not establish that the withdrawal would prejudice the lessor in maintaining the action on the merits. ABA 241 Peachtree, LLC v. Brooken & McGlothen, LLC, 302 Ga. App. 208, 690 S.E.2d 514 (2010).

As the evidence was sufficient to show that a business entity had refuted its admissions and that its motion to withdraw was not solely interposed for delay, and property owners did not show prejudice, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion when the court allowed the entity to withdraw the entity's admissions. Elrod v. Sunflower Meadows Dev., LLC, 322 Ga. App. 666, 745 S.E.2d 846 (2013).

In a suit on open account, the customer's shareholders' motion to withdraw the shareholders' admissions on the basis that settlement negotiations had been ongoing and the parties had agreed to extend the discovery period until negotiations were complete, along with the shareholders' filing responses to the requests and the proponent's failure to show prejudice, supported the trial court's decision to allow withdrawal of the admissions. Heath v.

Color Imprints USA, Inc., 329 Ga. App. 605, 765 S.E.2d 751 (2014).

Order denying motion to withdraw assumed correct when no evidence presented. — As no evidence was provided showing that the presentation of the merits would have been subverted by allowing the withdrawal or amendment of admissions, no testimony having been offered, it was assumed on appeal that the order denying the motion to withdraw was correct. Worth v. Alma Exch. Bank & Trust, 171 Ga. App. 748, 320 S.E.2d 816 (1984).

When pro se defendant did not satisfy the defendant's burden of showing that the presentation of the merits would be subverted by allowing a withdrawal of the defendant's admissions, the trial court did not err in denying the motion. Howell v. Styles, 221 Ga. App. 781, 472 S.E.2d 548 (1996).

Counsel's "oversight" insufficient reason. — Court may grant a motion to withdraw: (1) when the presentation of the merits will be subverted thereby; and (2) the party obtaining the admission fails to satisfy the court that the withdrawal will prejudice maintaining the party's action or defense on the merits. If the movant satisfies the court on the first prong, the burden is on the respondent to satisfy the second prong. A party failed to satisfy the first prong of the test when the party only gave an explanation for not responding to the request that it was "due to oversight of counsel since the answer was prepared at the last minute." Intersouth Properties, Inc. v. Contractor Exch., Inc., 199 Ga. App. 726, 405 S.E.2d 764 (1991).

Harmless error in applying excusable neglect. — As the trial court applied the correct legal principal concerning the second prong of the withdrawal test, any error resulting from applying "excusable neglect" as an additional basis for denying the motion to withdraw would constitute harmless error. Marlowe v. Lott, 212 Ga. App. 679, 442 S.E.2d 487 (1994).

Hearing. — Since no hearing was held on the appellant's motion to withdraw admissions, no evidence as to whether the merits of the action would be subverted by allowing withdrawal and whether withdrawal would prejudice appellee in maintaining an action were presented for the trial court's consideration, and the trial court's order granting summary judgment to appellee and effectively denying appellant's motion to withdraw admissions was reversed and remanded for presentation and consideration of evidence pertinent to the appellant's motion. Hanson v. Farmer, 163 Ga. App. 561, 295 S.E.2d 343 (1982).

Refusal to allow withdrawal of admissions was not an abuse of discretion. — In a purported widow's proceeding seeking an award of a year's support from a decedent's estate for her child and herself, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-36(b) in refusing to allow the purported widow to withdraw her admission that she was married to another man when she allegedly married the decedent as the trial court implicitly found that the probative value of the evidence which the widow submitted to show that she was not married to the other man when she married the decedent, including her self-serving affidavit and a passport application in which she identified herself as single, was inadequate to show that she could prove the validity of her marriage to the decedent by admissible evidence having a modicum of credibility if her motion was granted. Crowther v. Estate of Crowther, 258 Ga. App. 498, 574 S.E.2d 607 (2002).

Denial of a defendant's motion to withdraw admissions under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-36(b) was proper because the defendant failed to establish that presentation of the merits would have been subverted by permitting the withdrawal; the defendant's pleadings contained perfunctory denials and failed to present or refer to any admissible evidence. Turner v. Mize, 280 Ga. App. 256, 633 S.E.2d 641 (2006).

Trial court properly denied a real estate seller's motion to withdraw the seller's admissions. The trial court was authorized to construe the inconsistent statements of the seller's principal against the seller, absent a reasonable explanation to explain the contradiction; moreover, the principal's contention that the parties expressly agreed to give the seller the authority to unilaterally increase the sales price without notice would vitiate the sales agreement. Fox Run Props, LLC v. Murray, 288 Ga. App. 568, 654 S.E.2d 676 (2007).

In a premises liability suit brought by the parents of a decedent, the trial court did not err in denying the parents' motion to withdraw their admissions. The parents failed to present evidence contradicting the admissions to be withdrawn, which helped establish that the decedent voluntarily entered into a violent fight with an acquaintance to resolve a personal money dispute. Porter v. Urban Residential Dev. Corp., 294 Ga. App. 828, 670 S.E.2d 464 (2008).

It was not error, in a workers' compensation case, to deny the motion of an employer and insurer to withdraw or amend the employer's and insurer's deemed admissions to a worker's requests for admission because: (1) the employer and insurer did not answer the requests, resulting in the deemed admissions under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-36(a)(2) and (b); and (2) any error in denying the motion was harmless as the admissions were cumulative of other evidence showing the worker's disability. Ready Mix USA, Inc. v. Ross, 314 Ga. App. 775, 726 S.E.2d 90 (2012), cert. denied, No. S12C1202, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 664 (Ga. 2012).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying a personal guarantor's request to withdraw the guarantor's admissions because the matters in the requests for admissions were admitted by operation of law, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-36(a)(2), when the guarantor failed to answer the requests within 30 days of service. Moreover, the guarantor made no attempt in the trial court to show that the admissions were incredible on their face or to present admissible, credible evidence refuting the admissions. Brooks v. Multibank 2009-1 RES-ADC Venture, LLC, 317 Ga. App. 264, 730 S.E.2d 509 (2012).

Use of Admissions

Limitation on use of admissions. — Plain language of subsection (b) of

O.C.G.A. § 9-11-36 confines the use of admissions to the action in which the admissions are made and forbids the admissions' use in a subsequent or other action including a renewal action under O.C.G.A. § 9-2-61. Mumford v. Davis, 206 Ga. App. 148, 424 S.E.2d 306 (1992).

After movant creditor sought sanctions, pursuant to Fed. R. Bankr. P. 9011, against the debtor's counsel for alleged misconduct, the court would not consider new allegations that had not been noticed for 21 days, and would not consider admissions made by the debtor in a different proceeding, under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-36(b). Schwindler v. Screen (In re Screen), 2004 Bankr. LEXIS 2655 (Bankr. S.D. Ga. June 4, 2004).

Under Georgia law, a matter admitted was conclusively established for the purpose of the state court action only and was not an admission by a debtor for purposes of a nondischargeability action in bankruptcy court. However, the statute did not bar the creditor's reliance on collateral estoppel. Allen v. Morrow (In re Morrow), 508 B.R. 514 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 2014).

Summary Judgment

When summary judgment proper.

— When a party fails to answer a request for admissions within the requisite time and admissions remove all issues of fact, the other party is entitled to the grant of a motion for summary judgment. West v. Milner Enters., Inc., 162 Ga. App. 667, 292 S.E.2d 538 (1982).

By failing to respond to requests for admissions under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-36(a), a resident made admissions which left no material issue of triable fact on the resident's complaint, so the entry of summary judgment against the resident on the merits based on the failure to respond to discovery was proper. Le v. Shepherd's Pond Homeowners Ass'n, 280 Ga. App. 36, 633 S.E.2d 363 (2006).

In an insureds' suit against a construction company regarding the company's mold remediation work on the insureds' home, since the company had filed a counterclaim for unpaid rental fees, summary judgment in favor of the company was proper because the insureds' failure to respond to the company's requests for admissions conclusively established the facts set out in the requests such that no genuine issues of material fact remained for resolution by a jury. Stephens v. Alan V. Mock Construction Co., Inc., 302 Ga. App. 280, 690 S.E.2d 225, cert. denied, No. S10C1012, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 533 (Ga. 2010).

When summary judgment improper. — Because the trial court applied the wrong legal standard in refusing to allow the defendants to withdraw the defendants' admissions, and should have applied the standard set forth in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-36(b) and considered whether withdrawal would serve the presentation of the merits and whether it would prejudice the plaintiffs, summary judgment was improper; moreover, the trial court erroneously held that summary judgment was proper because the defendants had shown no excuse for the defendants' former counsel's failure to respond to the plaintiffs' request for admissions as the defendants were not required to make such a showing. Sayers v. Artistic Kitchen Design, LLC, 280 Ga. App. 223, 633 S.E.2d 619 (2006).

Treatment of matters not objected to or denied in considering summary judgment. — Trial judge was authorized to treat matters covered by request for admissions which were neither objected to nor denied as admitted in considering the plaintiff's motion for summary judgment. Bailey v. Bailey, 227 Ga. 55, 178 S.E.2d 864 (1970).

Untimely answers not considered in ruling on summary judgment. — When answers to requests for admission were in fact filed after expiration of the statutory time, but without permission for late filing and when there was no motion seeking permission to withdraw the admissions resulting from the failure to respond timely, the answers could not be considered by the trial court in ruling on a motion for summary judgment. Albitus v. F & M Bank, 159 Ga. App. 406, 283 S.E.2d 632 (1981).

Failure to respond to request for admissions. — Supplier, which sought to collect amounts owed on an open account from a contractor and a guarantor, was entitled to summary judgment because the contractor's and the guarantor's failure to respond to a request for admissions resulted in the admission of all of the material facts supporting the supplier's claims under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-36(a)(2). Powerhouse Custom Homes, Inc. v. 84 Lumber Co., L.P., 307 Ga. App. 605, 705 S.E.2d 704 (2011).

Trial court did not err in granting summary judgment to a surety on the issues of breach of contract and declaratory judgment because the Georgia Department of Corrections failed to respond to the requests for admissions; therefore, the claims were deemed admitted since the admissions covered all the essential claims presented in the surety's verified complaint. State Dep't of Corr. v. Developers Sur. & Indem. Co., 324 Ga. App. 371, 750 S.E.2d 697 (2013).

Filing of motion to withdraw after hearing for summary judgment. — Motion to withdraw admissions, filed after hearing on motion for summary judgment but prior to entry of summary judgment, was timely. Hanson v. Farmer, 163 Ga. App. 561, 295 S.E.2d 343 (1982).

Failure to file pro se responses with court not grounds for summary judgment. — When the appellant timely served unsworn pro se responses to requests for admission on appellee, and in support of the appellee's motion for summary judgment the appellee personally filed a copy of the responses with the court, the appellant's failure to file the responses with the court would not support summary judgment in the plaintiff's favor as such a result would not be consistent with principles of substantial justice. Mundt v. Olson, 155 Ga. App. 145, 270 S.E.2d 344 (1980).

When a request for admission merely asks the party to respond with an opinion and does not require the admission of a fact by the party, the party's response is not sufficient to support a summary judgment motion by the party submitting the request for admission. American Cyanamid Co. v. Allrid, 176 Ga. App. 831, 338 S.E.2d 14 (1985).

Service of responses. — Service of responses to requests to admit was timely as calculated pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 1-3-1(d)(3); therefore, the requests were not deemed admitted. The fact that the certificate of service was not filed with the clerk under Ga. Unif. Super. Ct. R. 5.2 until later did not impact the fact that service of the responses was timely. Cruickshank v. Fremont Inv. & Loan, 307 Ga. App. 489, 705 S.E.2d 298 (2010).

9-11-37. Failure to make discovery; motion to compel; sanctions; expenses.

(a) Motion for order compelling discovery. A party, upon reasonable notice to other parties and all persons affected thereby, may apply for an order compelling discovery as follows:

(1) Appropriate court. An application for an order to a party may be made to the court in which the action is pending or, on matters relating to a deposition, to the court in the county where the deposition is being taken. An application for an order to a deponent who is not a party shall be made to the court in the county where the deposition is being taken;

(2) Motion; protective order. If a deponent fails to answer a question propounded or submitted under Code Section 9-11-30 or 9-11-31, or a corporation or other entity fails to make a designation under paragraph (6) of subsection (b) of Code Section 9-11-30 or subsection (a) of Code Section 9-11-31, or a party fails to answer an interrogatory submitted under Code Section 9-11-33, or if a party, in response to a request for inspection submitted under Code Section 9-11-34, fails to respond that inspection will be permitted as requested or fails to permit inspection as requested, the discovering party may move for an order compelling an answer, or a designation, or an order compelling inspection in accordance with the request. When taking a deposition on oral examination, the proponent of the question may complete or adjourn the examination before he applies for an order. If the court denies the motion in whole or in part, it may make such protective order as it would have been empowered to make on a motion made pursuant to subsection (c) of Code Section 9-11-26;

(3) Evasive or incomplete answer. For purposes of the provisions of this chapter which relate to depositions and discovery, an evasive or incomplete answer is to be treated as a failure to answer; and

(4) Award of expenses of motion.

(A) If the motion is granted, the court shall, after opportunity for hearing, require the party or deponent whose conduct necessitated the motion or the party or attorney advising such conduct or both of them to pay to the moving party the reasonable expenses incurred in obtaining the order, including attorney's fees, unless the court finds that the opposition to the motion was substantially justified or that other circumstances make an award of expenses unjust.

(B) If the motion is denied, the court shall, after opportunity for hearing, require the moving party or the attorney advising the motion or both of them to pay to the party or deponent who opposed the motion the reasonable expenses incurred in opposing the motion, including attorney's fees, unless the court finds that the making of the motion was substantially justified or that other circumstances make an award of expenses unjust.

(C) If the motion is granted in part and denied in part, the court may apportion the reasonable expenses incurred in relation to the motion among the parties and persons in a just manner.

(b) Failure to comply with order.

(1) Sanctions by court in county where deposition is taken.

If a deponent fails to be sworn or to answer a question after being directed to do so by the court in the county in which the deposition is being taken, the failure may be considered a contempt of that court.

(2) Sanctions by court in which action is pending. If a party or an officer, director, or managing agent of a party or a person designated under paragraph (6) of subsection (b) of Code Section 9-11-30 or subsection (a) of Code Section 9-11-31 to testify on behalf of a party fails to obey an order to provide or permit discovery, including an order made under subsection (a) of this Code section or Code Section 9-11-35, the court in which the action is pending may make such orders in regard to the failure as are just and, among others, the following:

(A) An order that the matters regarding which the order was made or any other designated facts shall be taken to be established for the purposes of the action in accordance with the claim of the party obtaining the order;

(B) An order refusing to allow the disobedient party to support or oppose designated claims or defenses, or prohibiting him from introducing designated matters in evidence;

(C) An order striking out pleadings or parts thereof, or staying further proceedings until the order is obeyed, or dismissing the action or proceeding or any part thereof, or rendering a judgment by default against the disobedient party;

(D) In lieu of any of the foregoing orders, or in addition thereto, an order treating as a contempt of court the failure to obey any orders except an order to submit to a physical or mental examination; or

(E) Where a party has failed to comply with an order under subsection (a) of Code Section 9-11-35 requiring him to produce another for examination, such orders as are listed in subparagraphs (A), (B), and (C) of this paragraph, unless the party failing to comply shows that he is unable to produce such person for examination.

In lieu of any of the foregoing orders, or in addition thereto, the court shall require the party failing to obey the order or the attorney advising him, or both, to pay the reasonable expenses, including attorney's fees, caused by the failure, unless the court finds that the failure was substantially justified or that other circumstances make an award of expenses unjust.

(c) Expenses on failure to admit. If a party fails to admit the genuineness of any document or the truth of any matter as requested under Code Section 9-11-36 and if the party requesting the admissions thereafter proves the genuineness of the document or the truth of the matter, he may apply to the court for an order requiring the other party to pay him the reasonable expenses incurred in making that proof, including reasonable attorney's fees. The court shall make the order unless it finds that the request was held objectionable pursuant to subsection (a) of Code Section 9-11-36, or the admission sought was of no substantial importance, or the party failing to admit had reasonable ground to believe that he might prevail on the matter, or there was other good reason for the failure to admit.

(d) Failure of party to attend at own deposition or serve answers to interrogatories or respond to request for inspection.

(1) If a party or an officer, director, or managing agent of a party or a person designated under paragraph (6) of subsection (b) of Code Section 9-11-30 or subsection (a) of Code Section 9-11-31 to testify on behalf of a party fails to appear before the officer who is to take his deposition, after being served with a proper notice, or fails to serve answers or objections to interrogatories submitted under Code Section 9-11-33, after proper service of the interrogatories, or fails to serve a written response to a request for inspection submitted under Code Section 9-11-34, after proper service of the request, the court in which the action is pending on motion may make such orders in regard to the failure as are just; and, among others, it may take any action authorized under subparagraphs (b)(2)(A) through (b)(2)(C) of this Code section. In lieu of any order, or in addition thereto, the court shall require the party failing to act or the attorney advising him, or both, to pay the reasonable expenses, including attorney's fees, caused by the failure, unless the court finds that the failure was substantially justified or that other circumstances make an award of expenses unjust.

(2) The failure to act described in the provisions of this chapter which relate to depositions and discovery may not be excused on the ground that the discovery sought is objectionable unless the party failing to act has applied for a protective order as provided by subsection (c) of Code Section 9-11-26. (Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 37; Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 18; Ga. L. 1970, p. 157, § 1; Ga. L. 1972, p. 510, § 10; Ga. L. 1984, p. 22, § 9; Ga. L. 1992, p. 6, § 9.)

FAILURE TO RESPOND TO DISCOVERY REQUESTS

General Consideration

Editor’s notes. — Georgia Laws 1972, p. 510, made substantial revisions to certain Code sections of this chapter dealing with discovery. Prior to the 1972 amendment, this Code section was substantially the same as former Code 1933, § 38-2111. Hence, decisions based on this Code section prior to its 1972 amendment should be consulted with care.

In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code 1933, §§ 38-2108, 38-2109, and 38-2111 are included in the annotations for this Code section.

Purpose of 1972 amendment. — This section was amended in 1972 in order to bring the statute into conformity with the federal rule. Mayer v. Interstate Fire Ins.

Co., 243 Ga. 436, 254 S.E.2d 825 (1979).

More frequent sanctions encouraged. — The 1972 amendments to the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) are intended to encourage more frequent imposition of sanctions in cases in which there has been an abuse of the discovery rules. Mayer v. Interstate Fire Ins. Co., 243 Ga. 436, 254 S.E.2d 825 (1979).

Minimal court participation intended. — System provided by this section is designed to operate as efficiently as possible with minimal participation by the trial court. Mayer v. Interstate Fire Ins. Co., 243 Ga. 436, 254 S.E.2d 825 (1979).

Statute provides no remedy allowing court to strike answers to interrogatories. Bratten Apparel, Inc. v. Lyons Textile Mill, Inc., 129 Ga. App. 384, 199 S.E.2d 632 (1973).

Fifth Amendment privilege. — For a discussion of the procedure to be followed to compel discovery when a party raises Fifth Amendment privilege against matters sought to be discovered, see Axson v. National Sur. Corp., 254 Ga. 248, 327 S.E.2d 732 (1985).

Denial of an accused's motion for a protective order under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-26(c) was affirmed as the Fifth Amendment could not be used to justify a protective order to stay all discovery in the accused's civil forfeiture proceeding under O.C.G.A. § 16-14-7 pending the conclusion of the accused's criminal Georgia Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act, O.C.G.A. § 16-14-1 et seq., case; while the privilege against self-incrimination extends to answers creating a "real and appreciable" danger of establishing a link in the chain of evidence needed to prosecute, the trial court has to determine if the answers could incriminate the witness, and if the trial court determines that the answers could not incriminate the witness, the witness has to testify or be subject to the court's sanction. Chumley v. State of Ga., 282 Ga. App. 117, 637 S.E.2d 828 (2006).

For what purposes sanctions are authorized. — Ordinarily, sanctions can be applied only for failure to comply with an order of court; the only exceptions to this scheme are subsection (d) of this section, which permits an immediate sanction for complete failure to respond to a notice of deposition, interrogatories, or a request for inspection, and subsection (c), which authorizes imposition of expenses for an unjustified failure to admit. Mayer v. Interstate Fire Ins. Co., 243 Ga. 436, 254 S.E.2d 825 (1979).

Sanction of dismissal for failure to comply with discovery provisions requires a conscious or intentional failure to act that is in fact willful, as distinguished from an accidental or involuntary non-compliance. City of Griffin v. Jackson, 239 Ga. App. 374, 520 S.E.2d 510 (1999).

In a medical malpractice case, when a patient did not reveal to the providers being sued or to the trial court, that the patient's expert witness had withdrawn from the case, causing an unnecessary delay in the discovery process for 10 months, it was proper for the trial court to grant the providers' motion to dismiss the complaint, under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37(b)(2), whether or not the trial court found the patient's conduct was willful because the evidence supported the trial court's ruling. Flott v. Southeast Permanente Med. Group, Inc., 274 Ga. App. 622, 617 S.E.2d 598 (2005).

In a medical malpractice case, when a patient did not reveal to the providers being sued, or to the trial court, that the patient's expert witness had withdrawn from the case, causing an unnecessary delay in the discovery process for 10 months, it was proper for the trial court to grant the providers' motion to dismiss the complaint, under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37(b)(2), whether or not the witness had been subpoenaed for a deposition. Flott v. Southeast Permanente Med. Group, Inc., 274 Ga. App. 622, 617 S.E.2d 598 (2005).

In a medical malpractice case when the trial court dismissed a married couple's claims against two defendants because the court found that the couple abused the civil litigation process, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37(b) did not support the trial court's action; the complaint had not been dismissed as a discovery sanction. Whitley v. Piedmont Hosp., Inc., 284 Ga. App. 649, 644 S.E.2d 514 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 626, 651 (Ga. 2007).

Total failure to respond to discovery results in immediate sanctions. — Party may seek immediate sanctions without the necessity of a motion to compel when there has been a total failure to respond to discovery. Allison v. Wilson, 320 Ga. App. 629, 740 S.E.2d 355 (2013).

Suit properly dismissed due to party's failure to attend scheduled depositions that were properly noticed. — Motorist's suit was properly dismissed under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37(d) as the motorist failed to attend any of three scheduled depositions that were properly noticed under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-30(b)(1), defense counsel was not required to address the motorist's proposed discovery plan, and counsel's failure to do so did not excuse the motorist's failure to attend the depositions. Pascal v. Prescod, 296 Ga. App. 359, 674 S.E.2d 623 (2009).

Imposition of sanctions under subsections (b) and (d) distinguished. — There must be an order under subsection (a) of this section before sanctions are imposed under subsection (b), while under subsection (d) the party aggrieved may move directly for the imposition of sanctions. Mayer v. Interstate Fire Ins. Co., 243 Ga. 436, 254 S.E.2d 825 (1979).

Motion for a specific sanction is not required before a trial judge is authorized to give that sanction. Mayer v. Interstate Fire Ins. Co., 243 Ga. 436, 254 S.E.2d 825 (1979).

Under paragraph (b)(2) and subsection (d) of this section, motion to apply "sanctions as provided by law" vests discretion in the trial court in which the action is pending to make such orders in regard to the failure to answer interrogatories as are just, and although it may be the better practice to request a specific sanction, it is not necessary to do so. Mayer v. Interstate Fire Ins. Co., 243 Ga. 436, 254 S.E.2d 825 (1979).

Requirements for subsection (d) sanctions. — There need be no order to compel discovery as provided for in subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37 as a basis to impose sanctions provided for in subsection (d) of this section. All that is required is a motion, notice, and a hearing. Cook v. Lassiter, 159 Ga. App. 24, 282 S.E.2d 680 (1981).

Although it is not necessary to issue an order compelling discovery as provided for in subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37 prior to imposing the sanction of dismissal under subsection (d), a motion, notice, and hearing are required. Barrego v. OHM Remediation Servs. Corp., 245 Ga. App. 389, 537 S.E.2d 774 (2000).

Willful failure formerly prerequisite to imposition of harsh sanctions. — Harsh sanctions of dismissal, default, or the striking of pleadings under this section prior to its amendment by Ga. L. 1972, p. 510, § 10, were applicable only upon a showing that the failure to make discovery was willful, and dismissal could not operate as an adjudication on the merits unless the court found that the failure was willful. Morton v. Retail Credit Co., 128 Ga. App. 446, 196 S.E.2d 902 (1973).

Failure to afford opportunity to be heard on sanctions motion. — In a professional negligence action, the trial court erred in striking the affidavit of the developer's counsel filed in support of the developer's motion to vacate or set aside the order of dismissal for an alleged discovery violation, thereby refusing to afford the developer an opportunity to be heard on the merits of the sanctions motion before deciding the motion. N. Druid Dev., LLC v. Post, Buckley, Schuh & Jernigan, Inc., No. A14A1101, 2014 Ga. App. LEXIS 724 (Nov. 7, 2014).

Failure to conduct hearing on motion for sanctions or make finding failure to respond was willful. — Dismissal of the plaintiffs' negligence action with prejudice was not proper because there was no motion to compel prior to filing the motion for sanctions, there was no hearing on the motion for sanctions, and there was nothing in the record before the appellate court that demanded a finding that the plaintiffs' rescheduling of the plaintiffs' depositions and failure to respond to certain discovery was willful. Taylor v. Marshall, 321 Ga. App. 752, 743 S.E.2d 444 (2013).

Service of motion by mail. — Motion to impose sanction under Ga. L. 1972, p. 510, § 10 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37) may be properly served upon the defendant's attorney by mail pursuant to Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 4 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-5(b)). Phillips v. Peachtree Hous., 138 Ga. App. 596, 226 S.E.2d 616 (1976).

Broad discretionary power is given to courts by the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) to assure safeguards against oppressive and unfair questions and demands, and conversely, very broad discretion is granted in applying sanctions against disobedient parties, in order to assure compliance with the orders of the courts. Dean v. Gainesville Stone Co., 120 Ga. App. 315, 170 S.E.2d 348 (1969).

Courts are specifically granted discretion to dismiss complaints or render default judgments against disobedient parties, including parties disobeying an order to produce. Dean v. Gainesville Stone Co., 120 Ga. App. 315, 170 S.E.2d 348 (1969).

Excusability of delay for discretion of court. — Decision whether or not there was legal excuse for delay is discretionary with the trial court. Thompson v. Baker Motor Co., 122 Ga. App. 599, 178 S.E.2d 261 (1970).

Discretion of trial court not interfered with. — Policy of appellate courts of this state to refuse to interfere with the trial court's exercise of the court's discretion, in absence of abuse, applies to the trial judge's exercise of broad discretionary powers authorized under the discovery provisions of the Civil Practice Act (see new O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9). Dean v. Gainesville Stone Co., 120 Ga. App. 315, 170 S.E.2d 348 (1969).

Historically, it has been the policy of the appellate courts to refuse to interfere with the exercise of a trial court's discretion except in cases of clear abuse; this policy is applicable to the exercise of the broad discretion granted a judge under the discovery provisions of the Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9, and particularly O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37. Rucker v. Blakey, 157 Ga. App. 615, 278 S.E.2d 158 (1981).

Appellate court will not reverse a trial court's decision on discovery matters absent a clear abuse of discretion. Nixon v. Sandy Springs Fitness Ctr., Inc., 167 Ga. App. 272, 306 S.E.2d 362 (1983).

Under the discovery provisions of the Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9, the trial judge is granted broad discretion. Historically, it has been the policy of the Georgia appellate courts to refuse to interfere with a trial court's exercise of such discretion in the absence of abuse. Freeman v. Ripley, 177 Ga. App. 522, 339 S.E.2d 795 (1986).

Trial judges have broad discretion in controlling discovery, including imposition of sanctions, and appellate courts will not reverse a trial court's decision on such matters unless there has been a clear abuse of discretion. Amaechi v. Somsino, 259 Ga. App. 346, 577 S.E.2d 48 (2003).

In a medical malpractice suit, a trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the parents' O.C.G.A. 9-11-37(a)(2) motion to compel a doctor to answer a deposition question regarding why the doctor no longer delivered babies because the parents' did not comply with Ga. Unif. Super. Ct. R. 6.4(B) by conferring with opposing counsel in a good faith effort to resolve the discovery dispute, and the requested information was immaterial after the trial court dismissed the underlying breach of fiduciary claim. Hooks v. Humphries, 303 Ga. App. 264, 692 S.E.2d 845 (2010).

Preliminary sanctions authorized. — Trial court would be justified in imposing one or more of the sanctions available under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37 prior to the imposition of the ultimate sanction of striking pleadings and entering a default judgment. Carter v. Data Gen. Corp., 162 Ga. App. 379, 291 S.E.2d 99 (1982).

Order awarding attorney fees not appealable. — When a court order expressly provided that attorney fees were awarded for the cost of bringing a motion for sanctions, and that damages for bad faith were yet to be determined, it was not an appealable judgment within the meaning of O.C.G.A. § 5-6-34 and, absent a certificate of reviewability, the notice of appeal as to that order was premature and properly dismissed. Northen v. Mary Anne Frolick & Assocs., 235 Ga. App. 804, 510 S.E.2d 122 (1998).

Sanctions less severe than dismissal are preferred. — As a general rule, the trial court should attempt to compel compliance with the court's orders through the imposition of lesser sanctions than dismissal. Joel v. Duet Holdings, Inc., 181 Ga. App. 705, 353 S.E.2d 548 (1987).

Motion improper for quashing or enforcement of notice to produce. — Motions pursuant to O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-26, 9-11-34, and 9-11-37 for a protective order or sanctions are not proper vehicles for the quashing or the enforcement of a O.C.G.A. § 24-10-26 notice to produce. Joel v. Duet Holdings, Inc., 181 Ga. App. 705, 353 S.E.2d 548 (1987).

Dismissal sanction applies to disobedience of order to produce. — Courts are specifically granted the discretion to dismiss complaints or to render default judgments against disobedient parties, and this applies to the disobeying of an order to produce. Joel v. Duet Holdings, Inc., 181 Ga. App. 705, 353 S.E.2d 548 (1987); Champion Mgt. Ass'n v. McGahee, 227 Ga. App. 895, 490 S.E.2d 215 (1997), overruled in part, Tenet Healthcare Corp. v. Louisiana Forum Corp., 273 Ga. 206, 538 S.E.2d 441 (Ga. 2000); Tenet Healthcare Corp. v. Louisiana Forum Corp., 273 Ga. 206, 538 S.E.2d 441 (2000).

If a party does not comply with a discovery order, the trial court may impose sanctions under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37(b)(2), including dismissal of the complaint; the trial court may impose sanctions after giving the non-complying party an opportunity to be heard and determining that the party's failure to comply with the discovery order was willful. Amaechi v. Somsino, 259 Ga. App. 346, 577 S.E.2d 48 (2003).

Corporation was improperly prevented from exercising the corporation's right to dismiss the corporation's action as the corporation did not have prior knowledge that the action would be dismissed as requested in a limited liability partnership's motion for sanctions for alleged discovery abuses when the notice of voluntary dismissal was filed. Mariner Health Care, Inc. v. PricewaterhouseCoopers, LLP, 282 Ga. App. 217, 638 S.E.2d 340 (2006), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 150 (Ga. 2007).

No default judgment on pleadings. — Failure of a nonmoving party to file responsive material does not automatically entitle the moving party to judgment because there is no such thing as a default judgment on the pleadings. Cameron v. Miles, 311 Ga. App. 753, 716 S.E.2d 831 (2011).

Repetition of order unnecessary prior to imposing sanctions. — When a court orders one party to permit discovery pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-26(c), upon that party's willful failure to comply with the court's order, the party seeking sanctions need not move the court pursuant to subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37 to repeat the court's order before proceeding to move the court pursuant to subsection (b) for the imposition of sanctions. Joel v. Duet Holdings, Inc., 181 Ga. App. 705, 353 S.E.2d 548 (1987).

Once motion for sanctions has been filed, imposition cannot be precluded by a belated response made by the opposite party. Bryant v. Nationwide Ins. Co., 183 Ga. App. 577, 359 S.E.2d 441 (1987) (dismissal of complaint not abuse of discretion); Singleton v. Eastern Carriers, Inc., 192 Ga. App. 227, 384 S.E.2d 202 (1989).

Dismissal not invoked absent request therefor. — Sanctions which may be imposed by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37 are to be awarded on motion, and when the complaining party does not request the sanction of dismissal, it is error for the court to invoke that sanction. Citibank N.A. v. Hill, 161 Ga. App. 186, 288 S.E.2d 258 (1982).
